

PRESUMPTIONS AS TO DOCUMENTS

- JNS

79	Presumption as to genuineness of certified copies	872
80	Presumption as to documents produced as record of evidence	874
31	Presumption as to Gazettes, newspapers, private Acts of Parliament and other documents	878
32	Presumption as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature	880
83	Presumption as to maps or plans made by authority of Government	884
34	Presumption as to collections of laws and reports of decisions	886
35	Presumption as to powers of attorney	887
36	Presumption as to certified copies of foreign judicial records	889
37	Presumption as to books, maps and charts	891
38	Presumption as to telegraphic messages	892
39	Presumption as to due execution, etc., of documents not produced	892
40	Presumption as to documents thirty years old	893

11679
21/12/00

निर्देश की गोपनीयता की...

...नागरी...

...175...

CHAPTER VI

OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

41	Evidence of terms of contracts, grants and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document	905
42	Exclusion of evidence of oral agreement	926
43	Exclusion of evidence to explain or amend ambiguous document	991
44	Exclusion of evidence against application of document to existing facts	995
45	Evidence as to document unmeaning in reference to existing facts	1004
46	Evidence as to application of language which can apply to one only of several persons	1009
47	Evidence as to application of language to one of two sets of facts, to neither of which the whole correctly applies	1013
48	Evidence as to meaning of illegible characters, etc.,	1016
49	Who may give evidence of agreement varying terms of document	1022
50	Saving of provisions of Indian Succession act relating to wills	1023

PART III

PRODUCTION AND EFFECT OF EVIDENCE

CHAPTER VII

OF THE BURDEN OF PROOF

SECTIONS	PAGE
101 Burden of proof	1027
102 On whom burden of proof lies	1031
103 Burden of proof as to particular fact	1031
104 Burden of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible	1032
105 Burden of proving that case of accused comes within exception	1054
106 Burden of proving fact especially within knowledge	1058
107 Burden of proving death of person known to have been alive within thirty years	1065
108 Burden of proving that person is alive who has not been heard of for seven years	1067
109 Burden of proof as to relationship in the cases of partners landlord and tenant, principal and agent	1079
110 Burden of proof as to ownership	1081
111 Proof of good faith in transactions where one party is in relation of active confidence	1086
112 Birth during marriage conclusive proof of legitimacy	1096
113 Proof of cession of territory	1104
114 Court may presume existence of certain facts	1105

CHAPTER VIII

ESTOPPEL

115 Estoppel	1140
116 Estoppel of tenant, and of license of person in possession	1195
117 Estoppel of acceptor of bill of exchange, bailee or licensee	1208

CHAPTER IX

OF WITNESSES

118 Who may testify	1214
119 Dumb witnesses	1222
120 Parties to civil suit and their wives or husbands Husband or wife of person under criminal trial	1223
121 Judges and Magistrates	1226
122 Communications during marriage	1230

CTIONS

	PAGE
123 Evidence as to affairs of State	1234
124 Official communications	1236
125 Information as to commission of offences	1239
126 Professional communications	1241
127 Section 126 to apply to interpreters, etc	1258
128 Privilege not waived by volunteering evidence	1259
129 Confidential communications with legal advisers	1260
130 Production of title deeds of witness not a party	1262
131 Production of documents which another person having possession could refuse to produce	1264
132 Witness not excused from answering on ground that answer will criminate	1265
Proviso
133 Accomplice	1269
134 Number of witnesses	1290

CHAPTER X

OF THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

135 Order of production and examination of witnesses	1293
136 Judge to decide as to admissibility of evidence	1296
137 Examination in chief	1298
Cross examination
Re-examination
138 Order of examinations	1298
Direction of re-examination
139 Cross examination of person called to produce a document	1317
140 Witnesses to character	1318
141 Leading questions	1318
142 When they must not be asked	1319
143 When they may be asked	1324
144 Evidence as to matters in writing	1326
145 Cross-examination as to previous statements in writing	1327
146 Questions lawful in cross-examination	1332
147 When witness to be compelled to answer	1337
148 Court to decide when question shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer	1337
149 Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds	1340
150 Procedure of Court in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds	1340
151 Indecent and scandalous questions	1340
152 Questions intended to insult or annoy	1341
153 Exclusion of evidence to contradict answers to questions testing veracity	1343

SECTIONS

144	Question by party to his own witness	131
150	Imperching credit of witness	131
156	Questions tending to corroborate evidence of relevant fact admissible	1366
157	Former statements of witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to same fact	1367
158	What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement relevant under section 32 or 33	1374
159	Refreshing memory
	When witness may use copy of document to refresh memory	1374
160	Testimony to facts stated in document mentioned in section 159	1382
161	Right of adverse party as to writing used to refresh memory	1383
162	Production of documents	1385
	Translation of documents
163	Giving as evidence of document called for and produced on notice	1387
164	Using as evidence, of document production of which was refused on notice	1389
165	Judge's power to put questions or order production	1390
166	Power of jury or assessors to put questions	1396

CHAPTER XI

OF IMPROPER ADMISSION AND REJECTION OF EVIDENCE

167	No new trial for improper admission or rejection of evidence	1396
-----	--	------

SCHEDULE — FACTMENTS CITATED

TABLE OF CASES.

Aba v Sounbii, 1172
 Abaji v Luxman 959
 Abbas Ali v R 357
 Abbas Ali v Gulam, 188
 Abbas v Pedda, 353, 354, 1245, 1259
 Abbej v Hill, 275
 Abbot v Abbot, 673
 Abbott v Middleton 4 1003
 Abbot v Plumbe, 828 849
 Abbot v Rein 806
 Abbot's trial 460
 Abbu Sikdar v R 59, 509
 Abdul Karim v Chhale 218
 Abdool Ali v Karimunisa 1020
 Abdul v Abdul, 991
 Abdul v Aditya, 969
 Abdul v Ajayar 864
 Abdul v Asha 934
 Abdul v Crown 58
 Abdul v Emperor, 110 49, 482 876
 1275
 Abdul v Irm Shivji 586
 Abdul v Gourmani 303
 Abdul v Gouri 1239
 Abdul v Gunendra 72
 Abdul v Kadir 643
 Abdul v Khoda Bukh 950
 Abdul v Jonabali 172 520
 Abdul v Madhub 322
 Abdul v Mahammad 1193
 Abdul v Phojendra 55
 Abdul v Puran 581
 Abdul v Ramgopal 964
 Abdul v Shirze 581
 Abdul v Sona, 187 703
 Abdul v Sved 789
 Abdul Ali v Abdoor Rahman 824 860
 Abdul Ali v Raj Chandra, 203 204 205
 Abdul Ali v Rajan Ali, 169 191 500
 Abdul Ali v Syed Rejan Ali, 180 191
 218 55,
 Abdul Aziz v Abdulla 1171
 Abdul Aziz v Amannal, 936 937
 Abdul Aziz v Crown 1491
 Abdul Aziz v Ebrahim 518
 Abdul Aziz v Kantha 1172
 Abdul Basu v Hrishu Kesh 1049
 Abdul Gbafur v Abdul Kadir, 950 953
 Abdul Gbafur v Crown 136
 Abdul Gbaffar v Govind Prosad 560
 Abdul Gbani v Ashiq Hossain, 1006,
 1015
 Abdul Gbani v Faqir 168 218 896
 Abdul Gbani v Syed Md, 789

Abdul Hakim v Pana Mia 1200
 Abdul Hakim v Panchi Dasi 651
 Abdur Hakim v Ramgopal 965
 Abdul Halim v Rajah Sadat Ali 770
 Abdul Halim v Saadal Ali 862
 Abdul Hamid v Abdul Majid 971
 Abdul Hamid v Brojendra 345 596
 Abdul Hamid v Kiran 604, 886
 Abdul Hossain v Bibi, 217 1251
 Abdul Hossain v Emperor 114
 Abdul Huq v Abdul Hafiz 647
 Abdul Hussein v Bidruddin 1491
 Abdul Karim v Chhale Ahmed 169
 Abdul Karim v Crown 59, 391
 Abdul Karim v Manje Hansari, 1121
 Abdul Karim v Saliman 836 846, 897
 Abdul Khan v Shakhbina 12
 Abdul Latif v Abdul Huq 54, 202, 618
 Abdul Majid v Amolk 1062
 Abdul Majid v Tukaram, 639
 Abdul Munshi v Yakub, 220
 Abdul Quadir v Iman Din 1039
 Abdul Rahim v Jonab Ali, 219
 Abdul Rahman, 358
 Abdul Rahim v Basira, 1155
 Abdul Rahman v Asgar Ali 976
 Abdul Rahim v R, 865, 876
 Abdul Razak v Aga Mahamed 706
 Abdul Razak v Ma U, 72 808
 Abdul Razak v Promoda Sunder 1198
 Abdul Samed v Gunendra 73, 75
 Abdul Salim v Emperor 369 1383
 Abdul Sovan v Lakshman, 1043
 Abdulla v Ambadas, 909
 Abdulla v Asraf Ali 298
 Abdulla v M. T. Kin 492
 Abdulla v Emperor 31 154
 Abdulla v Fateh, 1158
 Abdulla v Gauri 493 860
 Abdulla v Gunahari, 824
 Abdulla v Kunj Behari, 521
 Abdulla v Kunja Behari, 173, 191 218,
 219, 224, 225, 500 520
 Abdullah v Kunja 555
 Abdulla v Ma E Kin, 489
 Abdulla v Maung Ne 929
 Abdulla v Muhammad, 1178
 Abdulla v Rabunan 655
 Abdulla v Ranebadli 312
 Abdur Razak v Gauri Nath, 1008
 Abhadat v Pratap, 1018
 Abhiram v Shama Charan 1047
 Abid Ali v Har Prosad 1052
 Abid Hossien v Dowcurry Pil 605
 Abinash v Dasarith 834

ABINASH v MAJEED 947 1033
ABINASH v PARESH 69 71 201 610 638
ABINASH v PRATAP 500
ABOI v EMPEROR 1289
ABOLOFF v OPPENHEIMER 647 651
ABOT v RION 806, 815
ABRAHAM v ABRAHAM 189 1137
ABRAHAM v N F Ry Co 1027
A B MILLER v MADHO DAS 74 341
ACCERO v PETRONI 1322
ACCIDENTAL INS CO v MCKENZIE 1206
ACHALBAR v RAM 301
ACHUTYANNANDA v JAGANNATH 543
ACHAL SINGH v SHAGHUNATH 5
ACHRINT v SARODA 1373
ACHUBBAT v EMPEROR 1163
ACHEHE MIRZA v AHMAD SHAH 601
ACHHAR KUR v THAKUR DAS 1092
ACHHAR RAMARAJU v SUBBARAJU, 973 975
ACKLAND v PEARCE 819
ACTON 283
ACTON v TRILL 734
ADAIR v KANSAS CITY, 309
ADAMS CASE, 117
ADAMS v ADAMS, 776
ADAMS v KERR 843
ADAMS v ARNOLD 1352
ADAMS v CLUTTERBUCK, 839
ADAMS v GRAY, 937
ADAMS v LLOYD 1262, 1267
ADAMS v SCOTTING 514
ADAMS, in the matter of, 812 86,
ADJOODHYA v SHELAS MOHAN 1085
ADAM KHAN v EMPEROR, 119
ADAMSON EXPRESS 1151
ADARAT v DANDI 1199
ADHAR EMPEROR, 106
ADHYA v EMPEROR 1120
ADHYA v RAM KRISHNA, 939
ADHYA v General v Premal 13
1024
ADMIRALTY COM v ABERDEEN 300 1235
ADVOGATE GENERAL v HORMAN 1003
ADVOGATE GENERAL v JIMMIBAN, 188
ADLER v DALE 1
ADLER v R 409, 413 416, 421
A F C v B 1018
AFZAL KHAN v SHIBHU, 1199
AFZAL KHAN v BHADUR 1041
A G v BARKLEY 123
A G v BEN HANSH 608
A G v CHOW 22
A G v LOCKWOOD 1
A G v MORRIS 1
A G v SELLER 1
A G v WYMONTH 1
AGAR HALL 1022
AGAR MOHABAT, 119,
AGAR v LONDON TR CO 71 84, 91
AGAR v LONDON 104.
AGHORE v KAMINI, 1003
AGHORE v PREMCHAND, 1295
AGHORE v RADHIKA 638, 640, 1050, 116
AGRA BANK v BARRY, 242
AGRA BANK v KASHI, 1486
AGRICULTURAL CATTLE CO v FITZGERALD 92
A H FORBES v SIR L L RALL, 1158
AH FOONG v K E 360, 403
AH SKEIN v E 137
AHMAD v MT CHINNI, 699
AHMAD v JAMAT, 500
AHMAA v JAWHAR 328
AHMAD v MAHOMMAD, 1033
AHMAD v SAFFIZAN 1157
AHMAD v SAYAD 893
AHMAD v Secy of State 1158
AHMADA v CROWN 684
AHMAD ALI v HANUMAN 1494
AHMADJEKHAH v GULAM 1032
AHMED v ALI 1120
AHMED v BABU DEVJI 1172
AHMED v SAFFIZAN 1155
AHMED v UBHAY 975
AHMEDDOLAH v GOUR 1165
AHMEDHAY v VALLABHAY 642 650 673,
AHOBILA v PHULSI 913
AH SHAM v SHOKE 924
AHTIL v K E 1285
AIGALAM v SECRETARY OF STATE 11
AINSWORTH v WILDING 1251
AIPERT v MUK 554
AIREY v 872
AIR v MUIHFAZUNNIS-A 1051
AIR v LAKSHMI 172
AIR v SUMIER v VENKATA 7
AIRYATHURAT v SIR 938
AIR v MANGAL 834
AJODHYA v EMPEROR 563
AJODHYA v ISHAREE 802
AJODHYA v HARDWAR 323
AJODHYA v JAGADISH, 933
AJODHYA v KAMAL 222
AJUDHAT v CHHATAR 1150
AJUDHAT v JAGANNATH 291 815
AJUDHAT v TOOLS 802
AKAH v LAL KHAN 1198
AKBAR v BHYEN LAL 709 1102
AKBAR v SHEIKH 348
AKBAR v SHEONARAYAN 635
AKBAR v BASHIR 1071
AKBAR v SAYED 1073
AKHIL v Indian General Naviga
tion 1039
AKHAY v Commissioner of Begm 871
AKHAY v RADHAKALI 978 1065
AKHAY v JAGAT 1272
AKHAY v K L 1221 1199
AKHAY v SHIMA CHAMAN 566
AKHAY v VENKAYAN 1129
AKHAY v TARIK 101 701 577 578 583
AKHAY v R Co v YARBOROUGH 699

- Alau : Rama-wami 1200
 Ambali In re, 151
 Anji : Sumipada 1001
 An Bili In re 150
 Anonjori : Sonamani 1
 Anaprat : Gauri 591
 Alam Shah : Nurziah 1166
 Alchome : Gomme 1200
 Aleock : Cook 1523
 Aleock : Ins Co 1375
 Aleock : Royal Exchange 1341
 Aleock : Whatmore 718
 Aldersey Re 1065, 1078
 Alderson : Clay 925 1080
 Alderson : Maddison 1151
 Alderson : White 952
 Aldridge : S W Ry 106
 Alexander : Amurmissa 30 31
 Alexander v Coldwell 325
 Alexander : Gibson 1372, 1373
 Alexander : Mir Mahomed 160
 Alexander : United States 1277
 Alexander Davison's Trial 731, 737
 Alfalo : Jourdainier 817
 Alfonso : United States 664
 Ali : Baburali 75
 Ali : Wilkinson 1 10
 Algernon Sidney's Trial 614
 Ali : Eliyachamidu 330
 Ali v Emperor 285
 Ali v Sheikh 640
 Ali v Emperor 418, 1112
 Ali Baksh : Ghurani 909
 Alien De Wartone v Simon, 1095
 Alijan : K E 565
 Ali Jawad v Kulnjan, 975
 Alikhan v Indar Proshid, 1044
 Alikhan : Malik Madan, 1083
 Ali Mahomed : Sk Mahir v 293
 Ali Md : Hakim, 1048
 Ali Mohammed v Mohiraj, 75
 Alimoiden v Eliyachanduthil, 330
 Alimuddin v Alimuddin, 1201
 Alimuddin : Chintaharan 1172
 Alimuddin v Emperor, 1229
 Alimuddin : Q E, 1272
 Almasar v Malik, 140, 170, 593, 590
 591, 595
 Ali Sheikh : Imam Ali, 950, 951
 Aliyan v Farnival 611, 811
 Alladad v K E 1490
 Alladad Khan v Ismail, 35
 Alla Ditta : Bhagwan 1120
 Allah Ditta v Gran Singh, 1193
 Allabddin v Emperor, 1285
 Allahwarayo v Crown 1489
 Ali Bright : Hannah 1232
 Allicured : Skinner, 1090
 Allen : Allen, 569 1306, 1399
 Allen : Bennett 921
 Allen v Dundas 627, 628 631
 Allen v Fickett, 15
 Allen : Flood, 153
 Allen : Macpherson, 648
 Allen : Merch int's Bank, 702
 Allen : Pink, 929 930
 Allenborough : London and St
 Katherine's Dock co, 1210
 Allen's lessee : Hoskeel 325
 Allsbrook : Rooch 857
 Allgood : Blake 939
 Allison v Clayhill 1091
 Allison : United States 21
 Allkins : Tupe, 5
 Allport : Meel, 857
 Allvat : Jugat, 577
 Alton Woods's Case 23
 Alves : Hodgson 612
 Alwar : Kothandapani 1122
 Aman Ali : K E 414, 781
 Aman Ali : Mir, 1169
 Amanchi : Amanchi 1134
 Amantulla : Chhattrao 1498
 Amar Das : Crown, 1282
 Amarappa : Raghava 836, 837
 Amardyal : Har Pershad 549
 Amarendra v Kasi, 835 836
 Amarendra v Suridhary, 1020
 Amarkrishna v Rajendra 1165
 Amar Nath : Emperor, 1396
 Amari Singh v Rala Singh 1138
 Ambalam v J M Berthe, 756
 Ambalavarna v Minakshy 182
 Ambalika : Arpana 103
 Ambar Ali v Emperor, 283, 388 386
 Ambar Ali : Lutfe Ali, 73 219, 317
 453, 510, 520
 Ambica : Kali Chand 642, 648
 Ambica : Kumud, 163, 164, 172, 500,
 600, 1373
 Ambica : Nareswar 682 860
 Ambika v Gaultan 946
 Ambika v Whitehall 1178
 Ambirulla v Emperor, 444
 Ambler v Bradford Corp 1
 Ameer Chand : Mohanandi 836
 Ameer Hosan : Fiaz Hussain 597
 American Express Co v Haggard, 277
 Ameruddin : Emperor 376
 Amerunnissar v Abedunnissa, 796, 805
 Amer : Long, 1386
 Amick v Woodworth, 832
 Amira Hindi, In the goods of, 883
 Amir v Mahomed, 1495
 Amir v Nur Mahomed, 904
 Amir : Zefo, 1164
 Amir Begam v Mt Begam, 1329 1365
 Amir Bai v Abdul 1092
 Amit Chand v Gobin Sahai, 1498
 Amirsha v Empress 454
 Amirthrayan : Kitharammayan, 1003

Amuruddin : Emperor, 374, 401, 411, 414
 Amjrd : Ashrof 1191
 Amjrd : Lakshmi 865
 Ammalu : Narayan 329
 Ammu : Runkrishna 1197
 Amolock v Emperor, 173
 Amos v Hughes 1030
 Amos Keig Co : Head 43
 Amrit : Guru 107 189
 Amrit : Prabhu 546
 Amrit v Emperor 78, 152, 228 261, 263, 722, 876 1131, 1341, 1356
 Amrita v Rajani, 315 317
 Amritabai v Josephabai, 1127
 Amritabazar Patrika In the matter of 866
 Amys v Barton 343
 Ananda : Bhuban 1093
 Anand Pray v Biyy 934 1094
 Anandra v Parbati 437
 Ananda v Secy of State 603, 913
 Anandro v Ganesa 1128
 Anandi v Emperor 1057
 Anandi v Nandil 528 538, 547
 Anantra : Guru 1194
 Ananti Lal : Gokul 56
 Anantrani v Yussufi 840
 Anath v Bishtu 1163
 Anderson : Bank 1243 1248 1249
 Anderson v Chy, 1079
 Anderson v Halverson 281
 Anderson v Hamilton 1235 1239
 Anderson v Sanderson 307
 Alderson : Taylor 799 1157
 Anderson v Walker 973
 Anderson v Whally 1374 1382
 Andrews : Askey 148
 Andrews v Mahomed 655
 Andrews : Motley 894
 Andrews : Palmer 558
 Angell v Duxe 928 966 967
 Anglesey : Hatherton 180 194 523, 524
 Anglo India Jute Mill : Amad mull 1063
 Anis : Beni 865 897
 Anjumān v Ashiq 213
 Anjuman : Sadik 530
 Anna Cholam : Raniyamy, 851
 Annada v Bhuban, 1092
 Annanda v Hargobind 933, 963
 Anna guro hala : Krishna 857, 946 972
 Annajee : Laxman 1083
 Anna Kumari : Muthupayal 760
 Annamalai : Annamalai 549
 Annappurna bai v Ram Chandra, 1191
 Anna Sidhya In re 209
 Annavi : Emperor, 22, 565

Annesly : Anglesea, Earl of 1250 1251
 219 467, 537, 1242, 1250 1251
 Annundo v Gunce, 197
 Annundomoyee v Shach Chh 1182
 Anny : Burton 256
 Anny v Long, 1293, 1386
 Anon 127 563, 565, 804, 984, 1360, 1375
 Anon v Anon, 1096 1102
 Ansa v Kemchuppa 972
 Anson : Stewart, 729
 Anty : Madhab 619
 Antar v Emperor, 1370
 Anthony v Halstead, 1399
 Anukul v Kamala, 172 205
 Anund v Bani, 1229
 Anundo v Debendra, 1181
 Anundo v Phakoor, 197
 Anupchand v Chaub, 961
 Anwar Ali : Fazul, 813 860
 Apatibuddin v Alla, 222
 Apeame v Hogin, 1091
 Apothecaries' Company : Bentley, 106:
 Apothecaries Company : Jones 81
 Apothecaries' Company v Warburton, 1058
 Appathura : Gopala 902
 Appavu v Nanjappa, 280, 317, 336, 517
 Appleton : Bray Brook, 868, 890
 Arbon : Fussell, 254 854
 Archangel v Thompson, 276
 Archer : English 762
 Archer : Hodson, 1087, 1099
 Archer v Walker, 762
 Arden's case, 120
 Ardesco Oil Co, v Gil-on, 667
 Arfin Ali v Emperor 241
 Argentineo 174
 The Argo, 774
 Arappa : Narsi 189
 Ari Chattrar v Rama, 599
 Arjad Ali : Shukh, 951
 Arjun v Dayindhi, 55 75
 Arjun : Kailash 831 836, 847
 Arjun v K Jai 764 847
 Arjun v Mathur 627
 Arupa v Nabab Ali 1050
 Arkind : Setpanbaran 655
 Armory v Delamure, 127
 Armstrong v Buckland 1008
 Armstrong v Mareball, 33
 Armstrong v Stockhans 889
 Army v Long, 1263
 Arnold v Paw lunet, 44
 Arnold v State, 139
 Arnott v Hayes 1482 1484, 1455, 1486
 Arrowmeat v Chetti 846
 Arthen : Brokenham, 12, 17

Barndt & Jatindra 1012, 1019
Barndhor & Laibhu, 937
Baran & Sundruda 932
Barakham & Rapendra 101,
Bakur & Gungel, 179
Bakur, Sene, 172
Barden & Kerwerberg 179
Bard & Imperor 1,
131 356 160 161 357 14 188
Barkat & Crown 1288
Barkat & Dobi 1091
Barkat & Prassanna 1131
Barkat & Imam 1276 1281
Barker & Dnie 1231
Barley & Roy, 127 31,
Barley & Case 508
Barlett & Gibbs 14
Barlett & Mayo 291
Barlow & Chumind 19
Barlow & Ross 7
Barlow & Leal 12
Barlow & Ordo 1137
Barn & Sukr 798
Barnard & Lyrd 270
Barnash & Lullu Md 939
Barnaman & Chowdhury 1018
Barnes & Harris 1239
Barnes & Trompuosky 927 81,
Barnett & Brandus 98,
Barnhart & Falkesht 19
Barnhart & Green shields 212
Barnum & Clark 302 30
Baroda & Anandi, 1127
Baron Bode & Case, 108 611
Baron de Rutzen & Lal 315
Barrough & White 127
Barr & Harpur 877
Barr & People 146
Barracough & Johnson 726
Barrat & Baxton 962
Baro & Mir Muhammad 1166
Barothy Long 246 247
Barrow & Wadkin 14
Barrows & White 501
Barry & Jackson 629
Barry & Bebbington 106 113 111 11,
Barry & Butlin, 11 960 1053
Barton & Dives 994
Barton & London L W Ry 1177
Barton & Coal Co & Cox 74
Barton & Bank of New South Wales
949
Bartholomew & Stephens 782 811
Barthwick Pura 757
Barley & Sate 1391
Barlett & Smith 1217

[illegible]

Bla. Kumpfer	Lehrling	27	80
Bla. Kumpfer	Mechanik	91	103

Baker, Stewart 11
Baker, Irwin 119
Baker, Kenneth 1127
Baker, Lord Ing 160
Baker, Mar 1115 119
Baker, Merritt 10
Baker, Norwood 197
Baker, Parks 728
Ball Walker 27
Balladun v Boley 172
Ballou v Ballou, 921
Ballou v Atherton 981
Bang and S. I. Co. Cooperative
    Hudson, 1157
Bang v N. W. Railway & Speed
    Munster Court of Ward 16
Bang Indus Co. v Turner 771
Banham Iron Lnr 107
Barber Bm 181 86
Barber Day 987
Barber Dinabodhu 112
Barber Dudha Nath 291, 29
Barber Emperor 1490
Barber Jaikisen 189
Barber Kundin 110
Barber Mukteswar, 1160
Barber Raj Kumar Dasu
Barber Sabu, 866
Barber Sadanuk, 957
Barber Sarband 620
Baron Du r Rim Niresh 1094
Baron v Curt right, 129
Benjamin, In re, 1078
Bennetts ex e, 112

Barnett, J. W. 762
Barnett, J. W. 111
Barnett, Marshall 1010
Barnett, Taylor, S. L.
Barnes, K. J. 935
Barnes, D. L. 817 S. L.

Benton & Olive 897
Benton & Baker 1217
Benton & Paw 1118
Bentley & Leatherman 1211 Board 1
Benson In re 1078
Benson & Northfield, 901
Benson & Log 1181, 1181
Benson & Rajat 178
Benson & Atkin on 1010
Benson & Deposter, 981
Benson & Pison 121
Benson & Case 111
Berkley & Chittor, 98
Berkley & Pomeroy Case, 107 521 126
127 130 131 133 134 135 136
137 140 142 146, 150 151 152, 156
159 161, 161, 166

Barkerham : Annals Ram, 1600
Barron : Woodbridge 287, 611
Barney : DeColy 175
Barney : Mitchell 764
Barry : Banner 521
Barry : Com 361
Barry : Mathews 292
Barry : U S 125
Barriman : Dillman 697
Barriman : Wise 873 871 921 1115
Barry : Banner 167 651
Barnick : Price 212
Barnes : Stern 16, 280
Bart : German Ins Co 27
Bathell : Blue Cave 907
Batt : Collector of Ltw 989
Battley : Read, 1211
Bett : Nade, 511
Bew : Sarpur : Emperor 880
Bewley : Atkinson 712, 511 516
Bhakti Ganga : Haranulra, 921
Bhaktisundan : Kam Kunal, 91
Bhaktisundari : Anura 501 583
Bhadrastwar : Emperor 118
Bhadrwa : Akbar, 810
Bhagwatty : Bholanath 989
Bhagan : Alla Chitta 129
Bhagant : Gooroor, 861
Bhagat : Rupkishore, 871
Bhagat : Harihar 1328
Bhagat Prosad : Sher Khan, 875
Bhagbin : Ram, 539
Bhagbhari : Khatus 518, 1071
Bhagh : Nadiw 1148
Bhaghat : Horo Gobin, 1121
Bhag : Kasi, 189
Bhagia : Emperor, 14 429

[illegible]

B. S. S. S. 917
B. S. S. S. 1044
B. S. S. S. 761
B. S. S. S. 35

B. S. S. S. 1088
B. S. S. S. 939
B. S. S. S. 1011
B. S. S. S. 337
B. S. S. S. 960
B. S. S. S. 1088
B. S. S. S. 115
B. S. S. S. 132
B. S. S. S. 1088
B. S. S. S. 79
B. S. S. S. 1201
B. S. S. S. 1121
B. S. S. S. 1122
B. S. S. S. 169
B. S. S. S. 372
B. S. S. S. 1088
B. S. S. S. 101
B. S. S. S. 110
B. S. S. S. 1135
B. S. S. S. 109
B. S. S. S. 629
B. S. S. S. 761
B. S. S. S. 1007
B. S. S. S. 99
B. S. S. S. 91
B. S. S. S. 91
B. S. S. S. 110
B. S. S. S. 511
B. S. S. S. 11
B. S. S. S. 101
B. S. S. S. 1021
B. S. S. S. 851
B. S. S. S. 189
B. S. S. S. 116
B. S. S. S. 299
B. S. S. S. 588
B. S. S. S. 101
B. S. S. S. 11
B. S. S. S. 1181
B. S. S. S. 108
B. S. S. S. 115
B. S. S. S. 107
B. S. S. S. 708
B. S. S. S. 611
B. S. S. S. 811
B. S. S. S. 188
B. S. S. S. 218
B. S. S. S. 105
B. S. S. S. 808
B. S. S. S. 105
B. S. S. S. 121
B. S. S. S. 925
B. S. S. S. 116
B. S. S. S. 108
B. S. S. S. 1177
B. S. S. S. 101

B. S. S. S. 279, 337
B. S. S. S. 123
B. S. S. S. 29, 36, 63
B. S. S. S. 1329
B. S. S. S. 1016
B. S. S. S. 612
B. S. S. S. 895
B. S. S. S. 11
B. S. S. S. 931
B. S. S. S. 1171
B. S. S. S. 1018
B. S. S. S. 1070
B. S. S. S. 1275
B. S. S. S. 285, 551, 901
B. S. S. S. 289
B. S. S. S. 120
B. S. S. S. 181
B. S. S. S. 611
B. S. S. S. 703
B. S. S. S. 999
B. S. S. S. 623
B. S. S. S. 831
B. S. S. S. 611
B. S. S. S. 1016
B. S. S. S. 119
B. S. S. S. 612
B. S. S. S. 318
B. S. S. S. 912
B. S. S. S. 868, 890
B. S. S. S. 1239
B. S. S. S. 12
B. S. S. S. 1096
B. S. S. S. 17, 710
B. S. S. S. 762
B. S. S. S. 1176
B. S. S. S. 1088
B. S. S. S. 567
B. S. S. S. 1098
B. S. S. S. 201, 202, 207
B. S. S. S. 110, 211
B. S. S. S. 119
B. S. S. S. 851, 836, 851, 852
B. S. S. S. 851
B. S. S. S. 1239
B. S. S. S. 1011
B. S. S. S. 11
B. S. S. S. 1131
B. S. S. S. 196, 501, 551
B. S. S. S. 117
B. S. S. S. 1161
B. S. S. S. 1118
B. S. S. S. 1270
B. S. S. S. 1178
B. S. S. S. 659
B. S. S. S. 1-9
B. S. S. S. 1161

- Bumer : Moore 977
 Bumbury : Bumbury 1249
 Bungo Chunder : Ka hee Chunder 108
 Bunshee : Chowdhury 1291
 Bunsward : Bunsward 61 77
 Bunsward : Terlong 808
 Burchard : Mc Lachlan 818 181
 Burchill : Child 786
 Burdett : Shilbury 831 8
 Burdett : Hunt 838
 Burford : Mearns 111
 Burghart : Angerstein 808
 Burgoynne : Shower 891
 Burjor Chresty : Munchery 101 761 76
 Burkinshaw : Nicholls 1114
 Burleigh : Stout 319
 Burlett : Wells 1167
 Burn : Achumbar 61
 Burma Oil Co : Bimath 17
 Burn & Co : Rihmanee 1206
 Burnaby : Bubi 118 801
 Burns & Bunt Peels Co 1171
 Burne : Rawlins 807
 Burnside : Dayrell 30
 Burnip : Munchery 76
 Burt : Harper 678
 Buriel : North 811
 Buroough : Mart 1379 1381 1382
 Burhardt : Angerstein 791
 Burt : Palmer 332
 Burt : Waller 843
 Burton : Burton Steel Co 67
 Burton : Is it 310
 Burton : Plummer 1379 1382
 Buty : Oppenheim 1089
 Buty : Philpot, 1098
 Burby : State, 662
 Bu hell : Case 26
 Bu hnell : Hammond 11
 Bu hnos : White 1186
 Bu oid : Newaj 72
 Bu ill : Lannar, 1250 1251
 Lu ord : Levering 271
 Buta : Lampre 271 337 180
 Buta : Frol 81
 Butler : Allant, 275
 Butler : Frol 1117
 Butler : Mountgarret 528 11 79
 Butler & Frol 731
 Butteley : Reed 1209
 Buttrick : Allen 890
 Buttol : Prandhan 22
 Buttol : Shamsunns 1092
 Butthammaz : Ayalla 595 641
 Byne : London & N W Railway Co 70
 Pyrmu : Preston 1136
 Byomkesh Chakraborty : Jagdish hwar Roy 291
 Byrd : Beall 985
 Byrd : Fleming 111
 Byrd : Nunn 71
 C
 Caddell : Skramore 912
 Cafferly : Callaghan 290
 Caggins : Loomer 1110
 Cakraborty : Goe 1217
 Cakraborty : Lanthorford, 1029
 Caldwell : Murphy 12
 Caledonian R Co : N Port 1 Co
 Calho : Hore 10
 Call : Dunning 827
 Callum : Frowk 819
 Calvert : Frowk 1387 1388
 Calver : Proctor General 178
 Calver : Cowley 702
 Cameron & Cochrane 138
 Cameron : Earl of : Villiers 12
 Cameron : Light foot, 161
 Cameron : Palmer 331
 Campbell : Birch 217
 Campbell : Ex parte In re 11
 Campbell : Campbell 11
 Campbell : Forder 198
 Campbell : Frowk
 Campbell General Electric Co : Frowk Radio 981
 Canaan : People 717, 719
 Canaan : Frowk 127 20
 Captain Badhe : Frowk 127 129
 Captain Goodie : Frowk 71
 Captain Kibbles : Frowk 72
 Captain Quicks : Frowk 871 879
 Car : London & N W Railway 11
 Car : Northern Liberties 168
 Carden : Frowk 701
 Carden : Frowk 701
 Carey : Williams 107
 Carl : Wingin 601
 Carlin : Brook 1260
 Carlin : Bewcock 1202
 Carr : Nicoll 57
 Carnoian : Earl of : Villiers 152 6
 Carrnell : Sewall 616
 Carpenter : Penn 61
 Carpenter : Pown 4219
 Carpenter : Wall 729
 Carr & N W Railway 1171 11
 Carr : Nicoll 326
 Carr : Royal Exchange A S Co 2
 Carrick : Pligrave 1201
 Carrer : Hampton, 689
 Carrington : Worcester 1261
 Carrington : Payne 829
 Carroll : Bimel 17
 Carter : Bochm 677, 678, 667
 Carter : Goe 88
 Carter : Phyle 179
 Carter : State 180

Bon z Bowlock 1201
 Bright z Cartright 673
 Bury's Inrl, 431
 Carver v U s 48)
 Case of Bishop 34
 Casey z O Shaghine sey, 537
 Casperz z K dar Nith Cars Case 991
 771
 Cir-on z Dyle, 833
 Castletons Case, 118
 Ciston v Ciston 611
 Castagne z Imrie 617, 620, 631
 Catherwood z Culson, 703
 Canon z Lenon, 360
 Catt v Howard, 283, 614
 Civaly Venatti z Collector of Masul pitum, 1012
 Cavan z Stort, 890
 Cayes z Jac-son, 325
 Cazanova z Vaughan, 569, 1305
 Central Bank of India z Nadir Shah
 937
 Central Bridge z Butter, 1027
 Cent h Co, z Murray, 563
 Chabib z Doyal Massy, 1176
 Chadick v Sy id Ali, 610, 611
 Chadwick z Fanner, 32)
 Chadwick z Minnin , 1151, 1175
 Cherand z Angerstein, 1029
 Chog in Lal z Kashmiran, 913
 Choin Mahto z Emperor, 77, 86, 89, 92
 91, 95
 Chinamaj z Afulu Ammal, 756
 Chinnam Scragganj Municipality z
 The Chittising Co Ltd, 1010 1011
 Chakuri Singh z Sunj Kiur, 559
 Chikravarti z Puspayathi 596
 Chilbo Singh z Bharo 346 341 701
 Chilai z Samudra, 1180
 Chall z Jahar, 295
 Challi Lal Ahnakhai z Bala Ramgoppt,
 1015
 Challe Venkata z Devi Chaktum 931
 93
 Chalmers z Mfg Co 671
 Chanin z Crown, 30, 31
 Channuba z Mutin Chand, 546
 Chamun Lal z Hirdal 932
 Chambers z Barri com 196, 197
 Chambers z Killy 957
 Chambers z Connor- 613
 Chimney In house 834
 Champali z Kunjal S
 Champion z Akinor, 190 194
 Champions z Pe k, 193 197
 Chuman z Crown, 101 126
 Chine z Adam 1
 Chinler z Behrnsel, 34
 Chauhan z Amer z 911
 Chandani z Bishan 1047
 Chandni B z Sh 525 1130

[illegible]

- Clark v Sander-on, 845
 Clark v Walland, 11
 Clark v Water Power Co., 106
 Clark v Wilmot, 511
 Clarke v Bijendri, 31, 37
 Clarke v Brimliban, 222
 Clarke v Courtney, 811
 Clarke v Dickinson, 1147
 Clarke v Peice, 1079
 Clarke v Perian, 722
 Clarton v Shaw, 923, 926
 Clarke v Damm, 302, 870
 Clarke v Silfery, 1355
 Clarke v Woodhouse, 181, 223, 753, 551, 897
 Clary v Clary, 661
 Clay v Longslow, 350
 Clay v Sodgrava, 20
 Claydon v Green, 11
 Clayton v Nugent, 1015
 Clegg v Levy, 612
 Clelland v Ker, 73
 Clement v Sandamon, 187
 Clement v Lullidge, 857
 Clement v Golding, 751, 755
 Clements v Benjamin, 571
 Cleveland & C. C. & I. R. Co., v Newell, 512
 Clewett v Simmel, 86
 Clifford v Banton, 392
 Clifford v Brandon, 152
 Clifford v B. rton, 303
 Clifford v Parker, 1061
 Clifford v Richfield, 165
 Cluquett v United States, 811
 Clorid v Mackenzie, 1263
 Clo mules v Corral, 89
 Cluett v Navigation v Lord, 1001
 Clyde Navigation v Lord, 1001
 Confield of Burnett John on, 913
 Conter v Banbridge, 301
 Cobden v Bolton, 782, 811
 Cobden v Kennick, 1250
 Cobbet v Brock, 1090
 Cobbet v Gray, 286, 611
 Cobbet v Hudon, 1291
 Cobbet v Kilburn v r, 853, 851 & 9
 Cockin v C. v, 1105, 1109, 1110
 Cocke v Parlay, 111, 612
 Coc v Hobby, 932
 Coc v Lawrence, 1
 Cochran v Cumberland, 5
 Cohen v Bank of Bengal, 634
 Cohen v Cressin Nana, 175
 Cohen v Sutherland, 935
 Cohen v C. v, 1279
 Cole v Waring, 281
 Coker v Guy, 1055
 Colar v Kelsey, 111
 Colbert v L. v, 732
 Colburn v Gorton, 351
 Colo v Clark, 676
 Cole v Full Book Coal Co., 710
 Cole v Hawkins, 1293
 Cole v Langford, 637, 651
 Cole v Rawlinsons, 1005
 Coles v Coles, 850, 1323, 1351, 1355
 Coleman v Southwick, 780
 Collat v Croode, 761
 Collector v Lord Keith, 293
 Collector v Sheikh Imdad, 865
 Collector v Surij Bukh, 1203
 Collector of Cawnpore v Humid Ali, 1037
 Collector of Cawnpore v Jugul Kishore, 758
 Collector of Dinapore v Girya Nath, 23
 Collector of Lura v B. v Moharani, 1030
 Collector of Lurukabad v Gulraj, 548
 Collector of Ganjam v Bhimayya, 75
 Collector of Gorakhpur v Pulakdhari, 22, 34, 71, 73, 117, 181, 185, 186, 195, 206, 209, 619, 633, 638, 701, 1400
 Collector of Jaunpur v Fatima, 1236, 1238
 Collector of Madras v Muthu Rama linga, 746
 Collector of Masullipatam v Caval, Venkat Narayana, 1180
 Collector of Mirzapore v Bhingwan, 810
 Collector of Rajshahi v Doorga Soondery, 179, 603
 Collector v Horn, 709
 Collector v Iril, 1553
 Collector v Collector, 775
 Collector v Iril, 1149, 1156
 Collier v Nokes, 1317
 Collier v Sumpson, 781
 Collier v Irenick, 786
 Colling v Irweek, 787, 790, 819
 Collingwood v Berkely, 298
 Collins v Bluntern, 9, 7, 953, 961, 1111
 Collins v Gorbun, 818
 Collins v Gorbun, 1389
 Collins v Gordon, 1389
 Collins v Martin, 1112
 Colonel Bank v Whinney, 12
 Colonial Sugar Refining Co. Ltd. v Irving, 9
 Colquhoun v Brooks, 15
 Colson v Reter, 1020
 Com v Andrews, 695
 Com v Bedmore, 457
 Com v Carey, 695
 Com v Chance, 81
 Com v Choote, 674
 Com v Costley, 55
 Com v Coyle, 471
 Com v Cunningham, 117
 Com v Dillon, 701
 Com v Galavan, 126

Com v Harman, 432
 Com v Hill, 1223
 Com v Howe, 435
 Com v Jackson, 707
 Com v Jeffries, 115, 276
 Com v Key, 615
 Com v Kuapp, 433
 Com v Muzynski, 749
 Com v Massinger, 806, 810
 Com v May, 386
 Com v Montgomery, 124
 Com v Nepes, 669
 Com v Pilsinger, 364
 Com v Richardson, 874
 Com v Russell, 229
 Com v Stastum, 639
 Com v Trefethen, 166
 Com v, Vaughan, 117
 Com v Webster, 116, 719, 720
 Com v Wheeler, 752
 Com v Williams, 145
 Comm v Piper, 146
 Comm v Sturtevant, 12
 Commander v State, 116
 Commissioner for the Port of Rangoon, v Moola Dinwood, 765
 Commissioner of Income tax v I K S
     Ibrahim, 7
 Commissioner of Madras v Elum bara, 871
 Commonwealth v Costley, 57
 Commonwealth v Crie, 721
 Commonwealth v Emery, 794
 Commonwealth v Fox, 1378
 Commonwealth v Galligan, 280
 Commonwealth v Hardy, 715
 Commonwealth v Rogers, 672
 Commonwealth v Tuckerman, 577
 Commonwealth v Therlow, 1060
 Commonwealth v Vox, 331
 Commonwealth v Webster, 18, 50, 57,
     715 Commonwealth Shipping Representative v Peninsular Oriental Branch
     Service, 753
 Comp Broadbent v Imperial Gas
     Co, 13
 Conyan v Emperor, 1111
 Cox v Commonwealth, 1274
 Condit v Soane, 1130
 Connor v Fitzgerald, 521
 Connings—Mark's Trial, 1352
 Control India Spinning v G I P Railway, 1262
 Coode v Coode, 394
 Cook v Field, 216
 Cook v Hearn, 521

Cook v Hostile, 127
 Cool v Nohr, 1294
 Cook v Stout, 561
 Cool v Innsworth, 812
 Coole v Booth, 1021
 Cooke v Lanley, 1195
 Cooke v Wilby, 889
 Cooke v Wilson, 751
 Cooker v Maxwell, 1204
 Cooke v Haller, 127
 Coole v Brham, 430
 Coombs v Coethe, 524, 552, 554
 Coons v Knoch, 512
 Cooper in re, 241, 327
 Cooper v Buckell, 849
 Cooper v Bickett, 851
 Cooper v Blundy, 1201
 Cooper v Cooper, 1157
 Cooper v Dedrick, 1079, 1080
 Cooper v Gibson, 818
 Cooper v Masdon, 495
 Cooper v Mawer, 1409
 Cooper v Randall, 105
 Cooper v Sidel, 57
 Cooper King v C K, 673
 Cooper v State, 145, 663
 Cooper v Smith, 1212
 Coorsw Mining Co v South Carolina, 2
 Concha v Concha, 628
 Condit v Blackwell, 1459
 Cone v Smith, 858
 Conner v R Co, 702
 Constantine v Constantine, 34
 Continental Insurance Co v Roger, 819
 Conway v Bozley, 591
 Cope v Cope, 1096, 1097, 1098, 1099, 1101
 Cope v Thomas Haven Dock, 1317
 Copen v Templer, 1265
 Copeland v Davies, 2
 Copeland v Lamkin, 296
 Copeland v Watts, 1263, 1264, 1267,
     1356
 Copeman v Gallant, 2
 Copin v Admon, 620
 Cornell v Graff, 560, 661, 662
 Cornwall v Richardson, 729
 Corny v Coraqui, 777
 Cornish v Abbingdon, 1153, 1156
 Cornish v Cleiff, 17
 Cornish v Trial, 248, 615
 Cornish v Attenston, 1213
 Cornish v Coke, 1151
 Cornish v Scarell, 1199, 1202, 1204
 Corporation of Calcutta v Promotha
     Lath Mallick, 871
 Corstgey v Berger, 1261

- Dev's trial, 1347
 Dusen v Dubois, 1264, 1265
 City v Breton, 351, 352
 Costa Rica v Erlinger 8, 1264
 Cett v Borord, 616
 Cotton v State 134
 Couldry v Bartrum 1156
 Coulson v Allison, 1090
 Coulson v Dishborough, 1303, 1307, 1397
 Countess of Dartmouth v Roberts 322
 Counters of Rutland's Case, 923
 Courtland v Leg 7
 Courteen v Touse 302 1323, 1325
 Covey v Tammill, 1249, 1256
 Coventry v G I Ry Co 1151 1155
 Cowasji v Barjorji 935
 Cowan v Ball, 682
 Cowan v Hite 292
 Cowen v Truett, 957 1007, 1008
 Cowie v Rumsfry 923
 Cowley v People 671
 Cowling v Fly, 313
 Cowling v Hugginson, 181
 Cox v Bird 326
 Cox v Buck 296
 Cox v Birchidge, 270
 Cox v Middleton, 921
 Cox v People 434
 Coxhead v Mullis 5
 Craig v Angleson 532, 780
 Craig v Lomouroux 1091
 Crane v Public Prosecutor 1399
 Crown v Pirrington 959
 Crawford v Blythe, 716
 Crawford v Spooner, 11
 Crawford and Lindsay v Pittman 857
 Cray v Huth, 614
 Cray v Sprague, 558, 763
 Credit v Barrett 187 322, 605 510, 521, 523 524 526 703, 1200 1398
 Crockett v Carr 1306
 Croswell v Jackson 112, 116 574 1311
 Crown v Holman, 1157
 Crippen's Case 115
 Crisp v Anderson 599
 Crisp v Dabont, 32 507
 Croft v R Co 167
 Crown v Hawthorne, 1214
 Crompton & Co v Sax of State, 1396
 Crosby v Perry 515
 Crosby v Dixon, 1211, 1212
 Crosby v Kaye 924
 Crosby v Williams 298
 Crosby v Goudier 11
 Crosby's Case 125
 Crosby's trial 50 767
 Crosby v Drury 476
 Croghan v Blake 634
 Crown v Holman 663 1132
 Cronin v May 1185
 Crowe v Peters 572
 Crowell v Bibi 290
 Crown v Ardell 31
 Crown v Baloch, 111 1331
 Crown v Bhongatta 366
 Crown v Chongatti 105
 Crown v Ghazet 183
 Crown v Ghulam, 78
 Crown v Ghulam, 78
 Crown v Godin 1283
 Crown v Haider Ali 181
 Crown v Hura Miller, 1286
 Crown v Hoornace, 1283
 Crown v Hoornace, 1275
 Crown v Huzum, 427
 Crown v Isardas 1282
 Crown v Jai Ram 111
 Crown v Jhabu 112
 Crown v Long 385
 Crown v Murkhan 407
 Crown v Mishwa 875 918
 Crown v Mohomed Khan 111
 Crown v Motam 492, 1286
 Crown v Ng Po Hwang 165
 Crown v Nihal Singh, 411, 1283
 Crown v Oomra 376
 Crown v Photo 127
 Crown v Radha Kisan 391 397
 Crown v Runchind 582 1283
 Crown v Ramchandra 58
 Crown v Rahmoo 111 1283
 Crown v Shulham 411
 Crown v Shulham 119
 Crown v Surand 61
 Crown v Zaidoo 376
 Croxtone v Mix 1101
 Crox v Bitten 359
 Cundy v Le Cocq 241
 Cundiff v Sifton 515
 Cunningham v Baul, 189
 Cunningham v Cunningham 701
 Cunningham v Lonsiqu 702
 Cunningham v Hudson River Bank 637
 Curlew v Corfield, 127
 Curlew v Corfield 1119
 Cur v Child 813
 Cursey v Crowder 13
 Curthess v Irving, 1204
 Curtis v Bradley, 48
 Curtis v Cochran 1347
 Curtis v Hunt 258
 Curtis v Smith 5
 Curtis v Wheeler 1265
 Cuts v Pickens, 1285
 Cutler v Newton 9
 Cutler v Newton 9
 Cutler v Crown 95
 Cutler v Lonsax 62

D

Daniels & Evans Co 1150
Dunlap & Smith, 630
Durban & Mahabul Ali 675
Durban & Dur Meth 1196
Durby & Ousley, 252
Dugda & Lumpior, 1172
Dur, with & Jaginath 819
Duling & Westmorchind
Dunmyle & Darylmpole
Durbay & London R Co
Duston & Oxford 616
Duston & Oxford 62

Darwin v Oxford 62
Darwin & Upton 62
Dasimudh & Chanda Singh, 221
Dahz Van Kluck 8
Dashwood v Mangune 981
Dass & Waters, 1219
Das Raj & Emperor, 367
Dasomil & Ramchand 1050
Dasconal v Yusuf Ali 762
Datta & Parthab, 865
Dattam & Basanti Kumar, 119
Dattavij & Sullhar 1080
Dutton & Fitzgerald 1205
Dattochad & Ramchandra, 911 95
Daulat & Bidrim, 1007
Daulat Rai & Khal Lih, 225
Daulat Ram & Emperor 387, 726, 1281
Davey & Cer 214
David H Bruce & Mg Kjan Zhu, 1067
Davidson's trial 718
Davidson & Kington, 1121, 1101
Davis, Isaac, 747 834
Davis & Bush 1126
Davis & Dale, 1306
Davis & Davis 1138 1386
Davis & Dinwoody 1231
Davis & Jones 972
Davis & Humphreys 12 113
Davis & Lowndes 210, 327 529
Davis 536 516 1127
Davis & Howell 506 509
Davis & Mulholland, 5 805
Davis & Melton 337
Davis & Morgan 52,
Davis & Pierce 87 332
Davis & Ridge 314
Davis & Sims 670
Davis & Sperner 821
Davis' Finets In re 755
Davis & Wales 1265
Davis & Wood, 776
Davison's trial 718
Devilata v Ganesh 1030
Dixson & Dixon 493
Dawkins & Lord Robby 1237, 1311
Day & Day 148
Day & Fry 1008
Dayman & Dayman 850
Dayrell & Gla coal 849
Dazey & Mills 293
D'Cruz & D Cruz, 598

TABLE OF CASES

xli

Grey, 821
Do v Harris 1224
Do t Harvey 907
Do t Hawkins 299 310 199 51,
Do t Henry, 331
Do t Hertford 1218 1263
Do v Hiscock- 987, 1010 1011 1013
Do t Hodgson 1339
Do t Jones, 322 308
Do t Joseph, 4
Do t Keeling, 898
Do t Keely, 1356
Do t Ken up 179
Do t Pakin 338 602
Do t Lingdon 1263 1264 1265
Do t Langfield 503 515 1395
Do t Lewis 829
Do t Lloyd 755
Do t Martin 937 1003
Do t Mason, 92 717
Do t Morris 822
Do t Napian 1073
Do t Needs 1003 1010 1011
Do t Oliver 1150
Do t Ormerod 516
Do t Palmer 122
Do t Parle 120
Do t Passingham 769 891
Do t Peck 1201
Do t Pemhrok 15 516
Do t Penfold 1052
Do t Perkins 1575 1880
Do t Pettit 295 325 328
Do t Philips 89
Do t Pulman 181 553 101 786
Do t Rimshotham 1201
Do t Randall 531 534 535 536
Do t Richards 83
Do t Rickaby 768
Do t Ridgway 167 789
Do t Roberts 180 303 812 818
Do t Robson 509 515 516
Do t Ross 821
Do t Ro 792 793 1261 1262
Do t Sample 895 894
Do t Sumners 1201
Do t Sinton 322 1201 1205
Do t Sisson 120 187 193 321
Do t Smythe 1201 1205
Do t Stacey 822
Do t Stacy 515
Do t Steel 281 161
Do r Suckermore 677 678 679 1
680 681 851 856 61
Do r Taver 807
Do t Thomas 52 1203 120 15
Do r Thynn 511
Do t Traver 100
Do t Turford 100 10 10 10
516
Do t Tyler 513 508

Do t Vowels 512
Do v Winnwright 359 786
Do t Wallaston 553
Do t Watkins 1215 1219 1213
Do t Went on 1201
Do t Webber 338
Do t Westlake 1012
Do t Wiggins 1204
Do t Whitcomb 552
Do t Whitroe, 1204
Do t Williams 87
Do t Wilson 853
Do v Wolliston 558
Do t Woodby 1263
Do t Wooley 891 897
Do d Bug s t Whitehead 815
Do d Bristow t Pigge 1196
Do d Brodbelt t Thomson, 1003
Do d Bullen t Mills 1209
Do d Carter t James 1337
Do d Devine t Wilson 57 809
Do d Dunning t Cranstoun 1008
Do d Mutal t Suckermore 688
Do d Ir eland t Bart 937
Do d Gilbert t Ro s 801 805 138
Do d George t Jesson 1067
Do d Humill y t Rickarby 516
Do d Hiscocke 988 989, 996
Do d Jogmohun t Niam Das 188
Do d Johnson t Bishop 1206
Do d Knight t Nepom 1071
Do d Knight t Smythe 1106 1200
1206
Do d Manton t Austin 1196
Do d Manton t Plomer, 1206
Do d Marlow t Wiggins 1201
Do d Marrot t Edwards 1201
Do d Naulon t Emperor 1287
Do d Perry t Newton, 579
Do d Smith t Gullway 1168
Do d Short t Eaton 1201
Do d Templeman t Marton 1003
Do d Thompson t Holkison, 818
Do d Walker Longfield 503, 781
Dobly t Hes 1196
Doller t Ford Hattingfield, 703
Dolanjan Singh t Parsath Narain
1063
Do lers t Van Dyck, 773
Dor Mdr t Lamm, 1171
Dorhom t Crispin 623
Donn Bari Molhar t Kerd Kolity 788
Dummu t Pudann 105
Dun y la n 671
Donald Watson t Barry Mohan
1 0 1211
Doncast r t Day 57
D n D t Crown 1111
Don Mah t t Bert Zolt 1191
Dondley t Broadston 822
De ally t United States 45 772

- Dono Ghoe v People 690
 Donovau v Saint Anthony Co 832
 Donzelle v Kedar Nath 1414 1202
 Dookha v Runkul 946
 Doolhar Jha v Ranjit 1259
 Door v Geary, 1008
 Doorga v Narendra 196 634
 Doorga Churn v Syed Najmooddin 1063
 Doorga Das v Doorga Charan 640
 Doormu v Stevens 577
 Dorab Ally v Abdool, 423
 Doran's trial, 734
 Dorasami Ayyar Ju re 17
 Dorasami v Bala Sundaram 40
 Dorasami v Chidambaram 1157
 Doru Samy v D, 798
 Dorasamy Reddy v Muthulingo 1152
 Doramus v Mc Cormick 310
 Dost Ali Khan, Re 673
 Doucet v Geoghegan 60 44
 Douglas Peirage Case 117
 Douglas v Cann 249
 Douglas v Fellowe 1010
 Douglas v Toucy 736
 Dovers trial 720
 Dow v Siver 492
 Dowley v Winfield, 1071
 Dowling v Dawling 169
 Downey v Murphy 734
 Downing v Oucher 241
 Downs v Cooper 342 1201
 Dowsett v Sweet 1008
 Doyle v R Co, 106
 Draycot v Lalbat, 591
 Drake v Stewart 150
 Drayne's Case, 117
 Drayton v Wells, 561
 Dreher v Fitchburg 289
 Driscoll v City of Faunton 291
 Drohu v Brewer 715
 Drummond v Drummond, 2
 Du Barea v Livette, 1249
 Duchess of Kingston's Case, 195 210, 651, 1380
 Dudley's Case, 591
 Dudley v Summer, 84
 Duffin v Smith, 1253
 Duggirata v Mullari, 1299
 Dukha Mandal v Grant 577, 598
 Dukhimon v Tulsi Charan, 1207
 Dulary Singh v Suraj Devi 1103
 Dulpin v Haranandan, 1252
 Dulunakhran v Kalidas, 312
 Duncun v Beard 695
 Dungan v Emperor 463
 Duni Chand v Nazamuddin 1041
 Dunlop v Higgins 275, 277
 Dunn v Dunn, 565
 Dunston v Paterson, 1155
 Durga v Jhangri, 1157
 Durga Khushilo 1179
 Durga v Raghunath 187, 189, 192
 Durgabai v Jagannath, 818, 820
 Durga Charan v Raghunath, 187
 Durga Das v Ishan Chandra, 1195
 Durga Narain v Ishan Chandra, 1195
 Durga Prasad v Bhujin, 770
 Durga Prasad v Hazari Singh, 63
 Durga Prasad v Ram Dutt, 1229
 Dusham's Case, 1271
 Durrant v Friend 1078
 Dushong v Moonry, 1099
 Duvile v Duvile, 52
 Dwar v Fah, 291
 Dwarika v Biboo, 275
 Dwarika v Emperor, 563
 Dwarika v Lunder 664
 Dwarika v Ramnand, 620
 Dwarika v Sankar, 1157
 Dwarika v Sant 578
 Dwarika Das v Jankar Das 577, 578 581
 Dwarika Nath v Chundee Charan, 314 318
 Dwarika Nath v Prosonno Coomer, 45, 17
 Dwarika Nath v The River Steam Navigation Co, 1063
 Dwarika Nath Bishu v Mukundlal 169, 217, 213, 219
 Dwarika Nath Roy v Horonath, 170
 Dwarika Prasad v Mukundlal, 56
 Dwarika Prasad v Nazir Ahmed, 1033 1090, 1172
 Dwarka Singh v Ramanand, 802
 Dwivedi Narayan v Jogesh Chandra 1180
 Dwyer v Collins 803 806 810, 810 821, 1260
 Dyer v Ashton, 762
 Dyer v Best, 1377

E

- E v Chetida 16
 E v Pan hani 402
 E v Bhakur, 404
 Eagle's case 1070
 Eagleton v Kingston, 667 691, 696
 Earl v Stevens 1156
 Earl v Vors 1230
 Earle v Picken, 289, 362, 907
 Earl of Coventry v Willey 181
 Earldom of Perth 591
 Earl of Dendey v London Chatham Rail Co 977
 Earl of Suffolk v Greenwich 770
 East India Railway Company v Kalidas, 1031
 East and West India Dock 1
 Eastern Counties R Co v Marriage, 13

n Counties Rail Co v Robert on, 33
 Eastman Photographic Co v Comp troller of Patents 6
 East and West India Dock v Kerk and Randall, 33
 Eastwood v Vanachur 636
 Eaton's Trial 289
 Eastwood v Ashton 1007
 Ebrahim v Cortesji, 910
 Ebrahim v F at Abbi 1212
 Ebrahim v Eff, 1042
 Ebrahim Goolam v A M Chetty 993
 Ebrahim bhoy v Hassan, 911
 Eccleston v S che, 314
 Ecroyd v Conlithard 196
 Eddie v Kingford, 193
 Eden v Blake 929
 Eden v Riddles Railway Lamps and Lighting Co 1089
 Edgerley v Emerson 932
 Ehir v East India Co 702
 Edinburgh Tramway Co v Torbun 6
 Edington v Fitzmaurice, 39, 10, 230
 Edmonds v Challins, 818, 1384
 Edmonds v Rowe, 1215
 Edmonds v Walter, 1323, 1325
 Edmond's Case 523
 Edmondson v Thompson, 115
 Edu v Behan, 771
 Edward v City of Wintertown, 292
 Edward v Kansas City Times Co 176
 Edward v Tuck 1126
 Edwards, Export, 51
 Edwards, Export, 508
 Edwards, Export, re Tollemache 240
 502, 514
 Edward Cotton v L H Cisten, 631, 615
 Egan v Cowan, 873, 874
 Egg v Barnett, 1121
 Egger v Hodges 677
 Eggleston v Pett 314
 Eggmont v Eggmont 1262
 Ehlsham v Janna 803 1011
 Eichhor v Monu 993
 E. I R Co v Pwanda 1052
 Elmhurst v Slaymaker 818
 Elcorra v Kildish 898
 Eklon Singh v Hirdal 770 771
 Ekba Gorindhet v Dwarum 1197
 Elahi Bakh Jara 1284 1285
 Elahi Bakh v Emperor 874, 918
 Elavolu Reddi v Jeyala Varala
 Reddi 6
 Elderton v 748 753
 Elgin Mills Co v Muir Mills Company
 1024 1018
 Elz Canning v Cas 51
 Elizabeth Canning v Cas, 464

Elizabeth May v Bhupendra, 214, 839
 Elkin v Janson, 1061
 Elm v Emperor, 1135
 Ellershaw v Robinson, 729
 Elliot v Dycke, 575
 Elliot v Kemp 1082
 Elliot v Parl, 1368
 Ellis v Allen, 808
 Ellison In re, 831
 Ellsworth v Moore, 144
 Elmore v Lorkins, 764
 Elmer v Lerundem 249
 Elmondroff v Carimichael 607
 Elsey v Kirby, 36
 Elvas v Elvas 775
 Emanuel v Symon 620
 Emery v Berry, 610
 Emerson v Lowell Gasheld Co 102
 Emmanuel v Constable, 2
 Emma Silver Mining Co In re, 386, 1385
 Emmons v Barton 322
 Emmott v Star Newspaper Co 1484,
 1186
 Emp v Raghunath, Rao, 40
 Emperor v Abani, 156 157 452
 Emperor v Abdul 173, 244
 Emperor v Abdul Gani 150 892
 Emperor v Abul Hamid, 683
 Emperor v Abdul Wahid, 225, 259
 Emperor v Ahmed, 10, 1331
 Emperor v Ahilya Manaji 685
 Emperor v A J Cooke 1058
 Emperor v Akbar, 270, 337
 Emperor v Akbar Badu 1372
 Emperor v Akhleswar 390
 Emperor v Aknur 106
 Emperor v Akia, 402
 Emperor v Ali Raza, 1059
 Emperor v Alhoomiya, 163, 173, 723
 Emperor v Alcomiya 254 1403
 Emperor v Amelshu, 1118
 Emperor v Anandnrao, 390
 Emperor v Anand Rao, 390 106, 110
 411
 Emperor v Anant, 357, 391
 Emperor v Anaji 416,
 Emperor v Amappa, 153
 Emperor v Ashgar Ali, 1490
 Emperor v Ashutosh Chuckerburt
 150
 Emperor v Asrudin, 1384
 Emperor v Azimkhan, 410, 152
 Emperor v Bahar Ali 151
 Emperor v Babu Lal 451
 Emperor v Balal 367
 Emperor v Bahu Dhandi 716
 Emperor v Bakir Sahab, 570
 Emperor v Bakwar 259 458 720
 Emperor v Baj Krishna 1289
 Emperor v Bal, 1279
 Emperor v Basaram 114, 451, 462

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

xlv

Emperor v Balgangadhar 711
 Emperor v Bilwant 79
 Emperor v Banarsi 336
 Emperor v Binko Behari 577
 Emperor v Baikat, 19
 Emperor v Bhahle 411
 Emperor v Bhagi 380, 393
 Emperor v Bhagwati 1238 1239
 Emperor v Bhavanrao, 866
 Emperor v Bhimi Rao 1275
 Emperor v Birewar, 393, 394
 Emperor v Blomden 307
 Emperor v Banari, 1969
 Emperor v Bodhi 406 408, 454
 Emperor v Chaitin 415 1391
 Emperor v Chind Singh 1057
 Emperor v Chaturbhuj 1271
 Emperor v Chatur Singh, 1269
 Emperor v Cheruth 1363
 Emperor v Chinnu 378, 398, 1264
 Emperor v Dal Singh 710
 Emperor v Daria Singh, 1278
 Emperor v Das 563
 Emperor v Dalta, 79
 Emperor v Debendri 250, 260, 268, 272
 Emperor v Dehendra Prashad, 225
 Emperor v Dewan Kahan, 370 879
 Emperor v Dhanka 446, 877
 Emperor v Dhani, 367
 Emperor v Dinshaw 403
 Emperor v Dewan Chand, 1110
 Emperor v Durant 1490
 Emperor v Fharlam, 133
 Emperor v Edward 1972
 Emperor v Edward William Smith 1271
 Emperor v Fkabar 1111
 Emperor v Ginesh, 383, 432
 Emperor v Ganesh Damodar 140
 Emperor v Ganesh Narain 79
 Emperor v Gangappa 451 459 451
 Emperor v Gangaram 136, 177
 Emperor v Ganpat 855
 Emperor v Garib Hari 437
 Emperor v Ghulam 1340 1488
 Emperor v Gulla 1057
 Emperor v Haji Sher Mohamed 205, 259 357
 Emperor v Hanjram Valji, 261
 Emperor v Hammad 1285
 Emperor v Hammadullah, 1371
 Emperor v Hordumar, 1, 29
 Emperor v Hari 1197
 Emperor v Hari Ramji 119
 Emperor v Hari Rao 78 79
 Emperor v Hari Singh 400
 Emperor v Hari Puri 355 403, 1139
 Emperor v Hira 401
 Emperor v Hira Gohar 136 410
 Emperor v Hurped, 723

Emperor v Ismail, 723, 726
 Emperor v Jadhav Das, 1306
 Emperor v Jagdish 79
 Emperor v Jangir 1369
 Emperor v Jangir 1288
 Emperor v Janhi 59
 Emperor v Jashu Bawa 387
 Emperor v Jehangir Umar, 1307
 Emperor v Jihin Krishna 79
 Emperor v Jiji Bhai, 1330
 Emperor v Jivan, 79
 Emperor v Josha, 381
 Emperor v Kadubhai, 19
 Emperor v Kalproanna, 684
 Emperor v Kangil 573
 Emperor v Kargal Mali 356 357, 406
 Emperor v Kasim, 645
 Emperor v Kazi, 403, 410
 Emperor v Kerani 419
 Emperor v Keshab, 510
 Emperor v Kheora 113
 Emperor v Kheshri 453
 Emperor v Khetal 798
 Emperor v Kotal Khan 1281
 Emperor v Kristappa, 44
 Emperor v Kuberappa, 1291
 Emperor v Kura Sit 30
 Emperor v Kumarammittum Pillai 1371
 Emperor v Kushi 1193 1499
 Emperor v Lakshmin, 59 1364
 Emperor v Lakshmi, 1112
 Emperor v Lal Mesh, 1487
 Emperor v Lal Mohan 441 452 404 405
 Emperor v Lalubhai 1285
 Emperor v Lallu, 1285
 Emperor v Lalman, 14 75
 Emperor v Madho 444
 Emperor v Mahadev Prasad, 440
 Emperor v Mahomed 357, 406
 Emperor v Mahomed Bulsh 409, 434
 Emperor v Mahomed 1258
 Emperor v Maine 1278
 Emperor v Mallangwadi, 109, 411
 Emperor v Marle, 729
 Emperor v Maruti, 386, 376 919
 Emperor v Mathews 369
 Emperor v Mathur, 868
 Emperor v Maung, 428
 Emperor v Maung Lha Din 429
 Emperor v Mahali Roza, 410
 Emperor v Muhammad Bulsh, 384
 Emperor v Mukhumkumar, 350
 Emperor v Mul bankir 34, 330
 Emperor v Musst Jawa 396
 Emperor v Nawab Ali, 918
 Emperor v Naba Kumar, 258
 Emperor v Nagar 370
 Emperor v Nandha, 1235
 Emperor v Nandi, 566
 Emperor v Narayan, 1403

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

xlii

Empress v Ingrub, 286, 357 376
Empress v Jita Singh, 444
Empress v Juhoo, 685

Empress v Joachand, 876
Empress v Ingrub, 286
Empress v Jugur, 369
Empress v Kadir Bakh, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447
Empress v Kailash, 447

Empress v Tommal, 1366
Empress v Thikur, 481
Empress v Teki Ram, 393
Empress v Tularam, 371
Empress v Tulza, 36 37
Empress v Verapumal, 1217
Empress v Vyapoor, 92
Empress v Girdhari Lal, 322
Empress v Ho, 322
Empress v Emperor, 136
Empress v Glade, 141
Empress v L, 729 730
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871
Empress v 745, 747 756 871

Fisher & Bight 1
Fisher v May 1174
Fisher v Simuda 79
Fitch & Chipman 472 411
Fitch v Jones 1113
Fitch v Linnam Co 564
Fitzharris Trial 1353
Fuzherbest & Lutzherb st 409
Luz Holmes & The Upper Band 1
India 93 94
Intzgerdd & Fuz. rill, 564
Plamouth v Roberts 813
Flect v Morton 186 192 984
Fleet v Purnis 292
Fleming v Fleming 1010
Fleming & Goodin 1196
Fleming & Baul of New about 115
Fleming & State, 721
Fletcher & trail 79
Fletcher & Birkenhead (corporation) 13
Fletcher v Black 276
Fletcher v Logan, 286 100
Fletcherham & Julian 109
Flood & Russell 507 511
Flouring v Newton 318
Flower & Lloyd 604
Folke v Chadd, 607 667, 665 484
Follett & Jeffreys 1213 1247
Folsey v Hill 1493
Folson v Logg Driving Co, 1476
Foolkshire v Nobin, 573 574
Foolkumari & Khurod Chandra 5 -
Foote v Berehar 311 326
Fonneren v Poyntz 100,
Forbes v Ah Hinder 22
Forbes v Meer Mahomed 296 341 158
1027
Forbes & Caruthers 658
Forbes & Wall, 897
Ford & De Ponter, 1253
Ford v Elliot, 158
Ford v Hopkins 196, 98,
Ford v Kettle 831
Ford v Tennant 1249
Fordam v Wallis 295
Fordyce v Bridges 3, 5
Forester v Secretary of State, 709
Forez v First National Bank 670
681
Forman v Ah Yu 1000
Ford's trial 231
Fort v Clarke 547
Foster's Will 683
Foster & Co. 17
Foster v Globe Venture Syndicate Ltd
730 750 751 755
Foster & Hanchett 730
Foster v Poynter 817 822
Foster & Shaw, 639
Foster & Pyn Pentoon Co 1151
Foulk & Sellway 736

Loulton & Andrew 716
Lountin & Balle 716
Lountin & In 189 185
Louyer & In p or 151
Lowler & Brington, 523 22, 11
Lowler & Child 666
Lowler & Lloyd 616
Lowler & Secretary of State 922
Lox & Beattie 701
Lox & Clifton 309
Lox & Mackie 117
Lox & Wale 313 314
Lox & Co 1096
Lump Bhug & Mahan Sing Dain
Singh 22 L 10 1st 1257
Lump & Westing Company 22
Lump & Gaudet 171
Lump & Lum 318
Lum & De d Harv 119,
Lum & Paverit In r 85
Lum & Berry 659
Franklin Bank & Pan Am 295
Franklin & State 211
Frazier & Marsh 31
Frazier & Fraz 113,
Fredrick & Au G n 25 101
Freeman & Arkell, 809
Freeman & Brewster 31,
Freeman & Cook 1116 1101 1102
1113 1153 1173 1213
Freeman v Phillips 13,
Freeman v Reel, 572
French & French, 628
Irishfield v Reed 811 832
Friend & Hamill 88 216
Friendland v London A 1111 C, 1352
Frith v Frith 111 663
Froggall v Lowlyn 353
Fry & Guthrie 141, 663
Fry & Wood 553 562 533,
Inches etc Mf. Co v Killa, L 755
Fuller & Riedman 34
Fuller & Rice 307
Fu neaux v Hutchins, 180
Furpeux v Hutchins, 191
Futich Khun v Bulin, 1013
F W Sole & Crown, 1307
Fuzand v Kuniz 1011

G

Gadadhru & Madnapore /omundru, 119,
Gidrin v Veervippl, 292 338
Gulu Bibu v Por or um 312
Gunnsford v Griffith 17
Gunnsford & Grummair 1211
Guydhru & Emperor, 370
Gyhoo & Jagat Paul 603, 605 1038
Gju Lil & Fuch Ltd, 16, 21 73 147
203 205 203, 618 619, 633, 633, 700
Gajraj v Biker Ali, 807

Gajraj Puri v Achaitor Puri 761
 Galah v Pir Baksh 1683
 Gale v Half King, 83
 Gale v Peckinton, 518
 Gallagher v Imperor, 1221
 Gallughar v London Assurance Co 816
 Galstaun v Banku 37
 Galstaun v Mirza Abid, 213, 220 327
 Galstaun v Sonatan, 860
 Gani Mullu, In re 79
 Gamage (A W) Ltd, Re 1212
 Ganarat v Bani, 401
 Ganapat v Emperor, 279, 128
 Ganapat v Multan, 1202
 Ganapat v Sepana, 10
 Ganapat v Tukaram, 993
 Ganapathie v Sakhravappa 918
 Ganapathi v Sivannah, 921
 Ganapati v Emperor 17
 Ganda Singh v Sulah Singh 1187
 Gano v Kine, 1129
 Gance v Bhan, 952
 Gance v Tarine, 891
 Ganges Manufacturing & Co., v Sooraj
 mull, 1203, 1206
 Ganesb v Bapu, 1167, 1168
 Ganish v Chundec, 1015
 Ganesb v Dhundiraj 206
 Ganesb v Emperor 274
 Ganesb v Furi, 786
 Ganesb v Hardhar, 21
 Ganesb v Keshavnw, 1182
 Ganesb v Lachmi, 52
 Ganeb v Mungaram, 1070
 Ganesb v Pelf 790
 Ganesb v Purshottam 119
 Ganesb v Ram Chandra, 629
 Ganesb v Ram Nulhee, 611
 Ganesb v The firm of Mangal Ram
 Athna Ram, 582
 Ganeb Dis Aurort In the goods of,
 1075
 Ganesb Naraynn In re, 19
 Ganga v Imperor, 111
 Ganga v Indrap, 577 786
 Ganga v Kika, 586
 Ganga v Pandoo, 941
 Ganga v Ram Gudh, 911
 Ganga v Rex, 111, 112
 Gangabai v Pandoo, 1021
 Gangabai v Phavar, 989
 Gangabai v Takaram 787
 Gangabai v Tukaram 799 911
 Ganga Hien v Tox moham 1188
 Ganga Chandra v Jugal Kashore 217
 Ganga Das v Akul Ali 121
 Gangadhar v Swaminadha 674
 Gangadia v Ram Pro 11179
 Ganga Mala v Madhub Chund, 109
 Gangaram v Ramewar 110
 Ganga Perhad v Loko Nath, 109

Ganga Perhad v Loko Nath, 109
 Ganga Prasad v Moturfin 970
 Ganga Ram v Crown, 153
 Ganga Ram v Imperor, 125
 Ganga Ram v Imperitor 14, 119 272
 155
 Ganga Ram v Kukaram, 582
 Ganga Ram v Lochmi Ram 110, 170
 173, 583, 1117
 Ganga Ram v Ratra, 1010
 Ganga Sahai v Imperor 1269
 Ganga Sahai v Hira Singh 1152 1182
 Ganges Manufacturing Co v Shuraj
 mull, 1149
 Ganaguli v Watson 12
 Ganhar v Ghulam, 961
 Ganoda v Ganish, 909
 Ganpat v Ram Chunder, 1017
 Gan v Bahu, 918
 Gardner v Gardner 1097
 Gardner v Lewgton 1250
 Gardner v Lucas 8
 Gardner v Moulh, 332
 Gardner Peorange Case 218, 274, 213
 607 675, 813, 1300
 Garne v Nicoll, 508
 Garnett v Bill 332, 333
 Garnett v Bradley 7
 Garnett v Garnett 290
 Garrels v Alexander 690 696, 677
 Garth v Outram 1275
 Garth v Howard, 302
 Garth v Meybrick, 1008
 Garurdhwaj v Supranandhwar, 781
 Gorthe Cole v Mial, 177, 810 879 880
 Garwood v Dennis 170
 Gattappa v Iramma, 217
 Gathin v State 1271
 Gajjendar v Sardar 1018
 Gauri v Imperor 607
 Gauri v Gangaram 119
 Gauri v Jhandi, 1052
 Gauri v Mangla 1190
 Gavalin v Dulari, 211
 Goya Singh v Mahomed 1229
 Gya Singh v Sarajbali 808
 Gebhort v Shudh 1221
 Gee v Word, 73
 Gehmul v Kurumal 706
 Gelston v Hax, 711 718
 Gendu v Sadh 129
 General Finance & Co v Jalandar
 1119
 Gentry v M C Ginn 51
 George v Administrator 121
 George v Le son 1021
 George v Sarver, 181
 George v Shaver 706
 George v Thompson 817
 George Goshans Fird (L. sh) 706
 Gersaph v Weller 827

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

Gerding v Harkin, 275
 Gerish v Chartier, 243
 German Steamship Drunchofels, In the matter of, 760
 Getting v Keighley, 311
 Geyer v Agunlor, 631
 Ghanam v Kanhaiya Mal, 953
 Ghunay v Rallia, 979
 Ghanky Singh v Nihal Singh, 129
 Ghani v Ram Singh, 1171
 Ghauri v Karim, 1496
 Ghisate v Umrayin, 190
 Ghisat v Jusdudde, 1072
 Ghitu Parmanik, v K F 380
 Ghari v Crown, 482
 Ghazoo v Crown, 414
 G. H. Gunt v Byjnath, 894
 Ghulam v Abdul, 308
 Ghulam v Allah, 904
 Ghulam v Crown, 450, 1218 1288, 400
 Ghulam v Emperor, 122 383, 559, 400
 563 1064 1218, 1221 1490
 Ghulam v Ghulam, 1042
 Ghulam v Kalim, 168, 172, 219
 Ghulam v Mahomed, 213, 289, 297
 Ghulam v Secretary of State, 588 761
 Ghulam v Tej Singh, 1187
 Ghulam Dastagir v Teja Singh, 1189
 Ghu Mmallah v Pappu Bai, 1189
 Ghure and others v Chatrapat, 790
 Ghureh Hossain v Usmonis, 510
 Giblehouse v Storing, 34
 Gribbon v Leather stonhawgh, 1121
 Gribbons v Powde, 917
 Griban v National Amalgamated Labourers, 183
 Gribon v Goldthwaite, 571
 Gribon v Hunter, 69 168 179 251
 Gribson v Jesses, 1088 1090
 Gribon v Minet, 1002
 Gribon v Sarall, 984
 Gribon v Winter, 297
 Gribb v Pike, 1397
 Gribble v Waffle, 1288
 Gribb v Yarborough, 184
 Gribb v Musamat Husan, 92
 Gribert v Guild, 676
 Gribert v Ross, 781
 Gribbly v Great Western Ry, 91
 Gribbly v Bile, 218
 Gribb v Boremore, 1125
 Gribb v Emperor, 668
 Gribb v Gribb, 998
 Gribb v Bat, 1249
 Gribb v Abbott, 812
 Gribb v Pepper Corne, 1089
 Gribb v Corbitt, 1214
 Gribb v Fowler, 149
 Gribb v Snipney Council, 181
 Gribb v Loder, 1166
 Gribb v Buckland, 1201
 Gribb v Hanu, 1114

Gudhar v Harish, 1115
 Gurdhardas v Keswala, 193, 889
 Gurdhari v Crown, 261, 721
 Gurdhari v Emperor, 228, 279, 263, 273, 682
 Gurdhari v Lado, 1072
 Gurja v Emperor, 206
 Gurmalla v Government, 1369
 Gurmara v Byoo, 912 836
 Gurmara v Rajendra, 77
 Gurmara v Hanuman Das, 810 811
 Gurmandon v Broughton, 627
 Gurish v Iwar, 458
 Gurish v Kishore, 1138
 Gurish v Kunja, 22
 Gurish v Q L, 1229
 Gurish v Secretary of State, 1172
 Gurish v Shama, 292 293 296
 Gurish v Shubhikas, 1012
 Gurman v Johnson, 250
 Gurlman v re, 989
 Gurlington v re, 788
 Guss v Berch, 788
 Guss v Patterson, 7
 Guss v Atkins, 502 503 506, 511
 514 515
 Guster v Harding, 588
 Glover v Hunbree, 292
 Gubb v Edwards, 813
 Glyn v Bank of England, 491 711
 Glyn v Goulfield, 1249
 Glyn v Krishna Ayyar, 618
 Gnanamuthu v Veerikand, 517
 Gnanamuthu v Chatterbhay, 460
 Gobin v Amrit, 205 206
 Gobind v Chandrabhaga, 118
 Gobind v Doroga, 1018
 Gobind v Dwarka, 277 278 492
 Gobind v Emperor, 116, 860
 Gobind v Pratih, 901
 Gobind v Pulim, 904
 Gobinda v Ramchandra, 911
 Gobinda Chunder v Goluck Chund, 1085
 Gobind Chunder v Sigopal, 198
 Gobind Singh v Bhiymath, 107
 Gobordhan v Houlal, 845 817
 Gobordhan v Husrat, 1177
 Gobordhan v Ritu Roy, 651
 Gocool v Debendra, 11
 Goda v Sarja, 940
 Godavari v Ganpat, 836
 Goddard v Geomeiger, 69
 Goddard v Gray, 620
 Godwin v Portan, 312
 Godforth v State, 126
 Gogun Chunder v Empress, 610
 Gogun v Nilo, 1172 1173
 Gokul v Emperor, 1 229, 278, 273
 Gokul v Hara Sundari, 601
 Gokul v Kaila, 1297

- ul v Moharaj 595
 ul v Padomandind, 10
 ul v Puran Mal 1144
 ul Chandra v Emperor 418 ul Chand v Balden, 798 uldas v Bildeo Sikul, 542 uldas v Chandibai 547
 uldas v Gulabro 1170
 uldas v Odhavji, 675
 ul Pershad v Kailash Nath 291 ul v Emperor 14, 17, 428 429
 ib v Chowdhury, 644
 ib v Chundil 209
 ib v Emperor 401
 ib v Fadli 338
 ib v Suraj Prasad, 12
 ib v Syed 597
 ib v Ramthani 1111
 um v Hem Chunder 1170 bert v Beechey 1021
 len v State 159 len R Mining Co v Barnton, 1308
 v Cheemra v Emperor, 1490 la Chinnu v Emperor 1219, 1499 ol v Magistrate 561
 uk v Biddadhar, 770
 uk v Nund Mohan 770
 stann v Samban, 860
 esh v Khetoo 1121
 esh v Mohespur, 187
 mbathula v Chumra, 71 ralul v Emperor 1375
 d all v Little 1249
 dinge v Goodinge, 1005 alman v Goodman 705
 dred v Armour 820
 drich v Stevens 981
 d right v Moss 535 515 517, 550
 566 ulight v Saul 707
 dattle v Broham 250
 dattle v Southern 1004
 dwin v Roberts 186
 dwin v Spray 525
 dwright v Hargray, 1096
 dwright v Moss 5 50, 1161
 onomaule and or- In re 771 oo Doyal v Durbire Lal, 895 pil v Balgobind 189
 pil v Bishnu Nath 89 pil v Dasotathi, 619
 pil v Emperor, 710
 pil v Gopal 317
 pil v Hunnut 187
 pil v Madhub, 139
 pil v Maghesswar 619
 pil v Manick, 107
 pil v Rajaram, 93
 pil v Randhar Singh 96
 pil v Sakhojra 12
 pil v Sarja, 1116
 Gopal v Sitaram 214
 Gopity v Raghupathy, 180
 Gopilaswami v Arun, Chellam 511
 707 1097
 Gopal Bhanji v Monaji 1075
 Gopal Chandra v Guna Charan, 5
 Gopal Chandra v Harendra 938
 Gopal Diji v Gopal Bin 315
 Gopal Mundal, v Nobokisto, 577 580
 Gopal Pandya v Porsotam 12
 Gopal Rao v Hirulal 1033
 Gopal Rao v Sitaram, 172, 596
 Gopee v Abdool 577
 Gopee v Hargobind 1299
 Gopee v Natoriya Chetty, 75
 Gopee kisto v Gunga Prashad, 1125
 Gopeswar Dutt, In the goods of 52,
 54, 57, 1295
 Gopeswar v Bloy, 494, 577, 578 580
 583, 586
 Gopi v Kherod, 618, 640
 Gopi v Mahanandi 808
 Gopi v Roykrishna 3
 Gopi v Sajan 323
 Gopichand v Emperor, 1264, 1351
 Gopi Das v Midholal 1292
 Gopi Kishen v Gopi Kishen, 1002
 Gopi Lal v Lakhpat 1252
 Gopilal v Chundracole, 458
 Gopinath v Annandmoyee, 75
 Gopisundara v Kherod, 202, 656
 Gorachand v Ramnarain, 1306
 Gorachand Haldar v Profulla Kumar
 Roy, 613
 Gordon v Gordon 345
 G O Ry C v Willis, 101
 Gordfrey v Macaulay 241
 Gordhan Das v Husaina, 458
 Gordhan v Husain, 334
 Gordon's Case 895
 Gordon v Bejoy, 458 459
 Gordon v Gordon, 166 1097
 Gore v Gibson 435
 Gorebollah v M R G D Boyd 299
 Gorham v Exeter 20
 Gorihulla Kaze v Gootodas Roy, 771
 Gorrisson v Perrin 1019
 Gosala v Pul Cherla, 897
 Gosete Subba Rao v Vnrigonda 976
 Gosham v Rickmunc 1401
 Gosling v Burne, 1145 121
 Goss v Nugent, 932, 976
 Goss v Tracy, 813 841
 Goss v Watling, 319, 320
 Goswami v Rani Narin, 968, 981
 Gott v Dinsmore 33
 Gott v Grundy, 17
 Gott v Sitaram, 1150
 Goucher v Clayton 1211
 Gould v Jones, 692, 693
 Gould v Lake, 122

- Goulesworth : Knight 1201
 Gour Hari : Kishore 701
 Gour : Kanhya 299
 Gour : Mohe-h 29
 Gouramini : Veeramra 1075
 Gourandi : Loh on, 1253
 Gouchandra : Imperor 114 111
 Gow Chandra : Raja Makkanda 111
 Gouree : Jugunath, 1206
 Gouree : Madhu-rudan, 159
 Gour Hari : Amminessa, 1207
 Gouri Das : Namismara 182
 Gouri Sankar : Minat Ali 91
 Gour Lal : Mohe-h 126
 Gour Mon : Horce Kishore 80
 Gour Moner : Krishna Chandra 114
 Gourporoy : Wooma Sundar 899
 Gour Prasad : Ramal 123
 Gouri Sankar : K J 51
 Gouri Shamlu : Emperor 101
 Gouri Sundar Babu : Hem Chandra 323, 1181
 Goverdhan : Hundi 1051
 Goveedam : Kany, 91 987
 Govind : Anand 916
 Govind : Chokhe 1193
 Govind : Emperor 411
 Govind : Empre- 1454
 Govind : Mantoran 1011
 Govind : Q L, 1491
 Govind : Kelly, 1037
 Govind : Santal 1039
 Govinda : Abdul 211
 Govindi : Dwarik 101
 Govinda : Imperor, 411 110 111 877 1107 Govinda : Joshi 1030
 Govinda : Pratap Narain 99
 Govinda : Palan Sai, 800
 Govinda : Runchandra, 1173
 Govinda : Sonial 1050
 Govinda : Thiyamal 16
 Govindji : Chhotalal 206, 293
 Govindo : Narain, 1292
 Govindorao : Hinchind 1190
 Govindram : Ragho, 599
 Govt of Bengal : Grando Minto, 1 29
 Govt of Bengal : Santarna 1 88
 Govt of Bengal : Umach Chandra 726
 Government of Bombay : Verwamp 166 661 710
 Grace : Rynnton 352
 Graham : Cass 141
 Graham : Dyster, 818
 Graham : Manning 167
 Graham : Olde- 817
 Graham Hotel : Manning, 9
 Granathal : Sidda, 1 1190
 Grandale : Com of Calcutta 706, 782
 Grandthe Venkata Subbiraach lu re 129
 Grand Rapid : Cheshora, 677
 Grand Rapids : Hunter 12
 Grant : Gould 791
 Grant : Grant 100, 1011, 1012, 1022
 Grant : Muddox 981, 1020
 Gravenor : Woodhou e, 1201, 1202
 Graves : Key, 160
 Gray : Fielder, 801
 Gray : Fowler, 171
 Gray : Ha : 127
 Gray : Hankinson, 9 9
 Gray : Keinaha n, 821
 Gray : Manne Thopet 1003
 Gray : Palmer 319
 Gray : Pentind, 1219 1210
 Gray : State 116
 Grayson : Atkinson 829
 Great Eastern Ry Co : Bristol Cor 983
 Greathed : Brimch 623
 Great West rn Ry Co : Bristol Cor poration 1011
 Greaves : Isheld 11
 Green : Cull 1382
 Green : Chelsea 523
 Green : Gtewick, 564
 Green : New River Co 6 8
 Green : Serin, 761
 Greenlaw : King 1215
 Greenough : I cole 1, 11, 1351
 Greenough : Gtwill 1213 1214 1250, 1251
 Green s Settlement, In re, 1070
 Greenshield : Crawford 113
 Greenwood : Woodham 609
 Greesh Chunder : Ramal, 801
 Gregg : Wells 1152
 Gregory : Doidge 1199, 1202, 1203
 Gregory : Duke of Brunswick 152
 Gregory : Howard 297, 571, 572
 Gregory : Mithall 1175
 Gregory : Parker, 303
 Gregory : Tavernei 616 1576
 Gresham : Manning, 51 98 775
 Gre on : Rock, 923
 Greville : Chipman, 716
 Grey : Grey 1122
 Grey : Pchson, 4 505 1000, 1001
 Grey : Redman, 521
 Grey : Shah, 988
 Grey : Sharp, 987
 Grey : Young 218
 Griel : Jomra 1 5
 Griens : Iril 126
 Griffin : Brown 608
 Griffin : State 720
 Griffin, R: 81
 Griffith : Davies 1251
 Griffith : Hamilton, 625
 Griffith : Ricketts 1385
 Griffith : Williams, 309 856
 Grimwood : Stephens, 541

Gross & Groves, 112
 Gross v State 697
 Gross & Watlington, 506
 Gross in the goods of, 7
 Goswami & Ram Rekha 1155
 Grover and Biker Saving Machine Co
 & Mulloid, 1212
 Groves v Groves, 1126
 Grove & Wate, 819
 Gruenbuig & Smith 310
 G S Hannak & Messrs Irgumuth
 1213
 Gt W Ry Co & Willis, 304
 Guardhouse & Blackburn, 972
 Gudadbur & Bhyrob, 899
 Gudadbur & Tarachand, 600, 855
 Gudar & Brynndon, 1015
 Gudaree & Moridugni, 620
 Guddafar v Kumator, 940
 Guefrutto & Young 1018
 Gagy & Maquire, 1258
 Guild's Case, 361 432
 Gujdh Majhi & Emperor 877
 Gujir Mal v Sitarum, 930, 911
 Gujir Singh & Meher Singh 901
 Gujya Lal & Futeh Lal, 183, 184, 186
 194, 197, 198, 199, 200 201 202,
 209, 210, 211
 Gujraj v Abalkh, 597
 Gujrat & Motilal 1119 1174
 Gujri & Samandher, 917
 Gula Khia & Fupcroi, 423
 Gulib & Bidhiwari 1158
 Gulab v Bhun, alil, 11 6
 Gulab & Divan, 1207
 Gulab v Emprcs, 390
 Gulab v Fadali, 328 336
 Gulab Din & Monji, 10 3
 Gulam v Emperor, 370
 Gulamali & Miyabhu 940
 Gul Ho sra v K L 358, 391 417, 448
 Gully & Exeer, 810
 Gulrang v Vasima 1162
 Gulzar & Fidi 1161
 Gulzar & Madho, 323 1119
 Guman v Sorabji 770
 Gun & Mc Cartney 958
 Gunabai & Motilal 1046
 Gunebulla v Mohanlal, 5
 Gundi Singh & Crown, 1256
 Gundry v Primier, 1
 Gunga Pu-lhad & Indrajit 325 1015
 Gungri & Ram Gutis 1184
 Gunindia & Rajendra 71
 Gunning & People 751
 Gunwant v Emperor, 79, 25, 260, 273
 Gupta & Emperor 859
 Gura Prishnna & Madhu Sudun, 1000
 Gurbaksh v Gurdial, 1120
 Gurbaksh & Portapi, 221

Gurbasa v Chutla Singh, 970
 Gurdas v Ishar Dis, 911
 Gurdayal & Jhandu 635
 Gurdit & Imperoi, 423 426 429
 Gurdayal & Landu Mal 186
 Gurdajal & Taid 1189
 Gurdial Singh v Central Bond and Local Committee 12
 Gurdulla & Nabi Baksh 336
 Gurdit Singh & Crown, 1289
 Gur Dyal & Sukhanandria, 1306
 Gurlinga Swamy & Ramalakashmunni
 1172 1178
 Gura & Liechimonar, 1072
 Gura Charan & Surendri, 290
 Gura Charan & Satya Nityan, 771
 Gurdas & Girdhari 1307
 Gura Dr. Issori Chunder, 1128
 Gura Mahadev & Jagatir, 632
 Gurupada & Irappa 1164
 Guraadhwaj v Suparindh Olwari
 523 523, 699 700 702, 1042
 Gura Swami & Lall Karyin 1169
 Gulari & Abdul, 960
 Gutteridge & Smith 762
 Gutta & Gunec 197
 Gutta Koiburto & Bhikut Koiburto,
 203
 Guy & Hall 324
 G Venkata Sushih & Emperor, 90
 Gwillim & Gwillim, 836
 Gwynne & Bernell 4, 5
 Gya Singh & Mahomea, 369
 Gynes v Sweet 1008

H

H v H 1159
 Huradhu v Guish, 325
 Haranand & Kamgopid 871
 Habib & Samuel 1118 1185
 Habib Ali & Lili Ram 975
 Habiram & Hem Nath 823 865
 Habibullah & Bakht 168 175
 Habibuanissa & Musharoff 838
 Hackett & Marten 327
 Haddow v Parry 515
 Hadjee Kasem v Hadjee Isup 891
 Hadley v Borendale 175
 Hadley & Carter 219
 Hardy's Case 751
 Hardy & Massill 657
 Haflumra & Caubl 1591
 Hafiz & Abdulal 10 7
 Hagari & Mc Dermont 1297
 Hagari & Baker 33
 Hagari & Ineff 889
 Hakim & Bharat 1037
 Haidan & K E 919
 Haider Abu 1268
 Haines & Abu Min 1268
 Haines & Guthrie, 528, 539, 510

Haines v O'Brien 211
 Haime v Honey 191
 Haime v Wilson 115
 Hajee Ismail v Wilson & Co 16
 Hajee Ismail v Mung Bai 912
 Hajee Mahomed v Spinner 1022
 Hajee Laxman 91
 Hajee Purmanand 619
 Hajee Spinner, 986
 Hajee Sukhrim 905
 Hajee Bibi v H H Sultan 219 519
 129
 Hajira v Anna 110
 Haim v Emperor 1287 1289 1290
 Haim v Hojoy 212
 Haim v Emperor 1289
 Haim v Nigbin 1090
 Haim v Jundi 291 772 1372
 Haim v Amrik 218
 Haim v K E 286 27 410 416
 Haidan v Harvey 1118
 Haidry v Bindoo 116
 Hails v Fred 142
 Halifax Union v Wheelwright 1183
 Hall v Ball 792 901
 Hall v Beeson 702
 Hall v Brown 277
 Hall v Butler 1201 1202
 Hall v Griffin 1214
 Hall v L & N W Ry Co 761
 Hall v Mayo 523
 Hall v Cousins 1323
 Halliberton v Fletcher 318
 Hallin, sal v Secretary of State 20
 Hall v Trusts Ry 882
 Hallmark's Case 241
 Hallikundar v Andir 1186
 Hambl v Bimray 23
 Hammett v Secretary of State 772
 Hamberton v Honey 188
 Hann v Nique 1196
 Hann v Itim v Bholi 190
 Hamilton v Nielson 702
 Hamlin v Great N W Ry 17
 Hamlyn & Co v Fairbir Dietrich
 29
 Hammer Smith v Brind 13
 Hammett v Honey 189
 Hammond v Bridget 523 52 891
 Hammond v Vian 689 696
 Hampton v Willis 817
 Hampden v Piece 1012
 Hancock v Kelly 1381
 Handley v Lathugh 861
 Handman v Hamman 1112
 Hankin v Turner 618
 Hamman v Secretary of State 1082
 1983
 Hawley v Stewart 302
 Hamman v In re 183
 Hamman v Mukti 1161

Hannum Per-hid Pandey's Case 1016
 Hannum v Rmcharitlor 899
 Hans Koer v Sheogobind 178
 Hanser v People 775
 Hans v Purker 295
 Hans v Shuckleton 711
 Harabaidur v Chand Ray 519
 Haridhan v Iswardas, 1082
 Harak v Bishnu 73
 Harakrishna v Kamesh 611
 Haranand v Ram, opul 775, 800, 813
 822 864 891
 Haranuth v Mohanlal 196
 Haranuth v Pursh 296
 Haraprosad v Emperor 302
 Harabaidur v Chand Ray 17
 Harbins v Emperor 315 371, 109 111
 1211 1363
 Harbith's Case 17
 Harbhagat v Norwan, 338
 Harbhagat v Emperor 403
 Harbhagat v Mundit, 615
 Harbhagat v Lachman 1117
 Hardeo v Kapil 222
 Hardin v Kresinger, 820
 Harding v Strong, 712
 Hardman v Wilcock, 1210
 Hardwick Re, 763
 Hardy v Merrill 115 660
 Hardy v Case 157 178 1211
 Hardy v trial 288 615, 715, 720, 1239,
 1324, 1327, 1376
 Hardehur v Charu, 7
 Harek v Bishnu 939
 Harakrishna v Kamesh, 650, 651
 Harindra v Chandra, 835
 Harford v Morris 612
 Harford v Wilson, 1395
 Harhar Prosad v Mahabir, 1010, 1072
 Hargobind v Kishen 865
 Hargrave v Hargrave, 707 1097, 1098
 Hari v Dhandi 1081 1082
 Hari v Kesi, 1016
 Hari v Moro 515
 Hari v Somendra 305
 Hari v Manak Chund, 500, 825 867
 Hari Chund v Govind 937
 Hari Charan v Q L 1490
 Hari Chintaman v Moro Lal shan, 517, 898, 1072
 Haridas v Mercantile Bank of India, 944
 Haridas v Secretary of State, 886
 Haridhanter v Bui Dissce, 895
 Harhar Partap v Bisheshwar, 220 811
 Harhar Prosad v Edul Singh 597
 Harhar Prosad v Mahabir, 1010 1072
 Harhar Prosad v Kesho Prosad 171
 314 639
 Hari Keshore v Abdul 1229
 Harikun, v Keshi 1185

- Hari Kishan v Raghunath, 214
 Harihar v Phakar, 847, 848
 Hari Lakshman, In re, 1394
 Hari Mandil v Durjodhan 1200
 Harimohan v Kailash, 336
 Harimohan v Rameswar 1015
 Harimohan v Sourendra 908
 Harimoni v Moti Sheikh, 1063
 Haripria v Rukmini, 816
 Hari Prosad v Emperor, 396
 Hari Prosad v Harihar 1040
 Hari Ram v Emperor, 1374
 Hari Ram v Hardevibai 1139
 Hari Ram v Madanpaul 1189
 Hari Ram v Sheo Karan 913
 Hari Rampal v Emperor, 1192
 Hari v Knight, 873
 Harihar v Nishikanta, 1042
 Harihar v Prosnun 292 293, 313
 Harish v Rudhanath, 438
 Harish v Secretary of State 664
 Harison v Mayor, 1136
 Hari Mal v Abdul 1169
 Harlal v Basanta 1158
 Harman v Vahatton, 352
 Harmongal v Ganan Singh 83,
 Harmsup v Bui 629
 Harman Singh v Emperor 123 124
 Harinarayan v Suresh 1048
 Harinath v Mohanlal 679
 Harinath v Mandil 63,
 Harok v Bishen 128
 Haromoni v Harcharan 6
 Haronath v Preonath 297
 Haroprosad v Sheo Dyal 76
 Harp v Harp 325
 Harper v Fyolfson 1399
 Har Prosad v Bilrama 900
 Har Prosad Das v Bikshi 304
 Harprosad v Sheo Dyal 168 189 1229
 Harpur v Brock 504
 Harrit v Wise 241 608 609
 Haruman v Stoe 95
 Harrington v Iry 14, 692
 Harrington v Lincoln 750
 Harris In re 553
 Harris v Hill 1264 1265
 Harris v Knight 851 852
 Harris v Pickett 928 941
 Harris v Peppet 1348
 Harris v Truman, 1186
 Harrison's Trial 144
 Harrison v Blade, 504
 Harrison v Higson, 989
 Harrison v Remington Paper Co 292
 Harrison v Rewan 658 710
 Harrison v Vallance 327
 Harrod v Harrod 1222
 Harronath v Nittmand 225
 Harronath v Preonath 479
 Harry v Broad 751
 Harshah v Emperor 1272
 Hart v Alexander 276
 Hart v Haif 893
 Hart v Newlump 48
 Hart v Powell 95 96
 Hart v Randolph, 322
 Hart v R Co 245
 Hart v Tim Lyck 783
 Hatfield Bridge Co v Granger 351
 Harting v People 677 690
 Hartman Steel Co v Hoog 614
 Harton v Westminster Commissioners 1144
 Hartopp v Hartopp 1089
 Harvey Case 316, 414
 Harvey v Croydon Union 309
 Harvey v Ocean Co 1072
 Harwanta v Akbar 584
 Hasay v Dhondiram 1298
 Hasan Ali v Emperor 369
 Hasan Ali v Maharban 1072
 Hasan Ali v Rupalla 1092
 Hasa Khand v Jeshu Premji 948 919
 Hashim v Empress, 878
 Hasim Ali v Abjak 203
 Haslam Foundery v Hall 1217
 Hasmathella v Hari 799
 Hasni v Emperor 571
 Hasari v Fazal 1085
 Hassan Khan v Emperor 412
 Hastings Peerage 547
 Hasun v Emperor 365
 Hatch v Hatch 1090
 Hathaway v Crocker 1333
 Hathaway v Haskell 295
 Hathaway v National Life Insurance Co 669
 Hathaway's Trial 266
 Hathe Ram v Gobind Ram 1006
 Hatem v Empress 757 783
 Hate a Gyan v Emperor 172
 Haver v Turney 676
 Hunter v Davis 659
 Hansan Ali v Gurudas 830
 Haward v Hudson, 1112
 Haward v Wilson 72
 Hawas v Draeger 1097, 1102
 Hawes v Watson 1213
 Hawkes v Charlement 106
 Hawkins v City of Fall River 710
 Hawkins v Gutherole 7
 Hawkins v Leescombe 297
 Hawkins v Powells 72
 Hay v Gordon 317
 Hayat v Emperor 454 1330
 Hnyatu v Emperor 1272
 Hayman v Flewker 2
 Haynas v Haynas 1104 1125
 Haynes v Carter 705
 Haynes v State 70
 Hayslep v Gymer 135

- Haywood v Stephens 589
 Hazari v Emperor 1331
 Hazari v Janki 187
 Hazarilal v Ganga Charan 1167
 Haidil v Hargobind 193
 Hazir v K I 405
 Hazrat v Emperor 111 235
 Head v Head 1096
 Headley v Barendal 175
 Healey v Hatch 350 35
 Heame v Rogers 290 311 157 158
 1112
 Heasay v Lx 71
 Heath v Dime 551
 Heath v Seumson 111
 Heatherington v Kemp 276 275
 Heibheit v Purcha 20
 Heilitch v Mellune 24
 Hedges Case 131
 Heera Nath v Bum 157
 Heils v Sullivan 1106
 Helalannes v Khondalr 1061
 Helin Das v Durga Das 1153 1157
 Hem v Kahi 1015
 Hemanta v Barendra 911
 Hemanta v Banki 561
 Hem Chandra v Ananyobali 1033
 Hem Chandra v Benayakda 798
 Hem Chandra v Kahi Charan 129 915
 951
 Hem Chandra v Kulpio man 111
 561 1030
 Hem Chandra v Sasibhusan 911
 Hement v Midnapur Zemindars 987
 Hemlota Debi In re 834
 Hemraj v Krishna Lal 12
 Hemraj v Nihal Singh 1402
 Hem Singh v Bhagoboto 1052
 Henderson v Bank 697
 Henderson v Wild, 298
 Henderson v Williams 121
 Henderson In re 748 883
 Hendrickson v People 114
 Hengate v Gascone 547
 Henkle v Royal Lx Ass Co 96
 Henman v Dickinson 1061
 Hennell v Lyon 147 812 965
 Hennessy v Keeling 151
 Hennessy v Wright 123 1236 1211
 Henry v Adey 890
 Henry v Bensita 271
 Henry v Brown 716
 Henry v Lee 1375 1376
 Henry v Leigh 802
 Henry v Mitchell 802
 Henry Coxon Re 496 497 498
 Henry Francis In the goods of 893
 Henry Packer In the goods of 987
 Hensers Case 1270
 Hensley Case 690
 Hensman v Tryer 959
 Heuers Re 1078
 Heramba v Surendra 599, 861
 Herbert v Inckel 539
 Herbert's Case 12
 Herbert Francis v Mkhomed, 797
 Herne v Rogers 1181
 Hetherington v Kemp 271 275 491
 Heter v Glasgow 975
 Hewitt v Loosmore 212
 Hewitt v Morris 841
 Heydan v Case 67
 Heyne v Inckel, 278
 Hey Sham v Bhola Nath 161
 Hitt Bakshi v Lachmi Min 17
 Hubbard v Knight, 501
 Hicks v Thompson 57
 Hilder v Stevens 61
 Higgins v Dawson 1002
 Higgs v Dixon 852
 Highfield v Peake 863
 Higham v Ridgway 180 219 702 707
 506 512 513 519 521 525 516
 Hill v Blake 912
 Hill v Clarke 961
 Hill v Clifford 1134
 Hill v Metropolitan Asylum 161
 Hill v Nisbit 900
 Hill v Roderick 326
 Hill v Showell 176
 Hilton v Mason 677
 Himachala v Tatwar 314
 Himrod Coal Co v Adcock 296
 Himranda v Emperor 1190
 Hinchley v Fletcher 703
 Hindustan Cooperative v Secretary of State 1140 1151
 Hindson v Weatherill 1091
 Hingra v Emperor 111
 Hingunmija v Heramba 571 58
 Hume v Promesoy 277
 Hura v A Hills 196
 Hura v Burn 187
 Hura v Crown 403
 Hura v Jogat 1115
 Hura v Roshan 1169
 Hurbhai v Dhanyabai 518
 Hurabagat v Govinda 581
 Hura Bibi v Ramdhona Lal 1094
 Hura Bibi v Ram Hari 832 833 836
 837
 Hura Gobhar v Emperor 401
 Hury v Vishnu 963 1121
 Hurral v Benarasi 873
 Hurral v Dhamno 1091
 Hurral v Emperor 876
 Hurral v Ganesh 788
 Hurral v Hills 195
 Hurral v Shunkar 799
 Hurral v Tushram 1155
 Huranand v Ahmed, 337
 Hura Naned Ojha v Emperor, 31

- Hiranmiva In the matter of 378 308
 400 401 402 407 411
 Hirra v Burren 703
 Hiseocks v Hiseocks 148
 Hitendra v Rameshwar 196 638
 Hitnaran v Rambarai 547 1115
 Hoare v Johnstone 315
 Hocking Re 142
 Hochrieter v People 1124
 Hodgson v Scarlett 1341
 Hodkinson v Wills 863
 Hodsoll v Taylor 178
 Hoe Moe v J M Seed 1052
 Hogg v Garrett 301
 Houghton v Houghton 350
 Holdbass v Dowling 829
 Hobs v Keer 107
 Holl v Griffin 1209
 Holliday v Atkins 1112
 Hollis v Burton 763 765
 Hollingham v Head 140 179 252
 1309
 Hollingworth v Palmer 6
 Hollins v Fowler 1156
 Holloway v Rakes 87
 Holman v Burrow 747 751
 Holman v Laynes 1089
 Holme v Green 319
 Holmes v Bita Krishna 985
 Holmes v Gold Smith 100
 Holmes v Mathews 949
 Holrus v Johnston 298
 Holson Re, 1132
 Holt v Collyer 932 1022
 Holt v Miers 817
 Holt v Squire 293
 Homans v Caring 39
 Homer v Homer 1016
 Hood v Reeve 330 332
 Hoodley v Sewell & S Co 105
 Hoodking In re 1104
 Hook v A G 621
 Hooper v Truscott 149
 Hoove v Allin 77
 Hoove v Hoove 1217
 Hopcroft v Keys 1200
 Hope v Evans 289
 Hope v Hope 496
 Hope v Liddet 1386
 Hope v Lidefell 1264
 Hoper v Ashby 690
 Hoper v Mackenzie 960
 Hope will v De Pinna 1067
 Hopkins v Megguire 696
 Hopt v People 388
 Hora Kumar v Jogendra 203
 Hordat v Dhandhi 1048
 Horendra v Emperor 1403
 Horgrave v Horgrave 302
 Horgrave v Everard 1033
 Hormasji v Peldor 759
 Hormusjee v Bai Dhanabai 921
 Hormusji v Dorabhai 628
 Horne v Bentinck, 1235, 1239 1240
 Horne v Mackenzie 1380 1381 1382
 Horne Toke's Case 690 691
 Horne Toke's Trial 76 231 720, 823
 Horeney Local Board v Monarch
 Investment Building Society, 6
 Horonath v Samir Mia 876
 Horrosundari v Chander, 835
 Horsfill v Halifax 1156 1159
 Harwood v Griffith 1012
 Hosain v Abjit 217
 Hossein v Empress 483
 Hoskin v Warren 702
 Hospell v Collins 1098
 Hossain Ali v Abid Ali 735
 Hoti Veeri v Venka Krishna, 901
 Hough v Cook 676
 Hough v Windus 4
 Houghtaling v Kelderhouse 713
 Houseman v Roberts 817
 Houston v Blythe 564
 How v Hall 806 819 822
 Howard v Beall 1486
 Howard v Hudson 458 1146
 Howard v Pestonj 180
 Howard v Rockwell 144
 Howard v Rustomji 919
 Howard v Sherwood 200
 Howard v Smith 347 907
 Howe v Howe 782
 Howley v Whipple, 922
 Hoyle v Cornwallis (Lord), 751
 Hriday v Emperor, 55
 Hriday v Joyram, 936
 Hridaynath v Nirode Sundari, 1189
 Hriday Nath v Ramchandra, 613
 Hubbard v Lees 550
 Hubbard v Knight, 1249
 Hubbel v United States, 45
 Hubbock, In re, 999
 Hubbocks Estate, 998
 Huber v Guggenheim 38
 Hudson v Parker, 831, 832, 835, 836
 Hudson v Robert, 250
 Hudson v State 116
 Hudson's Case, 849
 Huggins v Dawson, 989
 Huggins v Southern R Co 676
 Huggins's Trial, 734
 Hughes v Budd 817
 Hughes v General Electric L & Co
 105
 Hughes v Hughes 1399
 Hughes v Metro Ry 977
 Hughes v Thrope, 291
 Hughes v Vargus 1236
 Huguenin v Baxley 1088
 Huklal v Ramgati 1033
 Hukum v Hiralal, 946

Hakum Chand v Kamammad 10
 Hakum Chand v Rudin Kassin 909
 Hallet's Trial In 141 509
 Hull v Hull 1018
 Hulot v K F 683
 Humburg v Wood 39
 Humes v O Bryan 507
 Hummings v Gorson 217
 Humphill v M Kennn 631
 Humphrey v Budd, 752
 Humphrey v Dth 982 981
 Humphrys v Humphreys 621
 Humphreys v Presum 568
 Hunder on v Hunder-on, 1012
 Henderson & Co, v Williams, 1115
 1209

Hungr Pandi v Gujdhir 488
 Hung Myat v Ala Mny, 1122
 Hungate v Ga-coigne, 707
 Harooman v Babri, 1017
 Hunsar v Sheo Govind 458
 Hunt v Lowell 102 672
 Hunt v Musay, 1127
 Hunt v Rans Muner 961
 Hunt v Smyney, 138
 Hunter v Harris, 138
 Hunter v Noehods 1
 Hunting Don v All rull, 42
 Hunting Don v Muldman 801
 Huntley v Gaskell 621
 Hura Kumar v Ramchandira 978
 Hurulal v Jadab, 1046
 Hurd v Morning 1258
 Hurdial v Hira Lall, 309
 Hurdial v Rij Kristo 1030, 1016
 Hurtepur v Churn 868
 Huri v Munman 304
 Hurral v I Jon, 860
 Huresh v Prosunno 789 891
 Hurish v Tarachand 562
 Hurnund v Rangopal 833
 Huro Nath v Preonath, 293
 Hur Prasad v Bikhram, 901
 Hur Parshad v Sheo Doyal, 184 703
 758 1227
 Hurring v Colliery, 1249
 Hurri-h v Prosunno 808
 Hurro v Chander 831
 Hurro Chunder v Shoorodhani 1
 Hurro Chander Paul an ors, 28
 Hurronath v Nittinand 343 553
 Hurro Soondery v M S Stevenson
 1123
 Hurc Proshad v Sheodoyal 187
 Hurry v Lee 1370
 Hurry Churn v Empress, 782
 Hurry Sunker v Kahi Coomer 1171
 Husain v Basit 900
 Husain Bibi v Emperor 78
 Hussein v Emperor, 1108
 Husam v Emperor 1192, 1199

Hussain v Frikhban, 992
 Hussain v Shahab Nur, 1361
 Hussainally v Mangal Dass, 911
 Hussainally v Popat Lal, 1021
 Hustnbl R 1021
 Hutchison v Mannington, 889
 Hutchison v Smith, 311
 Hut China v Railroad Co, 90, 97
 Huttly v Simmons, 112
 Hutton v Warren, 931, 982, 981
 H W Agar In the goods of 881
 Hyddon v I lion, 1125
 Hyde v Palmer, 76, 81, 92, 129
 Hyde v Woolfols 551

I

Ibad Ashraf v Inayatullah 1207
 Ibrahim v Reg 397, 105, 137, 570
 Ibrahim v Ram Narain 895
 Ichamoni Das v Prasanna Kumar,
 1166
 Ichimgir v Secretary of State, 1237
 Ida v Empress, 723
 Iec v Andly 1135
 Ikhia v Makhan, 355
 Ikhia Buksh v Emperor 286 377, 125
 Ikhia Buksh v Emperor, 279, 116, 1112,
 1285
 Ilt v Genge 816
 Illinois etc Ry Co v Von Anon, 668
 Imam v Hargovind, 770
 Imam Ali v Baij Nath, 1121
 Imambandi v Matusuddi 170 583
 Imamdin v Muhammad Din 1073
 Imamdin v Niamatulla, 876 918
 Imam v Ibrahim 1174
 Imdad Ali v Ghulam Ikhia 1072
 Imdad Ali v Jagat Lal 613
 Imdad v Pnteshiri 59
 Imperatrix v Bahari 417 118
 Imperatrix v Pa'n Patel 112
 Imperatrix v Byagat Koon 450, 473
 Imperatrix v Chandvalal, 442
 Imperatrix v Ganiprabhat 192, 153
 Imperatrix v Jijibhai, 1371
 Imperatrix v Juma, 750
 Imperatrix v Palapa Bin, 440
 Imperatrix v Pindhari Nath, 356, 357
 Imperatrix v Pitamber, 401, 155, 1400
 Imperatrix v Rudra, 480
 Imperatrix v Ranjavalad Shivan, 446
 Imperator v Dubud 385, 415
 Imperator v Maisari, 368
 Imperator v Haji Alle, 1493
 Imperial Bank v London Docks, 981
 Imrf v Lalla, 323
 Imrit Chamar v Sridhan Panday, 311,
 140 170 218 219 222, 311, 519 520,
 555 582, 900, 903 1264
 Imrit Koer v Debes Prasad, 1181
 Imruzi v, Dhumran, 323

Ina z Queen, 128
 Inayat Ali z Emperor, 486
 Income tax Commissioner z Pem-el, 3
 Indar v Jogmohan, 1490
 Indar Chandra z Lachmi Bih, 985
 Indr Pal z Mewah Pal, 304
 Indar Prosid z Lala Jigmohan 1492,
 1493
 Indra Singh z Fate Singh, 214
 Inderbutti Koer z Sheikh Mahboob Ali, 1203
 Inderwick z Sitchell 1004
 Indra General Navigation v Dekpari
 Tea Co 23
 Indor Singh v Thakur Singh 1136
 Indraj Mal z Lye Ram, 1035
 Indranapulu Ct Ry Co z Haverstiel,
 659
 Indra Pal Singh z Thakur Din, 213
 Indro Deb v Azisur, 999
 Indubala z Mamunatha, 988
 Ingham v Raynor, 1003
 Inglis v Usherwood 612
 Inhabitants of North Bookfield v
 Inhabitants of Warren, 544
 Innes z Ashgar 1034
 Insurance Co v Mosley, 83, 85, 93, 95
 245
 Insurance Co z Tobin, 104
 Insurance Co v Weids, 1377
 Ippari Ramalinga Inre, 404, 409
 Iqbal z Emperor 397
 Ireland z Powell, 525
 Irish Society v Bishop of Down 587, 861
 Irnham z Child, 928
 Irshad v Mt Kariman, 289
 Irshad v Kanto, 1116
 Irwin z D F Reid, 1236
 Irwin z Lev er, 801
 Isab Mandal z Queen Impres-, 593
 Isalson z Williams, 985
 Ishan z Benimadhin 323 321 838, 1181
 Ishan z Bhyrab 797
 Ishan z Ilbran 287 615
 Ishan z Sufatulla 12
 Ishan Chandra Ray In re 629
 Ishan Chandra z Queen Impres-1271
 Ishan Chandra z Rakimuddin 1013
 Ishan Singh z Crown, 416
 Iherwood z Oldknow 21
 Ishan z Emperor 1233
 Ishar Das z Rutlal 1178
 Ishri Prosid z Jallijur Kunwar, 901
 Ishri Prosid z Sri Ram, 891
 Ishur Chandra z Nobadeep, 160
 Ihtamull z Keramatullah 106
 Ismail z Broughton, 1176
 Ismail z Emperor 20 397 1393 1396

Ismail z Hafiz 916
 Ismail z Fazabnli, 1051
 Israel z Benjamin 762
 Isri Prosid z Guaga Prosid 833
 Issur Chandra z Nobdeep 763
 Isvara Chandra z Parannth 397
 Isvor Din v Dhan 1044
 Iswar Chandra z Gonsunder 1180
 Itchunt z Kalram 75
 Ivat z Finch 295 326
 Izatunnissa v Paitab Singh 1195
 Izatly z Nalamli 980

J

Jabar Ali z Monmoham, 500
 Jaeger v Knly 54
 Jack z Mutual R & Life Ass 97
 Jack v Wood 564
 Jackson v Allen 818 1089
 Jackson z Bailey 560
 Jackson z Bird 322
 Jackson v Bird, 324
 Jackson z Barton, 815
 Jackson z Davis 326
 Jackson z Irvin, 1114, 1127
 Jackson z Jackson 707
 Jackson Re, 1135
 Jackson z Lowe 921
 Jackson z Mc Call, 325
 Jackson z Myers, 325 326
 Jackson z Thommason 1355
 Jackson z Waldron 845
 Jackson v Wooley 8
 Jacob z Lee 818
 Jacob z Linday 967 1379 1382
 Jacob & Co z Vimaray, 914
 Jacob z State, 173
 Jaddonath Dutt In re 1269
 Jadenarain z Buldeo, 604
 Jadoo Nath z Burdnant, 257
 Jadhur z Sheoaran 638, 610
 Indub Lal z Khemmnkari 1234
 Jadulal z Innkee 746
 Jadu Mondal z Jogendra Nath, 1011
 Jadanand z Emperor, 1729
 Jadanand z Kalyan Singh, 979
 Jadanath z Mohendra 311
 Jadanath z Ruplal 290
 Jadu Rai z Bhabatarna 71 92, 94,
 910, 1023
 Jaffree Khannun z Imdad, 805
 Jefferts z Alvord, 9
 Jagabandhu z Deena 613
 Jagabandhu z Radhakrishna, 1172
 Jagadamba z Ramchandra, 1019
 Jagadeo z Emperor, 136
 Jagadendra z Hemanta, 886
 Jagadindri z Secretary of State, 603,
 604, 886
 Jagdish z Harhar 516 1401
 Jagadish z Sheo 20

- Jagana v Atchama 1010
 Jagunkoer v Raghoonundin 577
 Jagannath v Bibu 1048
 Jagannath v Bojraing, 534
 Jagannath v Cresswell 1212, 1213
 Jagannath v Dhiraj 824
 Jagannath v Gangi Reddi, 1163
 Jagannath v Hanuman 1075
 Jagannath v Jankishen, 1156
 Jagannath v Kalichand, 654
 Jagannath v Lalta 1168
 Jagannath v Ranjit 628
 Jagannath v Rayjee 846
 Jagannath v Syed, 1153 1181
 Jagannath v Indra Mal 915
 Jagapiti v Ekambora, 309
 Jagat Mohini v Dworka, 746
 Jagat Mohini v Raphael, 933, 1023
 Jagat Narain v Nageshar, 594
 Jagat Pal v Hornam 945
 Jagat Pal v Jogeswar, 472, 493
 Jagat Singh v Deir Dutt, 930
 Jagat Singh v Jogeshar 539
 Jagawa v Emperor, 425, 723
 Jagd it v Sheo Pat, 598
 Jagdeo v Baluki, 1117
 Jagdeo v Emperor, 365, 367
 Jagdeo v Vethoba, 547
 Jagdep v Rajo 1156
 Jagdom v Rupnarain 1186
 Jageshor v Mahadeo 1075
 Jagganatha v Secretary of State 787
 Jaggomohun v Manik Chand 186
 Jaggun, In the matter of 170
 Jagjivan v Nathji 938
 Jagdishhury v Kailash 5
 Jago Mohon v Kaspi, 955
 Jagmohan Das v Mangul Das 699
 Jag Prosad v Mt Singari 1119
 Jaggashu v Bidha 1047
 Jagnut v Hiji 514
 Jagwa v K F 428, 876, 1276, 1371
 Jahadali v Ajmunnessa 308
 Jaharaddi v Dehrath 1171
 Jahandar v Ramlal 1178
 Jaigopal v Sheo Sagar, 787
 Jal Lal v Sheo Chand 1090
 Jalalsro v Lal Fakte Singh 1050
 Jainab v Hyder 56 1396
 Jainab v Sita Kumari 578
 Jainandan v Umrao 1190
 Jainarain v Kadambini 1206
 Jainullahdin In re 1112
 Jainulatta v Romonikant, 199
 Jaipalagir v Dharm Lal 760
 Jurim v Rujnarain 933
 Jantram v Narotham, 611
 Jaker Ali v Akhil 1160
 Jaker Ali v Rajchandra 748 1157
 Jakkam Reddi v Smbramania 902
 Jakpomull v Saroda, 292, 1176
 Jalandhur v Amrita 1189
 Jalul v Crown 682
 Jalpa v Emperor, 99
 Jamal v Emperor 1264
 Jambogathachu v Rajamamarasimi 1169
 Jambu v Income Tax Com 1128
 Jambu v Muhamad 889
 Jannula v Pague 189
 Jnmes v Bion, 127
 Jnmes v Brown, 921
 James v Diunath, 1036
 Jnmes v Hodson, 676
 James v Robenit, 944
 James v Jagabandhu, 1040
 Jasairuddin v Emperor 1284 1288
 Jaminn v Imam, 1161
 Jamshear v Sirdar, In re 1055
 Jana v Mohamda, 1046
 Janamajoi v Keshablal 1072
 Jnan v Doolar, 289, 457, 458
 Janardhan v Janardhan, 799
 Jangal v Laljit 656
 Jang Bahadur v Arjun Singh, 517
 Jang Bahadur v Shankar 509
 Jangi Ram v Sheoraj 979
 Jangol v Laljit, 655
 Jang Singh v Emperor, 1276
 Janki v Dino 139
 Janki v Emperor 344, 427
 Janki v Kamalakammal, 1177
 Janki v Ram 12
 Janki v Ramkishon, 790
 Janki v Ram Sahu 1200
 Janki v Sheo Narain 1299
 Janki v Thuker, 1063
 Janki v Usman 331
 Janmat v Chatterdhari 1080
 Jano v Narsingdas, 1035
 Janoo v Heap, 19
 Janu v Fakira, 13
 Jordin v Sheridan 354
 Jarip Khan v Durfa Bewa, 912
 Jarret v Leonard, 330
 Jasoda v Emperor, 358, 446
 Jasoda Lal v Balaram, 54
 Jasoda Nandan v Ram Kuar, 913
 Jaspal v Devi Dayal, 809
 Jasraj v Sadasiv 1168, 1169
 Jastrzembaki v Marxhausen, 47, 739
 Jasuvam v Emperor, 859
 Jaung Bahadur v Chandray 893
 Jaung Bahadur, v Gudur, 209
 Jawsant v Sheo Narain, 340, 575, 578 595
 Jawal Mall v Najyo, 1039
 Jawan v Emperor, 114 394, 454
 Jawison v Dayson 180
 Jawa Prosad v Mohanlal 937
 Jawa Sahai v Emperor, 77
 Jay v Johnstone, 11

Jones & Great Central Railway, 275
1242
Jones & Horr, 762
Jones & Hopkins, 287
Jones & Huggins, 695
Jones & Jones, 114 500, 716 1575 1500
Jones & Jones, 730
Jones & Miffet, 610
Jones & Mersey Docks, 12
Jones & Morrel, 135
Jones & Newman, 1012
Jones & Perry, 250
Jones & Pugh, 1215
Jones & Randall, 590, 608 512 1135
Jones & Sherrington, 1
Jones & Stevens, 724
Jones & Stronel, 1579
Jones & Stroud, 1330
Jones & Tapping, 20
Jones & Thompson, 206
Jones & Turlton, 782, 811
Jones & Turbeville, 31, 117
Jones & United States, 752 703
Jones & Williams, 179 150, 191, 1082
1093
Jones Brothers & Woodhouse, 1174,
1175
Jones's Land, 731
Joogal Kishore & Khaja Ahsanwollah,
1181
Jorid Kumari & Lalou Mou, 885
Jorell, In re, 1018
Jordan & Money, 351, 1151
Jordan School District & Greys, 319
Jose Antonio & Francis Co, 765
Joseph & Emperor, 1217 1275, 1190
Joseph & Joseph, 1174
Joseph & Official Assignee, 207
Joseph & Perry, In re, 307
Joseph Somes, In re, 776
Joseph & Alliance Bank of India, 257
Joke Kumar & Juhn Nath, 941
Jotindra Mohan & Ganendra Mohan,
1022
Jowahar Mal & Kalandar, 1162
Jowal & Crown, 90, 1233
Jowal Dis & Utam Chand, 119
Jowal & Emperor, 1121, 1131
Jov & Durga, 189
Jov & Phillips, 211
Jov Chandar & Srinath, 1176
Jov Coomar & Bandhoo, 1, 105
Jov Coomar & Cise, 55, 56
Jov Fall & Manmatha, 951
Jov & Phillips, 215
Jovary & Med Mubarak, 601
Jovary & Mahomed, 1081
J P W & Ruffa, 135
J P W & Sandulooone, 1160
J S Toppin & M C Tughlam, 781
Juz & Cox, 240

Judoo Nath & Kalee Kinto, 1038
Jugil Dis & Jisodra, 221
Jugil Kishore & Bhatu, 1183
Jugil Kishore & Kartic, 242
Jugmohun & Manik, 189
Jugar Nath & Lalit, 1168
Jugdeo & Bulaki, 397
Jugdish & Chowdhury, 603
Juggan Lal In the matter of, 170 592
601
Juggernath & Ramdayal, 951
Jugmohan Dis & Mangal Dis, 189 192
701
Jugobindhoo & Rukes, 954
Jugannanda & Nershan Singh, 972
Jufir Ali & Rajchander, 874
Jumilal & Mt Halki, 636
Jumma & Abu, 969
Jumna & Fizer, 329
Jumna Dis & Dimodir, 11
Jumna Dis & Sri Nath, 923
Jungli Lal & Ladlu Ram, 643
Jummejoy & Dwarka, 224 885
Jumna Dis & Srinath, 955 930
Jumu Lal & Mt Halki, 290
Jurin & Ram Mandil, 988
Justice & Elstobble, 817
Justice & Leing, 1106
Jutim & Sulo, 1038
Jwal & Newnash, 1117
Jyoti Kumar & Jahu Nath, 1018
Jyotish Chandra & Emperor, 876

K

Kabiluddin & Sibdar Ali, 975
Kachali & Q F, 877
Kadikann & Oothinan, 1207
Kadambini & Kumdine, 1199
Kadappa & Thirupathi, 189
Kader & Nepan, 919
Kadhe Mal & Emperor, 768
Kadir Baksh & Bhowani, 2 10 12
Kadir Pakuri & Emperor, 919
Kahran Singh & Nath, 1100
Kahl & Jansen, 300
Kah Mund & K L, 152
Kakobad & Khambatta, 1203
Kailash & Baroda, 1203
Kailash & Bijoy, 641 911
Kailash & Darbari, 951
Kailash & Emperor, 1278
Kailash & Harish, 962
Kailash & Jafannes, 1093
Kailash & Palmerappa, 951
Kailash & Pinmekra, 311
Kailash & Secretary, 661
Kailash & Sheikh Chenna, 311
Kain & Inter, 1186
Kain & Old, 928
Kaiar & Rattan Chund, 1037
Kakar & Sahy, 7

- Kakar Singh : Emperor 231 781
 Kakara : Raja Venkata, 192
 Kakkal : Q. E., 126
 Kakoo : Nuthi 1035
 Kala Gesh : Yashagadda, 1356
 Kalahasti : Muni Venkata, 931
 Kalu Khan : Mudho 1043
 Kalayl : Secretary of State 799
 Kaleekanund : Gireebala, 409, 763
 Kalee Iyer : Nibin 825
 Kalenthur : Meera Lehibu 791
 Kalenthur : Ma Mi 781
 Kali : Emperor 172
 Kali : Gope, 310
 Kali : Kesho, 20
 Kalappa Goundan, 449
 Kali Bikh : Ramgopal, 1093
 Kalichandra : Shub Chandra 772
 Kalicharan : Emperor, 211
 Kalicharan : K. L. 682
 Kalicharan : Rasik Lal 654
 Kalicharan Mukherjee In the matter of 1057
 Kali Dutt : Abdul 315
 Kalira Das : Bhagradu 635 636
 Kali Das : Emperor 151
 Kali Das : Kanha Lal 1003
 Kali Das : Prosanna 1180
 Kaligram : Chokalinga, 620
 Kalikanund : Giribali 306
 Kalikanund : Shivanshu, 74
 Kali Krishna : Bhuvan, 808
 Kali Krishna : Secretary of State 636
 Kali Kishore : Shu an 71
 Kalil : K. E. 154 156 158
 Kalimuddin : Subhuddin 11
 Kali Perahd : Thakur Das 290
 Kali Prosad : Narayan, 1172
 Kali Prosad : Prabhad 1041
 Kali Prosanna : Hemanta 662
 Kalitara : Nittanand 604
 Kalayappa Goundan, In re 110
 Kalika Perahd : Mathura 570 571
 547
 Kallin : Annabhar, 798
 Kally Das : Gobinda 1161
 Kalenther : Ma Mi 780
 Kallones : Ganga 1229
 Kalloo : R. 390
 Kallu Mal : Bhawani 581
 Kallu Mal : Pratali Singh 937
 Kallu Mier : Bhagwan Singh 211
 Kallukar : Kastamma 930
 Kalu : Banta 581 1011
 Kalu : Bhawani 786
 Kalu : Satil 1269
 Kalumal : Kasumal 911
 Kaluram : Ganga 987
 Kalyan : Satubhi 621
 Kalyan Bibi : Shivan Bibi 1091
 Kalyan Chund : Satubhi 626, 627
 Kalyanji : Ramdin, 15
 Kalynn Ru : Jagannath, 501, 516
 Kalna : Bhayan Lal, 17
 Kama Satri : Kunnamma, 1185
 Kamal Lochan : Nilrattan 921
 Kamali : Nandon, 945 950
 Kamala Kunt : Annanda Chandra
 955
 Kamalapati : Bijoy, 582
 Kauria Mal : Kumar Roy 212
 Kamali Prosad : Setala Prosad 1282
 1287
 Kamala Sahu : Bibu Nandan 971
 Kamalla Chariu : Nilrattan 628
 Kamat Chipputtan : Emperor 876
 Kammwant : Dig Bijoy 1094
 Kame-hwar : Aurangtulla 797 816
 1259
 Kamini : Krishna, 1090 1093
 Kamini : Kuli Prosanna 1090 1093
 Kamkhyan : Khalik, 1052
 Kamli : Miralal 1193
 Kamoda : Emperor 364 365 430
 Kamala : Nandan 970
 Kannalal : Kamini Devi 1089 1092
 Kanchan : Kamali 1175 1176
 Kanchann : Ramkishun 31
 Kandahun : Sathupuri 537 542
 Kandiyar : Sureshanda 301
 Kandilun : Sathahari, 537
 Kandarpi : Jogendra 1003 1020
 Kandlaswami v Paki 979
 Kandelu : Nukamma 653
 Kandhar : Emperor 368
 Kandar : Adam, 799
 Kaufman : Chingheeman, 664
 Kaufman : Gerson, 961
 Kangali : Beni 327 521
 Kangali : Suraj 1153
 Kanha : Crown 443
 Kanhaialal : Bhawan Das, 37
 Kanhaialal : Brijlal, 1185
 Kanhaialal : Dinanath 1039
 Kanhaialal : Girwar 1035
 Kanhaialal : Radhacharan 207, 215,
 625, 631, 632
 Kanhaialal : Sitaran, 1061 1123
 Kannaia : Kullammal, 1373
 Kaniz Latimer : Abbas Ali, 1092
 Kanizammal : Syed, 75
 Kaniz : Hosan Ahmad, 1163
 Kaniz Mehdi : Lasul 1169
 Kannaiah : Kannaiah 1104 1178
 1396
 Kannaiah : Miller 811
 Kanta Bu : Uma Bu 1075
 Kanta Mohan : Gopi Nath, 203
 Kanta Mohan : Jadhav 204
 Kanta Prosad : Jogai Chandra, 605
 885
 Kannaiah : Chaya 829

Kapu v Mining Co 677
 Kapur v Emperor 72
 Kapur Singh, In re 445
 Karali v East Indian Railway, 324
 Karam v Emperor, 384
 Karim Ali v Borakoringi, 312
 Karim Din v Emperor, 124 152 615
 Karimpalli, v Thekku, 986
 Karim Singh v Crown 410
 Karim Singh v Kunbailal, 403, 93
 Kariappa v Devi Kariappa, 537
 Karim v Pradhan, 188
 Karim Baksh v Emperor, 1273
 Karim Khan v Crown 456
 Karimullah v Gudor, 788, 829 834
 Karimuli v Korimji, 312
 Karimul v Emperor, 127
 Karri Bahamm v Sankari Yeramma, 642
 Karsten v Kartsten, 1070
 Kartar v Lodh Singh 1139
 Kartick v Gossain, 493
 Karuaa v Gohind, 214
 Karuppa v Meranj, 174
 Kiruppa Gounden v Peria Thann, 911 1006 1007, 1015
 Karuppaman v Pamhyan, 971
 Karuppamma v Raga Swami 501, 519
 Karuppan Chetti, 1072
 Karuppan Samban, 878
 Karur Singh v Emperor, 426
 Kasim v Firm of Haji Jamal, 170, 583
 Kasheshuree v Krishna Kaminu, 1011
 Kashee Nath Chatterjee v Chundi Charan 947
 Kashi v Bama, 296
 Kashibai v Loduram, 1030
 Kashibai v Manrakhan, 771
 Kashi Chand v Atmaran 1083
 Kashi Das v Ishan Chandra 1161
 Kashi Kanto v Chundri Kant, 1937
 Kashi Nath v Brindaban 960, 961
 Kashi Nath v Chandi Churan 129, 906, 949
 Kashinath v Chundi Charan, 949
 Kashinath v Gunesb, 1083
 Kashinath v Hurrihar, 948
 Kashi Nath v Jagat Kishore 196
 Kashi Nath v Murari Chandra, 1128
 Kashi Prasad v Pannu Lal 914
 Kashi Ram v Bhulu, 1496
 Kashi Ram v Emperor, 28 1330
 Kashi Ram v Thakur Das 1002
 Kashi Singh v Balraj Singh, 538, 513
 Kasidant v Ganga 834
 Kasim v Noor Beebe 960
 Kasimulla v Gudor Koori, 824
 Kasinath v Harinar 129, 991
 Kasinath v Jagat Kishore, 201, 596, 636, 638 641, 903
 Kashinath v Mahesh, 799

Kasimth v Utumans, 323
 Kasim v Emperor, 265, 272, 1363
 Kasim v Anunuddin, 655
 Kasturi Singh v Rajkumar, 1137
 Kasturi v Venkata Chalapatlu, 1164
 Kastur Bai v Bali Kaur, 1090
 Kastur Chand v Singhai, 978
 Kasupanna v Ranga Swami, 182
 Kasvayin v Shar on, 310
 Katama v Rajah of Shivagunga, 569
 Katachima v Kanni Kautua, 964, 965
 Katri, In re, 364
 Karna Nachariar v Raj of Shiva Ganga, 1048
 Kattu v Crown, 1276,
 Katwari v Emperor, 79
 Kaung Hla v San Paw, 174
 Kavanough v Wilson, 775
 Kawa Manji v Khawaj Nussio, 1083
 Kaynith Scholarship Trust v Sham Karin, 787
 Kazee Abdool v Borodkan 1184
 Kazee Abdul v Baroda Knnt, 1015
 Kazi Gulam v H H Agakhan, 1345
 Kazi Jermuddin v Queen Empress, 19
 Kzeedoot, v Mohooden, 461
 K E v Anuya, 1490
 Kearney v King 752
 Keira v Lord Wainers 2
 Kearsley v Phillips, 1253, 1387
 Kedarnath v Benjamin, 1144
 Kedar Nath v Tohikhan Singh 1000
 Kedarnath v Bhupendranath 1297
 Kedarnath v Dazelle, 1202
 Kedarnath v Mahesh, 1049
 Kedarnath v Matunmal, 538
 Kedarnath v Netram, 8, 9
 Kedar Nath v Shamla, 906
 Kedar Nath Re 73
 Kedar Singh v Suvar Singh 980
 Keed v Lamh, 883
 Keeling v Ball 841
 Keen v Kem, 122, 257
 Keener v State, 725
 Keerzhanath v Govindas, 1188
 Keher Singh v Emperor 452
 Keightley Maxsted & Co In re, 33
 Kell v Charner, 1021 1022
 Kell v Chumes, 1017
 Kellong v Thompson 932
 Kelly v Jackson, 1256
 Kelly v Kelly, 1226 1297
 Kelly v Ningyung Ben, 334
 Kelner v Savage, 820
 Kelway v Kelway, 1243 1248
 Kemhle v Lyons 571
 Kemp v King 1263, 1387
 Kemp v Waddingham, 34
 Kempland v Macauby, 330 332 333
 Kempson v Achbe 1089
 Kennora v Sriarava 933

- Kennebie v Banking Co, 932
 Kennedy v Com, 126
 Kennedy v Doyle 492 591
 Kennedy v People, 112
 Kennedy v R Co 96
 Kennet v Chambers, 749
 Kenney v Murray 289
 Kensington v English 792
 Kent v Lowen, 275
 Kent county Council, Ex parte 11
 Kedor Govindan In re 363
 Keramani v Bejoy 1379
 Keramat v Emperor, 409, 1394, 1365
 Kerr v Clara Ruston 840
 Kerwick v Kerwick 1123
 Kesavalu v Corporation 3
 Keshab v Bhawan 2
 Keshabjee v Sashi 604, 605
 Keshabrao v Raya 952 960 963
 Kesharbai v Jamodar 1172
 Keshab Lal v Dewan Chand 177
 Keshavn v Rudram 1496
 Keshavn v Vasudeva, 782
 Keshe v Vithal 1054
 Kesho v Thakur, 936
 Kesho Prosad v Kistanath 620
 Keshoram v Piar, 334
 Kesho Rao v Ganesh, 531
 Kesho Singh v K L, 365
 Keshub v Radha, 1093
 Kesoram v Bonamali 1200
 Kestrel The 667
 Keshwor Mahton v Sheonandon, 917
 Ketabuddin v Nafar 172
 Ketharanath v Md Alla, 864
 Kettilamann v Kelaphan, 643 641
 Kettlowell v Wntson 242, 516
 Kewal Ram v Allah Deay 1033
 Key v Koy 1004
 Keyarsohi v Gorbud 1378
 Keynes v Duke of Wellington 627
 Khadijah v Abdol 1362
 Khador v Subramanyn 1181
 Khageswar v Sunswor, 896
 Khahkar v Ali Hafer 946
 Khair Di v Crown 405
 Khama v Crown 477
 Khana Chand v Mt Jawandi, 831, 1069
 Khandam v Emperor 1272
 Khan Gul v Lakha Singh, 4 7, 1168
 1170, 1171
 Khanhai Lal v Debi Prosad 1050
 Khanjari v Q I, 150
 Khankar v Ali Hafiz 770 910, 900
 951, 953 954 955
 Khasmohal v Att Gen 1693
 Khatiji v Ismail, 1093
 Khatiji v Unor Sahab 1495
 Khutter Mohun v Gireedhar v 770
 Khayar v Rukhi Sultan 163
 Khauing Dim v Mt Nur 1495
 Khedon v Rajendra 1045
 Khehat v Emperor 377
 Kheman v Emperor, 369 372 377
 Khemchand v Dhalobai 937
 Khemchand v Mallo, 836, 840
 Khem Singh v Emperor, 563 565
 Khemunkares v Gour 291, 322
 Khero v Bijoy, 494, 583
 Khetn Ah v Ramprosad 1182
 Khetramani v Emperor, 1061
 Khetra Nath v Mahomed, 597
 Khetridas v Shub Narain 935
 Khetter Chunder v Khetter Paul, 793,
 803
 Khetter Mohon Dutta In re, 447
 Khidr v Emperor, 1115
 Khajrudin v Emperor, 81, 91, 93, 688
 805, 859, 1357 1369
 Khilwan v Emperor 726
 Khirode v Janaki, 220
 Khoday v Swaminadha 673 674
 Khodad v Nasar, 1023
 Khoja Hedayut v Rajin, 706
 Khojah's case, 185
 Khandkor v Panchkouri, 30
 Kboo v Nanigam, 935
 Khoob v Moodnaram, 1061
 Khoode v Kishan 312
 Khored Kazi v Emperor, 1042
 Khuda Baksh v Emperor, 402, 420
 Khuda Baksh v Jaisankor, 1186
 Khudi Ram v Emperor, 369, 371
 Khulam v Bhowaniprosad, 1292
 Khul Sanker v Emperor, 1401
 Khurlo v Shaib, 1112
 Khursai v Emperor, 1219
 Khusbai Malik v Emperor, 73
 Khusbi v Emperor, 396
 Khutun v Porna, 834
 Khanji v Emperor, 273, 402
 Khyroollah v Majeed, 931
 Kilgoove v Inlyson 310
 Kellick, In re, 832
 Kilver v Trusts 1017
 Kimbray v Draper 9
 Kimmel v Kimmel, 736
 Kin v Leeman, 351
 Kine v Benumont, 819
 King v Att wood, 1286
 King v Beecham, 1399
 King v Brasier, 1216
 King v Cator, 857
 King v Coh, 347
 King v Darham, 1266
 King v Inhabitants of All Saints, 1116
 King v Inhabitants of Clonewatershire
 1126 1132
 King v Inhabitants of Seumton, 1119
 King v Jones, 1280
 King v Kent, 752
 King v King, 591

- King & Luffe 1099
 King v Norman, 638
 King & Plumer 161
 King v San Paw, 171
 King & Turner, 1056
 King & Warring, 716
 King v Winn, 938
 King Emperor & Anshi Bibi 385
 King Emperor & Bal er Ali 450
 King Emperor v Bhnath, 368
 King Emperor & Daulat Ram 453
 King Emperor v Dep 412
 King Emperor v Durga 393
 King Emperor & Dwijendia 1121
 King Emperor & Gulilu 372, 919
 King Emperor & Keshab, 160
 King Emperor & Kumarimuthu 1930
 King Emperor & Malhar, 1271 1292
 King Emperor v Maung Aung, 79
 King Emperor & Mathura 181
 King Emperor & Maung Pwa, 1058
 King Emperor & Mohuddin 396 1281
 King Emperor & Nga Aung, 420
 King Emperor & Nagachu, 1035
 King Emperor & Nagachi Pomin, 113
 King Emperor v Nga Po 374, 414 430
 King Emperor v Nga Po Tha 58, 152
 King Emperor & Nilakanta 1369
 King Emperor & Pakiri, 1499
 King Emperor & Primotha, 369, 436
 King Emperor & Rang Hanmat 105
 King Emperor & Sheodin, 1037
 King Emperor & Shur Co, 78
 King Emperor & Wajib Hasan, 1057
 Kingston & Inglish, 810
 Kingston, Duches of, Case 641 645
 Kishi & Kunnath, 1495
 Kinlock & Aeyram 977
 Kinlock & Case, 1579
 Kinsman & Crooke 564
 Kip & Bringham, 638
 Kips & Queen 1222
 Kiran & Brinath, 202, 219
 Kiranshi & Anandi 971 987
 Kirl & Cowdery 150
 Kirkland & Nisbet, 1019
 Kirkman & Weaver 729
 Kirkstall & Ferner 7, 299, 304
 Kishan Singh & Aju Lal, 1226
 Kishwanji & Cockburn, 871 879
 Kishan & Har 304
 Kishan Ghule & Parsana, 1385
 Kishan Raghup & Emperor 1281
 Kishan Singh & Jaguir 191
 Kishan Swami & Rajkopal 300
 Kishen & Chandi 97
 Kishen Lal & Ramlal, 911
 Kishen & Ramdhan, 257
 Kishen & Vishri Dis, 935
 Kishen & Ram Chandra 674
 Kishori & Canesh 1229
 Kishore v Ganga, 338
 Kishore v Gurditta 969
 Kishori & A G 1080
 Kishori & Chuanli, 1354
 Kishori & Mahomed, 324, 1181
 Kishori Bai & Ramchodan, 649
 Kishori Lal v Rikhal, 790
 Kishon & Ishwarnath 866
 Kisor & Ral hal 799
 Kissan & Link, 1482, 1485
 Kis-en v Ram Chandra 737 1307
 Kistna Doss & Muktamala 799
 Kisto Mohun v Juggernath, 177
 Kitchen v Robins, 285
 K K Janoo & Joseph, 16
 Kishabai Hery v Abai Amrita 1201
 K M P R Firm v Samrasundari 981
 Knight v Barber, 928
 Knight & Cox, 1202
 Knight & Dinber, 808
 Knight & Lee, 8
 Knight v Mertin 801 802
 Knight & New England Worsted Co, 971
 Knight & Waterford, 512 513
 Knight & Whitten 1214
 Knobel v Fuller, 721
 Knoff v Raymond, 314
 Knoff v Thompson, 1155
 Kuon & Savings Bank, 677
 Knodun & Phumuluri 1169
 Kohl & State 367
 Kolia Chin & Cinnakanti, 965
 Kolia Kumar & Kolin Mal 1175
 Kokumann v Pedli, 1171
 Kolandeu & Kem Lamin, 812
 Kolokey & Sarit, 291
 Kolongorath v Kamath, 500
 Kolyash v Gocool 1037
 Komollochun v Nidrutun, 648
 Ko Maung v Maung Battlwe, 593
 Ko Maung Gyi v Daw Tok 7
 Komrueni v King Emperor, 1355
 Konchada & Velupuli, 789
 Konidati & Nukammaz, 654
 Konda Reddi v Piehi Reddi, 897
 Konda & Nana 242
 Koni & Firm of M 840
 Konwar Doorga Nath v Ramchander, 287, 847, 1129
 Koodep v Govt of India 323
 Koomodini & Poohoo, 603
 Koondon & Dheer Chunder 196
 Kopyan & Shana, 799
 Kotsa Ramaswami v Bangori, 301
 Kotam v Umar 560
 Kotam Reddi & Venkata, 912
 Kotchandraman & Shuumugan, 313
 Kouramal & Crown 1275
 Kowgulliah & Mukta 309, 310 316
 Koylash & Sonatan, 16

- K R Firai v Sathyanada 312
 Kripa v Nandi, 655, 656
 Kripa v Emperor, 153
 Krishna v Atul, 189
 Krishna v Bhandar, 1051
 Krishna v Bhupati, 323
 Krishna v Belya 33
 Krishna v Emperor, 79
 Krishna v Madhub, 32
 Krishna v Nelli, 12
 Krishna v Rajarat, 293
 Krishna v Tribhuban 889
 Krishna Ayyangar v Nalla, 13
 Krishna Bai v Rama, 952
 Krishna Behari v Brojeswari 197, 205
 Krishna Bhupati v Ram Murti, 681
 Krishnaji v Kashirao 913
 Krishnan Chandan v Rasik Lal, 1166
 Krishnan Charan v Sanat Kumar 938
 Krishna Charan v Krishna Charan 884
 Krishna Charan v Veraval 912
 Krishna Charan v Vijay Sathya 595
 Krishna Chrya v Wingana, 1095
 Krishna Doyal v Corporation of Calcutta 1490
 Krishnan Iyer v Secretary of State 1084
 Krishna Jiva v Biswanath, 845
 Krishna Kamini v Nilmadhub 18
 Krishna Kishan v Kishori Lal 796, 803 892, 866, 869
 Krishna Kishan v Narendra, 1041, 1094
 Krishna Kumari v Nilmadhub 745
 Krishna Kurup v Veeranputty, 1015
 Krishna Lal v Gangaram, 324
 Krishna Lal v Rajkumar, 512, 951
 Krishnagachari v Veera ballu, 546
 Krishna Maharana v Emperor 1120
 Krishna Moraja v Moraju 939, 940
 Krishnamurti v Krishna murti, 1036
 Krishna Nath v Mahomed, 640
 Krishna pati v Vikrama Lal 1181
 Krishna Rao v Aiyasami, 1046
 Krishna Rao v Raja of Pittapur, 565 1101
 Krishna Rao v Srinivas, 1496
 Krishna Reddy v Sundara, 74, 76
 Krishna Row v Muthangi 812
 Krishna Swami v Anatachar 598, 901
 Krishna Swami v Mangala Thammal, 1022
 Krishna Swami v Rajagopala 212, 595, 641
 Krishna Swami v Venaswami 190
 Krishna Thalwar v Ramasami 545
 Kristo Nath v Brown, 337 748, 758, 889
 Kristo Moni v Secretary of State, 603
 Kristomoney v Narendra, 1002
 Kshatra Mohan v Bhairab Chandan 896
 Kuar Nugsah v Kuar Mathan, 5
 Kuar son v Maminan, 189
 Kuberna v Kemun Nair 623
 Kubra v Ajodhya, 1092
 Kucharam v Ghinnesham Dis 65
 Kudron v Emperor, 419
 Kukaram v Laxmi Bai, 1127
 Kula Singh v King Emperor, 126
 Kula embi v Bial Khan, 1039
 Kula sami v Khamhu, 988
 Kulda v Suran, 1051
 Kul Sambr v Khaenshat, 989
 Kumar v Ghengi, 829
 Kumar v Radhika 977
 Kumarappa v Manarala 336
 Kumarappa v Narayan 1063
 Kumar Digambar v Ahmad 185
 Kumar Gopika v Atul Sing, 1063
 Kumar Kumakhya v Surendra 602, 1200
 Kumar Krishna v Veeravelli, 549
 Kumar Naresi Narayan v Secretary of State, 217
 Kumar Prasad v Emperor 1138
 Kumba v Kelli 1403
 Kumud v Dislook 172 218 219, 521
 Kumud v Randoo 685
 Kundan v Sahu, 611
 Kundoo v Dhaa 217
 Kunhunn v Kaanon Thuya 1199
 Kunja v Emperor, 377 448
 Kunja Mohan v Manindra 643
 Kunj Behari v Roy Mothura 774
 Kunj Lal v Emperor 482
 Kunnath v Vayoth, 808, 813
 Kunwor Behari v Kalka 960
 Kunwor Datt v Divan Randu, 1180
 Kunwor Ram v Ananda Krishna 980
 Kuppi Koran v Thiru Gunani, 1203
 Kuppam, In re 452 454
 Kuptham v H B 403
 Kupa Than Charan In re 334
 Kuppi Swami v Chinn Swami, 910
 Kupa v Venkata 1161
 Kurali Prasad v Anantram, 860
 Kuram Din v Emperor, 416, 417
 Kura Ram v Banomali 650
 Kurtz v Spance, 353
 Kurum v Mahomed 1047
 Kush v Smith 483
 Kushal Singh In re, 483
 Kushal v Emperor, 79
 Kush Kanta v Chandra Kanta, 1137
 Kusir Bah v Emperor 446
 Kuaum v Satya Charan 561
 Kuthan Perumal v Secretary of State 1203
 Kutner v Phillips 7
 Kuvarti v Baharti 1179

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

127111

K Venkata rayudu In re 683
Kvesti v Dela Megha 1139

L

La Banque v La Banque 1178
Labb Singh v Mt Mango 221, 595
Labburim v Sazawar 917
Labu v Empress 877
Labu v Mela Ram, 130,
Lacey v Hill 123
Lachchi v Bhawani, 1182
Lachho v Harsabai, 1033
Lachman v Bhiginath, 304
Lachman v Fansukh, 315
Lachman v Akbar Khan, 180 192

193
Lachman Das v Ram Prosad, 941 956
Lachman Gir v Lahor Singh 214
Lachman Singh v Mukhan Patel, 985
Lachmepur v Sadulla 190
Lachmeram v Radha 327
Lachmi v Bhuti, 621
Lachmi v Emperor, 483
Lachmi v Hemendra, 968
Lachmi v Jagmohan 341, 312, 517
Lachmi v Rajab 759
Lachmi Das v Babrakhi 907
Lachmi Das v Ramnath 931
Lachmi Lal v King Emperor, 1332
Lachmi Narain v Chairman, Ranchi
Municipality, 1063
Lachmi Narayan v Maulavi Zahuul,
834

Lachmi Narayan v Mt Nazifer Fatima,
101
Lachminarayan v Ryt Protib Singh
750, 755 769 760, 1104
Lachmi Pro v Jagmohan 341
Lacey v Vanderhulst 33
Laeon v Higgins 611 673
Ladkhan v Crown 1286
Ladhe Ram v Tindu Ram 1051
Ladha Singh v Hukam Dabi 897
Lady Darmouth v Roberts 863
Lady Mohar v Emperor 1290
Laharam v Gurmukh Rao 605
Lahuri v Bala 8 493 825
Lahore Bank v Kedar 14
Lahuan v Motram 548
Lajam v Emperor 7 144 146
Lajing v Barclay, 1265
Lajpat Rai v Faz Ahmed 168 172, 218
Lake v People, 113
Lake here v Herrick 81
Lakhan v Emperor 446
Lakhan v Taki, 811
Lakhatullah v Bishambar 939 977
Lakhiachand v Lachand 761
Lakhu Chand v The Emperor 19
Lakhu v Sadatula, 190
Lakho Tewari v Talikoeni 829

Lakhan Ram v Amir Khan 976
Lakhpatri v Radubadh 1124
Lakhraj v Mahpal Singh 34 35, 71,
699
Lakhraj Singh v Dulham, 1493
Lakhu Ram v Amirkhan 976
Lakin v Lakin, 1071
Lakker v Gangu 1129
Lalman v Gangu 904
Lakshan v Takim, 169
Lakshman v Amrit 184 760, 640, 701, 790
Lakshman v Gokul 849 850
Lakshman v Krishna Ji 831, 850
Lakshman v Ramdas 619
Lakshman v Rampi 1198
Lakshman v Takim, 561
Lakshman v Sreevamulu, 1179
Lakshmi v Nabdwip 977
Lakshmi v Rooplal, 1090
Lakshmi v Secretary of State 1119
Lakshmi v Ganapat, 989
Lalshmi Chand v Mukti Pri had 1295
Lakshmi Prosanna v Rajundai, 1191
Lakshmi Devanma v Krishnah 74, 560
Lakshmi Neehar v Ramchandra, 1207
Lal Bahadur v Kanhyalal, 1129
Lal Bahadur v Rameshwar, 896
Lal Chand v Mahant Ramrup, 1073
Lal Chand v Ramchand, 594
Lal Das v Motibai 1129
Lal Gajendra v Lal Mathura, 187, 700
Lal Ghose v Nilkanth Das, 931
Lal Huihar Pratap v Bisheswar Baksh 598
Lal Hia v Bhadravaja, 073
Lal Tar Singh v Emperor, 1303
Lal Mahomed v Kallames, 1199, 1207
1203
Lal Mahumud v Ayejuddi Sheikh
1051
Lalshah v Hirahai, 1036
Lal Singh v Chaitram, 1013
Lala v Crown, 265
Lala v Digambar, 296
Lala v Emperor, 272, 1289
Lala v Hira Singh 188, 189 636
Lala Balalla Mall v Ahedshea, 15
Lala Banshidhari v The Govt of Bengal, 1401
Lala Bry v Indur, 1046
Lala Govind v Lala Jugdip 1069
Lala Himmat v Llewellyn 963
Lala Lakshmi v Syed Haider 42, 61
63 1041
Lala Muddin Copal v Khikha Kocr,
1187
Lala Nanakchand v Mohammad Abzal
909

- alan Malik v King Emperor 1285
 ala Prabbul v Mylne, 322 ala Ranglal v Deonrayan 196 ala Rudra Prosad v Binode Ram 1046 ala Tribhuban v Deputy Commr, 1238 ala Singh v Basdo 937 albehari v Srinath 1046
 aldas v Kashiram, 1085
 aljee v Gurdar 59
 alji, In re 55, 1229, 1396
 alji Dusad v Emperor, 424 861 alji v Emperor, 6 129, 481
 alitmohan v Case 452
 alitmohan v Chakkannal, 1004, 1020
 alitmohan v Radharaman 621 al Koer v Chiranjilal 1355 alla v Sheoperbad, 289 alla Mahadeo v Sattanund, 770 allah Jha v Bibi 860 allah Probhoo v Sheonath 287, 460
 allu Mal v Reotiram 971
 alor v Lalor, 404 314
 almohan v Nundalal 865
 alsingh v Dinodayal, 146
 alsingh v Emperor 146 alta v Babu 812
 alta v Darshan, 850
 alta v Emperor 682
 alta Prosad v Raghunadan 1158 alu v Empress, 363 1190 alu Dome v Bijoy 760
 alu Mulji v Kashi Bai, 323 alu Singh v Sukhdeo Singh 521, 555
 Amaswami v Bbawam, 1064
 Lambert v People, 333
 Lambert v Sull, 1091
 L'Armo v Wilson 1485
 Amor v Micoz, 313
 Amajari Chaube v Parsottam Chaube
 914
 Lancaster v Heaton 1215
 Lancun v Lovell, 515
 Lander v People, 94
 Langdon v Hulls 819
 Lane v Brainerd 366
 Lang v Stite 292
 Langford v Selmes, 1201
 Langham v Thompson, 705
 Langhon's Case 1359
 Langley v Lord Oxford, 762
 Langhoo v Rattray, 1160
 Langton v Higgins 928
 Langton v Reynolds, 802
 Larka Lakshmana v Lanka Vardhan
 561
 Larati v Ram Dial 30
 LaRoche v Armstrong, 353
 Larpent v Bibee 8
 Lastings v Gonslaves 1137
 Lalafat Hossein v Emperor, 1278
 Latachayya v Seetaramayya 789
 Lathan v Lafone, 13
 Latif v Emperor, 1213
 Latouche v Hutton 505
 Lathulan's Case, 982
 Latrinidnd v Browne, 32
 Latta Begam v Nawab Mahomed Azmat,
 1042
 Lavergue v Hooper, 1161
 Lauri v Renad, 8
 Lawes v Pruser, 1212
 Lawes v Reed, 1375
 Lawless v Quenle, 346, 347
 Lawrence v Campbell 1246
 Lawrence v Clark 818
 Lawrence v Kimball, 514
 Lawrence v Minnie, 569
 Lawrence v Van Home, 1058
 Lawson v Sherwood, 818
 Laxmibai v Keshaw 934
 Laxmibai v Saraswathibai 1128
 Laxmipattya v Ramchandra 1118
 Laxmi Shankar v Vishnuram, 1161
 Layboon v Crisp, 196 187 524
 Lays trial, 712 787
 Laver v Wagstaff, 1375
 Lea v Polk Country Copper, 550
 Lender v Barry 706
 Ledu Molla v Emperor, 1276
 Lee v Angus, 818, 1385 1386
 Lee v Birrell, 1246
 Lee v Hamilton, 457
 Lee v Hudson, 746
 Lee Bin v Queen E 105
 Leeds v Cook, 816, 821
 Leeds, Duke of v Amberst, Duke of,
 1173
 Leelanand v Bashceroomiss, 771 1080
 Leelanand v Lakhputi 219
 Leelanand v Luchmeenur Singh, 1038
 Leelanaud v Mobeswar Singh, 1038
 Lees v Morton, 85
 Leeson v Holt 241
 Leferhuie v Wordon, 489
 Legal Remembrancer v Chumana Nishya,
 401, 415 418
 Legal Remembrancer, Deputy v
 Kamana, 231
 Legal Remembrancer v Lalit, 416
 Legal Remembrancer v Motilal Ghosh,
 292
 Legatt v Tallvery 638
 Legge v Edmonds 313 1099, 1102
 Leggeth v Cooper 762
 Leister v Haddon 607
 Lekal v Crown 572
 Lekhray v Ganesh 808
 Lekhraykuar v Mahpal Singh 588, 589
 595
 Lemon Re 689
 Leoft Ali v Peenre Moban, 1161

- Leonard & Leonard, 831
 Leomenthal v McCormick 292
 Lendram v Denzley 193
 Lenkhurst v Cooper, 188
 Lester v State, 480
 Lethulier's Case, 703
 Letten v Elahi Bux 962
 Levergue v Hooper, 1212
 Levison & State 364
 Levy v Campbell, 42
 Levy v Hodges, 1126 1258
 Lewie & Darling 18
 L Ewing (Mrs) v G White 915
 Lewis Re 1078 1175
 Lewis v Fullerton 271 811
 Lewis v Harris, 437
 Lewis & Hartley 1389
 Lewis & Jones 108
 Lewis v Lewis 1173
 Lewis v New York City R Co 775
 Lewis v Sapio, 691
 Lewis v St Antonio, 793
 Ley & Bellord 849
 Leyfield & (Dr) Case 808
 Lockbarrow v Mason 1208
 Licolse v Mfg Co, 105
 Lilderdale Re 1072
 Liehman & Pooley 789
 Lifecombe v Holmes 762
 Lila har v Crown, 1241
 Lilaram, In re, 158, 472
 Lilaram Gangai Mull In re 104 453
 Lila singh v B-joy Pratap, 673, 1054
 Lilleshall Re 1130
 Lillyman's Case, 132
 Lilly & Tobbin, 630
 Limerick Lady & Limerick Lord, 926
 Lincoln College Case 6
 Lincoln & Wright, 129, 948, 952 955
 Lindlav v Laley 971
 Lingana v Bhamappa, 276
 Link v Vorhaner 81
 Lionel Barber & Co v Deulek Bank, 1399
 Little Rock v-Leverett, 95
 Liverpool Adelpsi Loan Association v Fairhurst and wife, 1167
 Living stone v Rawwards Coal Co 174
 Llewellyn v Earl of Jersey 1008
 Llewellyn & Ld Jersey, 994
 Llewellyn & Winckworth 140
 Lloyd & Mostyn 817, 1247
 Lloyd & Powell Duffryn, 502, 503 511
 Lloyd & Roberts 854
 Lloyd & Willan, 302 332, 333
 Lobbs & Stanley 119
 Lochan v Pandit Haranath 790
 Lochman Rai & Akbar Khan 63
 Lochman & Tan ukh 293
 Lochum Singh & Harnaram 791
 Lockhart & Co, 366
 Lockley Inre 79
 Lockwood v Wood, 184, 700
 Lodai Mollah v Kally Das Roy, 1203
 Lodd & Muthuli, 963
 Lodge & Huddersfield Corps 7
 Lodge v Pritchard 311
 Lodya v Emperor, 1290
 Logan Thayar Inre, 726
 Logan v Coortown 5
 Login v Princess of Coorg, 612
 Lokhee Narun v Kally Puddo, 1164
 Lokman v Ganga, 903
 Lokoram & Bidya Rai 903
 Lokumal v The Sind Bank 911, 915
 Londbeiger v Gorham 1258
 London v Walpole, 114
 London & Blackwall v Lime House, 7
 London and G W Rail Co v West, 1200
 London etc. Bank, Exp Jones 278
 London & W Bank v But on, 1484
 London Chartered Bank of Australia & White 187
 London Corporation v Cox, 188
 London County Council v Bermondey Biscops Co 1, 2
 Londondery Case, 588
 Long's Case 361
 Long v Burret 247
 Long & Keer 13
 Long & Long, 13
 Longane & Thayer 1873
 Longenecker v Hyde 320
 Longford v Selmes, 1199
 Longman & Bath Electric Tramway 1155
 Longman v Winchester, 271
 Loomis v Loomis 311
 Loomis v Wadhams 348 -
 Looloo v Rajender, 1299
 Lootufunisi & Goor 457, 458 --
 Lodd Govindas v Rikmani, 1222-
 Lord v Colvin, 569 612, 1306 1375
 Lord Advocate, v Lord Lovat 189 -
 Lord and Bright Ry Co v Farelough 1064
 Lord Chesney's case 1005
 Lord Falmouth v Roberts 1064 -
 Lord Ferrars v Spireley, 692
 Lord George Gordon's Case 160 -
 Lord Leicester v Walter, 728 -
 Lord Lovat's trial 1316
 Lord Melville's trial, 123 279 307, 340 467 671 747
 Lord Owyne & Co & Wood, 309
 Lord Russell Co, 159
 Lord Say and Seale's Case, 1258
 Lord Stafford's Case 159, 1348
 Lord Talbot v Casack 1382
 Lord Trimbleston & Kemmis 285
 Lorenzana & Camavillas, 296

TABLE OF CASES

Loring v Whittermore, 790
 Lorton v Kingston, 1398
 Lossee v Lossee, 842
 Lovat Peerage Case 112 535
 Lovelock and Lewis v Malabar Timber and Sawmills 23
 Loveridge v Botham, 457
 Loughorn v Allnutt 300
 Loughboro Highway Board v Curzon
 304
 Louis Dreyfus & Co v Chimandas, 278
 Low v Bouveris 1141 1173
 Lowdon v Lowdon 1322, 1321
 Lowe v Firkins, 1265
 Lowell v Wall 938
 Lowther Castle, The, 776
 Lucas v Dela Cour 310 312
 Lucas v Groaning, 703
 Lucas Novoticheski, 277
 Lucas v Widham, 785
 Luchmeedhar v Raghoobur 189, 808
 Luchurum v Radhacharan, 54, 73 1354,
 1357 1395 1401
 Luckett v Clark, 820
 Lucum v Lovell, 499
 Ludam's will, 786 792
 Lukhee v Shunkuree, 73
 Lukhimoni v Koruna, 808
 Lukhinarain v Jodu Nath, 1038
 Lukhun v Madho, 1129
 Lunch v Commissioners of Sewars,
 1174
 Lund v Tynsborough 84, 85
 Lush v McDaniell 664
 Lushington v Boldero 1135
 Lutchmeeput v Sadaula 189
 Lutefionnissa v Goor Sarun 895
 Lutfi v Abdul Haq 640
 Luxmibai (Mt) v Devi, 1201
 Lyddon v Ellison 1104
 Lyddy, In re 775
 Lyon v Reed 1145
 Lyell v Kennedy, 496, 589, 641, 1212,
 1250, 1252, 1258 1396
 Lyle v Ellwood, 535 704 705
 Lyon v Hancock 1145
 Lyon v Home 1090
 Lyon v Lyman, 679
 Lyon v Reed, 1145
 Lyn v Wyn, 70
 Lynch v Clerke, 808, 881 882

M

Ma Ba v Maung Kim, 1081
 Mafla v Emperor, 402
 Macaulay v Polley 309
 Macdonald v Fred Latimer, 1289
 Macdonald v Holland 665
 Macdonald v Longbottom, 937 992,
 1021
 Macdonell v Evans, 770, 784, 793, 1327

Macforlane v Curr, 985
 Mackershaw v New Dhurmsey, 491
 Mackenzie v Yed, 1247
 Macleod & Sons v Davies, 1398
 Macleod v Wakel, 246
 Macombie v Antop, 569
 Macombier v Parker, 292
 Macpherson v Theyles, 857
 Macquire's Trial (Lord), 693
 Madan v Emperor, 140
 Madan v Gura, 370
 Madan v Kumar, 1080
 Madan v Priyapathi, 1063
 Madan Chandra v Kirtiram, 203
 Madan Gura v Emperor, 279 337, 1278
 Madan Lal v Gour Das, 1202
 Madan Lal v Ripe Sudan Prosad, 1172
 Madan Mohan v Kumar Rameswar,
 899
 Madan Mohan v Secretary of State,
 639
 Madappa Kone, In re, 456
 Madori Sikdar v Emperor, 1330
 Madari Singh v Nuzim Ali, 594
 Madda Pedda v Kurban, 655
 Madded v Thomas, 1181
 Madden v Catanock, 1219
 Maddison v Alderson, 1154
 Maddison v Nullot, 322 326 338
 Maden v Snylor, 142
 Madhab v Denth 73 590
 Madhab v Lukhu 175
 Madhabai v Gangadhor 934 948
 Madhab Charan v Rajoni Mohan, 951
 Madhab Chandra v Tarinee, 633
 Madhabrao v Balkrishna, 187 190
 Madhu v Gaganendra, 799 1402
 Madhav v Tonn, 188
 Madhava v Pntteh, 709
 Madhavro v Deonak, 71
 Madhogir v Gopal, 1496, 1498
 Madhoram v Nanda 1113
 Madhoram v Official Assignee, 327
 Madhoo Soodun v Saroop, 771
 Madhu v Emperor, 370
 Madhub Chunder v Law, 1152
 Madhusudan v Bana Chiran, 5
 Madhusudan v Brice 199
 Madhusudan v Raja Mohesh 5
 Madras Deposit and Benefit Co v
 Poonamali 839 840
 Madras Railway Co v Ratilal Kalidas
 1062
 Ma Dem v Lee, 1378 1384
 Madra Dwa thanam v Madura Muni cipality, 7
 Ma Lin v Maung Aung Hinwa 799
 Maftazooden v Maher Ali 797
 Mafizuddin v Emperor 444, 1329
 Maghulan v Ahmad 561
 Magdalen v Kuott, 181

Magee v Magee, 1276
 Maghulan v Ahmad, 772
 Mahabaly v In re 112
 Mahabir v Dat Mirr, 1496
 Mahabir v Dhujoo 351
 Mahabir v Lalla, 759
 Mahabir v Marsiatulla, 1002
 Mahabir v Muhommad, 1002
 Mahabir v Taj Begam 1091
 Mahabha v Ahmed, 706
 Mahade v Mahabir, 656
 Mahaleo v Emperor, 449
 Mahadeo v Gajadhar, 623
 Mahadeo v Jainaran, 1201
 Mahadeo v Lakore, 1046
 Mahadeo v Mata Prosad 1185
 Mahadeo v Nasibun, 897
 Mahadeo v Rightaru 896
 Mahadeo v Ram Prosad 1039
 Mahadeo v Ram Raj 1209
 Mahadeo v Sunderbu 768
 Mahadeo v Tukaram, 960
 Mahadeo Patel v Narayan, 1175
 Mahadev Prosad v Emperor, 147
 Mahalinga v Hyde, 976
 Maharmya v Haridas 1172
 Mahamud v Ghulam, 1179
 Mahamad v Hasan 638
 Mahamad v Zafar, 999
 Mahamed v Ali Haidar, 23
 Mahamed v Pir Mahomed, 344
 Mahamed Ali v Mir Nazur Ali, 617
 Mahamed Ally v Emperor, 1303
 Mahamed Hussan v Ali Haider, 896
 Mahamed Seyedol Arifan v Yeh Ooi Gori, 15, 16
 Mahamud v Mandir 53
 Mahamud v Minnu, 1167
 Mahamud v Mora 1176
 Mahammed v Lmpre s 393
 Mahammed v Queen, 301
 Mahammed v Zafur, 1006
 Maharaja Bhann Das v Krishnarai, 59, 873, 1138
 Maharaja Ingadindia v Bhabn Farnee 1101
 Maharajul v Anjumanne v $19
 Maharaja of Bobbili v Appala Nulu, 938
 Maharaja of Bobbili v Venkatarammulu 1166
 Maharaja of Burdwan v Krishnar Kamini, 14
 Maharaja of Cooch Behar v Rajah Mohendra Ranjan, 605
 Maharaja of Faridkot v Anant Ram 830
 Maharaja of I and Kot v Ball Holson & Co 916
 Maharaja of Imour v Suran Singh, 1209

Maharaja of Kashmir v Mohanlal, 751
 Maharaja of Kolhapur v Sundoram 570 636, 706, 1307
 Maharaja Mubhaya Singh In re, 37
 Maharaja Pertio v Maharani Subbad, 707
 Maharaj Singh v Rajah Balwant, 935
 Maharam v Telamuddin 903
 Maharana v Vndulal, 709
 Maharani v Mahabir 656
 Maharani Huranath Kour v Baboo Burm Narain, 143
 Maharani Janki v Brij Bhukan, 913
 Maharastraya v Bijulal, 1000
 Mahatula v Hareem 1019
 Mahan v Ma Sheve, 913
 Mahabub Ali v Tajkhan, 1098
 Mahendra v Jogendra, 964
 Mahesh v Guru Prosad, 1206
 Maheshv v Ratan Singh 1047
 Maheswari v Harilal, 885
 Mahu v Rindavul 945
 Mahulal v Emperor, 370, 477
 Mahila v Ma Thak 1084
 Mahila v Maung Shwe, 925
 Mahthi v Maung San Dun, 1207
 Mahu v Emperor 144 140
 Mahomed v Abdul, 957
 Mahomed v Abdul Hamud, 1052
 Mahomed v Abdul Haq 999 1000
 Mahomed v Abdul Kurem, 1085
 Mahomed v Abdul Rahaman 1388
 Mahomed v Aghore 1178
 Mahomed v Ali Haider, 1189
 Mahomed v Berkat 1173
 Mahomed v Bibi Mariam, 910
 Mahomed v Brodie 1035
 Mahomed v Chandra, 1194
 Mahomed v Chutterput 924
 Mahomed v Emperor, 454, 503, 504, 1036, 1289 1290 1351 1342 1391,
 Mahomed v Fahemunnessa, 933
 Mahomed v Fatima, 539, 562
 Mahomed v Haji 1136
 Mahomed v Hanja, 1207
 Mahomed v Hassan, 195
 Mahomed v Ibrahim 1042
 Mahomed v Kishori 323, 338, 1181
 Mahomed v Laesoodem 951
 Mahomed v Majabali, 1033
 Mahomed v Mahomed 616
 Mahomed v Mashiulla 639
 Mahomed v Mir Nazar 950
 Mahomed v Manshee Abdool, 991
 Mahomed v Mozhar Ali 458
 Mahomed v Najir Ali 951
 Mahomed v Nanbu Mal 979
 Mahomed v Nazir, 950
 Mahomed v Prodyat 984 989
 Mahomed v Rahim 900
 Mahomed v Sadik, 1019

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

- Mani : Ann Ho seu 451 452
 Manik : Q P 228 723
 Manmatha : Probodh 74 7, 100
 Manmotha : Ryeswar 106
 Ma Me Zet : Maung Swa 872
 Manmohun : Emperor 236
 Manmohun : Mathur 1023
 Manmohun : Rajawar 229
 Ma Nan : Yung 912
 Ma Ngai : Maung San York 737
 Manna : Emperor 419 1234
 Manna Lal : Emperor 396, 126 122
 Manne : Portan 827
 Mannier Re 1276
 Manning : (Leinent 72
 Manno (howdhun) : Munsh 639
 Ma Nyein : Maria 311
 Mansel : Emperor 651
 Man ill : R 12
 Man hit : Emperor 1139
 Man ha Singh : Emperor 426
 Maansingh : Emperor 131
 Mansingh : Nawalakhatti 109
 Mansingh Case 115
 Mania : Khudra 1197
 Mann : Long 293
 Mann : Russell 292
 Manufacturers Assn : Dorgan 675
 Man Singh : Unadit 1013 1090
 Ma On Nyein : K L 372
 Ma Pu : Ma Nya 309
 Ma Puk : Ma Nya Pank 918
 Ma Pan : Mg Po 1151
 Ma Pw : Maun Keyin 1257
 Maqbulan v Ahmad Hussain 31
 Marbar Ali : Budh Singh 1072
 Mareh : Collatt 897
 Marey : Barnes 677
 Marey : Barnes 869
 Marz Seward : The Vera Cruz 17
 Marian : Ibrahim 189
 Marian Bibi : Shukh Mahmood 760
 Marian Bibi : Sikina 1093
 Marine Investment Co : Harrode 893
 1127
 Maron : Stark 663
 Marks : Beylu 1240 1241
 Marks : Lahu 506 512 515
 Marneil : Blake 939
 Marotti : Bhagi 1104
 Marquis of Anglesey : Hatherton 185
 Marriot : Marriot 629
 Marriot : Pascal 777
 Marry : George 1001 Marry : Wetzel 572
 Marry : Allen 518
 Marsh : Collatt 892
 Mar hild Re 1181
 Mar hall : Cliff 398 762
 Mar hall : Lamb 873
 Marshall : R 167
 Marshalse (msc 6
 Marston : Dawes 801 1120 1251,
 1261 1387
 Martimer : McCillan, 811
 Martin, Re 831
 Martin : Hardesty 716 731
 Martin : Harding 989
 Martin : Ins Co, 1351
 Martindale : Talkner 1136
 Mary Jack on : Case 1293
 Mary Wilson : George Parker 1001
 Mary Cruz : Intendramath 977
 Ma Saw : Maung Sa 917
 Mashue : Maungin 568
 Mashue : Maung, Dith 291
 Mashue : Maung San, 912
 Ma Si : Maung Ye 1085
 Mason : Bateson 998
 Mason : Ditchbourne 104
 Mason : Golam, 73
 Mason : Lothrop, 297
 Mason : Maun 1078
 Mason Case 2
 Mason, Re 123
 Massay : Allen 502, 511
 Massey : Sladen 177
 Master, Re 2
 Mata Bhikh : Kaldin 1173
 Matadin : Q E 1268
 Matuio : Emperor 1112
 Mathen Shaw : Maun, Kan Gai 761
 Ma the Nh : Ma Nya 799
 Mathew v Blackmore 17
 Mathew : Lodge, 1006
 Mathews : Minister, 509
 Mathews : Smallwood 786
 Mathilda v Iritz 291, 581
 Mathilda : Gaebel 556
 Mathru : O'Neill 274
 Mathoor : Penny Mohan, 799
 Mathoor : Ram Pichai 257
 Mathura : Bikhari 989
 Mathura : Emperor, 146
 Mathura : Esu 185 190
 Mathuradas : Coculda 921
 Mathu Kumar : King Emperor 1274
 Mathura : Arandi 1192
 Mathura : Bhulan 542 548 897
 Mathura : Cheddi, 839, 840
 Mathura : Emperor 1369
 Mathura : Gokul, 1183
 Mathura : The Indian General Steam Navigation 13
 Mathur : Runkur, 290
 Mathura : Ram Rucha 771

- May v Hawkins 1261
 May v May, 588, 591
 May v Platt 957
 Mayandi v Oliver 977
 Maya Singh v Impres 115
 Maybe v Sniffen, 1121
 Mayers v Walker 703
 Mayeth v Emperor 876
 Mayfair Property Co. In re, 6
 Mayhaw v Nelson, 301
 Mayho v Williams, 628, 645
 Ma Yin v Ma Bok, 513
 Mayor v Murray, 1309
 Mayor of Dun castor v Day, 508
 Mayor of Hull v Horner, 808
 Mays v State, 147
 Mazasli v Cassim Ali 957
 Mize v Mangly, 1149
 Mazhar Ali v Budh Singh, 30, 1101
 Mc Adam in the goods of 888
 Mc Adony v State 364
 Mc Adroy v State, 124 761
 Mc Blain v Edgar, 296
 Mc Bride v Thompson 86
 Mc Carthy v Boston Duck Co 672
 Mc Connell v Mayer 1106
 Mc Corquodale v Bell, 351
 Mc Cullough v Munn, 859
 Mc Donnell v Conny 1260
 Mc Donough's trial 1360
 Mc Duff Re 993
 Mc Elwe v Ironbridge 333
 McGr v Sada Ram, 1043
 Mc Gabey v Alston, 320
 Mc Gill v Byrne 1267
 Mc Gopay v Alston 874
 Mc Gowan v Smith, 460
 Mc Intire v Oliver 311
 Mc Kenley v Gaylord 694
 Mc Kesson v Sherman, 958
 Mc Kinney v Grand Street, etc, 100
 Mc Kinnon v Bliss, 794
 Mc Lam v Winchester 816
 Mc Laughlin v We tgarth 19
 McLeod v Gunther's Adm 95
 Mc Lord v Johnson, 845
 Mc Loy v Wright 1376
 Mc Master v Ins Co of North A1
 922
 Mc Minu v 813
 Mc Mohan 671
 Mc Murrin
 Mc Cormic
 Mc Pherson
 Mc Stan v
 Md Golib v
 Md Haucel v
 Md Ibrahim v
 Md Ornullah v
 Md Yusuf v Nur
 Mead v Danbigny,
- Mead v Parker, 141
 Meade v Mc donell, 320
 Meayan v Ahmudddi, 316, 317 353, 354
 Means v Means, 52
 Meath v Winchester, 326, 338, 897, 808
 The Mediamn 171, 175
 Medhapnth's Case, 276
 Medhcott v Joyner, 808
 Medina v Stoughton, 966
 Medly v People 821
 Mea v Reid 1492
 Mukjee v Casowji, 623
 Minnakshendram v Chenchu, 910, 953
 Meehi v Lmperor 403
 Meer Jungoo v Chota Sahib, 35 1203
 Meer Syad v Kashinath, 1306
 Meerudullah v Immanan 770
 Mees app v Mnuug Ba Bu, 1124
 Meha v Makhan 934
 Meghraj v Durga, 924
 Meghraj v Mukundram 1827
 Meghraj v Ramgopal, 10
 Meghraj v Rashidhara Singh, 1011
 Meghraj v Tyebah 1167
 Megh v Romy, 323
 Mehar Amir v Nur Muhammad, 900
 Mehdi Hasan v Abdul, 594
 Mehor v Nur Muhammad 63, 873
 Merherally v Snkerkhanubai, 1142
 Meher Daod v Mahammed 531
 Meher Singh v Crown, 1289
 Mehri v Dew Dutt 1156
 Mela Ram v Deen Dayal 1160
 Melaram v Mt Bhole 1204
 Melbourne v Brougham 338
 Melhrish v Collier, 1349 1350, 1353
 Mellor v Walmesly 496
 Mellus v Year Apostolic 822
 Molnish 648
 Memon arin, 1254
 Memon ulvi Abdul, 1208
 Menany of State, 1156
 endar v 7 158
 dum v lib, 670
 ter, 1 illa
 le stry 938
 l Assignee
- 496 4

- Mersey Dock & Cline on, 21
 Mersey Dock & Turner, 4
 Meshaw & Abdul 1033
 Messrs Erskine & Co & Okhoy
 Chunder, 934
 Metharam & Jamal 599
 Methers & Brown, 313
 Methyan Chetti & Vayya Dayan 903
 Metro & Crown, 168
 Metropolitan Asylum & Hill, 100 104
 Metropolitan Engineering & Walter
 Engine, 911 1006
 Metropolitan Asylum District & Hill,
 105
 M'Evoy & Drogheda Harbour Commissioner, 1154
 Mewa Singh & Bhagwant 1124
 M'ewan & Perth, 13
 Meyer & Montrieux 315
 Meyer & Sefton, 813, 814
 Meyer Re, 823
 M Fadden & Murdock 180 192
 Mgr Tha & Emperor, 79
 M' Gabeg & Alston 921
 Mg Hlung & Mg A Chitsu, 599
 Mg Nwe & Mg Tha 1037
 Mg Myat & Ma Dan 918
 M' Gormau & Kierant 1486
 Mg Pim & Mg Tha Nawe 640
 Mg Po & Ma E Mai 913
 Mg Po Gyi & Mg Min Din, 847
 Mg Po Leen & Ma E Mai 598 910
 Mg Po Nyien & Maing My, 500
 Mg Shuk & Ma Nang, 1040
 Mian Khau & Emperor 449, 1120
 Mi Amin & Mi Gurh, 820
 Mi Amin & Mi Guru, 802
 Michel & State 472
 Michum & State 94 95 96
 Middlesex Justice & R 1
 Middleton & Barried 1390
 Middleton & Milton, 302, 502, 506, 507,
 513, 515
 Middleton & Sanford 692
 Midnapore Zemindary & Ennatulla, 798
 Midnapore Zemindary & Jogendra, 987,
 1002
 Midnapore Zemindari Co Ltd &
 Naresch Narain, 1198
 Mi Ein Kim & Nga La 1083
 Mi Ein Tha & King Emperor 357, 402
 Mighell & Sultan of Jhore 747 749, 755
 Mi Ghwe & Keshan Ram 954
 Mi Gywe & Maung Hla Pyn, 953
 Mihi Lal & Soni Ram, 1064
 Mi Keyan & Mi Ein, 1079
 Milan Khan & Sagai 59
 Milchant's Trust, 1072
 Mildwne's Case 1492
 Mile & Mi Shwe, 820
 Mi Le Byn & Mi Shwe Mya, 917
 Milkie & Emperor, 1233
 Miles & Dawson, 1264
 Miles & Knight 1126
 Miles & O Horn 560
 Milne & Leicester 69, 98, 513
 Millar & Taylor, 700
 Millard & Bailey, 1092
 Miller & Cotten, 782
 Miller Official Assignee & Bibu Madho
 Das, 75
 Miller & Hewrick, 612
 Miller & 73, Madho 1200 1401, 1408
 Miller & People, 109
 Miller & Russel 563
 Miller & Salomons, 1189, 1192
 Miller & Travers, 998, 1008 1010
 Miller & Williams, 762
 Miller's Estate, In re, 1104
 Millor & Taylor 184, 188
 Millore & Hemrick, 611
 Mills & Fox, 1167
 Mills & Mills, 496
 Mills & Oddy, 804, 805, 1213, 1264,
 1265
 Mills & Showe 1167
 Mills & Trust 845
 Mills & Wilkins 1
 Milne & Leicester, 69, 98 513
 Milner's Estate, 142 1125
 Milner, Gibson Cullum & Att General,
 1009
 Milony & Wright 1299
 Milword & Hihbert 180, 192
 Mina Queen & Hefburn, 778
 Mi Me & Mi Shwe, 760
 Mi Me Mi & Queen Empress, 1269
 Mi Myin & K E, 723 1298 1370
 Mi Myit & Ucharng 1084
 Mi Nwyo & Mi Shwe 630
 Minabai & Yadiro, 1033
 Mina Kumari & Bejoy Singh 11
 Mina Koonwari & Jagat Setani 1164
 Mina Kunwari & Rajah Bijoy Singh, 1127
 Mi Na Ben & Janki 1155
 Mincherhaw & The New Dharmav, 581
 Minet & Lemar, 17
 Minet & Morgan 1244 1247, 1248 1260
 Mi Nga Ma & Nga Talak, 519
 Minn M Co & R Co, 562
 Minna Craig & Charfreed, 631
 Minnat Ali & Narendra Kishore 1023
 Mmu Sircar & Rhedoy Nath 897
 Mir Abdul & Must Bibi Sona 560
 Miry & Abdul, 1072
 Miram & Ibrahim, 950
 Mirnabi & Vellayanna 190
 Mir Assahullah & Bibi Imamun, 772
 Miran & Ramassay, 1165
 Mir Mozuffer & Kahi Prosad, 649

- Mir Sayed & Iqbal Begam, 171 31
 835
 Mirza & Munshi, 603
 Mirza Hidayat & Ngr Kyung 75
 Mirza Sadique & Mohamed K. 100, 5
 Mirza Shamsheer & Kunj Behari, 60,
 Mirza U & Ngr Pym 599
 Mirza Gossain & Emperor 258
 Missouri Steam Ship Co In re 21
 Mitchell & Henry 1017 1020
 Mitchell & Jacob 821
 Mitchell & Justice, 1227
 Mitchell & Simpson, 11
 Mitchell & State 563
 Mites & Oddy 803
 Mithen Bibi & Bisher 16
 Mithu & Q. E., 1272
 Miti Sen Singh & Mt Janka Kaur
 1183
 Mi We & Mi Shwe 706
 M Kenzie & British Linen Co., 1174
 1176
 M Kenzie & Fraser 891
 Mohar Ali & Emperor 387
 Mohar Ali & Sewa Ram 1043
 Mohle & M R Co & Ashraf 96
 Mohruck & Toopany 1137
 Mohree Ram & Bissambher Roy, 108,
 Mohruba & Co., 471 480
 Modde Huddin & Sandes 1015
 Modhabraw & Gulabhu 352
 Modhu & Sahu, 1012
 M of Bristol & Cox, 1258
 Mogul Steamship Co & Mc Gregory &
 Co 152 153
 Mogul Case 152
 Mohabat Ali & Mohamed Ibrahim, 1136
 Mohadeo & Lahore Misser 1041
 Mohammad Ali & Shams Ali 203
 Mohamed & Aruna Chellam 1191
 Mohamed & Kheo Sin, 175
 Mohamed Ali & Nazu Ali 770
 Mohamed Syedol & Yeo Ooi Gurk 513
 Mohammad & Ali Haidar, 835
 Mohammad & Emperor 592
 Mohammad & Motlal 328
 Mohammad & Zubur 1055 1120
 Mohammadi & Karim 810
 Mohammad Din & Berry & Co., 1045
 Mohammad Sharif & Bunde Ali, 1072
 Mohammad Yakub & Bishen Sarup
 107
 Mohammad & Bryraj 538
 Mohan Lal & Mohammad 597
 Mohan Singh & Duple Singh, 102,
 493 547, 593
 Moharajah Juggat & Bhubo Farinee
 1403
 Moharum & Emperor, 1112
 Mohar Singh & Ghurtha 1400 1401
 Mohajuddin & Nowry 131
 Mohideen & Mahomed 770
 Mohindar & Ajodhya 11
 Mohendra & Emperor 876
 Mohendra & Rosomoy 195
 Mohendra & Surhoso Khya 1012
 Moher Sheikh & Q. L. 1265
 Moheruddin & Sumera 11
 Mohesh & Jagat 603
 Mohesh & Mohan 411
 Mohesh Chunder & Gooroo Pershad,
 1197
 Mohesh Chunder & Ism Chunder
 1153
 Mohesh Chunder In re 1211
 Mohesh Roy & Boldhum, 770, 893
 Mohesh & Sundar 225
 Mohi & Duro, 597
 Mohun & Mohesh 1035 1049
 Mohun & Wise, 604
 Mohun Chunder & Mothori 528
 Mohun Chunder & Konulil 1369
 Mohun Chandra & Ramdayal 978
 Mohuree Bibee & Dharmdas 1155
 Mohuddin & Emperor 876
 Mohun & Emperor, 114, 1331
 Mohammad & Emperor, 513
 Mohomed Mahbub & Bharat Indu, 51
 Mohar Ali Sarkar & Mahzuddin, 202
 Moher Bibee & Dharm Das 1168
 Mohar Sheikh & Q. E. 1262
 Mohar Singh & Emperor 896
 Mohan & Chitto, 293 296
 Mohunlal & Unoopooran 991
 Mohun Mahto & Mur Shumool, 1050
 Mohunt Bhagwan & Mohunt Raghun nandan 514
 Mohunt Das & Nilkomal 1164 1176
 Mohunt Gour & Hazarab, 1050
 Moran & Emperor, 56
 Moises & Thornton 689
 Mokhan & Bai Sakhi 1200
 Mold & Whetcroft 1174
 Moh & Vidho 921
 Molla Cassim & Molla Abdul 1065
 Mollwo & Court of Wards, 15
 Molony & Gibbons 891
 Molton & Cunrouse 436
 Molton & Harri 806
 Moman & Dhanni 1180
 Moneroe & Twistleton, 1232
 Money & Allen, 496
 Money & Forden 1147
 Monfelt & Cole 751
 Mongal & Hira 861
 Mongra & Dedi, 802
 Monappa & Vellaicharni 768
 Monilal & Improvement Trustees 2
 Monindra & Ram Krishan 519
 Monindra & Frovlockho, 242
 Monkton & Att Gen 528 533 534, 535
 539 570

- Monmohun v Harinath 500 501
 Monmohun v Watson & Co, 603
 Monmohini v Adwaita 222
 Monmahini v Banga, 640
 Monmohini v Bisben Moyee, 787, 799
 Monmohini v Girish 891
 Monohar v Amara, 1192
 Monohar v Chuni, 1075
 Monohar v Emperor, 1290
 Monohar v Ramnath, 1090
 Monohar v Sheo Saran 11
 Monohar v Narasing 1039
 Monroe v Chelver, 1381
 Monroe v State 244
 Montifiori v Montifiori 674
 Montgomery v Leith 302
 Moolai v Bahadur, 1175
 Moolai Cassim v Moolai Abdul 1072
 Moolai v Pinto 913
 Moon v Derden, 8
 Moonayo v Lomon, 1129
 Mooney v Mooney 326
 Moons v De Bernals, 628
 Moonshie Buzler v Shumsonnissay, 1090
 Moosheo Syed Amer Ali v Syed Ali 1180
 Moore v Butler 313
 Moore v Crosthwait, 296
 Moore v Orstler, 729
 Moore v Patta 960
 Moore v Shelley 177
 Moore v State 124 497
 Moore v Ferrell 1244
 Moore, In re, 851
 Moore wood v Wood, 551
 Moorti Ram v Laljee Bahoo, 587
 Moran v Mithee Bibee 910
 Morant v Taylor, 1
 Morbury v Madison 1239
 Morewood v Wood, 532
 Morgan v Brydges 1307
 Morgan v Crawshaw 21
 Morgan v Farul, 1157
 Morgan v Griffith 965, 966
 Morgan v Minnet 1090
 Morgan v Morgan, 845
 Morgan v Nichol, 558 566, 569
 Morgan v State, 720 735
 Morian v Sheikh Mahomed 892
 Moriorty v R Co 123
 Morler v State 563
 Morley v Case, Lord 562, 563, 564
 Morno v Bhem 1299
 Morrel v Fisher 1007
 Morrel v Studd 977
 Morris v Bethel 140
 Morris v Davies 148, 166, 705 707
 1096 1097 1099 1100, 1101
 Morris v Hanser 818
 Morris v Miller, 705, 707 708 709
 Morris v Purna Chandra, 985
 Morris v Stokes 318
 Morrison v Leonard 1222 1223
 Morse v Royall, 315, 317
 Morstin v Drwney 803
 Mortand Row v Malhar Row 601
 Motimer v McCullan 302, 792, 811, 812
 863 868, 882 1484
 Mortlund v Amrit Rao, 987
 Morton v Wood, 1198 1199
 Morewood v Wood 526, 857
 Morse v Royal 315
 Moreley v Davies, 525
 Mosely v Victoria Co, 1246
 Mosey v Case, 366
 Moshun Ali v Biloo-o 973
 Moriarty v London C & D Ry Co 70
 Mostyn v Iabrigas, 611, 673, 674
 Moshuq Ali v Husaynissa 1072
 Motahhor v Mulji 287 969
 Mothemi Luboe v Bussar Khan 774
 Moti v Mahomed, 1113
 Moubai v Jamsethi, 55
 Moti Biswas v Haripada, 937
 Motihari v Lachmi 1063
 Motjan v Crown, 395
 Motlal v Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co 1094
 Motlal v Haji Moora 1191
 Motlal v Yar Mahomed 1191
 Motuner v Shotall, 964
 Moturam v Emperor 265 396, 561 963
 1356
 Moturam v Lalit 1305
 Moturam v Radhabai 963
 Moti Shah v Chandharp Singh 1190
 Moti Singh v Dhanuk Dhari, 1304
 Moti Singh v Harbojan Singh 21
 Moti Vahu v Purshotam 1123
 Mottryabhan v Palani, 937
 Motteram v E Counties 883
 Moulai v Dallison 180, 193
 Moulai v Haliday, 185
 Moulvie Mahomed v Wilkie, 1367
 Mountford v Gibson 177
 Mounting v Collier 1201
 Mourmand v Leclair 998
 Mowji v National Bank 1172
 Movez v Emperor, 454
 Muzla v Emperor 114
 Mr Collier v Mrs L Baran 545
 Mr G Lee v Panchanada 940
 Mrin Bhai v Ibrahim, 951
 Mrinmoyee v Bhoobanmoyee 567 569
 Mrs L v W L 328
 Mr Maybrick v Case, 112, 115
 Mrubai v Jamsethi, 1054
 Mt Subramaniam v Lutchman 906
 Mt Ajodha v Emperor, 510
 Mt Bibi v Syed Mobarak 75
 Mt Bibi Ramji v Karam, 1171

- Mir Sayed z Tarabai Begum, 171 31
 835
 Mirza z Munshi, 603
 Mirza Hidayat z Ngaz Kyang 758
 Mirza Sadique v Mohomed Karim, 7
 Mirza Shamsheer z Kunj Behari, 60
 Mirza U v Ngaz Pyan, 599
 Mirza Gossun v Emperor 253
 Misori Steam Ship Co In re 24
 Mitchell v Henry 1017 1020
 Mitchell v Jacobs 821
 Mitchell z Justices, 1237
 Mitchell z Simpson, 11
 Mitchell z State 565
 Mites v Oddy 803
 Mithen Bibi v Bishaie 4
 Mithu z Q E, 1272
 Mitra Sen Singh z Mt Jind Kaur
 1155
 Mi We z Mi Shwe 706
 M Kenzie z British Lnen Co, 1171
 1176
 M Kenzie z Friser 891
 Moharrak Ali z Emperor 387
 Mohauk z Sewa Kum 1043
 Mobile & M R Co v Ashraf 96
 Moharrak z Tooppany 1137
 Mochee Run v Bissambher Roy, 1085
 Mockabu z Com, 471 480
 Modae Huddin v Sandes 1015
 Modhabraw v Gulabhu 352
 Modhu v Sabi 1042
 M of Bristol v Cox, 1253
 Moghul Steamship Co z Mc Gregory &
 Co 152 155
 Moul Case 152
 Mohabat Ali z Mohamed, Ibrahim, 1136
 Mohadeo z Lahoree Mieser 1041
 Mohammad Ali v Shams Ali 203
 Mohamed v Aruna Chellam 1191
 Mohamed z Kheo Sin, 175
 Mohamed Ali, v Nazar Ali 770
 Mohamed Syedol v Yeo Ooi Gark 513
 Mohammad v Ali Haidar, 835
 Mohammad v Emperor 592
 Mohammad v Motlal, 328
 Mohammad v Zubur 1055 1120
 Mohammad v Kasim, 840
 Mohammad Din v Berry & Co 1045
 Mohammad Sharif v Bande Ali, 1072
 Mohammad Yakub v Bishen Sarup
 1057
 Mohammud z Bryraj 538
 Mohan Lal z Mohammad, 597
 Mohan Singh v Dalpat Singh, 492,
 493 547, 598
 Moharajah Juggat z Bhubo Farinee
 1403
 Moharam z Emperor 1142
 Mohar Singh v Ghuribz 1400 1401
 Mohajuddin z Nowraj 131
 Mohadeo z Mahomed 770
 Mohendra z Ajodhya 311
 Mohendra z Emperor 876
 Mohendra z Rosomoyi 195
 Mohendra z Surboso Khyn, 1012
 Mohur Sheikh z Q F 1265
 Mohernaddin z Sumera 411
 Mohesh z Ingat 603
 Mohesh z Mohesh 411
 Mohesh Chunder z, Gooroo Pershad
 1197
 Mohesh Chunder z Isam Chunder
 1153
 Mohesh Chunder In re 1241
 Mohesh Roy z Boddhun, 770, 898
 Mohewir z Sundar, 225
 Mohu z Duro, 597
 Mohura z Mohesh 1035, 1049
 Mohura v Wise 604
 Mohura Chunder z Mothori 525
 Mohun Chandra v Konralal 1369
 Mohun Chandra v Ramdayal 978
 Mohuree Bibee z Dharmdas 1157
 Mohuddun v Emperor 876
 Mohur z Emperor, 114, 1331
 Mohurmad v Emperor, 513
 Mohomed Mahbubum z Bharat Indu, 51
 Mohar Ali Sarkar z Mahzuddin, 202
 Moher Bibee z Dharm Das 1168
 Mohar Sheikh z Q E, 1262
 Mohar Singh v Emperor 896
 Mohun z Chutto, 293 296
 Mohunil z Unoopoorna, 991
 Mohun Maho z Mir Shams-ool, 1080
 Mohunt Bhagwan z Mohunt Kishu
 Pandit 544
 Mohunt Dis v Nilkomal 1164 1176
 Mohunt Gour z Huzarab, 1050
 Moira z Emperor, 56
 Moises z Thornton 689
 Mokhan z Bai Sakhi 1200
 Mold z Whetstone 1174
 Moh z Midho 924
 Molla Cassim z Molla Abdul 1068
 Mollwo v Court of Wards 18
 Molony z Gibbons 891
 Molton v Cunrouse 456
 Molton v Harris 806
 Moman z Dhanni 1180
 Moneroe v Twistleton, 1232
 Money z Allen, 496
 Money z Torden, 1147
 Monfelt z Cole, 754
 Mongal z Hira 864
 Mongra z Dedi 802
 Monappa z Vellaicharni, 768
 Mondul v Improvement Trustees, 2
 Monindra z Ram Krishna 519
 Monindra z Trovlockho, 242
 Monkton z Att Gen 528 533 534, 535
 539 550

- Monmohun v Harinath 500 501
 Monmohun v Watson & Co, 603
 Monmohini v Adwaita 222
 Monmohini v Banga, 640
 Monmohini v Bishen Moyee, 787, 799
 Monmohini v Girish, 891
 Monohar v Amara, 1192
 Monohar v Chinn, 1075
 Monohar v Emperor, 1290
 Monohar v Romanath, 1090
 Monohar v Sheo Saran 11
 Monohar v Nar-sing 1039
 Monroe v Chelver, 1384
 Monroe v State 244
 Montifiori v Montifiori 654
 Montgomery v Leith 302
 Moolai v Bahasa, 1175
 Moolai Cassim v Moolai Abdul 1072
 Moolai v Pinto 913
 Moon v Derden, 8
 Moonye v Lomun, 1129
 Mooney v Mooney 326
 Moons v De Bernals, 628
 Moonshe Buzar v Shumsonnissar, 1090
 Mooshee Syed Amer Ali v Syed Ali 1180
 Moore v Butler 313
 Moore v Crosthwait 296
 Moore v Ostler, 729
 Moore v Patts 960
 Moore v Shelley 177
 Moore v State 124 487
 Moore v Ferrell 1244
 Moore In re, 851
 Moore wood v Wood, 551
 Moorti Ram v Laljee Bahoo, 585
 Moran v Mithee Bibee 940
 Morant v Taylor, 1
 Morbury v Madison 1239
 Morewood v Wood, 592
 Morgan v Brydges, 1307
 Morgan v Crawspray 21
 Morgan v Farn, 1157
 Morgan v Griffith, 965, 966
 Morgan v Minnet, 1090
 Morgan v Morgan, 845
 Morgan v Nichol 558 566, 569
 Morgan v State 720 735
 Morian v Sheikh Mahomed 892
 Moriarty v R Co 123
 Morley v State 563
 Morley's Case, Lord 562, 563, 564
 Morno v Bhem 1299
 Morrel v Fisher 1007
 Morrel v Studd 977
 Morris v Bethel 140
 Morris v Davies 148 166, 705 707 1096, 1097 1099 1100 1101
 Morris v Hanser 818
 Morris v Miller, 705, 707 708 709
 Morris v Purna Chandrar, 955
 Morris v Stokes 318
 Morrison v Leonard, 1222, 1223
 Morse v Royal, 315, 317
 Morstan v Dawney 803
 Morton Row v Malhar Row, 601
 Motimer v M'Cillan, 302, 792, 811, 812 863 868, 882 1484
 Mortland v Amrit Rao, 987
 Morton v Woods 1198 1199
 Morewood v Wood, 526, 877
 Morse v Royal 315
 Moreley v Davies, 525
 Mosely v Victoria Co 1246
 Mosey v Case, 366
 Moshun Ali v Biloo-o 973
 Moriarty v London C & D Ry Co 77
 Motyn v Yabrigas, 611, 673, 674
 Moshuq Ali v Husunissar 1032
 Motabbho v Mulji 287 969
 Mothem Bibee v Bussar Khan, 774
 Moti v Mohamed, 1113
 Moubai v Jamsetji, 5
 Moti Biswas v Haripada, 937
 Motihari v Lachini 1063
 Motjan v Crown, 395
 Motlal v Lister Mortgage and Agency Co, 1094
 Motlal v Haji Moora 1191
 Moulal v Yur Mohamed 1191
 Motimer v Shotall, 964
 Motiram v Emperor 265 396, 564, 963 1356
 Mouram v Lalit 1305
 Motiram v Radhabai 963
 Moti Shah v Chandhar Singh 1190
 Moti Singh v Dhanuk Dhar, 1304
 Moti Singh v Harhojan Singh 21
 Moti Vahu v Purshotam 1123
 Mottayabhan v Palani, 957
 Motteram v E Counties 883
 Moulin v Dallison 180, 191
 Moulton v Halday, 185
 Moulvie Mohamed v Wilkie, 1367
 Mountford v Gibson, 177
 Mounting v Collier 1201
 Mourmand v Leclur, 998
 Mowj v National Bank 1172
 Movez v Emperor 454
 Myla v Emperor 114
 Mr Collier v Mrs L Baran 545
 Mr G Lee v Pinchanada 940
 Mran Bjbi v Ibrahim, 951
 Munmoyee v Bhoobramoyee 767 569
 Mrs L v W L 328
 Mrs Maybrick's Case, 112, 115
 Mrubai v Jamsetji 1054
 Mr Subramaniam v Lutchman 906
 Mr Ajodhi v Emperor 510
 Mr Bibi v Syed Mohrak 75
 Mr Bibi Ramji v Kasim 1174

- Mt Chando v Sri Ram, 600
 Mt Chandan v Crown, 395
 Mt Indi v Jainal Singh, 1136
 Mt T Ju Kur v Lathu, 1198
 Mt Jasodra v Janki 695
 Mt Makhiduman v Syed Alraf Hussain, 925
 Mt Munkur v Ishar Das 1195
 Mt Meehu v Emperor, 402
 Mt Metro v Crown, 345
 Mt Rup v Mohin Lal 1042
 Mt Srimat Ansanti v Ram Jar 331
 Mr Surja v Bhai, 1045
 Mubarak v Ahmad, 3
 Mubarak v Mahomed 1174
 Mudd v Suckermore 693 353 87
 Mudhusoodan v Saroop 773
 Mugge v Adams 858
 Muhammad v Abdul 1401
 Muhammad v Ali Baksh 1103
 Muhammad v Behari, 1491
 Muhammad v Chuh u 168
 Muhammad v Crown, 385 392
 Muhammad v Emperor 403
 Muhammad v Ganga Dayal 202
 Muhammad v Gokulchand, 1153
 Muhammad v Gulum 191
 Muhammad v Hamiduddin 809
 Muhammad v Hassan 209
 Muhammad v Hussain 290
 Muhammad Abdul v Ibrahim 797
 Muhammad v Imtiaz 331
 Muhammad v Johanda 1033
 Muhammad v Kalsun Bi 1093
 Muhammad v Les Trueries 1043
 Muhammad v Muhammad 963, 1097 1197
 Muhammad v Raghubar, 1031
 Muhammad v Ram 865
 Muhammad v Sobera, 874
 Muhammad v Sultan Singh, 865
 Muhammad v Wali 1194
 Muhammad Ahaby v Muhammad Samiruddin 1041
 Muhammad Allahadul v Muhammad Ismail 1103
 Muhammad Hassan v Munna 595
 Muhammad Janli Koer v Studagar Ram, 214
 Muhammad Hamid v Shub Sahu 1162
 Muhammad Zahur v Chedra Lal, 1496
 Muhtar v Barkat, 1332
 Muhesser v Baksh Singh 1332
 Muhomed Mumtaz v Naurang 1201
 Mukbul Ahmed v Rakhal, 613
 Mukherjee v Q E 387
 Mukhi v Har Sahai, 222
 Mukhi v Monomohine, 850
 Mukhi Singh v Kishan, 944
 Mukhtar Ahmed v Kabir Ahmad 1015
 Mukti v Woman, 1054
 Muktamala v Ranicharan, 647
 Muktonath v Jitendra Nath, 836
 Mul undram v Dayaram 340 575, 780, 581, 586 1326, 1378
 Mukund v Ladu, 34
 Mula Mal v Chiranji, 37
 Mula Shah v Kripa Ram, 1164
 Mulchand v Jamambi 1118
 Mulchand v Madho, 933, 934
 Mulchand v Sungachand, 23
 Mulchay v R 151, 153
 Mulimayaadi la re, 385
 Mulla v De Korun 809
 Mulla Baksh v Kasim Baksh 1041
 Mullangi v Venkata Subrammah, 707
 Mullangi Venkata v M Venkata, 542
 Mullangi v Venkata 542 707
 Muller v The Eastern and Midland, 867
 Muloland v Killen, 934
 Mulpari v Sri Rajah Vardaraja, 757
 Munaford v Getting, 987, 992 1021
 Munamma v Purappa 974
 Munakshammal v Ramasami, 1159
 Munchershaw v New Dhurmscy 22, 584, 1216, 1328
 Munderson v Reeve 319
 Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Caveri 923
 Municipal Committee v Bhai Kishan, 19
 Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Secretary of State for India, 1170, 1159
 Muni Reddi v Venkata Row, 173
 Munn v Baker 241
 Munn v Godbold 786, 787 790
 Munna v Jawla, 259
 Munna v Kameshar, 163 1050
 Munna v Kameshri 599
 Munna v Narain, 929, 942
 Munna Lal v Kameshara 545
 Munna Lal v E I Ry, 1037
 Munnoo Lal v Lalji Choonee Lal 1163
 Munshi v Behari 1086
 Munshi v Surendra 647
 Munshi v Emperor, 447
 Murad v Khadum 1054
 Murari v Radha, 1092
 Muriet v Wolfagen 692
 Murle Das v Achut Das 891
 Murle Das v Manickar, 1129
 Murphy v Hargrave, 698
 Murphy v Killinger 333
 Murphy Re 834, 874 1117
 Murray v Mason, 1381
 Murray v Milner 545, 546
 Murray v Lord Stair, 972
 Murray, Re 1178
 Musa v Emperor, 1290
 Musamat Khoob Koonoor v Baboo Woodnaran, 1123

- Musgrave v Emmerson 512
 Mushood v Emperor 451
 Mussa Kazim v Haji Mutasaddi, 993
 Mussa v Empress 446
 Mussamat v K E 118
 Mussamat v Mathura, 631
 Mussamat v Onkur Lal 978
 Mussamat v Ruttan 797
 Mussamat Bhagbhata v Chowdhury 1002
 Mussamat Fatima v Crown 1233
 Mussamat Imam v Hurgobind, 771
 Mussamat Lal v Murlu Dhu, 595, 699
 Mussamat Nararat v Mahammad I uz 1033
 Mussamat Ram v Baboo Beston 931
 Mussamat Rao v Empress 369
 Must Bibi v Deo Nandan, 602
 Must Misri v K F 415
 Must Ram v Eron Bahadur 491
 Must Sorja v Mulidhar 817
 Mustafa Hassan v Sudal Nasim 1036 1173
 Must Gill v Emperor, 685
 Must Jo v Mt Rakuram 937
 Mustam v Mohendra, 65
 Muthalagiri v Paphi Nicken 41
 Muthan Papayya, In re, 1288
 Muthan sum Iyer v Dharmaraja, 937
 Muthu Chetti v Muthu 328
 Muthu Chetty v Kothandoram-swami, 944
 Muthu Lal v Sripat 1195
 Muthu v K L, 407
 Muthu Chettier v Muhammad, 319
 Muthu Erulappa v Vennuk, 938
 Muthu Krishna v Ramchandra 87
 Muthu Kumara Swami v Empeter, 357, 408 1372
 Muthu Santrigal v Viswanath, 915
 Muthusami v Veroda, 970
 Muthusamy v Solar, 1203
 Muthu Venkata v Pyanda Venkata 945
 Muthun Bobee v Busher Khan 1229
 Mutsaddi v Bhagwan 1144
 Mutsaddi v Crown, 384 387
 Mutty v Annundo, 919
 Mutual Benefit Ins Co v Newton 286
 Mutual Life Ins v Hillmon, 39
 Muzaffar v Emperor, 486
 Myers v Sarl, 984, 1018 1020
 Mylapore Krishna Swami, In Re 1353
 Mylie, In the goods, 888
 Mython v Thornbury 895
- N
- Nabadwip v Purna, 31
 Nabakishore v Upendra 1046
 Nahu Baksh v Emperor 1272
- Nabin Chandra v Debendra, 999
 Nahi Khan v Mussamat Sewak, 978
 Nabin Krishna v Ravi Lal, 860
 Nabendra v Durga 864
 Nabendra v Rahma, 864
 Nabodeep Chandra, In Re 390
 Nabo Coomarr v Gobind 603
 Naha Kishore v Upendra Kishore, 1036
 Naba Kumar v Rudra Narayana, 4329
 Nabooma v Khedir Hussain, 936
 Nachappa v Chinmiah 1040
 Naddar v Meeran, 1128
 Nadia v Birendra 984
 Nadiar Chand v Chander Sikhet, 619
 Nadir v Crown 400 482
 Nandir Shaw v Piroj Shaw 259
 Nafir v Emperor, 1216, 1217, 1218, 1492, 1499
 Nafir Chandra v Bhunsi Moler, 1172
 Nafir Joradar v Pratima Sundari, 223
 Naga Kynot v Q E 1112
 Naga Methu v Emperor, 767
 Nagmoja v Vythianatha, 1238, 1387
 Nagaraju Pillu v Secretary of State 237
 Nagendra v Dinonath, 1091
 Nagendra v Tawrence Jute Co, 316, 517
 Nagendra v Parbutty, 656
 Nagendra v Peon, 11
 Nagendra v Raghun, 187, 703
 Nagendrabala v Debendra 1091
 Nagendra Nath v Nagender Bala, 1383
 Nageshar v Ganesha, 1048
 Nageshar v Hanuman Singh, 639
 Nageswar v Bachu, 835
 Nahi v Ali Khan, 1215, 1219
 Nagina v Emperor, 1363, 1370
 Nagina Singh v Sundar, 290
 Nagindra v Kari Jevay, 1155
 Nahi v Emperor, 1112
 Nago v Rajeshwar 1083
 Nago v Tukaram 925
 Ngogo Das v Moses, 945
 Nahir Bawa v Kedar Bulsh 220
 Nimb Singh v Ahim Kuar, 221
 Naiker v Corporation of Madras, 871
 Nana v Gohordhan, 493 1372, 1378
 Nann Vedu Kanam, In Re, 124, 126 1109
 Nannpillu v Ramanatham, 897, 1049
 Najib Bibi v Syad Razh, 839
 Nnke Chowdhury v Suldeo Chowdhury, 1186
 Nalini v Manda Valli 339
 Nalini v Hari, 617, 656
 Nalini Kumari v Gudadhar, 1035
 Nalla Ramendu In Re 1269
 Nallasiva v Ramalinga, 31
 Nalluswami Mudaliar v Ravau Bibi 220 555
 Nalam Pillu v Ramanathu 1139

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

- Narasimma : Billa Kera, 130
- Narasimha : Krishnamurti 789
- Narasimgerji : Penagarti, 993
- Narasimha : Shrinivasha, 1124
- Narayan : Bhuraj, 1040
- Narayan : Chairman Howrah Municipality 16
- Narayan : Emperor, 1271, 1286, 1288
- Narayan : Hurdutta Rai, 631
- Narayan : Lakshinandas, 816
- Narayan : Laxmanrao 1173
- Narayan : Raoji, 1191
- Narayan : Shrinivas 1069
- Narayan : Srikantha 1195
- Narayan : Tulsi 1173
- Narayan : Umbar 1195
- Narayan : Venkata 293, 319
- Narayan : Vilhoba, 945
- Narayan : Yamma Dai 1204
- Narayan Ayyar : Venkata 300
- Narayan Bhogwant : Shrinivas, 1071
- Narayan Swami : James, 961
- Narbhajit : Gopal 936
- Narendra : Bhola 901, 905
- Narendra : Nagendra, 1189
- Narendra : Ramgobind 1019
- Narendra Bahadur : Oudh Commercial Bank, 1166
- Narendra Lal : Bhola Nath, 901
- Narendra Nath : Kamalharini, 10
- Narendra Nath : Ramgobind 1067, 1166
- Naresb Narayan : Secretary of State (C. S.)
- Narohar : C. M. King, 317, 318
- Narkar Phikar 1000
- Narayan : Narayan 100, 171

- Nathuram v Kallin, 644
 National Bank v De Bernales, 460
 National Bank v Ninth National Bank, 1208
 National Bank v Yoeman, 324
 National Exchange Company of Glasgow v Drew, 303
 Natwar v Alkhu, 219, 519, 520, 555
 Navolba v Siyubhai, 959
 Nowah v Emperor, 371, 396
 Nawab v Gopinath, 14, 1035
 Nowob Howlodar v Emperor, 1233
 Nawab Nozu v Raghunath, 1047
 Nawab of Murshidabad v Bilash Roy, 1171
 Nawab Sha Mahomed v Dy Commissioner, 826
 Nawab Sidhu v Ojoodhyaram, 117
 Nawal Kunwar v Bakhtawar, 324, 338
 Nawal Sha v Nanh, 530
 Nawking v Howard, 1265
 Noyan v Q E, 452
 Nayamtulla v Nana, 1035
 Nazib v Emperor, 384, 402
 Narigadu v Emperor, 1283
 Nozir v Emperor, 410
 Nazir Singh v Emperor, 410
 Neally v Greenough, 816
 Neamat Ali v Gooroo Das, 194, 196, 205, 619, 640, 816
 Neapon v Doe, 1065
 Neave v Moss, 1198
 Necha v Emperor, 451, 455, 1111
 Neolhy v Nedley, 1090
 Newbon v Bremner, 631
 Neel Kanto v Joggochandhu, 779, 780, 829, 825
 Neelkristo v Birchandra, 187, 1048
 Nehar v Sajer, 840
 Neil v Devonshire, 180, 181, 196, 624, 634, 641
 Neki v Emperor, 370, 409
 Nelakonta v Sundar Siva Row, 948
 Nelly v State, 93
 Nelson v Bridgitt, 611
 Nelson v Lord, 674
 Nelson v Sun Mutual Ins Co, 667
 Nemi Chand v Wallace, 1377
 Nepen v Sajer Pramanik, 3, 8, 841
 Nevling v Com, 47, 59
 Neville In re, 1069
 Newboogh's Case, 993
 Newby v Sins, 20
 Newbold v Smith, 514
 New Castle v Braxtowe, 635
 New Hall v Junkins, 293
 New Hall v Holt, 347, 907
 Newham v Ranthbey, 591
 New Haven County Bank v Mitchell, 276
 New Jersey Divorce Case, 776
 Nowslam v Cur, 729
 Newton v Blecher, 157, 158
 Newton v Chافتen, 801, 125, 1261, 1265, 1887
 Newton v Doe, 873
 Newton v Liddiard, 290, 457, 458, 1156
 Newzealand, Bank of v Simpson, 1021
 Nga v Crown, 781
 Nga Ba v Emperor, 365, 415, 566, 572, 781
 Ngachio v Mi Se Mi, 993, 1011, 1015
 Ngo Kyaw v K E, 387, 391
 Ngu Kyaw v Emperor, 384
 Nga Kyaw v Nga Shwe, 1085
 Ngu Nyo v King Emperor, 78
 Ngu Maung v Q E, 1272
 Ngu Min v Emperor, 402
 Nga Myat v Queen Empress, 369
 Nga Ngwe v K F, 1490
 Nga Nwo v K E, 1221
 Nga Nyo v E, 372
 Nga Nyo v Emperor, 579
 Nga Ok Gyin v Q E, 723
 Ngu Pow v Q E, 1286
 Nga Po v Emperor, 488
 Nga Po v K E, 345, 391
 Nga Po v Q E, 726, 738
 Nga Po Chit v Emperor, 1285
 Nga Po Kank Inre, 452
 Nga Poke v Emperor, 79
 Nga Poke v Q L, 31
 Nga Po Kyaw v Emperor, 152
 Nga Po Sun v Q E, 369
 Nga Po Thet v Q L, 1285
 Nga Po 'lok v K E, 445
 Nga Po Yin v K E, 141, 1275
 Nga Pyu v Emperor, 1365
 Nga Pyo v K E, 890
 Nga That v Q E, 1271
 Nga Sang v Ngaha Aing, 956
 Nga Sim v K E, 877
 Nga San Nyim v K E, 456
 Nga Sany v K E, 369, 374, 414
 Nga Seik v Nga Pu, 551, 1329
 Nga Sheva v Nga Kaing, 912, 1085
 Nga Shewe v Queen, 255, 376, 1112, 1281
 Nga Shue Tat v Q E, 365
 Nga Som v Emperor, 130
 Nga Te v K E, 479
 Nga Thakin v Emperor, 400
 Nga Tha v Queen Empress, 390, 450
 Nga Ihin v Q E, 396
 Nga To v K E, 511
 Nga Tun v Chou, 1099
 Nga Tun v Emperor, 451
 Nga Tun v Michon, 1100, 1103
 Nga Wa v King Emperor, 1287
 Nga Waik v Nga Chet, 915
 Nga Wo v K E, 370
 Ngoswor v Bachu, 847

Obboy : Bujoy, 159
 Obboy : Bujoy 296
 Obboy Charan v Hari Nath, 1079
 Obboy Charan : Lakhmonee 1041
 O'Brien In re 1004
 Ochentree v Papalar 645
 O'Connell's Case 560
 O'Connell v R, 150
 O'Conner : Majorihinks, 1232
 Official Assignee, Bombay : Term of Chandalal 36
 Official Assignee of Madras : Offg
 Assignee of Rangoon, 652
 O'Flaherty : McDowell 34
 Ogden v Parson, 676
 Ogden : People 660
 Ogilvie v Western Australian Mort gage, 1176
 Ogile v Cook, 829
 O Gorman : Mahtab Singh, 914
 Ohlson v Terreso 1372
 O Keefe v Walsh 161
 Okhoy, In re, 876
 Okhoymonee v Nilmon, 1003
 Oliver : Hinton, 242
 Oliver : Nautilus Steamship 353
 Olney v Chidsey 292
 Omer Dutt v Colonel, 197
 Omichand v Baker, 792 1489, 1492
 Omid v Nidhi, 16
 Ommaay v Stilwell 1078
 Ommat Fatima v Bhajo 603
 Omrita : Kalu, 685
 Omy Chand v Baker, 496, 808, 897,
 1215
 O'Neil : Reid 293, 297
 Onkar Mal v Secretary of State, 1191
 Onkar Prosad : Badri, 968
 Onraet : Kishen, 1044
 Onward : Smithson, 1173
 Oodev v Ladoo, 457
 Oolagappa v Collector of Trichnopol
 1103
 Oomanath : Raghunath, 640
 Oomed Roy v Hura Ltd 1046
 Opport Radhi v Paula Ujjalla 16
 O Rance & Co : S Joseph Brothers
 12
 Oregon Steam Co : Otis, 276
 Oriental Bank : Brown, 1250
 Oriental G S Co : Narasimha, 528,
 529 541 544, 546, 1048
 O'Rourke v Derbyshire 1257
 Osborne v Chocquell 108
 Oscar Staler's Case, 141
 Osha v Wood 1250
 Ottos Kopp Diamond Mines In re
 1142
 Ovenston v Wilson, 693
 Over v Schiffing 39
 Over : Over, 35, 290

Ovalind Trusts, 1135
 Overseer of West Ham
 Overton v Wilsch, 691
 Owen : Waters, 1127
 Owner : Bechive Spinning Co Ltd, 812
 Ownkar Seth : Bijnath 1162
 Oxford pool rate Re, 759

P

P v P, 1093
 Paban : Bodal, 847
 Paban : Rakhal, 835
 Pabhu Laxmi, In re, 178
 Pachyanimal v Devyanimal, 1188
 Packard : Hill, 890
 Padun Prosad : Emperor 875
 Padmry : Gopi Kishore 62
 Padamse : Lakhmonee 62
 Padun Pira v Q E 393
 Padan Nath : Ram Narain 834
 Padayachi : Krishna Swami, 1156
 Paddock : Forrester, 350 353
 Paddappanai Re, 501
 Paddapin Narayan Re, 519
 Paddu v Mahabir Prosad 1174
 Padmarati v Bonomali, 202
 Padmanabhai : Town Council, 1239
 Padoomonee : Bishnur, 603
 Page : Faucet 754
 Page v Leapingwell 989
 Page : Parker, 667, 670
 Page's Case, 755
 Painter v Govt, 862
 Pahlad : Emperor, 79
 Pakhu Singh v Emperor, 81
 Pakkoo v Dayal 1107
 Palaniappa : Ruyagopal 810
 Palakdhar : Manneer 193
 Palani : Sethu, 1098
 Pila Singh v Emperor, 151
 Palavaram, In re, 1284
 Pilesuri : Sunkar 850
 Pilethup : Furnish, 308
 Palniappa : Nagappa 67
 Pallu : Emperor, 1259
 Palmer : Coyle 250
 Palmer v Secretary of State, 175
 Palmer : Harcher, 5
 Palmer's Case 112
 Palmerston's Case 560
 Palsingh : Jagir, 1093
 Pime M Vaz : Emperor, 45
 Panethatham : Emperor 410
 Panethanon v Emperor, 1352, 1358
 Panchapakesa : Ayyaswami, 975
 Paneth Nath Pillai : Emperor 411
 Panchu : Emperor 1218
 Panchu Das : Emperor 182
 Panchu Mandal : Emperor, 684
 Panda : Abdul, 1342

Pearl v Dorbomoy, 193
 Pearl v Durlavi, 621
 Pearson v Beck, 453
 Pearson v Fletcher, 1265
 Pearson v Lemaitre, 247
 Pearson v Peni on, 831
 Pearson v Shaw, 751
 Pearson v Wrightman, 1392
 Peary v Dicker, 689
 Peary v Ram, 1494
 Peary v Secretary of State, 644
 Pearylal v Kedarnath, 631
 Pearylal v Surendra, 1190
 Peary Mohan v Donald, 1312
 Peary Mohan v Jote Kumari, 191
 Peary Mohan v Narendra, 784
 Peck v Peck, 516
 Peddabba Reddi v Vernda Reddi, 1269
 Pedda Siva Reddi, In Re, 737
 Peareth v Marriot, 621
 Pellat v Ferrars, 560
 Pembroke v Panberston, 1398
 Pembroke's Trial, Earl of, 256
 Peni Karuppa v Rajeswar, 1139
 Pendrell v Pendrell, 1095, 1096, 1101
 Pendleton v Rooth, 326
 Pentaya v Ketheran, 970
 Penu Mutual L J Co v Wiler, 342
 People v Ah Yute, 334
 People v Angsbury, 671
 People v Brun, 677
 People v Beckwith, 47
 People v Fair, 725
 People v Fanning, 367
 People v Farrel, 71
 People v Fish, 557
 People v Fox, 367
 People v Gilbert, 364
 People v Golsworthy, 676
 People v Grav, 663
 People v Green, 112
 People v Hendrickson, 114
 People v Herd, 121
 People v Hurst, 1484
 People v Jackson, 365
 People v Johnson, 391
 People v Kelsner, 114
 People v Kenyon, 769
 People v McGee, 1222
 People v McMohen, 434
 People v Moett, 719
 People v Olmstead, 479
 People v Perverelly, 117
 People v Robinson, 113, 475
 People v Sanchoz, 479
 People v Schboselpots, 615
 People v Sharp, 269
 People v Shea, 724
 People v Soto, 380
 People v Southern, 487
 People v Strag, 58

People v Superior, 53
 People v Tayler, 1222
 People v Thomas, 367
 People v Utica Insurance Co., 2
 People v Van Alstine, 1254
 People v Vandam, 721
 People v Van Horn, 109
 People v Vazile, 53
 People v Videts, 19
 People v White, 434, 734
 Percival v Nanson, 496, 512, 514, 515, 521
 Percy Suffer Club v Whyte, 275, 278
 Perham v Rynal, 319
 Perkins v Adams, 1333
 Perkins v Jeffery, 271
 Permannah v Ba Thaw, 836
 Permannand v Sat Prasad, 888
 Perry v Gibson, 1306, 1317, 1318
 Perriman v Stiggall, 33
 Perry v Phosphur Brosie, 1486
 Pershad v Ram Pertab, 23
 Persons v Hayward, 1080
 Persy v Smith, 1253, 1254
 Perth Prerage Case, 550
 Pertap v Mohendra, 958
 Pertapoda v Hari Das, 865
 Perton, Re, 285
 Perumal Chasior v Raghavachariar, 838
 Peston, Re, 235
 Pestonji v Framji, 989
 Pestonji v Queen, 1042
 Petch v Lyon, 308
 Peter v Mahomed, 500, 825
 Peterborough v Mordant, 789
 Petheing v Truner, 309
 Peto v Hague, 300, 301
 Peto v Westham, 20
 Petrio v Nuttal, 635
 Petroleum v Deen, 674
 Pettibone v A S, 150
 Pettison v Bankes, 2
 Phat v Vnnhtenberg, 823
 Phanindra v Hemangini, 989
 Phatal Singh v Emperor, 771
 Pheloo v Greesh, 991
 Phelps v Prew, 801, 1397
 Phenex Trusts In re, 1069, 1073
 Phelps v Prew, 1264
 Phillips v Allen, 1097
 Phillimore v Barry, 921
 Phillips v Beene, 1393
 Phillips v Cole, 604
 Phillips v Elmer, 1306
 Phillips v Elagot, 295
 Phillips v Eyre, 8
 Philipson v Chan, 818, 819
 Philipson v Chare, 786
 Phillips v Hopwood, 34
 Phillips v Im Thurn, 1265

- Peari v Dorbomoyi, 198
 Peari v Durlavi, 621
 Pearson v Beck, 453
 Pearson v Fletcher 1265
 Pearson v Lemaitre, 247
 Pearson v Pearson, 831
 Pearson v Shaw 751
 Pearson v Wrightman 1392
 Peary v Dicker 689
 Peary v Raim, 1494
 Peary v Secretary of State, 641
 Pearylal v Kedarnath, 631
 Pearylal v Surendra, 1190
 Peary Mohan v Donald 1312
 Peary Mohan v Jote Kumm 191
 Peary Mohan v Narendra 584
 Peck v Peck, 516
 Peddabba Reddi v Vernda Reddi, 1269
 Pedda Siva Reddi, In Re 737
 Peereth v Marriott, 621
 Pellat v Ferrars, 560
 Pembroke v Pamberston 1395
 Pembroke's Trial, Earl of, 256
 Peni Kuruppi v Rajeswar, 1139
 Pendrell v Pendrell, 1095, 1096 1101
 Pendleton v Rooth, 326
 Pentaya v Ketheran, 970
 Penu Mutual L J Co v Wiler, 342
 People v Ah Yute, 334
 People v Angsbury, 671
 People v Bua, 677
 People v Beckwith, 47
 People v Fair, 723
 People v Fanning 367
 People v Farrel, 71
 People v Fish 557
 People v Fox, 367
 People v Gilbert, 364
 People v Golswarthy 676
 People v Gray, 663
 People v Green 112
 People v Hendrickson, 114
 People v Herd 121
 People v Hurst 1481
 People v Jackson, 365
 People v Johnson, 391
 People v Keller, 114
 People v Kenyon 769
 People v McGee, 1222
 People v McMohen, 434
 People v Moett 719
 People v Olmstead, 479
 People v Perverelli 117
 People v Robinson 113 f3
 People v Sanchez 479
 People v Schboselpots, 615
 People v Sharp 269
 People v Shen, 724
 People v Soto, 380
 People v Southern, 487
 People v Strang, 58
 People v Superior, 53
 People v Tayler, 1222
 People v Thomas 367
 People v Utica Insurance Co 2
 People v Van Alstine 1254
 People v Vandam, 721
 People v Van Horn, 109
 People v Vazile, 53
 People v Videts, 49
 People v White 434 734
 Percival v Nanson, 496, 512, 514 515, 521
 Percy Suffer Club v Whyte, 275, 278
 Perham v Rynal 319
 Perkins v Adams, 1333
 Perkins v Jeffery 271
 Perrannah v Ba Thaw, 836
 Permand v Sat Prasad, 888
 Perry v Gibson 1306 1317, 1318
 Perriman v Stiggal 33
 Perry v Phosphur Broc 1486
 Pershad v Ram Pertah, 23
 Persons v Hayward, 1080
 Persy v Smith, 1253 1254
 Perth Prerage Case, 550
 Pertap v Mohendra, 958
 Pertapodai v Hari Das 865
 Pertona, Re 285
 Perumal Chasior v Raghavaohariar, 838
 Peston, Re 235
 Pestonji v Framji, 989
 Pestonji v Queen, 1042
 Petch v Lyon 303
 Peter v Mahomed, 500 825
 Peterborough v Mordant 789
 Petheing v Truner 309
 Peto v Hague 300, 301
 Peto v Westham, 20
 Petric v Nuttal, 635
 Petroleum v Deen, 674
 Pettibone v A S, 150
 Pettison v Banker, 2
 Phat v Vanhatsenberg, 823
 Phanindra v Hemangini 989
 Phatal Singh v Emperor, 771
 Pheloo v Greesh, 991
 Phelps v Prew, 804, 1387
 Phenex Trusts In re 1069 1072
 Phelps v Prew, 1264
 Phillips v Allen 1697
 Phillimore v Barry, 921
 Phillips v Beene, 1393
 Phillips v Cole, 504
 Phillips v Eaner, 1306
 Phillips v Elaget, 295
 Phillips v Eyre 8
 Philipson v Chan, 818 819
 Philipson v Chare, 786
 Phillips v Hopwood 34
 Phillips v Im Thurn, 1268

Queen v Jaishand, 114	Queen v Petta, 59
Queen v Ju Singh 409	Queen v Phoolchand, 723
Queen v Jemra, 393	Queen v Pitamber 781, 1396
Queen v Jhuice 362, 365	Queen v Poonsoolah, 59
Queen v Jameyuta 441 1293	Queen v Price, 30 31
Queen v Kali 781	Queen v Prince, 37
Queen v Kalla Chand, 1283	Queen v Prosonno, 566
Queen v Kallu 1273	Queen v Queen, 46
Queen v Kally Charan, 438	Queen v Rama 567
Queen v Kalu Patil, 777	Queen v Ram Charan 772
Queen v Kamali 413	Queen v Ramchandra, 1328
Queen v Kamane, 685	Queen v Ram Churan 418
Queen v Keshub 445 446 449	Queen v Ram Dutt 556
Queen v Khanda 452	Queen v Ranilal, 37
Queen v Khukree, 445 446, 449 450	Queen v Ramsday, 1499
Queen v Khyroollah, 1223, 1224	Queen v Ramsagar, 1285
Queen v Kisto, 386	Queen v Ram Saran, 1287 1288
Queen v Konjo, 452	Queen v Ramsday, 1190
Queen v Kuluon Sheikh 723	Queen v Ranjeet 362
Queen v Lakh, 473 563	Queen v Sadder, Company, 650
Queen v Lakhun, 559 565	Queen v Sadhu Mundal, 439 440 452 453 1284
Queen v Luchma 1285	Queen v Sagma 435
Queen v Luchoo 392 413, 432	Queen v Sewa, 1219
Queen v Luchhy 565	Queen v Shahab 410
Queen v Lal Sahai 1217	Queen v Shama Charan, 1306
Queen v Macdonald, 126 136	Queen v Sheikh Boodhoo 361
Queen v Madhab 59 356	Queen v Sheikh Bunno 442
Queen v Mahesh, 417	Queen v Sheo Bhogta, 1216, 1217, 1199
Queen v Mahima 723	Queen v Shiva 877
Queen v Malapa, 452	Queen v Sonoolah, 361
Queen v Manaji 31	Queen v Srab 59 113
Queen v Mangal, 30	Queen v Subarayan, 705
Queen v Manikan 1229	Queen v Suroop, 1306
Queen v Manmohan 410	Queen v Taraperhad, 1228
Queen v Manning 161	Queen v Thomson 374
Queen v Mani 1217 1199	Queen v Tulsi 1283
Queen v Mayor of Lewkesbury, 1136	Queen v Ugral, 476
Queen v Mewar 559	Queen v Uzer, 390
Queen v Mohesh, 445 448, 449, 453	Queen v Vijram, 163
Queen v Monmohan 107	Queen v Vram 877
Queen v Mool ta Singh, 1228	Queen v Waringham, 381
Queen v Mowjan 538	Queen Empress v Abdulla, 450
Queen v Mukta Singh 1229	Queen Empress v Abdulla 3 34, 11, 71, 129 118 471, 769
Queen v Mussamat 391	Queen Empress v Magappan, 452
Queen v Nabdwip, 745, 749	Queen Empress v Alagu 1490
Queen v Nandi, 1229	Queen Empress v Ali Baksh 409
Queen v Naga, 445 449 452 451, 453,	Queen Empress v Amba Prasad, 257
Queen v Nagla 402	Queen Empress v Angavalayan 369
Queen v Nana 413	Queen Empress v Appa 366
Queen v Naga 916	Queen Empress v Babar Ali 113
Queen v Narain, 450	Queen Empress v Babu Lal, 355, 395 400 416, 418 419 420 421
Queen v Narain Pal 450	Queen Empress v Baldeo 1268
Queen v Nasiruddin, 876	Queen Empress v Bai Mahakar 1042 1057
Queen v Nawabji, 1283	Queen Empress v Bulgangadhar 255 1019
Queen v Nilmadhab 410	Queen Empress v Bullappa 37
Queen v Nityo Gopal, 364	Queen Empress v Bala 39,
Queen v Nobodeep 437
Queen v Nohokristo, 1329
Queen v Nunho 1285
Queen v Pagaree, 115 418, 420, 421
Queen v Perumal 1220

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

- Queen Empress v Balya Daidin 371
 Queen Empress v Bilya Daidin 378
 Queen Empress v Bapu Narain 919
 Queen Empress v Bartu, 1272
 Queen Empress v Bastanta 374 370
 Queen Empress v Biswant 378 380
 393
 Queen Empress v Braynt 149
 Queen Empress v Bepin 1283
 Queen Empress v Bhagi 394
 Queen Empress v Bhagwan Din 108
 Queen Empress v Bhagya 1252 1285
 Queen Empress v Bhahatgar 567
 Queen Empress v Bhairab 337 372
 Queen Empress v Bhika 371
 Queen Empress v Bhikaji 1268
 Queen Empress v Bindu, 393
 Queen Empress v Bipin 398
 Queen Empress v Berl 570, 1111
 Queen Empress v Chagan Dayaram,
 1271 1282 1285
 Queen Empress v Chakani 1055
 Queen Empress v Chand, 443
 Queen Empress v Chintaman 386
 Queen Empress v Commer Sahib 105
 414, 416 421
 Queen Empress v Dabee Peshad 357
 Queen Empress v Dada Nana 364 380
 Queen Empress v Dila Jiva, 1221
 Queen Empress v Dan Sahai, 1332
 Queen Empress v Danu, 395
 Queen Empress v Deodar Singh 1272
 Queen Empress v Dhandi 1286
 Queen Empress v Donaghoe 1232
 Queen Empress v Dinger 1393
 Queen Empress v Disu Jedra 402
 Queen Empress v Dnyanu 149
 Queen Empress v Dyma Irappa, 1241
 Queen Empress v Elgthi, 364
 Queen Empress v Fakirappa 16 78
 Queen Empress v Fakir Mahomed 681
 Queen Empress v Fakir Sheikh, 148
 Queen Empress v Fateh Ali 359
 Queen Empress v Ganu Sanba 1268
 Queen Empress v Ganu Singh 1499
 Queen Empress v Ghurya, 380 394
 Queen Empress v Ghulet, 1293
 Queen Empress v Girish Chunder 382
 Queen Empress v Gobardhan, 113
 1275
 Queen Empress v Green Chandri 170
 Queen Empress v Gulshan 1248
 Queen Empress v Haridhan, 1012
 Queen Empress v Hari 14
 Queen Empress v Hari Lakshman,
 1394 1396
 Queen Empress v Hiralal 445
 Queen Empress v Hughes, 722
 Queen Empress v Indrajit 2
 Queen Empress v Ishri 1396
 Queen Empress v Jacob 366
- Queen Empress v Judab 395 432
 Queen Empress v Jagat Chandra 412
 Queen Empress v Jogindra Chandra
 Bose 275
 Queen Empress v Jugrup, 139
 Queen Empress v Jai Singh, 108 111
 Queen Empress v Jave Charan, 357,
 410 1270, 1271
 Queen Empress v Janu, 366
 Queen Empress v Jhavarali 172
 Queen Empress v Jagrup, 116
 Queen Empress v Kader Nath 760
 Queen Empress v Kalidin 415
 Queen Empress v Kali Prossanno 1019
 Queen Empress v kallua, 418
 Queen Empress v Kamalia, 117
 Queen Empress v Kariai, 369
 Queen Empress v Kartic, 35 251
 Queen Empress v Kari, 279
 Queen Empress v Khandia, 100
 Queen Empress v Knappa 1286, 1288
 Queen Empress v Kristna Bhat, 1286
 Queen Empress v Kya Bin 19
 Queen Empress v Lal-shum 413
 Queen Empress v Lakshmya 108, 410
 411
 Queen Empress v Lal Shai 1216 1490
 Queen Empress v Lal Singh 576
 Queen Empress v Lankiro, 768
 Queen Empress v Mangalil 1271 1273
 Queen Empress v Mahabir 394
 Queen Empress v Mukulal, 391
 Queen Empress v Mangaji 31
 Queen Empress v Mangal, 1282
 Queen Empress v Maanu, 1382
 Queen Empress v Moru, 1190
 Queen Empress v Mathews, 406 408
 Queen Empress v Meher Ali, 356, 408
 675
 Queen Empress v Mogun Lal 1275
 Queen Empress v Mollappa, 445
 Queen Empress v Mona Puna 1222
 Queen Empress v Moss 1268, 1269
 Queen Empress v Munda 37
 Queen Empress v Muraji 1495
 Queen Empress v Naga 441 450
 Queen Empress v Nana Raju 456
 Queen Empress v Nand Ram 1403
 Queen Empress v Narpal 22
 Queen Empress v Nanyana, 345, 390,
 409 1012
 Queen Empress v Nga Kyaw, 19
 Queen Empress v Nga Po 563
 Queen Empress v Nga Shwe, 369
 Queen Empress v Nga Shwe, 19
 Queen Empress v Nga Ta, 781
 Queen Empress v Ngr That, 405
 Queen Empress v Ngr Tun 1285
 Queen Empress v Nga You 255, 723
 Queen Empress v Nana, 356 393, 410
 414 121, 124

Queen Empress : Nilmadhab, 356
 Queen Empress : Nirmal, 151
 Queen Empress : Nur Mahomed, 439,
 449, 720
 Queen Empress : Pandhahmath, 357
 Queen Empress : Pattan, 443
 Queen Empress : Pirbhui 113 417
 Queen Empress : Popp Singh 877
 Queen Empress : Prag Dutt, 1042
 Queen Empress : Raghu 371
 Queen Empress : Ram, 393
 Queen Empress : Raman 394
 Queen Empress : Ram Chander, 1402
 Queen Empress : Ram Chandra, 570, 1306
 Queen Empress : Ram Charan 434
 Queen Empress : Raindu 1331
 Queen Empress : Ranjan Ali, 395
 Queen Empress : Ramsaran 452 473
 Queen Empress : Ramsarup 559
 Queen Empress : Ram Sewab, 1219
 Queen Empress : Ramin 37
 Queen Empress : Rama Dhan, 1241
 Queen Empress : Rang, 391
 Queen Empress : Ridung, 1116
 Queen Empress : Ruppia 394
 Queen Empress : Sadhu 155
 Queen Empress : Sahib Singh, 571
 Queen Empress : Salig Ram, 31
 Queen Empress : Sami Papi, 403, 411
 Queen Empress : Saniappa, 877, 1263
 Queen Empress : Sayad Sirtuddin
 582, 1377
 Queen Empress : Shara, 1499
 Queen Empress : Sheida 415
 Queen Empress : Sheikh Mustafa, 113
 Queen Empress : Sheodin, 19
 Queen Empress : Sheoratan, 1219
 Queen Empress : Shettya, 483
 Queen Empress : Shidlingappa, 1283,
 1286
 Queen Empress : Sitram, 1363, 1381
 Queen Empress : Sitharam, 23
 Queen Empress : Soma Dalu 1351
 Queen Empress : Sricharn, 12
 Queen Empress : Subbaray 709
 Queen Empress : Sukhra 1055
 Queen Empress : Sundar Singh, 865, 877
 Queen Empress : Sunder 411
 Queen Empress : Surendra 479
 Queen Empress : Swami, 83
 Queen Empress : Tarinee, 500
 Queen Empress : Tanya Din 409
 Queen Empress : Ummari Sinha, 31
 Queen Empress : Tipru, 1243
 Queen Empress : Tribhovan 356 402
 407
 Queen Empress : Tiru Narasimha 31
 Queen Empress : Tulja 30 31
 Queen Empress : Tulay 856 859

Queen Empress : Tulsha 1135
 Queen Empress : Tungga 440
 Queen Empress : Un, 456
 Queen Empress : Uzee, 137
 Queen Empress : Vyigra 22
 Queen Empress : Vyiram, 78
 Queen Empress : Vyu 781
 Queen Empress : Viram 507 519
 Queen Empress : Viraperumal 1219,
 1499
 Queen Empress : Yakub 1372
 Queen Empress : Zahu, 115
 Quick : Quick 257
 Quick : Staines 460
 Quinly : Temple 715
 Quite : Jorse 810
 Quinn : Latham, 152, 153

R

R : —, 1107, 1110
 R : Abbot 17
 R : Abdulla 22
 R : Abdul Wahid 253
 R : Abraham, 89
 R : Abrahams, 129
 R : Adams, 135, 1110
 R : Adde, 79
 R : Aickles, 587
 R : Alexander, 131
 R : Alison, 926
 R : Aderton, 1095, 1096
 R : Adison, 710
 R : Amanulla, 561
 R : Amrita, 449
 R : Anderson 1227
 R : Antrim, 1391
 R : Arinsling 265
 R : Araold 392, 435
 R : Arundel, 127
 R : Ashgur 391
 R : Ashton 475
 R : Asbutosh, 36, 55
 R : Aspinall, 1365
 R : Atin, 1394
 R : Atwood, 1276
 R : Audley, 1056
 R : Autrobus, 525, 701
 R : Avery 1254 1257
 R : Babu Lal, 286, 359, 405, 411, 412
 413
 R : Bauley, 268
 R : Baines, 15
 R : Barker 1365
 R : Baldry, 362, 390, 392
 R : Ball 142 251, 1352
 R : Bulls, 269
 R : Balt, 1355
 R : Banton 16
 R : Banbury 4
 R : Barbot 117
 R : Baker, 474, 476, 477, 727

- R v Birban, 1
 R z Barlet, 125 136
 R z Barron, 906
 R z Birkerville, 158 166, 1276, 1289
 R z Bate 390 431
 R v Bayaji Kom, 411
 R z Bevisdale 119
 R v Beard 210 1135
 R z Bedfordshire, 522 523, 524, 527, 552
 R v Beddingfield, 80 86, 90, 93 97, 99
 R v Beechamam, 725
 R z Beesly 1317
 R z Beeston 573
 R z Behary 57
 R z Bell 431
 R v Berenger 1323
 R v Berger 526
 R z Birmingham, 436
 R z Birrman, 196
 R z Berryman, 397
 R v Bert 152 397
 R z Berterand, 16
 R v Bexly
 R z Bhakere 1292
 R z Bhama, 192
 R v Bholu 229
 R z Bird 560
 R z Birket, 1279
 R z Birkett and Brady, 12, 78, 1279
 R z Birmingham 5144
 R z Blae 153
 R v Bishop of Oxford 4
 R z Bispnam 1360
 R z Bisronjan Mookerjee 477
 R v Blackburn 391
 R z Blasherville 1229
 R v Blake 158 161, 439
 R z Blandey 248
 R v Blatherwick 1279 1281
 R z Bleasdale 83
 R z Bleasdale, 229
 R v Bliss, 84 129 508 524, 525
 R v Bloomesbery 1116
 R z Bond 108 228 260 261 262, 264, 270
 R z Bond 1482 1484, 1486
 R v Bottomly, 1361
 R z Boulton 152
 R z Boyes, 162
 R z Boyes 1266, 1276
 R z Bozlo & Merchant 270
 R z Brailsford, 152
 R z Brampton, 671
 R z Brandreth 155 158 161
 R z Braier, 1219, 1492
 R z Brannett 270
 R z Brazier, 1217
 R z Brinnan 819
 R z Brewer 1208
 R z Bridesaye, 80
 R z Brightside Bricklaw 196 635
 R v Briggs, 110
 R v Birmingham, 70, 508, 512
 R z Brinnan 153
 R z Brojo, 71
 R z Brook 1306
 R z Broome 142
 R z Brown, 718 751, 1360
 R v Boodhorst 718
 R v Bryan 431
 R z Buckley, 188
 R z Burdett 19 61, 63, 1079, 1061, 1115
 R z Burdock, 115
 R v Bule 563, 1352
 R z Bunnell 693
 R z Burditt, 1306
 R z Burridge 752
 R z Burke 1318
 R z Burby 431
 R z Butcher 411 561
 R z Butler, 364
 R v Butery 628
 R z Bysant Nath 1271
 R z Cammellasi, 132
 R z Canning, 278
 R z Car 1276
 R v Carey, 1277
 R z Carter, 251
 R z Cisement, 235
 R z Cartleton, 806, 817
 R z Castro 123 141, 111 115 367
 R z Cator 677
 R z Catalan 161
 R z Champness, 2
 R z Chander Kumar, 73
 R z Chandra Kant, 1245
 R z Chapman 591, 1352
 R v Chandle, 932
 R v Cheverton, 432
 R z Christie, 134, 135 477
 R v City of London 1
 R z Clapman 589
 R v Clark 131
 R z Clarke, 727, 1360 1361
 R z Cleverton 392, 131
 R z Clewes 115, 142 361, 388 401
 R z Cluse, 1365
 R v Cobbet 737
 R v Cobden, 80, 83
 R v Cobman, 681
 R v Cockburn, 561
 R z Cockcroft 1365
 R z Cockeroff, 727
 R v Cohen 565, 1279, 1261
 R v Cole, 357, 724
 R v Coly 392
 R z Collier 382 431

- R v Colpene, 337
 R v Connell 288
 R v Connolly 1129
 R v Cook, 20
 R v Cooke 1135
 R v Cooper 391, 432, 1110
 R v Cope, 133, 492
 R v Corder, 117
 R v Cotten, 527
 R v Cotton 265
 R v Court, 373, 390
 R v Cowhe, 561
 R v Cox, 135, 1243
 R v Cox and Rulton, 1257
 R v Cox and Rulton 1279
 R v Crippen 125, 142
 R v Crouch, 681, 697
 R v Croydon 333 334 392
 R v Crowe 337
 R v Crohurst, 89 128 1100
 R v Crutenden 1110
 R v Cuffery, 159
 R v Culpepper 805
 R v Curtes, 476
 R v Curvey, 1137
 R v Dada 362
 R v Dale 270
 R v Daspard, 1270
 R v Davies 240
 R v Davis 250
 R v Davison 733
 R v Dawber 1276
 R v Day, 572
 R v Daye, 1385 1387
 R v Deary, 159
 R v Dehendra, 135
 R v Dehendra Prosad 228
 R v DeBerenger, 590, 607
 R v Denio 810
 R v Dent, 673
 R v Derrington 171, 434
 R v Depard, 1276 1278
 R v Dewherst, 1110
 R v Dewhurst 795
 R v Dexter 489
 R v Dhurm Datt 113
 R v Dilmore 573
 R v Dina Shaukh 1274
 R v Dipnarun, 450
 R v Dixon 1135, 1265
 R v Dogherty, 390
 R v Doherty 239
 R v Donellan 128
 R v Donnall, 120 123, 125
 R v Dergal, 397
 R v Dorgett, 120
 R v Dorset 119
 R v Douglas, 1490
 R v Dowling, 1270
 R v Downer 303 309, 1277
 R v Drage 251
 R v Dron, 392
 R v Dummand 474 179
 R v Duches of King ton, 628 1216
 R v Duffield 153 158
 R v Duffy, 1360
 R v Duguid 159
 R v Dunn 250 382
 R v Dunna, 1276
 R v Durham, 1276
 R v Dwyer 145
 R v Dwyer, 161
 R v Dyer, 1221
 R v Dyke, 1279
 R v Elahee Buksh 1274
 R v East Faird 810
 R v Edge, 782 811
 R v Edmonds, 288, 615, 616
 R v Edmondsons, 20
 R v Edmundson, 20
 R v Edwards 98, 1376
 R v Egerton, 140 270
 R v Ehab Bux 22
 R v Ehes 436
 R v Elizabeth, 435
 R v Elizaughner, 384
 R v Ellis, 80 83, 140 180 436 438
 R v Elworthy, 801, 820
 R v Enoch, 390
 R v Eriswell, 531, 532, 558, 563 566
 778 1306
 R v Erith, 539
 R v Essex, 20
 R v Ethas, 2
 R v Evans, 89
 R v Exall, 89 1107
 R v Exeter, 508 512
 R v Exeter 521
 R v Eyre, 131
 R v Fagnet, 487
 R v Fairie, 105
 R v Fakirepa 22
 R v Fakirappa 227
 R v Farler, 1277
 R v Farnas, 770
 R v Farr, 819
 R v Farrel 563
 R v Farrington, 894 897
 R v Farrington, 1135
 R v Fata Adazi, 481
 R v Feagulum, 1276
 R v Ferguson 145
 R v Feunel, 386
 R v Feunele, 390
 R v Firth 83, 435
 R v Flanagan, 135
 R v Flanagan, 265
 R v Fletcher, 439
 R v Fantum Moreau 196
 R v Forbes 251, 572
 R v Ford, 1376
 R v Forsay, 811

- R t Foryth, 609, 879
 R t Powks, 79
 R t Foxtaune Morean 637
 R t Forester, 175, 176
 R t Forste, 271
 R t Forter, 133, 271
 R t Frewin, 383
 R t Francis, 233 795
 R t Franklin 790 607 608
 R t Frost, 179
 R t Fur v, 752
 R t Pursey 110 112 795
 R t Galbruth, 210
 R v Gambia 393
 R t Ganner 265
 R t Garbet, 1266
 R t Garbetti, 112
 R t Gardner 397 435, 609 971, 1222
 R t Gordon 162
 R t Garner 383 384, 386, 388 390
 R t Gay 483
 R v Gazard 560
 R t Geo Gordon 155, 176
 R t Gearing 119, 120 228 265
 R t Gellis 390, 391
 R t George Gordon (Lord) 1266
 R t Gharya, 393
 R t Gholam Ismail 31
 R t Gibbons, 382, 383 1246
 R t Gibson, 91 99 623, 1398
 R v Gibney, 389
 R t Gilham 389, 432, 438 1246
 R v Gellos, 385
 R t Geroel 269
 R t Gloster 89 210 276 313, 476
 R t Gobordhan, 12
 R t Gocool 57
 R v Goldard 85, 91
 R t Goodwin 251
 R t Gopal Das 22
 R v Gordon 810 873 921
 R t Gordon Kinlock 1379
 R v Gould 46
 R v Governor 673
 R t Govinda 118
 R t Grant 116
 R v Gray 268
 R v Grayson 435
 R v Green 123 271 389 391 123 608
 R v Greene 790
 R v Greenwich 709 330
 R v Griffin 56 1246
 R v Grinbert, 1168
 R v Guller 747
 R v Gunnell 88
 R v Gurney 13
 R v Gutierrez, 18 21
 R v Hagan 121 1267
 R v Hall 202 12 1217
 R v Hall 1217
 R v Hankins 1265
 R v Hamanta 292, 516
 R v Hanson 1061
 R v Hardwick, 153 309 383
 R v Hardwicke, 295, 315
 R v Hardy 92 157, 158, 159
 R v Harney, 563
 R v Harringworth, 849
 R t Harris, 366, 563, 1062, 1293
 R v Harrison, 121 561
 R v Harvey, 681 856, 860 1132 1391
 R v Harwood 21
 R v Harris, 591
 R v Hastings, 1276
 R t Haworth 789, 820, 822
 R v Hay, 1078
 R v Haywood, 1257
 R t Hayword, 471, 475
 R t Heathmore 389
 R t Heason 135
 R v Hearn, 389 390
 R v Hearn, 365
 R v Hemp 1360
 R t Heramus 118
 R v Heseltine 106
 R v Hesson, 265 563
 R t Hewitt 432
 R v Hewit, 431
 R v Hewlett, 1110
 R v Hibert, 152
 R t Hickley, 185
 R v Hicks 271
 R t Higgins 361, 365
 R t Hill, 117, 1185, 1220 1221
 R v Hund 473 475 476, 477
 R t Hinley 250 795
 R t Hurst 397 437
 R t Husted 397, 437
 R t Hutchell, 571
 R t Hodgkin, 1318
 R t Hodgkins 725, 727
 R t Hodnett, 1
 R t Hogg 566
 R v Hoke, 572
 R t Holborn Union Guardians 75
 R t Holmes 373 386 727, 1218,
 R v Holmes and James, 1367
 R t Holt 228 267 268, 608 609,
 971 879
 R t Holy Trinity 739
 R t Hook 1293
 R t Hopkins 243
 R t Hornbrook 386 392, 431, 437
 R v Horne Tooke, 159 160
 R t Horner 391 411
 R v Houghton 634
 R t Howdon 1306
 R v Howell 175
 R v Howe 388 431
 R t Hugan 563 671
 R t Hughes 1129

- R v Hunt 83, 158, 256, 616, 795
 R v Hunter, 801 1264
 R t Hurringworth, 827
 R t Hu sey, 1399
 R t Hutchings, 1141
 R t Hutchinson, 173 475 477
 R v Hyde, 571
 R t Inhabitants of Brampton 710
 R v Inhabitants of Holy Trinity, 907
 R t Inhabitants of Mansfield 1093, 1099
 R t Ishan 1309
 R t Isle of Ely, 752
 R t Ismail 1381
 R t Jacobs, 158, 130
 R t Jadab, 1378
 R t James, 1056
 R t Jameson, 1056, 1391
 R t Jarrat 810
 R t Jarvis, 117, 251 390
 R t Jellyman, 1273
 R t Jenkins, 467, 475
 R v Johnson, 276
 R t Lee, 131,
 R t John, 135, 476 181
 R v Jolliffe, 560
 R v Jones, 201, 364, 365, 366, 391, 748
 921, 1257, 1276
 R t Kaliappa, 473
 R v Kallos 142
 R v Kally Churn 73
 R t Kamalia 102
 R t Kangal Mali 360
 R t Ker, 1101
 R v Kaye, 88
 R v Keating, 142
 R v Kelsey, 1270
 R t Kelvie, 393
 R v Kenilworth, 810
 R t Kerr 397, 436
 R t Ker-haw 397
 R v Kiddle, 131
 R v King 230
 R v Kinghorn, 1485
 R v Kingston, 383, 392
 R t Kiston, 820
 R v Kitson 817
 R v Klosowski, 263
 R t Knight 432, 436, 1129
 R v Labouchere 127
 R v Latchland, 1292
 R v Latchford, 332
 R t Laughton 925 1382
 R t Laungmerd, 1107
 R t Laughel, 390
 R v Lavin, 437
 R v Law 116
 R t Leatham 804
 R v Ledbitter, 573
 R v Lee, 573
 R t Lee Kun, 52
 R t Leibling 397
 R t Leigh, 152, 631
 R t Levenson, 1247
 R v Lian frettel, 804
 R t Lillyman 130 131 132 1391, 1396
 R v Llafethly 806 1385
 R v Lloyd, 364, 389
 R t Lloyd 229, 270, 474
 R t Lock hurst 389
 R t Long, 437, 716
 R t Long, 471, 590
 R v Long, 800
 R t Longton, 1370, 1380
 R t Loom 20
 R t Lovergrove 271
 R t Local Govt. Road, 13
 R t Luchoo, 402
 R t Luckhurst 383 384
 R t Luff 1095
 R t Fuffe, 1101
 R v Lundy 97
 R t Mabi, 5
 R t Medonald, 286 102
 R v Madhub, 46, 286
 R v Magill, 438
 R t Maidstone, 1096
 R v Mai Kulal, 393
 R v Malings, 1221
 R v Malony 126, 135, 305, 332
 R v Man 397
 R v Mainwaring 1115
 R v Mann, 1350
 R t Mansfield 373 801, 707 1097, 1102
 R t Manwaring 710
 R v Marks, 1289
 R v Marshall, 503
 R t Martin, 727 1367
 R v Mason 246
 R t Mathew 397
 R t Mawbury, 152
 R t Medonnell 270
 R t Mc Kenna, 154, 158
 R v Mend, 240 473 475, 476, 177
 R t Merkin 239
 R t Methney 145
 R v Meysen, 131
 R v Megson, 131
 R t Merry, 131 132
 R t M J Vyapoor Moodalan, 225
 R t Millard, 251
 R v Miller, 437
 R v Millon, 383
 R t Millhouse, 1221
 R t Mills, 706
 R v Milton, 523 552
 R v Minn 413
 R v Mitchell, 480 487 1307
 R t M'Nathan, 671
 R t Moze 229
 R t Mohanlal, 384, 388, 389

- R : Mohana Chander, 1274
 R : Mollony, 125
 R : Monapuno 71, 74
 R : Monkhouse 239
 R : Mooney 184
 R : Moore 119, 382, 384, 386, 392
 R : Moree 1277
 R : Morgan, 176, 360, 679, 1492
 R : Morton 392, 310
 R : Morrison, 1317
 R : Mowbury, 240
 R : Mullins 1270, 1276
 R : Munslow 1135
 R : Murphy, 153, 154, 161, 1706, 1352, 1761
 R : Murray 109
 R : Murton, 477
 R : Muthen 558
 R : Nabadwip 131
 R : Naguib 673, 674
 R : Nana 360, 416, 417, 421
 R : Nash, 112, 1141
 R : Natras 269
 R : Navarji 392
 R : Nawab Jan, 1274
 R : Neill 265
 R : Neville 10
 R : Newstead 954
 R : Nicholas 89, 133, 184
 R : Nichol- 1360
 R : Nidheeram 1274
 R : Norke 362, 56
 R : Norcott 131
 R : Norris 1108
 R : Northcott 96
 R : Nudley 549
 R : Nur Mahomed 22
 R : O'Brien, 276, 1246
 R : O'Connell 178, 161, 615, 616, 792, 879, 1210
 R : O'Connor 74
 R : O'Levy 240
 R : O'Levy, 71
 R : O'Donnell 101, 74
 R : O'Neil 121, 128
 R : Oldham 14
 R : Orton 102
 R : Osborne 91, 101, 111, 12
 R : O'Ryan 171
 R : O'Shea 162
 R : Paine 24
 R : Palm 270
 R : Palmer 24
 R : Parnett 1272
 R : Parthasarathy 102
 R : Parthasarathy 71
 R : Parrell 1274
 R : Patel 17
 R : Patil 17
 R : Patch, 122
 R : Patridge 391, 1110, 1111
 R : Pratt 392
 R : Pearce 140
 R : Peel, 475
 R : Perkins 479, 484, 1218, 1492
 R : Perrin, 160
 R : Perry 270
 R : Pethererton, 588
 R : Peary Lal 22
 R : Phillips 251
 R : Philpotts 1379, 1382
 R : Pictou 674
 R : Pike, 469, 474, 479, 484
 R : Pe'ly 435
 R : Pirbhu, 442
 R : Pitambar 73, 402
 R : Pitambar, 408
 R : Pyari, 558
 R : Plummer, 276
 R : Pook 256
 R : Poomoy 140
 R : Poor Law Comm., 97
 R : Pribhudas 73, 80, 167
 R : Pringle 751
 R : Pround 269
 R : Prutney 563
 R : Quin 102, 1376
 R : Radford 381, 389
 R : Rama 416, 417, 418
 R : Rama Birappa, 22
 R : Raman, 393
 R : Ramchandra Goyind 73
 R : Ram Dutt 535
 R : Ramgopal 73
 R : Rani Reddy, 22
 R : Ram Lal 36
 R : Ram Sahai 239
 R : Ramsden 1376
 R : Rawden, 967
 R : Rawton, 723, 725
 R : Readen 269
 R : Rearden 80, 119
 R : Reason, 386, 435, 487
 R : Reason and Transfer 193
 R : Reed 725
 R : Rees 136
 R : Ryan 269
 R : Remnant 1391
 R : Rhodes 228, 267, 1222
 R : Reley, 1365
 R : Richards 388, 392, 132
 R : Richardson, 117, 119, 116, 294, 1211
 R : Rig 561
 R : Rivers 136
 R : Roberts 81, 267
 R : Robins 136
 R : Robinson, 222
 R : Roeha Mohatta 773
 R : Roden 285

- I r Upper boddington, 1349, 1264
 R r Uttam Chand, 73
 R r Vahali Jetti, 411
 R r Vajram 251 269
 R r Vaters First 591
 I r Verel t, 573 921
 I r Vincent 172 256 756
 I r Viran 875
 R r Voisin, 397
 R r Voke 120 252 266
 R r Wannwright, 84 129 112, 256
 R r Wakeley 392
 R r Walford 267
 R r Walker 131, 255
 R r Walking 1221
 R r Wallace 1132
 R r Warburton, 135
 R r Warwickshall 379 111
 R r Worner 388
 R r Warren 1222
 R r Warringham 390, 390 392
 R r Wat on 156, 158 786 787 1346
 1960, 1375 1876
 I r Watt 123
 R r Weaver 591 85,
 R r Webb 407 1279
 R r Weeks 119
 I r Wellbourn 457
 I r Wellings 56,
 R r Wells 1277
 I r Welman 85
 I r Welsh 135
 R r Welton 56,
 R r Wherthead 129,
 R r Wherly 436,
 R r Whitey 251
 R r White 57
 R r Whitehead 164 161 716
 R r Whitehouse 152
 R r Whitmarsh 457
 R r Whitson, 873
 R r Whyky 119
 R r Wilson 681
 R r Wilcock 1
 R r Wild 389 436
 R r Wilkes 1276 1277 1279
 P r Williams 716
 R r Williams 1012 1221 157, 1376
 170
 R r Wilson 89 13, 436 563, 905 925
 I r Winkworth 250
 I r Win low 25
 I r Win or 53
 I r With r 755 1241 1217
 R r Wondrich Kwan Jut
 I r Wood 755, 1315
 I r Woodcock 171 17 457
 I r Woodal 112
 I r Woodal 657
 I r Wood 111
 I r Wood 4 46 1.
- R r Wingle 930
 R r Wright, 671
 R r Wyatt, 268
 R r Yewin 1348
 Ributti Doosi r Shri Chander 145
 R Annar Chalar r S R Balakrishna, 5
 Rad Bihadr v Nawalakatti 1178
 Radford r Melutosh 921
 Radha r Chuni 836
 Radha r Nripendra, 835
 Radha r Ram 954
 Radha r Rani, 990
 Radha r Sarbeswar 339, 321
 Radha Charan r Chuan Monnee, 293
 Radha Chowdhurani r Giridharee, 603
 Radha Churn v Annad Sein, 603
 Radha Churn v Zumuroodis, 203
 Radha Kaata r Abhoy Charan 348
 Radcliff v United Ins Co 590, 608
 Radha r English, 1030
 Radha r Giridhari, 128
 Radha r Kalprata, 242
 Radha r Lakshmi 23
 Radha v Rakhil, 322
 Radha v Sarbeswar, 169, 183
 Radha Kanti r Ramnarain, 1181
 Radha Kessen r Lakshmi 23
 Radha Kishan r Marwari, 810
 Radha Kishan r Bhonpal 1163
 Radha Kishan r Gangabai 626 627
 Radha Kishan r Hiralal 1036
 Radha Kishan r Jagabhy 1028
 Radha Kishan v Kedar Nath 560
 Radha Kishan v Mool Chand 1192
 Radha Krishan r Matiyar Rahman
 1038
 Radha Krishna r Subeswar Nig 191,
 218, 519
 Radha Krishna v Shureefunissa 1161
 Radha Kishore r Untoonjoy 1046
 Radha Gobind r Rakhil 322
 Radhajeen v Taramonee 1356
 Radhamadhub v Radhaballub, 1128
 Radha Lal r Argee, 1006
 Radha Mohan r Nripendra Nath
 Nandy 840
 Radha Mohan r Nripendra Nath, 748
 Radha Nath r Emperor, 812 864
 Radha Nath r Jadhath 218 338
 Radha Prosad r Rammani 999
 Radha Raman v Bhahani 916 977
 Radharaman r Bhawani, 939
 Radha Singh r Kuarp Dicht, 117
 Radhary Lal r Mahesh Prosad 1162
 Radhu r Emperor, 112
 Radhabai r Aburaz 1369
 Rafat Sheikh r Sachindran 1011
 Ragghar r Emperor, 380
 Raghava Hari r Rangachar 799
 Raghavendra r Venkata, 1067
 Raghoji r Lakshman 992

- Raghoya v Palhofa 1082
 Raghu v Ram Chunder, 888
 Raghubans v Kokil 37
 Raghu Bhushan v Vidya Varidhi, 471
 Raghubhushan v Vidya Varidhi 573
 Raghur v Emperor 452
 Raghur v Emperor 449
 Raghur v Maima 33
 Raghur v Sanwal 834 900
 Raghur v Sheo Charan, 755
 Raghur Dyal v Bhikhy Lal 348
 Raghur Singh v Kedar Nath 1184
 Raghu Nandan v Budhu Mal 1040
 Raghunandan v Bibhuti Bhushan, 599
 Raghunandan v Brinde hwar 169 343
 Raghunath v Emperor 259 263, 446
 Raghunath v Ganapati, 1034
 Raghunath v Hardyal, 1120
 Raghunath v Khuman, 598
 Raghunath v Hotilal 63 873 1119
 Raghunath v Sheodal, 1158
 Raghunath v Sir Rameswar 603
 Raghunathji v Varjivan Das 1034
 Raghunathji v Vajirandas 1172
 Raghun v Empress, 670 1378
 Raghupati v Emperor, 710
 Raghupati Chatterjee v Nri-gha Hari Das 651
 Rahim v Chaunnar 1043
 Rahim v Eishi Baksh, 940 946
 Rahim v Q E 869
 Rahamat v Babu Zulra 626
 Rahimannessa v Madhab, 1202
 Rahmat Bai v Hiribai 699
 Rahmatullah v Secretary of State 606
 Rahim Baksh v Emperor 726
 Rahim bhoy v Charter, 1046
 Rahim Bibi v Chiragh Din 1103
 Rahim Bux v Shajad, 1002
 Rahmit v Emperor 404 406
 Rahimtolla v Murray, 764
 Rahimuddin v Umesh 169 172
 Rahimuddin v Bhirbagana Debya 885
 Rahimtullah Sahib v Mahomed 1043
 Rai Bhaiga v Deohadur 593
 Rai Charan v Kamud, 622
 Rai Gangra Pershad, v Ishri Persad 838
 Rai Jaung Bahadur v Rai Gudar 202
 Rai Deo Mani v Ravi Sanhar 337
 Rai Kiran Chandra v Srinath 1128
 Rai Kishori v Kumudini 55
 Rames v Rames, 527
 Rames Admir v Rames Co 311
 Rai Radha Kishore v Jagshatri, 834
 Rai Singh v Vanistort, 924
 Rai Sri Kishan v Rai Hari Kishan 577
 Raj v Ramjoy, 187
 Rajab v Hardyal 654
 Raja Durga Piasul v Rajendra Narayan 939
 Raja Gopala v Ramanuja 1388
 Raja Gopala v Subhanal 581
 Raja Goundan v Rajah Goundan 292
 Raja Gouri Chandri v Raja Mukund 992
 Rajsh Lalanand v Mt Lakhapitee, 519 520
 Rajah Leelanand v Rajah Mohendia, 1039
 Rajah Neelanand v Nasub, 789
 Rajah Nilmoney v Ramrungsraha, 287
 Rajah of Bobbili v Bhovayamma, 1182
 Rajah of Coog's Case, 1231
 Rajah of Deo v Abdulla 1181
 Rajanibai v Shadunga 1180
 Rajambal v Shaanmug 1156 1172
 Rajamannar v Venkata 1165
 Rajani v Ahani, 1037
 Rajni v Panchananda 835
 Raji Prasanno v Ramoner 1272
 Rajaram v Bapu, 1040
 Rajaram v Emperor 1268
 Rajaram v Jadunandan 1207
 Raja Ram v Rami Kewhi, 1193
 Raja Ram v Tuljaram, 393
 Raja Ram v Zamindar of Pitapur 746
 Raja Rao v The Court of Wards, 189
 Raja Singh v Veer Singh, 1127
 Raja Varma v Ranivaram 189, 190
 Raj Badan v Shatrugji, 1054
 Raj Bachan Singh v Shri Thakurji 1083
 Raj Bahadur v Bishen Doyal 1129
 Raj Bahadur v Bindeshri 902
 Raj Coomur v Bissesswar 339
 Rajdulari v Krishna 1054
 Rajendra v Sheoparsan, 774
 Rajendra v Bijoy, 308
 Rajendra v Gangadhar, 149
 Rajendra v Gopal 599
 Rajendra v Jogendra 826, 860
 Rajendra v Menoka 835
 Rajeswari v Pulin Behari 74
 Raj Fateh v Baldeo Singh 191, 213, 328 537
 Raj Gir v Iswardi 805
 Raj Gobordhan v Gaundan 549
 Raj Goundan v Nishan 813
 Rajib v Chowdbury, 650
 Raji v Lakhna 4 642 653
 Raji v Tingerji 934, 1158
 Rajendar v Ramjaval 1054
 Raj Kisen v Ramjoy 186 189
 Raj Kuer v Nani Baksh 912
 Raj Kumar v Ahmuddi 1080
 Raj Kumar v Balvanta 604
 Raj Kumar v Emperor, 279, 337, 409, 447
 Raj Kumar v Bama, 640

Raj Kumar v Nritya Kai, 368
 Raj Lal v Rudra Pratab, 1166
 Rajmili v Empress 345 376
 Rajmal v Harnam 3, 12 13
 Raj Mangul v Mathura, 570 547
 Raj Narain v Abdur 834
 Raj Narain v Ashutoosh 1020
 Raj Narain v Oliver 168 577, 780
 Raj Narain v Rawshani Mall 257
 Raj Narain v Universal Life Ass 1171
 Raj Narayn v Jadu Nandan 1207
 Rajoni v A m, 781
 Rajoni Kant v Asim Mullick, 1272
 Rajoni Kant, In the matter of 1275
 Raju Bihu v Krishnaray Ram 1182
 Rajwat v Mahant Ram 615
 Rajya Lakshmi v Surva Narayan, 187
 Rakhi v Crown 1371
 Rakhi v Emperor 1329
 Rakhal v King Emperor 1491
 Rakhal v Queen Empress 125
 Rakhal v Proad 1040
 Rakhal Das v Indra Monie 796
 Rakhambai v Tukaram 977
 Rakhi v Alagadhyayn 919 955 958
 Rakhi Sahib v Sunat 618
 Rakhbrudy v Yashwantra 628
 Rali v Gankeiz 803
 Ralli v Coramally 923
 Ralli v Forbes 1177
 Ralli v Guru Kain 788 822
 Ralpi v Carriek 1003
 Ram v Kanai 1141
 Ram v Kishori 1306
 Ram v Malik 812
 Ram v Mohammad 314
 Ram v Raghu, 1043
 Ram v Emperor 429
 Ram v Appayn 189
 Ramachari v Sidho Ram, 899
 Ramadgo v Ryan 716
 Ramakka v Raguram, 1329
 Rama Kariappa v Emperor 151
 Ramar F, 370
 Rama Krishna v Aditya, 969
 Ramalakshmi v Sivaraman 189
 Ramalinga v Ganpat 623
 Ramalin v Kolavva, 196
 Ramalingam v Meekere Gokul 17,
 Ramamoul v Katamtho 776
 Ramar v Emperor 186
 Ramasahib v Mt Kolavva 1,
 Ramasath v Kt Kumar 1017
 Ramasandhan v Jacobabad, 868
 Ramasandhan v Ramalhattor 776
 Ramasandhan v Sheo Prasad 629
 Ramasahib v Lohsharan 811
 Ramasahib v Mungappa 10
 Ramasandhan v Sethuram 917
 Ramar v Barbu 109
 Ramar v Kur 1162

Ramani v Bhimanandan 903
 Ramon Menon v Madhavr 600
 Ramanuj v Dikheswar, 73 787
 Ramasami Royan, In re, 426
 Ramasamy v Behapari Ayyar, 1123
 Ramasami v Nagendra 760
 Ramarup v Ramnarain Teunay, 591
 597
 Ramasingsh v Crown 119
 Ramasubh v Muthial 943
 Ramaswami v Atanga Pillai, 209
 1202
 Ramaswami v Appayn 184 209 211
 595, 636
 Ramaswami v Emperor, 44, 1270 127
 Ramaswami v Ralarteri 712
 Ramaswami v Rulandi Velu, 1192
 Ramaswami v Lodd Govindas 963
 Rama Swami v Rama Nandan 489,
 191
 Rama Swami v Rama Nathan, 581 586
 Rama Swami v Vedgidusami 760
 Ramaswami Bayan In re 452
 Ramaswamy v Kashi 314
 Ramayatar v Tulsi, 936 950
 Ramayyengar, In re 1268
 Ram Bahadur v Ajdhya 834
 Ram Bahadur v Dasuri, 912
 Ram Bahadur v Lochoo Koei 198 199
 1138
 Ram Baksh v Kishori, 302
 Ram Birman v Sanat Kumar, 930
 Rimbet v Cohen, 924
 Ram Bhugwan v Emperor 601
 Rambhoj v Dhuni, 1495
 Rambhajan Lal v Sheo Prasad 520
 Ram Bharon v Janki Prasad, 967
 Rambler v Tryon 710
 Ram Boran v Ram Nihora 1158
 Rambuddin v Ranee Sree Konwar, 919
 Ram Baksh v Kishori, 302
 Ram Chand v Chhannum 1038
 Ram Chand v Horman 129
 Ram Chand v Ratnanath, 1079
 Ram Chunder v Bunsreddhar 866
 Ram Chunder v Gouri Nath, 19
 Ram Chunder v Haridas 241
 Ram Chandra v Ashad Ali, 1015
 Ram Chandra v Chandra Dasari, 1199
 Ram Chandra v Emperor, 1378 1399
 Ram Chandra v Farzand, 1117
 Ram Chandra v Gouri 14
 Ram Chandra v Gulam, 1206
 Ram Chandra v Hanif 1306
 Ram Chandra v Jogwar 528 529 530
 Ram Chandra v Joyram, 1170
 Ram Chandra v Kaniram, 1115
 Ram Chandra v Kashinath 973
 Ram Chandra v Pramatha, 1201
 Ram Chandra v Raghunath, 619
 Ram Chandra v Fauri 913

L 11

Ramji Mihra 1651
Ramjiwar Collector of Shahabad
886

[illegible]

Ram Peary v Ram Raghubir, 791
 Ram Pratab v Sheo Lal, 1180
 Ram Prokash v Anand 201 596
 Ramprasad v Emperor 146 175 1281
 1276
 Ramprasad v Lakhpati, 170
 Ramprasad v Lala Shan 341 1402
 Ramprasad v Nathu, 924
 Ramprasad v Raghunandan 783 789
 Ramprasad v Balaji, 191 591 575
 Ramratin v Emperor 1300
 Ramratin v Jayanti Lal 943
 Ram Ranjan v Ramnarain 199 201
 204 206 215 636

Ramrattan v Ramlal 1495
 Ramratan v Shew Narain 1469
 Ramratan v Farik 56
 Ram Reddi v Sehu Reddi, 573
 Ramrao v Ghulam 1173
 Ramratan v Bindu 1192
 Ramratan v Nandi 1016
 Ramratan v Sheoduttarai 1171
 Ramrup v Debi Perhai 599
 Ramsohoy v Secretary of State 661
 Ramsahu v Gauri 835 850
 Ramsahai v Dwarka 56
 Ramsamuyh v Mannath 831
 Ramsingh v Emperor 1216
 Ramsingh v Emperor 369 371
 Ramsingh v Akina 770
 Ramsuran v Bhagwant 11
 Ramsuran v Goyinda 1091
 Ramsuran v Khiekhan 293
 Ramsuran v So Pratab 1191
 Ramsuran v Fuls 911
 Ramrup v Bhagwant 470
 Ramrup v Kishen Satari 1171
 Ramrup v Man, 1111
 Ramrup v Ramnarain 222 329
 Ramrup v Ramnarain, 1190
 Ramrotham v Buckhurst 195 561
 Ramrotham v Lunbridge 907 930
 Ramrotham v Senior 1213
 Ramrotham v Dy on 1175 1171 1186
 Ramrotham v People 719
 Ramrup v Jacobella 911
 Ram Singh v Crown 119
 Ram Singh v Dhul Din 6
 Ram Singh v Hannu 1152
 Ram Singh v Ibrahim, 971 971
 Ram Singh v Imperial Bank, 1171
 Ram Singh v Shankar Dayal 9
 Ram Singh v Chube v Kesho Prasad
 771

Ram Singh v Chundwar 81
 Ram Singh v Haldar 1176
 Ram Singh v Lacharai 905
 Ram Singh v Prakash 116
 Ram Singh v Anand 117
 Ram Singh v Anand 117

Ranchodas v Bapu 72 163, 181 190,
 195 205 206 209, 610, 701, 891
 Rancin v Horner, 293
 Randh v Blackburn, 287, 460
 Rane v Giridhari 885
 Rane v Hardayat 805
 Rane v Surat Sundari v Rajendra
 Kishna 770
 Rane Shurut Sondure v Collector of Mymensingh, 1013
 Rane Surnamoyee v Moharajah Satti
 Chunder 774 1400
 Rane Tillesree v Rane Ahmedh
 1201
 Ranga v Emperor, 480
 Rangam v Sudarajulu 1048
 Rangammal v Venkatachari 633
 Rangaraj v Alur 960
 Rangappa v Rangaswami 596, 1031
 Rangarod v Kuthari Ammal 935
 Rangasami v Souti Aiyar 965
 Rangasingh v Haikind 37
 Rangaswami v Sundaria Julex, 562
 Rangaswami v Gnanar Samlandu 759
 1045
 Rangaswami v Sankaravijaya 1483
 Rangaswami v Seshari 1061
 Rangaswami v Sonasundaram 911
 Rangaswami v Vaidylingam 225
 Rangaswami v Yenger, In re 1871
 Rangayya v Basara 1190
 Rangayya v Sheshappa 1054
 Rangayya v Mudiappa, 1072
 Rangoo Monee v Rajoomaree 1181
 Rangoon Collector of v Abdul 5
 Rani v Chaudhuri 289 290
 Rani v Khagendra, 502
 Rani v Kanda 656
 Rani v Rani, 1173
 Rani Chandra v Chowdhury, 48
 Rani Churn v Kunnud Mohan, 5
 Rani Dinomoni v Jagat Chunder 18
 899 903
 Rani Hemamoni v Sarit Sundari, 64
 Rani Hemanta Kumari v Maharaj
 Jogindra Nath 1035
 Rani Prayag Kumari v Siva Prasad
 133
 Rani Simlar v Chandreshwar 511
 Rani Suran v Pran Peary 157
 Ranjra Sahi v Dhiku 1207
 Ranjha v Jinwalah 221
 Ranjit v Manoh, 1015
 Ranjit v Rangayya 579
 Ranjhan v Ogbar 72
 Ranjit v Bantla, 201
 Ranjit v Bhagabutti 623
 Ranjit v Chundal 898
 Ranjit Singh v Crown 1118
 Ranjit Singh v Schoonskilian 102
 Pannu v Emperor 111 115 115

Ranu v Laxman Rao, 832, 836 1124
Ranz v Secy of State, 355
Rao Nur v Batimaha, 1104
Rapp v Latham 312
Raphael Pausu v Emperor, 403
Rish Behari v Hari Mani 1053
Rash Behary v Nahay, 1116
Rassimada v Sitarama, 1043
Rutcliffe v Evans, 1399
Ruthanmasiri v Secy of State, 598
Rati Pal v Udu Bhan, 791
Rati Ram v Harilwar, 1497
Rattanbhai v Chabildas, 549
Rattaram v Nandalal 1200
Raturji v Pahlwan 189
Raven R., 1012
Ravi Vinayak v Lakshminbhai, 1179
Rawland v Blakesby, 616
Rawley v Rawley, 1
Rawlings v Bill 242
Rawlins v Richard 496
Rawlins v Stitt 116
Rawson v Hugh 79, 81, 84, 87 139
Rawstorne v Gandell, 295, 312
Raw Subheg v K E, 79
Rayid Dusidh v Emperor 1403
Rayan v Lamba, 1080
Rajappan, In re 368
Raynoll v Sprye, 1254
Rayson v South London Tramways Co 13
Razak v Man 799
Razman v Fakir Mahomed, 1051
R D Sethna v Mirza Mahomed, 94, 164
Read v Brookman, 803
Read v Gamble 810
Read v Jackson, 524
Reajuldi v Gunga, 570
Rebati v King Emperor, 1281
Rechoda v Atchoda, 408
Rediant v Newton, 690
Reed v Limb, 882
Reed v Passer, 706
Reeds v James 1306
Rees v Bowne, 86 3
Reg v Abululla, 1223
Reg v Amhigora 452
Reg v Andrews 1279
Reg v Arnold 438
Reg v Avery 1279
Reg v Bidhun 453 1288
Reg v Bai Ratan, 919
Reg v Bilvant, 366
Reg v Bilwant 375, 386
Reg v Birstoke, 347
Reg v Bhistabin Madanna, 19
Reg v Bliss 55
Reg v Brackenbury 437
Reg v Buckley, 493
Reg v Castro, 602

N

Reg v Chatur 1281, 1283, 1286
Reg v Clough 262
Reg v Cox, 1257
Reg v Dayanand, 1403
Reg v Dye 44
Reg v Dyke, 1280
Reg v Earle 1280
Reg v Fata, Adaji, 878
Reg v Fateh Chand 1283
Reg v Francis 219, 261 262, 267, 1481
Reg v Fuller, 262
Reg v Ganapatrao, 30
Reg v Ginee Bin 1284
Reg v Gaur, 437
Reg v Gilham, 381
Reg v Gohinda 444
Reg v Gobordhan, 395
Reg v Godhori 725
Reg v Gorichand Gope 1137
Reg v Graham 109
Reg v Gray 120 262
Reg v Gowla 1241
Reg v Guzard, 1227
Reg v Hunmant 582
Reg v Hunmantha 1221 1490
Reg v Hodges 53
Reg v Hunmanta, 493
Reg v Imam, 1288
Reg v Imam Valud 1286
Reg v Inhabitants of Lower Heyford 511
Reg v Isaac, 1108
Reg v Jora Hara 408 414 415 416 417, 420, 421, 417
Reg v Jora Hara, 129
Reg v James Johnson, 1056
Reg v Kalu Patel 412
Reg v Lamson 248
Reg v Lower Heyford 502
Reg v Lammey, 90
Reg v Mah 437
Reg v Mahapa 1368
Reg v Macollas Smith 248
Reg v Malipa, 1373
Reg v Malapa Bin, 1287
Reg v Mankuhan 1281
Reg v Manson, 112
Reg v Maybrick 218
Reg v Milton 891
Reg v Moore, 1215
Reg v Mullins, 441 1291
Reg v Nana Khan, 1283
Reg v Navroji, 377, 381 382, 389 132, 1400
Reg v Ollis 262, 267
Reg v Over-see of Birmingham 517
Reg v P stonji 763
Reg v Pichard, 248
Reg v Palmer 114
Reg v Pook, 91

- Reg v Prabhudas 70, 163 171, 252, 1315 1402
 Reg v Priest, 438
 Reg v Rahmit, 16
 Reg v Ramasami, 1285, 1287
 Reg v Rayley, 727
 Reg v Rhodes 262 263 273
 Reg v Richardson 262
 Reg v Russell, 1386
 Reg v Sakharim 171 131
 Reg v Sherufalli, 73
 Reg v Shivya, 372
 Reg v Statentous 115 249
 Reg v Stokes 1055
 Reg v Stuff, 1290 1293
 Reg v Stuff 1279
 Reg v Sudrem 142
 Reg v Su sex, 20
 Reg v Tinnaya, 435
 Reg v Timmi, 724
 Reg v Tol on 234
 Reg v Uttanchand 920, 1263 1331
 Reg v Vyankutsami 22
 Reg v Wainwright 91
 Reg v Warburton 151
 Reg v Welch 347
 Reg v William 473
 Reg v Wood 131
 Reg v Wyatt 262
 Regina v Amrit, 448
 Regina v Amrita Biswas 415
 Regina v Farr 791
 Regina v Gould 123
 Reid v Hodgson, 691
 Reid v So Huang 931
 Reid v Fitzgerald, 531 535 628
 Reliance Lumber v Western Union Tel Co 820
 Remm v Hall, 253
 Re Ufner & Tunnel v Ofner, 1022
 Rex v Reg 636
 Rex v Brahm, 677
 Rex v Atwood 1271, 1279 1283
 Rex v Alker, 1240
 Rex v Ball 264
 Rex v Burd 263, 268
 Rex v Bickvill 151 111, 1284
 Rex v Best 16
 Rex v Bringer 703
 Rex v Birket 1279 1280
 Rex v Blake, 151 157
 Rex v Bond 20
 Rex v Broomhead 1
 Rex v Clarke 157
 Rex v Cooper 1281
 Rex v Davidson 733
 Rex v Dixon 61 134 138
 Rex v Fales 152
 Rex v Lamb 11
 Rex v Forest 151 154
 Rex v Fox & Gurney 151
 Rex v Fisher, 262, 267
 Rex v Foster, 89
 Rex v Gilham 1215
 Rex v Hudson 1056
 Rex v Hudwick, 160
 Rex v Hardy, 1240
 Rex v Harringworth 893
 Rex v Hastings, 1279
 Rex v Hastings and another, 1286
 Rex v Hamely, 749
 Rex v Hunt, 160
 Rex v James, 1057
 Rex v Jones 748, 1279
 Rex v Journeymen Tailors 152
 Rex v Justice of Stafford Shire, 867
 Rex v Lowe 879
 Rex v Miller, 748
 Rex v Noakes 1292
 Rex v Norton 133
 Rex v Patch, 49
 Rex v Rodley, 264
 Rex v Rudd 1274
 Rex v Shoya, 877
 Rex v Sukh Taleh, 405
 Rex v Simons 289, 435
 Rex v Slater 159
 Rex v Smith, 49 183, 267
 Rex v Stanley 694
 Rex v Stinnard 720
 Rex v Stuffs, 1286
 Rex v Tate, 1288
 Rex v Thompson, 133
 Rex v Turner 720
 Rex v Vadala, 571
 Rex v Watson 1240
 Rex v West Riding Yorkshire Council 12
 Rex v Wilkes, 1279, 1286
 Rex v Williams, 1
 Rex v Willis 1291
 Rex v Wilson, 1281
 Rex v Woodward 754
 Rex v Wyatt 267, 273
 Reynburn v Belotti 691
 Reynell v Sprye 1257
 Reynolds v Rowley, 1263
 R G White 712
 Rhangama v Atchama 771
 Rhen v State 378
 Rhulay v Naban, 1039
 Rhuloy v Prasanna, 799
 Rhodes v Bate 1087, 1089 1091
 Rhodes v Rhodes 1
 Rhodes Re 1078
 Rihram v Emperor 307
 Rieul v Williams 1082
 Ricardo v Gornis 620
 Rice v Howard 1321 1330 1351
 Rice v Hownt 1322
 Rice v Oatfield 1352
 Richard v Duka 8

Richard v Samuel, 1000
 Richards v Birret, 527
 Richards v Johnston, 1181
 Richards v Morgan 342
 Richards v Richards, 728
 Richardson v Allan, 1355
 Richardson v Anderson, 678
 Richardson v Newcombe, 854
 Richardson v Peto 309
 Richardson v Watson, 1008
 Reche Re, 852
 Richie v Oatfield, 849
 Richmond v Norwich 735
 Rickard v Bully, 890
 Rickets v Lophue 831
 Rickett v Turgand 987
 Rickman v Curzbars, 1003
 Rider v People, 1 5
 Ridgway v Wharton, 922
 Ridlev v Plymouth Bunking Co, 303
 Ridley v Gyde, 83, 139
 Rigg v Curgenvien 289
 Riggs Miller v Wheatclev, 499 895
 Rigway v Darwin, 962
 Riley v Snyder 303
 Ripon v Davies, 1254
 Rishi v Mela, 1202
 Rist v Hobson, 276
 River Steam Co, Re, 349
 River Wear Commissioner v Adamson,
 3 6 17

R Leslie Limited v Sheill, 1168
 Robb v Starkey, 802
 Robert v Chandan, 599
 Roberts v Bethel, 275
 Roberts v Bordsbarw 819
 Roberts v Doonan 814, 190
 Roberts v Gee 775
 Roberts v Phillips 832, 834
 Roberts v Simpson 1263, 1264
 Roberts v Sridhar, 1036
 Roberts v Trawick, 457
 Robert Watson v Mohesh, 128
 Robins v Madsstone, 764
 Robins v Wolselay 537
 Robins v National Trust, 1029, 1054
 Robertson v French, 1082
 Robinson v Annet 678
 Robinson v Bland 849
 Robinson v Brown, 819
 Robinson v Cutter, 821
 Robinson v Davis, 808
 Robinson v Gregory 843
 Robinson v Horman, 174
 Robinson v Jenkins, 1210
 Robinson v Gilman 564
 Robinson v May, 1235, 1240
 Robinson v Reynolds 1113
 Robson v Alexander 293
 Robson v Att Gen 536 707
 Robson v Kemp 77, 83 1251 1258

Robson v Roche, 860
 Roby, In re, 1078
 Rochefoucauld v Boustead, 1253
 Rochester v Chester, 668
 Roden v Ryde, 1442 1130
 Rodley's Case, 270
 Rodrique v Todnre 241
 Roe v Davis 786, 787 790
 Roe v Day 614
 Roe v Ferrars, 285
 Roe v Harvey, 127
 Roe v Jerome 327
 Roe v Jeffrey 192
 Roe v Jones 562
 Roe v New York Press 1264
 Roe v Rawlings 553, 557, 594
 Roe v Vernon, 1009
 Roe d Brune v Rawlings 504 505
 Rogers v Allen, 179 196, 223 553, 554
 Rogers v Brown 765
 Rogers v Cady, 751
 Rogers v Custance, 817, 818
 Rogers v Lambert 1210
 Rogers v Pitcher, 1202 1203
 Rogers v Roborg 562
 Rogers v Ritter, 695
 Rogers v Secretary, 12
 Rogers v Wood, 524 635
 Rogbunath v Brideswar, 183
 Roghani v Empress, 675 685, 1381
 Rokim Ali v Emperor, 401
 Roopchand v Harkishen, 196
 Roopmunjoori v Ramlal 797
 Roopnarain v Gangadhar 1092
 Roopnarain v Ramayee Singh, 643
 Roopnarain v Snyadhar 1047
 Roos v Butler 1227
 Root v King 590 608
 Rosz In the goods of, 995
 Rose Krans v Antwerp, 757
 Rosinbury v Angell 333
 Ro-hun Posadb v Emperor, 722
 Ross v Edwards, 1210
 Rostad v Portland, 758
 Rothnamasuri v Secretary 1239
 Rothrock v Gallagher 563
 Rothschild v Brockman, 1089
 Rothschild v Ind Rev, 5
 Rothwell v King, 1257
 Rouch v G W R 76 85, 97, 118
 Rouch v R Co 88, 130
 Roupell v Hows 80
 Rousseau v Pinto 1229
 Rowan's Trial 127
 Rowe v Brenton 180 512, 524
 Rolands v De Veechi, 228
 Rowley v Horne 241
 Rowley v London and N Ry Co 668
 Rowley v N W Ry Co, 1381
 Rox v Bryant 514

- THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT
- Roy & Aquarian Society v Parkinson 149
- Raymonce In re, 895
- Rozario, & Ingles, 1102, 1224
- Ruan & Gardner, 702
- Ruan & Porri, 716
- Rucker v Pascorico, 762
- Rudd v Wright, 712
- Rudd & Ciss, 359
- Rudolph Strilman In re, 29, 37, 180, 871, 891
- Ruler v State, 380
- Ruballa v Hys an Ah, 1091
- Raj Panch v Rakho, 303
- Rukmani v Emperor, 387, 403, 1230
- Rukmani v Ankama, 1023
- Rukya Bannu v Nipri Bannu, 1199
- Rule v Jewell, 1174
- Rulla Singh & Tunia Mal, 1041
- Rummers v Cecil, 33
- Rungo v Raj Coomaree, 323
- Rungo Lal v Abdul, 1080
- Rungo Mayee v Raj Coomaree, 327
- Rupi v Bhairon Prosad, 866
- Rupchand & Iru Chondhura, 1199
- Rupchand v Sarhaswar, 1205, 1208
- Rupchand Ghosh v Sarieswar Chandra, 1150
- Rupkishan & Bhagat Govind, 12
- Rupkishan v Govinddas, 13
- Rush v Smith, 1306
- Rusno Tek v Emperor, 387
- Russell v Jackson, 1243, 1248, 1256
- Russell Steam Navigation v Silva, 1021
- Rusiani v King Emperor, 1371
- Rutherford v Maule, 776
- Ruthia Mandalior v Arung, 937
- Rutledge v Caruthers, 1095
- Rutton Bisack v Bacha Bishee, 1035
- Rutton Singh v B. Jang, 1098
- Rutton v Farr, 1794
- R. Vachanda v Subhramaniam, 1197
- R. Walker v Anna Ram, 1085
- Ryall v Himmam, 1014
- Ryall v Rohu, 2
- Ryan & King, 197
- Ryam v R Co, 114
- Sahay v Nawal Singh, 903
- Sahani v Emperor, 1331
- Sahani v Sany, 836
- Sahay v Nawal Singh, 913
- Sahani v Olor Mahto, 150
- Sahani v Hani, 1145
- Sahani v T. Mahapatra, 810
- Sahani v Chhaya, 997
- Sahani v Emperor, 1306
- Sahani v Maruti, 1191
- Sadhu v Gour Chandra, 831
- Sadhu v Jhanna, 1148
- Sadhu v Ambika, 222, 896
- Sadhu v Nani Sir, 908
- Sadhu v Raja Ram, 170, 590
- Sadhu Sheikh v Emperor, 1330
- Sadhu v Emperor, 1330
- Sadhu v Tukishore, 1150, 1164
- Safar Ali v Mohi, 807, 918
- Safapatt v Perumal, 56
- Safdar Ali v Nur Mahomed, 1091
- Safdar v Akbar, 935
- Safiquddin v Mithun, 1342
- Safiqunni v Shahhan, 530, 871, 90
- Safiqunni v Manraj, 140, 582
- Sagar Singh v Mathura, 1051
- Sahabur Mi v Emperor, 156
- Sahu v Shoo, 824
- Sahdeo v Ku um Kumari, 472
- Sahesh Baksh v Muhammad, 967
- Sahesh v Jawahar, 1012
- Sahib v Rajah Ram, 836, 837
- Sahib v Aliya, 166
- Sahib v Emperor, 99
- Sahib Rai v Behari Rai, 653, 963
- Sah Lal Chand v Indrajit, 983
- Sahmuga v Srinivasarao, 312
- Said Ahmed v Emperor, 19
- Sailekhan v Amrunnisa, 221
- Saidu v Meher, 317
- Safal v Emperor, 425
- Sahaj Nath v Raja Reshee Case, 89
- Sahash v Bechar, 1194
- Sahesh v B. Bhu, 943
- Sahing v Hietie, 524
- Sauval v Saur, 939
- Sayankunwar v Joti Prosad, 103
- Sayand v Hulyat, 16
- Sayin v Emperor, 393
- Sayur Mull v Manraj, 565
- Sikham v Emperor, 615
- Sikharam v Sram, 324, 337
- Sikhdeo v Ganes, 1494
- Sikhia v Indan Sahelha, 804
- Sikhindul v Somailla, 1194
- Sikka v Emperor, 450
- Silak v Mt Tamiz Bino, 824
- Silam v Emperor, 426
- Silamon v Warner, 152
- Silamat v Budhi, 741
- Silam Bibi v Gudi Commercial Bank, 802
- Silak v Wahi, 1495
- Silam v Emperor, 1373
- Silaman v Hakim Mukdan, 802
- Silamant v Kailashpati, 748
- Silashury v Gladstone, 189

- Salkeld & Johnson 1, 2
 Salomans v Miller, 816
 Satten v Meltnish, 808
 Salvo v Duncan, 676
 Samadin & R 118 473 480, 183, 1223, 1370
 Samul & Ahmad 595
 Sambanda v Chinnaswami 945
 Sambla Sheo & Mahadeo, 1083
 Samhho v Tukaram, 944
 Samhu v Nama Nrayana, 925
 Sam Rao v Vannajee 836
 Samar Dasadh & Jugal Kishor 589, 593
 Sambayya & Gangayy 1, 207
 Sambhuset & Sitaram 992, 1002
 Samro Patter v Abdul, 840
 Sampat v Gauri 596
 Samsan v Ram Parshad 912
 Samsuddin & Abdul 1093
 Samuel v Cooper 33
 Samuel v Ofner, 989
 Sanatan v Dina Nath 849
 Sanatan Ali v Chand Bibee, 247
 Sanatun & Jogutt 1003
 San Baw & Crown, 877
 Sanhorn v Neilson, 351
 Sand v Puran Singh 758
 Sandan & Turner 753
 Sandhi v Dani 547
 Sanders v Karnell 346
 Sanders v, Keller, 319
 Sanders v Wough, 108
 Sandersson & Collman 1155, 1209
 Sandilands v Marsh 309
 Sandys v Hodgson 1155
 Sanford v Sanford 318
 Saneram Singh & Rajan Bai 528 539 550
 Sangita & Romappa 935 959 959
 Sangitaraya v Balambik 1063
 San Hla v Mikhawrow 1395
 Sanub v Santosh 1172
 Sankappa Rai, In re 109, 441
 Sankaracharya v Malina, 289
 Sankaracharya & Manali, 459 699
 Sankaracharya v Mudaliar, 599
 Sankaralinga & Comr of Income Tax 1120
 Sankaralinga v Emperor, 1370
 Sankaralinga Thera, In re 1370
 Sankaran v Perinami 1204
 Sankarlal v Din Dayal 3
 Sankar Ray v Secretary of State, 994
 Sankarno v Ramji 697
 San Paw Aung & Emperor 378 401 403
 San Pedro Lumber Co v Reynolds, 292
 Sango Rao v Ghazi 813
 Santa v Emperor 123
 Santala & Badiswari, 760
 Santappaya v Ramgappaya 1179
 Santa Singh v Crown 427
 Santokhi v Rameshar 601
 Santos v Illidge, 961
 Smt Ram v Ram Manorath, 797
 Sant Singh v Jawla Sa Ali, 192
 Santu v Teia 542
 Sanuman v Emperor, 79
 Sarve & Dawson 858
 Sanyari v Astu Swaro 1495
 Saph v Atkinson, 773
 Saphu v Govinda Charyu, 35
 Sarabjit v Indrajit 187
 Sarala v Durga 304
 Sarada & Priguna 835
 Sarada v Uma 170, 175
 Sarajani & Hari Das, 859
 Sarajmul v Tritan, 1172
 Saraju v Ram Harakh 548
 Sarat Chandra & Emperor, 481
 Sarat Chandra & Gopal, 1140 1142, 1151 1152, 1157, 1158, 1167
 Sarat Chandra v Nitya Gopal 940
 Sarat Chandra v Saralabala, 218 222 328
 Sarat Dhohini In Re, 86 89 94
 Sarat Kumari v Mecher 647
 Sarat Sundari & Annund Mohini, 205
 Sarat Sundari & Uma Prasad 12
 Sarat Sundari v Secretary of State 886
 Saraswati v Dhanapat 589, 589
 Sariswati v Yadavao, 1033
 Sarhaji v Indrajit 192
 Sarhaji v Kawal 965
 Sardar v Bnl 1114
 Sardar Khan v Emperor, 1229
 Sardar Kirpal v Balavant 1046
 Sardar Mal v Arunavart 643
 Sardar Singh v Iqbal 908
 Sarfauz v Rajana 545, 600
 Saripalli v Fota, 181 555
 Sariatulla & Prannath, 186, 699, 700 701
 Sarje Rao v Narayan 655
 Sarjee Prasad & Deodat Pal 1047
 Sarju v Emperor, 1306
 Sarju & Hiralal 598
 Sarju & Sukhi 993
 Sarju Day v Rnm Horakh 901
 Sarju Ram v Bharosa, 1170
 Sarkies v Prasannamnyee 8
 Sarle v Arnold 670
 Sarnath v Butler 865
 Saroda v Gosta, 1155
 Saroda v Umakanta 641
 Sarodn Prasad v Anundmoy 1156
 Sarodn Sundari & Golanda Moni, 1072
 Sarojini & Haridas 682, 688, 825, 856, 860, 1051

Saraj Kumar v Umed Ali, 168, 218, 519
 Sartoz Koer v Mahadeo 591
 Sarukhan v Jan Mithomed 561
 Sarup Singh v Emperor 825
 Saruniggar v Birodi 834
 Sasachellum v Govindappa 946
 Sashibhushan v Debnath 1191 1193
 Sashibhushan v Chandra Peskar 832
 Sastri Bhushan v Nawab of Murshidabad 273
 Sashi Bhushan v Ramjoy Agarwalla 603
 Sashi Kanai v Genda Sheikh 1183
 Sasmukhi v Monmohini 834
 Sati Mukhi v Saraswati 202
 Sasipalli v Pota, 191
 Sasser v Haring 524
 Sastimoni v Siharain 1090
 Satcouri v Secretary of State 604, 886
 Satendra v Emperor 172
 Satendra v Krishna 208 221 519, 555 640
 Sati Prosad v Gohunda 1051
 Satish v Jogendra 846
 Satish v Joyram, 202
 Satish v Kalidin, 1094
 Satish v Kamini 969
 Satish v Mohendra 529 544 548, 593, 597
 Satish v Ramdayal, 15
 Sati Prosad v Gohunda 1033
 Satnaram v Namin 861
 Sator v Bolenger 692
 Sattrugan v Emperor 1229
 Satya v Emperor 1108
 Satya v Gohunda 16
 Satya v Kartik 1139
 Satyanarain v Satya '87
 Satyesh v Dhanpat 946
 Saudagar Singh v Emperor 1289
 Savage v Blandford 571
 Savoy v King 1090
 Savitri v I A Sam 834
 Savary, R. 659
 Savory v World, 1091
 Savory v Bonis 825
 Savar Kalloo 1171
 Savan v Emperor 486 1331
 Saw Bai v Crown, 37
 Sawdamora v Spanding 968
 Sawyer v French 73
 Sawet v Ulap 1173 1124
 Sawyer v Clopp 804 924
 Sawyer v Kuehn 1187 1757
 Sawaki v Q F 125
 Sawarullin v Samiruddin 75 169 344
 Sawer v Burdick 937
 Sawyer v Pay 1114
 Sawle v Pawlin 1003
 Sawaranga v Camp 24

Scarborough v Smith 190
 Scarfe v Jardine 1187
 Scarle v Lord Brington, 506
 Schaefer v Thomas 1396
 Scheermer v Hirher, 339
 Schliff v R Co 167
 Scholes v Chadwick 508
 Scholfield v Lockwood 1167
 Scholov v Walton 314
 Schuchord v Allen 42
 Schulz v Schultz 629
 Schult v Willms 334
 Schutz v Plunkinton 933
 Schwircht v Archhold, 923
 Scott v Brown 961
 Scott v Jones 816 819
 Scott v Simpson, 729 1316
 Scott v State 670
 Scott's Cases, 373
 Scutton v Pinillo 1078
 Seadul Ali v Finneror, 37
 Seajnt v Dale 1229
 Seal v Claridge 832
 Seales v Chauhallas 296
 Seaman v Nether Cliff 1361
 Seater v Lawson 295
 Seaton v Benedict 762
 Secretary of State v Ahmed 212
 Secretary of State 886
 Secretary of State v Balchambers, 664
 Secretary of State v Charlesworth, 710
 Secretary of State v Dwarka 1064
 Secretary of State v Fakir Mohamed 7
 Secretary of State v Ghanaya, 756
 Secretary of State v G T Sarin 1120
 Secretary of State v Gananandan, 1150
 Secretary of State v Tyati 1114
 Secretary of State v Kalika 886
 Secretary of State v Kumar 951
 Secretary of State v Maharaja of Bohli 3
 Secretary of State v Manjesswar, 789
 Secretary of State v Mushin 114
 Secretary of State v Nandlal 1107
 Secretary of State v Narendra 987
 Secretary of State v Punjab National Bank 1194
 Secretary of State v Saminatha 1236
 Secretary of State v Santaraja, 747
 Secretary of State v Shanmugamya 664 761
 Secretary of State v Shubprosd 293
 Secretary of State v Sufaraya, 213, 224
 Secretary of State v Upendra 602 1114 1120
 Secretary of State v Vidyavati 1170
 Secretary of State v Wazed 601
 Sedaram v Krishan Das 1163
 Seetharamaya v Suryadevara 934
 Seethya v Subramanya 902
 Setz v Prewers, etc, 967

- Seibert v Eric R C 775
 Seizer v Bert, 615
 Selby v Commonwealth, 378
 Sella Muthlu v Palli Muthu, 235
 Sellen v Norman 277
 Sellick v Booth 1078
 Selwyn, Re, 1078
 Selwood v Midway 988
 Semali Goundin In re, 136 128
 Semminali v Selappa, 1189
 Sen Roy v Public Prosecutor 1111
 Sinton v North Bridgewater 710
 Sergeant v Nash, 1201
 Sergeant v Nash, 1202
 Serumuk v Palathin, 187
 Seshagiri v Sikany S tt 1495
 Seshagiri v Subachin 317
 Seshammil v Kuppriyanga, 542, 705
 Sessions Judge v Gortle, 1111
 Seth Gokul Das v Janaki 257
 Seth Kauhay Lal v National Bank, 839
 Seth Luxmichand v Subhabuddin, 968
 Seth Lakhmi v Bijrao 8
 Seth Magunmal v Darbarilal 344, 386
 Seth Mohamed v Dane Janbu, 960
 Seth Manik Lal v Bijoy 1037 1124 1401
 Seth Sujin Chand v Lala Chhabibram, 1198
 Seth Utam Vasoomal v Seth Haridas, 23
 Sethua v Mirza 470, 490
 Sathu v Palani, 1093
 Seton v Lapone 1151, 1152 1153, 1188
 Seva Ram v Ali Biksh, 1144
 Seward v Vera Cruz 7
 Sewdeo v Ajodhya 341 501
 Sever v Glosop 752
 Seymour v Franco 1204
 Shadal Khan v Aminullah 210
 Shadat v Dalogur 962
 Shadeo Prosad v Ram Sahai 1171
 Shadi Lal v Muhammad 189
 ShaGguinniss v Shaffhan, 63 64, 471 901, 903
 Shah v Emamun 395
 Shahab Mir Emperor, 154 156
 Shahul v Allih Bichyo, 1114
 Shahzaid v Secy of State 799
 Shah Mohamed v Fuzl Isha, 1042
 Shah Mukhanlal v Srikrishna 1141
 Shahzaid v Secretary of State 1402
 Shaibi Prosad v Golanmanght 16
 Shaiban's Trial 770
 Shaik Husam v Goredhan Das 904
 Shaikh Abdul v Basim 1155
 Shaikh Juman v Mohamed 913
 Shaikh Mahomed v Kala Prosad 934
 Shaikh Muhammad v Ram Dutt, 946
 Shaikh Najmuddin v Ployd 1204
 Shailesh Chandra v Belb u Gope, 1191
 Shikleford v State 563
 Shama Charan v Hiras Molla 949
 Shama Charan v Mokhoda 1207
 Shambhu v Jago Bibi, 1092
 Shambhu Nath v Ram Chandra, 800 919
 Sham Chand v Pratap Chand, 1043
 Sham Koor v Doh Koer 1093
 Shamlal v Binni B gum 936
 Shamlal v Emperor 403, 411 416, 447
 Shamlal v Ratha 528, 533 1037
 Shamsher v Mohammad, 872
 Shamsul v Ahmed, 934
 Shamsuddin v Ganesb 599
 Shamsul v Sibakrim 990
 Sham Sundar v Achan 1047
 Sham Sundar v Emperor 1117
 Sham Sundar v Ram Khelwan 638
 Shamuldhone v Susila 1087 1090 1091
 Shamu Patter v Abdul Kayir 832
 Shamdin v Emperor 353
 Shankar v Ganapit 1190
 Shankar Shohag In re 1272
 Shanker v Emperor, 443
 Shanker v Jagannath, 1202
 Shanker Ganesb v Kesho 638
 Shankergir v Chimmaji, 549
 Shan Mannu Mull v Madras Building Co, 242
 Shannu Pittar v Abdul Kadir, 836
 Shape v Laul 802
 Sheridi v Jamal 950
 Sharaf Ali v Jagandir 924
 Sharfora v Dhuno, 1307
 Sharfuddin v Niamut Ali, 702
 Sharman Inbonis, 834
 Sharnomoyee Dassi, In re 1072
 Sharp v Birch 832
 Sharp v Maddison 938
 Sharp v Powell 175
 Sharp v Scoging 1360
 Sharukh v Sheo Prosad 1093
 Sharuni v Sylvader 1162
 Sharnu Moyee v Ka hee Kant 1036
 Shaw v Brown, 327
 Shaw v Brett, 1489
 Shaw v Riddin, 1
 Shazida Mahomed v Danic Welgolong, 862
 Shazidi v Secretary of State for India 545
 Shazida v Syed Mahomed, 844
 Shazi v Crown 431
 Shea v Green 32
 Shearman v Fleming 1121
 Shedden v Att Gen 527 534, 535
 Shedden v Patrick 645 650
 Shed Lal v Gaur Narain 541
 Shed Prosad v Emperor, 802

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

- Sheeb Chunder v Brojonath 1015
 Sheen v Bumpstead 242
 Sheetul Pershad v Junnaji 73 1304
 Sheikh v Ashraf 1003
 Sheikh v Behari Lal 189
 Sheikh v Boodhoo 615
 Sheikh v Horomil, 1012
 Sheikh v Monohar Das 478
 Sheikh Abdul v Emperor, 376
 Sheikh Ahmed v Bilu Dey 1171
 Sheikh Akbar v Sheikh Khan 799
 Sheikh Asud Ali v Sheikh Akbar 1127
 Sheikh Chamun v Emperor, 14
 Sheikh Edu v Hiralil 862
 Sheikh Janna v Mahunil 978 1488
 Sheikh Hajir v K E 1408
 Sheikh Ibrahim v Poributt Hari 147
 Sheikh Ibrahim v Rama 304
 Sheikh Imtra v Dura Nath 341 142
 Sheikh Inadul Ali v Mt Kootles 237
 Sheikh Jinki v Dino 422
 Sheikh Kachu v M I Ali 847
 Sheikh Karimullah v Gudir 831
 Sheikh Kotabulil v Nafar Chandra 169 219 519, 1372
 Sheikh Mohuden v Official Assignee, 312
 Sheikh Pombal v Sheikh Mohammed, 949
 Sheikh Rahamatoolah v Shurimoolah, 787
 Sheikh Sultan v Sheikh Ajmodin 779
 Sheikh Tamjudin v Sheikh Tazu 596
 Sheikh Tinoo In the case 477
 Shelburne v Inchiquin 1005 1010 1017
 Shelbury v Scotsford 1210 1211
 Sheldon v Booth 676
 Sheo v Jaddo 304
 Sheo Ambar v Emperor 444 453 1276
 Sheo Bahadur v Beni Bahadur 676
 Sheo Bihadur v Bishannath, 794
 Sheobalak v Emperor, 429
 Sheoborn v Bhano 635
 Sheohoran v Bishesur 984
 Sheo Charan v Emperor 449 1290
 Sheo Balak v Gaya Prosad 596
 Sheo Dorshan v Asasoor Singh 1116
 Sheo Das v Kunhiyalal 915
 Sheo Lal Roy v Emperor 453
 Sheodaval v Lalta Prosad 290
 Sheo Dayal v Raja Muhammed 918
 Sheodin v Habibulla 1192
 Sheo Dutta v Ganga 840
 Sheo Karan v Cheranj Lal 913
 Sheo Lal Singh v Chaudhury Goor 901
 Sheonandan v Jeonnilan, 192 600
 Sheonandan v Ramlogan 903
 Sheo Narain v Sukhl Lal 1491
 Sheonarayan v Emperor 151
 Sheo Pershad v Jhama Singh 1012
 Sheo Pershad v Jugurnath 347
 Sheo Porash v Dharmy 1062
 Sheo Prokash v Rawlins, 1356
 Sheoprosad v Laperor 367
 Sheoprosad v Gobind, 942
 Sheoprosid v Ramnandan, 621
 Sheo Rani v Emperor 1042
 Sheo Rani v Raulil 797
 Sheo Sahayac v Goodar, 770
 Sheosharn v Runkhelawan, 459
 Sheo Suran v Goolhaneec, 608
 Sheo Tahal v Arjun 669
 Shepherd v Currie, 1121
 Sher Afzil v Rula Singh, 1138
 Sher Ahmed v Ibrahim 900
 Sher Ali v Crown 486
 Sher Bihadur v Gangn 948 989
 Sher Singh v Empress, 337
 Sher Khana v Crown, 392
 Sher Muhammed v Dost Mohammad 791 415
 Sher Mohammad v Purdu 501
 Sher Sha v Q E 1330
 Shere Singh v Empress 279
 Sherborne v Nufar 706
 Sheri lan v Barret 1174
 Sherman v McDonald, 324
 Sherril v Stue 139
 Shero v Emperor 447 1275, 1281
 Sherry v De Qutzea 234
 Sheru v Crown 486
 Sherwood v Sinderson, 963
 Sherzman v Empress, 726
 Sheva v Havat 1186
 Shave v K E, 1370
 Shevalan v Gholum 17
 Shewari's Case, 311
 Shewko v K E, 909
 Shebo Kali v Chunilal, 8
 Shiba Prosad v Sonavendra, 930
 Shih Charan v Nilkanta 885
 Shih Chunder v Dulcken, 1185
 Shih Dayal v Sheo Ghulmi 837, 80.
 Shih Deo v Ramprosad, 696
 Shih Laksharan v Turangini 1003
 Shihnil v Annadn Prosad 287
 Shibo Pershad In re 1057
 Shidhokra v Nal Kuyiro, 188
 Shiam Sunder v Jangannath 896
 Shih Prosad Pandey In the matter of the petition of 1055
 Shield v Bucher 635, 541
 Shields v Wilkinson, 1030 1037
 Shilling v Ins C, 129
 Shimbhunath v Govanaband 635
 Ship Henry v Webbink 50
 Ship Money Case 76
 Shipby v Todhunter 27
 Shurreff v Wilks 319

- Shisser v Barlington*, 562
Shiva Bhai v Emperor 424
Shiva Ganga Case, 627
Shio Golam v Baron Singh, 1129
Shiwaji v Roturum 1052
Sholaper Spinning and Weaving v Pandhari Nath, 14
Shomes v Spencer, 302
Shookmoy v Monohar 1003
Shookram v Ramlal 818 1339
Shorai Sao v Lampe or 1358
Shore v Att Gen, 755
Shore v Bedford, 1254
Shore v Wilson 123, 143, 703, 987, 1001 1003, 1011
Short v Lee, 506, 511 515, 516 614
Short v Story, 178
Shrewsbury v Benzely, 13
Shrewsbury v Blout 242
Shrewsbury Pearage Case 530 532 535, 550 606
Shrewsbury v Scott, 1, 18
Srinivas v Meher Bai, 521
Shuck v Vanderventer, 84
Shums Ahmed v Ghoolam Moher 1199
Shumnugaroya v Manikka, 59
Sbunaran v Emami 892
Shunmugha v Voyappa 1185
Shutte v Amnessey, 676
Shrinivas v Meherbai, 218
Sheve Pan v Maung Po 1372 1378
Shewe Sia v King Emperor, 437
Shyama Bai v Purushottam 1191
Shyama Charan v Abhiram 898
Sbyama Charan v Hiras Mollah 945, 991
Sbyamaanda v Rama Kanto, 191, 193 518 703
Shyamlal, In the matter of, 753
Shiar Noma v K Emperor 1286
Shibdyal v Gouree Roy, 1163
Shibnarayan v Tarangini 1020
Sibo Sundari v Hemrangini 851
Sib naran v Rimeswar 650
Sibt Mahomed v Mahomed, 1103
Sibu Sant v Netai Charan, 1203
Sidney v Sidney 1101
Sidik Haji v Mahomed Farug, 1201
Sidlooj v Ramoji, 630
Sikander v Emperor, 404
Simen Elias v Forawar Mull 1034
Simla Bank v Bull, 991
Summons v Rodall 893
Simmons v Simmouss 1276
Simpson v Crowe, 1189
Simpson v Dismore, 143
Simpson v Robinson 149, 177,, 247
Simpson v Thompson 176
Simpson v Wills 189
Sims v Doughty, 34
Simon v Anglo American Telegraph, 1140
Sinclair v Stevens, 801, 802, 961
Singara v Upendrayya, 963
Sir Bibi Lalk's case 576
Sindar Kuar v Chandra Nath, 709
Siraj Husain v Bulaki Ram, 915
Sir L Seymour's Case, 888
Sir John Leuwick's trial 757
Sir John Friend's trial 731
Sunder Mull v Satya Kinkar, 1033
Suta Devi v Gopal Saran, 630 643 651 891
Sital v Emperor, 367
Sital v Dealnney 3
Sital v Emperor, 161
Sital v Gaya, 623
Sital Singh v Empress 726
Sital Prosad v Bidri, 993 1199 1200
Sital Prosad v Monohari 291
Sita Nath v Mohesh, 567
Sita Ram v Amir Begum, 619, 1142
Sitaram v Emperor 865
Sitaram v Gaya 328 1117
Sitaram v Himat Rao 598
Sitaram v Khublal, 573
Sitaram v Laxmin Rao, 655
Sitaram v Malehand, 1169
Sitaram v Nanlu 1107, 1127
Sitaram v Puri, 334
Sith Maniklal v Bhoj, 54
Sitwell, etc v Phipps, 664
Sivaji Vijiya v Chimma, 1400
Sivaji v Chimma, 771 774
Sivanganja v Mottu Rimalinga, 188
Sivananji v Muthu 189
Siva Prasad v Tricundas, 623
Sivaraman v Ibbaram 620
Sivamiyya v Venkatagiri, 1139
Sivasami Pillai v Emperor, 446
Siva Subramanya v Secretary of State, 865
Sivithi v Vasudevan 1093
Sizer v Burt 288
Skaife v Jechson, 314
Skelton v Howling, 461
Skb Abdul v Emperor 404
Skb Karimullah v Gudar, 850
Skilbek v Gurbett 275, 276, 278
Skullen, Re, 989
Skinner v Orde, 1137
Skinner v Skinner 1137
Skiff v Horke, 753
Slack v Buchanan 297
Slade v Fucker 1246
Slaney v Wade, 528 534, 535, 536, 546, 547, 549
Sladen In re 888
Slator v Lawson, 314
Slaton v Pooley 289 342, 346 347, 359 763, 793, 907

- Slavin v Coal Co 677
 Slaymaker v Gundacker, 295
 Sleeper v Van middles worth 1125
 Slicer v Bank of Pittsburgh, 1116
 Slight v Harts shore 985
 Sligsby v Granger 1003
 Sloman v Herne, 333
 Sly v Dredge, 507 509
 Sly v Sly, 511
 Small v Gregory, 1350
 Small v Narain, 560
 Small v Williams, 81
 Smart v Williams 496 576 739, 981
 Smets v Plunket, 716 717
 S M Firm v R M Firm, 842
 Smith v Anderson, 576
 Smith v Andrews 553
 Smith v Blackey 467 496 497, 502
 504 507 510 512, 514, 515
 Smith v Brandy 287, 614
 Smith v Boston Elevated Ry, 461
 Smith v Brownlow (Earl) 525 552
 Smith v Callender, 8
 Smith v Campbell 1008
 Smith v Cooper 550
 Smith v Doe, 1005, 1021
 Smith v East India, 1235, 1239
 Smith v Emperor, 357 358 378 384
 385 1064, 1111
 Smith v Griffith 571
 Smith v Henderson 143
 Smith v Hudson, 708
 Smith v Jeffreys 1011, 1021
 Smith v Key, 1087
 Smith v Lawrence 54
 Smith v Lucas, 1003
 Smith v Ludhri Ghella, 22
 Smith v Lyon, 295
 Smith v Milburn 730
 Smith v Miller 921
 Smith v Mokhuu 1161
 Smith v Monterith 960
 Smith v Moore, 563
 Smith v Morgan 313 1375
 Smith v Neales, 1212
 Smith v Palmer, 296 348
 Smith v Patterson 811
 Smith v Portsmouth Justices 14
 Smith v Smith 295 326 338 507, 661,
 850
 Smith v Sarinbury, 695
 Smith v State 391
 Smith v Tebbitt 515
 Smith v Tibbit 546
 Smith v Tilly 20
 Smith v Walton 691, 697
 Smith v Wittingham, 326
 Smith v Wilkins 179
 Smith v Wilson 934 1020
 Smith v Woodfire 175
 Smith Inbonis 831
 Smith, In re 14, 961, 1071
 Smith Re Williams v Frere, 1386
 Smith, Re, 1070
 Sneed v State, 563
 Sneesby v Lancashire and Railway Co
 418
 Snook v Watts, 1134
 Snow v Paine, 244
 Sobha v Emperor 114
 Sobhag a Bhaichand, 323
 Sobhandari v Srimamulu, 314
 Sogamutha v Emperor 423 424
 Sogamutha Padgala, In re 424
 Sohagbati v Surendra, 1116
 Solano v Lalla Rimal, 1157
 Solai Naul, In re, 920
 Solam v Emperor, 399, 402
 Soldar Mondal v Nilcomal, 1197
 Solice v State 97
 Solita v Yarrow, 857
 Solomon v Horne, 332
 Solomon v Solomon 458
 Solomon Jacob v National Bank Ltd
 1195
 Solway, Re, 285
 Somana v Gadigoya, 952 959
 Somnath v Hindu 1162
 Somerset v France 180, 194
 Son v Terr, 113 115
 Sonari v Daulat 26, 33
 Sonamash v K E 1064
 Sonbhav v Jugwan 1189
 Sondak v Crown 79
 Sonatun v Dinonath 840
 Soner v Mahabharat 1063
 Sonilal v Kabrayalal, 326
 Sookna v Gundhoo, 954
 Sookram v Ramlal, 797
 Sooran v Achmal, 297
 Sooran v Achmat 457, 458 567
 Sooltan v Chandibibi 287, 460
 Sooraj Kant v Khodu Narain 1229
 Soorjo v Bishumbhar, 197
 Soorjomonee v Suddananda 197 21
 619
 Soosalal v Emperor 130 131 132, 13
 Sorabji v Mata Din, 875
 Sorabji v Tarachand, 1195
 Suraj Kunwar v Uned Ali, 500
 Sounson v U S 1111
 Sorjon v Sardar Singh 548
 Sorju v Sukki 1000
 Sorman v Molla, 979
 Soshi Bhusan v Girish, 597 860
 Soshi Bhusan v Ranjan 605
 Soshi Kumar v Chandni, 655
 Soshimukhi v Bireswar, 604
 Soto v Terr 98
 Sourindra v Surnamoyee, 613
 South v People, 435
 Southern Ex Co v Thomson, 692

Southern Ins Co v White, 297
 South Indian Industrial v Rama Jo, 1
 945
 South Staffordshire v Ebb Smith, 1485
 1486
 Southwell v Bowditch, 984
 Southwest v Williams 470, 522
 Southwork etc Co v Quinch, 1248
 Soword v Leggat, 1031
 Spordlaw v Cotterill 921
 Spargo v Brown, 282
 Sparker v Reynolds 504, 1386
 Spenceley v De Willott, 1309
 Spenceley v Wilmot, 179
 Spencer v Metropolitan Board of Works,
 7
 Spencer v Williams 629
 Spencer Cowper v Trial, 166, 256
 Spensor v Beiling 813
 Spicer v Cooper, 1020
 Spiers v Brown, 271
 Spiers v Parker, 1056
 Spelling In the goods of, 1078
 Spinner's Case, 121
 Spittle v Walton, 1221
 Spokes v Grosvenor, 1264
 Spurgo v Brown 294, 296
 Sprague v Sprague, 692
 Springfield v State, 721
 Sprinkle v United States, 82
 Squire v Campbell 1021
 h Rasul v Emperor, 1219
 S R Reg v Mallow Union, 1
 Sree Dhoran v Narayan, 287
 Sreekant v Rajnarain, 897
 Sreeman v Gopal 54 772 774
 Sreematty Mohen Bibi v, Saralchand,
 1396
 Sreematty Phooddee Bibee v Gobind
 Chunder 856
 Sreenath v Bindo, 457, 458
 Sreenath v Chevaderath, 1162
 Sreenath v Monmohini 458
 Sreeputty v Loharam 924
 Sree Sankarachari v Varada Pillai, 1184
 Sreestie Dhur v Sreenath 460
 Sreeman v Gopal 1124
 Sri Balusu v Sri Balusu, 1229
 Sri Chidambhorai v Varama, 1033
 Sri Datla Venkata v Gathan, 1098
 Sri Ganesh v Keshavro, 639
 Sri Kant v King Emperor 682
 Sri Kishen v Hari Kishen, 292
 Sri Kishen v Jodhari 1063
 Sri Kishen v K E, 451
 Sri Kishna v Relunal 289
 Srimati v Bonamali, 173
 Srimati v Bindoo 290
 Srimati v Pitamber 308
 Srinath v Bindoo, 458
 Srinath v Kuloda 899

Srinath v Probodh 1074
 Srinivas v Chenden 908
 Srinibhash v Monmohini, 1003
 Srinivas v Athmaram, 980
 Srinivasro v Emperor, 1138
 Srinivasagihaya v Gopal, 1185
 Sripathi v Queen, 34
 Sri Protup v Sri Raja Jagadish, 183
 Sriputra v Kanhayalal 902
 Sri Radha Kishan v Wajid Ali, 642
 Sri Raghunanda v Sri Brojo Kishore, 772
 Sri Rajah Prikasiam v Venkata 1303
 Sri Raja Sam v Raja of Pittapur, 568
 Srimam v Emperor 447
 Srimam v Firm of Gobha Ram 937
 Sri Ram v Nand Kishore, 1094
 Sri Ram v Ram Lal, 809
 Sri Ramsuhba v Venkateratnam 913
 Sri Rangammal v Saudammal, 647
 Sristidhar v Rasha Kali, 835
 Stafford v State, 435
 Staffords (Earl of) Trial 123
 Stainer v Burgesses of Droitwich 591, 755
 Stamursh v Hardy, 315
 Standard v Dunbine, 1145
 Standen v Chimas, 17
 Standen v Standen 509
 Standered Oil v Haridas, 943
 Stand Field's Trial 120
 Stanley v White, 179
 Standae v Creighton, 309
 Stanton's Case, 391
 Stapleton v Clough, 488, 493
 Stapleton v Nowell, 762
 Statham v Statham, 750
 Starge v Buchanan, 288
 State v Adams, 116 1167
 State v Baldwin 147
 State v Banner 1352
 State v Beckner 725
 State v Beech, 716
 State v Bohan, 177
 State v Baldwin, 479
 State v Boswell 1335
 State v Broughton, 360
 State v Cameron 1222
 State v Campbell, 561 1301
 State v Chandler 695
 State v Cicely 127
 State v Clark 150
 State v Cloughger, 725
 State v Davidson 342
 State v D'wolf 130, 1223
 State v Dreary 820
 State v Evans 299
 State v Felter, 672
 State v Fildment, 380
 State v Fletcher 107
 State v Foley, 81

- State v Gilman, 360
 State v Goldsborough, 43
 State v Gue 360
 State t Huston, 695
 State t Hill 380 562
 State t Hinchman 1116
 State v Humphrey 247
 State v Huss 692
 State v Hyden 875
 State t Jandell, 1323
 State t Johnson 727
 State t Jones 386
 State t Korne 62
 State t Knight, 677
 State v Laundry, 1397
 State v Lanton, 712
 State t Lee, 735
 State v Legg 386
 State v May 166
 State t Mc Lighton 93
 State v Mc Nally 720
 State t Millum 123
 State t Mitchell, 435
 State v M & L Rail Road, 244
 State v Mary 720
 State t Neat 130
 State t N O Waterworks Co 564
 State v Parish 1303
 State t Penney 436
 State v Pennington 731
 State t Phur 492
 State r Porter 300
 State t Powell, 675
 State t Railwood 274
 State t Rothburn 113
 State t Reed, 115 121
 State t Reihport, 460
 State r Roberts, 932
 State r Robinson 157
 State r Rodman, 720
 State t Ryder 82
 State v Singh 676
 State t Shaw 277
 State r Shute 675
 State r Smith 695
 State r Stenson, 1114
 State r Street, 69
 State t Terrell 474
 State t Timbes 460
 State r Turner, 863
 State r Tuter 27
 State r U S 125
 State r Vagenaar 34 412
 State r Wagner 9, 33
 State r White, 120
 State r Willie 25
 State r Wilson 474
 State r Wind 672
 State r Winkl 705
 State r Winkler 77
 State r Winkler 77
 Stead v Heaton 506, 512
 Steel t Dixon, 24
 Steel v Stewart, 1249
 Steele v Savory, 1386
 Stegall v Stegall, 1101
 Stein Killer v Newton, 1376, 1379
 Stell v Pickett, 532
 Stephen v Heathcote 315
 Stephen v Meely 37
 Stephenson v State 741
 Stephenson, In re 1010
 Stenyer v Droitwich 793
 Stephenson Re, 999
 Sterge v Buchanan 817
 Stetson v Gulliver, 789
 Stevens v Breach, 1333
 Stevens v Continentl, 295
 Stevens v Stevens, 39
 Stevens t Thacker 302 303
 Stewart v People, 168
 St George v St Margaraes 1191
 Sukema v Dison 1168
 Sules t Cardiff, 303
 St Johns Hamstead v Cotton 4
 St Leonards v Ashburner 180
 St Louis & S F R Co v Denborn, 40
 Stobart v Dryden 474 475
 Stockdale v Busuley, 1003
 Stockdale t Hansard, 177, 747
 Stockdale t Trial, 286, 614
 Stocken v Collin 276
 Stokes v People 246
 Stockfield t De Tastel, 203
 Stockman v Hampton, 804
 Stockton v Dennuth, 302
 Stockwell v Myers 325
 Stokes v Davies, 517
 Stokes v People 121
 Stohiz v Scott 489
 Stonnard t Demekin, 1213
 Stone t Foxall 33
 Stone v Da h 603
 Stone s Case, 159
 Stoops t Smith 1021
 Storr v Scott 576
 Story t Niddeffer 281
 Story t State 142
 Strand t Strand, 1176
 Strange t Donohen 86
 Stranger t Searle, 697
 Stranes v Goldschmidt, 32
 Strangeway s Case, 117
 Strathern v Pad len 36
 Stratton t Ra tall 460
 Straley, In the goods of, 634
 Streemula t Rumanawati, 913
 Streator t Barlett 852
 Stranger t Gardiner 148 1014
 Stringer s Fate 195
 Strode r Russell 1005
 Strong v Bruner 681, 689

Strotter v Boor, 907
 Strudy v Sanders, 461
 Struett v Boovngdon 560
 Stuart v Lovell 247
 Stuart v Sherman, 616
 Sturge v Buchanan 616
 Sturgeon v Wingfield 1201
 Sturla v Freccia 466 488 496, 497,
 515 576, 587 589 592 861, 881
 Suddhishu Mills v Juggi Lal, 665
 Subala Dasi v Indrn Kumar, 1312
 Subha Chetti v Queen, 31
 Subbaraya v Krishnappa 1201
 Subhah v Emperor, 1328
 Subhoraya v Krishnappa, 1196
 Subbhyar v Kappusamy 937
 Subba Singh v Rustam Singh 594
 Subhri v Emperor 1330
 Subhoya v Muttiah 1015
 Suhodra v Ram Ruttan 991
 Subramani v Ram Krishna, 301
 Subramania v Corea 1191
 Subramani v Dorai Singh, 546
 Subramania v Govt of Mysore 868
 Subramani v Narayanswami, 973
 Subramania v Rajeswar 993
 Subramania v Ramanathan 319
 Subramania v Shimmuga 871
 Subramani v Vaidinatha 643
 Subramania v Arunachalan, 931
 Subramania v Seethaya 902
 Subramanya v Subramanya, 1051
 Subramanya, In re, 1373
 Subramanya v Mysore, 1309
 Subramanyam v Pomasorin 211
 Subramanyam v Paranswami, 225
 Subran Sheikh v Udu Mahto, 191
 Suchit v Mahomed Habibullah, 1173
 Sudaman v Bihari 1063
 Sudhama v Queen Empress, 1229
 Sudhamayn v Gour, 75
 Sudhital v Sheoborat, 1092
 Sufan v Emperor 726
 Sugar v Manraj, 170
 Sugden v Lord St Leonards 122, 248,
 251, 466, 467, 792 808
 Suka v Rakho 114
 Sukaram v Kalidas 989
 Sukan Rao v Kam Mahtor 1033
 Suka Rant v Emperor, 448
 Sukdeo v Abdul 1053
 Sukdeo v Ganesh, 1493
 Sukdeo v Emperor 449
 Sukhan v Emperor, 415 417 421 424
 Sukhan Rai v Chakwari, 993
 Sukharam v Minda, 1395
 Sukh Dial v Mani Ram, 925
 Sukkwaria v Emperor, 402
 Sukhlal v Jutha 979
 Sukhlal v Tarachand 643
 Sukhnandan v Brijnandan, 1048

Sukhram v Crowdy, 644
 Sukhamrao v Kalipada, 933
 Sulochann v Jagatdhar 1020
 Suleeman v Mehadi 1030 1037
 Sulliam v Norton, 1341
 Sulochanna v Jagnttarini, 990
 Sultan Bibi v Magota 946
 Sumitr v Ram Kunr, 73, 74, 1402
 Summer v Mossely, 1306, 1318
 Summons v State, 567
 Sandari v Chunder, 836
 Sundapannan v Gundapani, 970
 Sundara v Venkataynada 323
 Sundar Kumaree v Keshori Lal, 1093
 Sundaram v Emperor, 1290
 Sundaram v Theetbarappa, 212
 Sundar Das v Fntimul 595
 Sundari v Gaganendra 73
 Sundari v Mukta 317
 Sundar Singh v Bhan Singh 1185
 Sundar Singh v Emperor 1289
 Sundari v Ganganendra, 73
 Sunder v Sham 74
 Sunder v Sital 37
 Sunderji v Abigor, 970
 Sunderland v Kearney, 1009
 Sundersons v Judge, 275
 Sunkaracharya v Manali, 337
 Superintendent v Hiranbala, 859
 Superintendent v Kiran Bala, 684
 Superintendent v Lalit Mohan 404
 Superandhwaji v Gorurudhwaji, 187 597
 Surajbali v Tilokchand, 542
 Suraj Bukeb v Sukdhar, 1329
 Suraj Kuar v Umed Ali, 169
 Suraj Prosad v Standard L J Co 1308
 Surat v Rani 799
 Surat Singh v Baldeo, 1091
 Surat Singh v Rani 808
 Surendra v Brojendra 147, 198 199
 201, 202, 203
 Surendra v Emperor 404 413
 Surendra v Jaded Ali, 1175
 Surendra v Kamakhya 792
 Surendra v Khitendra 1193 1207
 Surendra v Ram Dasi, 1053
 Surendra v Ramee Dassi 1351 1395
 Surendra v Rani Dassi 1353
 Surendra v Sambhupati, 900
 Suresh Chandra v Emperor, 1278
 Suresh Chandrav K E 681
 Suresh Chandra v Sitaram, 597
 Surja Prosad v Jeti Prosad, 1050
 Surjan v Sardar 531
 Surjo v Bissambhar, 16
 Surjemoni v Rati Nath, 1020
 Surjya Kant v Emperor 1272
 Surnomoyee v Ganga 1182
 Surnomoyee v Johur Mahomed, 577
 578, 583
 Saroj Kumar v Umed Ali, 172

Sursingh v Secretary of State 1160, 1238
Suruj v Bhagwati 314
Suruj Narun v Ratanlal, 336
Surwrigur Begum v Broder, 833
Sarwar v Emperor, 684
Sushoe Mokhee v Bisesuri 608
Sushil Chandra v Emperor 290
Sussex Peerage Case 3 4 474 476
488 495, 502 503 509 510 611,
612, 673 1018
nutherland v, M Loughlin 338
Sutharoon v nanaripiri 1189 nuthethwute v Powell, 1073
Suttan v Devonport 127
Suttan v Gregory, 576
Suttan v Sultan, 2 14
Sutu Hewlader v Alcp 192, 222
S V A G v Exeter Corp 17
Syaymbu v The Municipal Council 14
S Venkataraj v Narasayya 519
Swan v Nagbi, 676
S Wells Miners' Federation v Gil maison 153
Swami v Pillai, 401
Swami v Sundrari 799
Swamidin v Kaniz, 845
Swaminidha v Swaminatha 1156
Swamidin Singh v Kaniz Fatima 837
Swaminatha v Dirmalinga, 1153
Swaminatha v Namalinga, 1189
Swan v Dey 1496
Swan v Lewis 819
Swan v North British Australian Co., 1188 1208
Swan Singh v Karim Baksh 902
Swantriva v Girabha, 952
Swarnomoyee v Surendra 341, 501,
600, 904
Swell v Evans 143
Sweet v Lee 987
Sweet v State 721
Sweet v M'Lernan 598
Swift Sure Re, 5 183, 518
Swimerton v Columbia Ins Co 754
Swire v Bell 846
Syad Looft Hossein's Case 1045
Syam v Secretary of State, 621
Syama Charan v Jhadoo 1012
Syamanandan v Ruma Kant, 533
Syama Sundari v Jagabandhu, 601
886
Syamlal v Luchman 603
Sybray v White 332
Syed v Massuban, 808
Syed Abbas v Yadeen 803
Syed Ahmad v K. E., 1489
Syed Ahmed v Magnus de Syndie 56
Syed Ali v Manik Chandra 1193
Syed Ali v Maniyan 1170
Syed Amer Ali v Heera Singh, 1184

Syed Fakir v Madhusudan, 883
Syed Hasan v Sheonarayan, 1119
Syed Ismail v Hamidi Begam, 287
Syed Mahammad v Nannaram, 203
807, 820
Syed Mahamed v Syed Ali, 23, 961
Syed Mahamed Hasan v nyed Ali, 1180
Syed Mokran v Cuttrick Municipality
871
Syed Muzzum v Pirthu Singh, 1184
Syed Parghah v Gulal abah 812
Syed Tajummal v Binwari, 221
Syenuddin v Sannuddin 1478
Symmos v Blake, 247

T

Tarntji's Case 110
Tari v Saudagar 595
Tidipalli v Rukmaniamma 1139
Tadman v Harman, 1200 1207, 1207
Tafaluddi v Mohar, 840
Taffer Meher v Budge Budge, 961
Taft v Church, 311
Talore, v Tigore 293 1003
Tablrum v Blakewell, 1063
Tulor v Foster, 309
Tam Mahesha v Secretary of State, 946
Tat v Beggs 1398 1399
Tayuddin v Govind 898
Taketnee v Saroo 1204
Tahmash v Emperor 452
Tahak Chand v Atmaram 944
Tahwand v Fatehdin, 1497
Talbot v Curack 1379, 1380
Talbot v Hedge, 692
Talbot v Hud on 848
Talbot v Mansfield, 1253
Talbot v Seeman 590 608
Talewar v Bhagwan Das 1402
Talak v Jogin Nuth 290
Talu v Empress 1111
Tamej Khan v Rajyathi, 78
Tamjunnessa v Porna 8 13
Tanakbul v Lochman 1062
Tanli v Empress 1306
Tan Chand v Chul Sure, 941
Tandy's Trial 231
Tangri v Sheoraj 1196 1207
Tani v Rulhiram 1069
Tannar v Kaldas 748
Tannistry's Case 189
Tante v Emperor, 385
Tannelin v Taylor 1380
Taptr v Att 801
Tara v Abinash 866
Tara Chand v Lakshman 1082
Tara Chand v Reeb Ram 185 187,
191, 193
Tarak v Jermat, 1381
Tarak v Prasanno, 337, 593, 595
Tornak v Joy 1008

- Tarakeswar v Grish Chunder 903
 Tara Kumar v Kumar v Arun Chandra,
 70, 110, 583 596
 Tara Lal v Sarbar Singh 1156
 Tara Monee v Kally Churn, 1036
 Tara Monee v Shub Nath, 934
 Taramonee v Charu, 531
 Taramonee v Gopal 606, 1036
 Tarapada v Kalipada, 640
 Tarapada v Ram Nursingh 322
 Tara Singh v Crown, 415
 Tara Singh v Emperor 376, 423
 Tarinee v Dwariknath, 287, 293, 460
 Tarini v Fakarnissi 606
 Tarini v Siroda, 1306, 1307
 Tarakeswar v Debendra, 864
 Tarpley v Blabey, 246
 Tarack v Jodhester 1048
 Tate v Williamson, 1088
 Tatham v Wright, 829
 Tatra v Sawane 974
 Tattle v Grumwood, 34
 Tatum v Cutimon 1123
 Taula v Emperor 367
 Tavey v Landray 631
 Tawells Trial, 116
 Tayabnissi v Shum Ram, 789
 Taylor v Riggs 793
 Taylor v Baldwin 932
 Taylor v Barclay 750, 752
 Taylor v Briggs 703 1020
 Taylor v Denning, 826
 Taylor v Deplock 1078
 Taylor v Foster, 1258
 Taylor v Hare 1212
 Taylor v Needham, 1200
 Taylor v Newman 1
 Taylor v Oldham County Corporation,
 2
 Taylor v Peek, 348
 Taylor v Williams 72, 127 309
 Taylor v Witham 502 511
 Taylor's Trustee Re, 142
 Teachout v People, 363
 T. B. Ramchandra v Ramchandra 621
 Teja v Empress 445
 Tej Bahadur v Nakko, 114
 Teja Mal v Zulphakar, 807
 Tekra Ahir v Empress, 726
 Tek Chand v Gopal Deyi 1156 1172
 Tek Chand v Mt Palto, 751
 Tej Singh v Munshi 1192
 Temperly v Scott 614
 Templeton v Laurie, 152
 Tenant v Hamilton 105, 350, 1309
 Tenney v Trettle, 715
 The Tentonia Duncan v Kester 753
 Tepanidhi v K E, 79
 Tepu v Rajani 184, 195 199, 201 203
 205, 206, 636
 Teria v Kunwar 1156
 Lester v Arnol, 82
 Teyon v Emperor 1489
 Thakur Singh v Emperor 892
 Thakur Singh v Emperor, 488
 Thacker Sij v Kishendas, 943
 Thakoor Din v Nawab Syed, 1092,
 1093
 Thakoorani v Bishesur, 759
 Thakoor Pershad v Bishmaty, 898
 Thakur Singh v Emperor 1330
 Thakur Patisgi v Banaji, 1204
 Thakur Abdul v Miyan Wahid, 1145
 Thakur Ajmal v Nawab Ali, 1049, 1102
 Thakurdas v Jauraj, 1087
 Thakurdin v Ali Hossain 1089
 Thakur Prosad v Jamna Koer, 1020
 Thakur Rai v Gulzari Ram 978
 Thakur Robini v Vishwanath 964
 Thakur Rudra Pratap v Thakur Niraman Prosad 598
 Thakur Singh, v Emperor, 445
 Thakur Singh v Ghamaya 592
 Thakurani v Rie Jagat Lal Singh, 16
 Thama v Kondor, 641
 Thames Conservators v Hall, 7
 Thompson v Trev union, 79
 Thana v Kondan 212, 595
 Thanda Singh v Hornam Singh, 1190
 Thanet's Trial, Earl of, 231
 Than Kamnal v Mukkatta, 304
 Thanesa v Bomma Devora, 834, 846
 Thandrayna v Emperor 884
 Thar Nyan v L B R, 46
 Thayammal v Nuthu Kumar Swami,
 830 842
 Thayel Bigam v Venkatarama 1165,
 1199
 Thalichierla v Thalichierla 788
 Thelluson v Corling, 590, 608 753
 Threoder's trial, 1360
 Threlfall's Case, 1279
 Thresa v Francis 835
 Thibu v Emperor, 370
 Thikan Ram v Lall 943
 Thiratham v Gunjeswari, 1093, 1094
 Thiruvenguda v Maung Nyo 962
 Thistlewood's Trial, 1270
 Thokakura v Pappayab 944
 Thomas v Cornell, 88 241
 Thomas v David, 1331, 1348, 1349
 Thomas v Decruze 1035
 Thomas v Jenkins, 187, 524
 Thomas v Kedarnath 1363
 Thomas v Kethriche 629
 Thomas v Morgan 250
 Thomas v Newton, 1113
 Thomas v Paul, 783
 Thomas v Parker, 1080
 Thomas v Secy of State, 1253
 Thomas v State, 472 692
 Thomas v Syed Hossain, 1176

Thomas v Thomas, 796
 Thomas Hardy's Trial, 731
 Thomas on v Territory, 244
 Thomas v White, 457
 Thompson v Church, 715
 Thompson v Drake, 314
 Thompson v Gould, 5865
 Thompson v Hall 570
 Thompson v Leach 1122
 Thompson v Mason, 978
 Thompson v Monly 1263
 Thompson v Parls 772
 Thompson v R 146
 Thompson v Rouse 1174
 Thompson v Stewart 890
 Thompson v Stnte, 563
 Thompson v Trevnion 85 90 94 95
 129, 249
 Thompson's Case 97
 Thompson, In the goods of, 836
 Thomson v Austen 286, 350 353, 354
 Thomson v Donaldson 628
 Thomson's Case, 206, 271 336 392
 Thorne v Jackson, 752
 Thorne v Smith 311
 Thorne Exp 12
 Thorne v Tilbury 1210, 1211
 Thornhill In re 1125
 Thornton v Assurance Co, 666
 Thornton v Royal Exchange 676
 Thornton v Stephen 614
 Thorpe v Adams 7
 Thorpe v Gileburne 692
 Thoy Ammal v Subharyn, 1495
 Threbers Trial 144
 Thistlewood's Trial, 1360
 Throgmorton v Walton 1065
 Throp v Holdsworth, 764
 Thornton v Britton 662
 Thukkur Mathand 197
 Thurtle v Hortwell, 7
 Thwaiter v Richardson 312
 Frycross v Grant 7
 Tibbets v Sterbery, 1383
 Tibbobaundar v Krishnam, 1009
 Tidford v Knott 694
 Tikar Mahabir 900
 Tikan v Dhan Kuar, 760
 Tika Ram v Motilal 1199
 Tika Ram v Sukka, 913
 Tikaya Ram v Wami Mitter 1177
 Tikar Chhutu 311
 Till v Amworth 1389
 Tillot v Shebban 789
 Tillot v Imperor 403
 Tilak v Khedampal 242
 Tilak v Patil Kesho 98 991
 Timasagayal v Pongon 893
 Timmar Dargama 646
 Timmar v Luthala 1161
 Timmar v Murad, p 1164

Tin Kler's Case, 1398
 Times v Commonwealth 439
 Tipudis v Emperor 448
 Tiru v Sangudien 1080
 Tipu Khan v Rajoni 701
 Tiru Charna v Sansudhan 1080
 Tiru Vengada v Rangasami, 946
 Tiru Vengada v Tripura Sundari, 10
 Todd v Winchelsea 558
 Toket v Toket 1088
 Tong's Case 1270
 Tooke v Abdool 1224
 Tooker v Small, 34, 1205
 Toony v Williams, 278
 Topandas v Emperor 449
 Tophan v Braddick, 277
 Tophan v McGregor, 814, 1379 1380,
 1382
 Toria v Kunwar, 1035
 Toti Ram v Horgobind 324
 Toti Ram v Mohan, 634
 Toti Singh v Emperor 1278
 Tote v Williamson, 1086
 Tourner v National Provincial Bank
 1486
 Townsend v Graves, 716
 Townsend v Peer, 707
 Townson v Ticknell 1122
 Tracey Peerage Case, 127, 707
 Tracey v People 484
 Troilokin Nath v Shurnochungoni, 901
 Travellers Ins v Sheppard, 96
 Travers v Blundel, 1008
 Traves v Brown, 858
 Travis v January, 1263
 Trevor v Trevor, 1135
 Trul of Cowper, Mason, Stephen and Rogers 731
 Trial of Lord Cornwallis, 57
 Trial of Regicides, 1227
 Trial of R F Warfield 57
 Trial of Queen Caroline, 795
 Tribhuban v Krishnam, 1015
 Tricean v B B & C 1 Ry Co 3
 750
 Tricum Lal v Lakhmichand, 1496
 Trican Panachand v Bombay Burd
 Ry 755
 Trichborne Trial 680
 Trilok v Lachmi 1049 1100
 Triloke v Lala 596
 Trimbak v Bhugwan Das 978
 Trimbak v Gantch 172, 219 520
 Trimb town v D Alton 318
 Trimid v Coryat 290
 Tripura v Lokkan, 201 641
 Tripura v Rukhan 595
 Trichat v Ins Co 116
 Trotter v McLean, 275 277 278
 Troylukho v Mahima, 1080

Trustees of the Harbour v Bertand 1037
 Trustees of P D v Venkatchalam 613
 Tryman v Knowles 1119
 Trywhit v Wynne 1398
 T S Duraiswami v Krisnier 305
 Tucker v Oldbury 502, 504
 Tucker v Hyatt 591
 Tucker In re 312
 Tubani v K E 370
 Tuka Miah v Babin Chandra, 1037
 Tukia Mia v Rabin Chandra, 1037
 Tukaram v Jagannath, 937
 Tukaram v Ramchandra 1164
 Tukaram v Sonaji 653
 Tula Singh v Gopal 829 837 850
 Tullidye v Wade, 178
 Tullis v Kidd, 668
 Tullo v Indra 1156
 Tullock v Dunn, 314
 Tulara v Mathura puri 1016
 Tulshi v Raghuhir, 1048
 Tulsi v Dryaram, 1493
 Tulsi v Emperor 1217
 Tulsi v Secretary of State, 664
 Tulsi Das v Fakir Mahomed, 618
 Tulsi Ram v Basdeo, 970
 Tulsi Ram v Tukaram, 1192
 Tunba v Bandhu Singh 600
 Tunno Miah v K E 1260
 Tunya v Emperor 877
 Turbey v Thomas 764 935
 Turnbull v Forman 8
 Turnbull v O Horn, 303
 Turnbull v Richard-on 671
 Turner v Collins 1088
 Turner v Crisp, 514
 Turner v Hand, 54 682 776
 Turner v Hoar 677
 Turner v Raiton, 352 354
 Turner v Taylor, 1375
 Turner In re 819
 Turner's Case 693
 Turner's Trial, 720
 Turney v State 1319
 Turquauid v Board of Trade 6
 Turquauid v Knight 1244
 Tursolve v Berton 309
 Turton v Benson 352
 Tuttle v Rainey 694
 Twany v Sana Wougdi, 1191
 Tweedie v Proona, 1173
 Tydvil, In re 187
 Tyebally Abdul v James 136
 Tyler v Ulmer 638
 Tyner v Slate, 128
 Tyrrell v Panton 54
 Tyson v Smith 187 189

U

Ubatack Rai v Dalhal Rai, 903
 Uda Begam v Imamuddin, 1, 2, 36
 Udar v Jagat 651
 Udanantbal v Parmeswar, 620, 641
 Udaram v Dujan, 1127
 Udaram v Luxman, 924
 Udar Ram v Gajendra 1171
 Udbe v Puran, 891
 Ugappa v Emperor 453
 Ugrakant v Hurro Chunder 899 903 904
 Ujala v Umakan 1126
 U Kyo v Mg Pan, Yo 978
 Ulagappa v Peria, 1493
 Ulichu v Nallimali 328
 Umad Ali v Sadanmah 1045
 Uman v Gandharp, 54, 594
 Umar Haji v Emperor, 565
 Umasundari v Nallanund 1161
 Umarani v Parak 1175 1179 1183
 Umayamma v Mutiah 1495
 Umed v Khaji Habibulla 501
 Umed v Nawab, 499
 Umed Ali v Habibullah, 533 536
 Umed Ali v Nawab Khaji 494
 Umed nical v Disu 934 980
 Umed Sheikh v Emperor 1272
 Umir Durang v Emperor, 406
 Umer Duraz v Emperor 429
 Umesh v Sagemem 902 1010
 Umesh v Sunendra 951
 Umida v Premma, 789
 Umri v Emperor 510
 Umra v Mahummed 1097
 Umroo v Ram Singh 369
 Underhill v Deshan, 808
 Underwood v Walerin 665
 Underwood v Wing 1073, 1078
 Unde v Permasamy, 1400
 Union Bank v Knapp, 489, 575
 Union S S Co of Newzeland v Melbourne 13
 United State v Gording 305
 United States v Neverun, 1270
 United States v Rynes 750
 United v Reyburn, 1386
 United States v Simson, 695
 University of Illinois v Spalding, 679
 Unkar Nath v Mithun Lal 1033
 Unnopoorua v Maffer Poddar 324 338
 U Nyo v Ma Shwee 1084
 Unram v Parak, 1174
 Upendra v Bhupendra, 1329 1330
 Upendra v Chairman of Calcutta, 223, 224 866
 Upendra v Emperor 442, 446
 Upendra v Hukan, 835
 Upendra v Radha 222 886
 Upendra v Umesh Chandra 908
 Uppra v Paddapalle 799

Venkataratnam v Collector of Goda vari, 1049
 Venkata ratnam v Reddiab 949
 Venkataswar v Ramanatha, 1171
 Venkata Sami v Venkata reddi 184,
 212, 701
 Venkata Subba v Subramania, 938
 Venkata Subba Row v Vigneswora, 1044
 Venkata Subbiah v Emperor, 1029,
 1373
 Venkata Subia v Gohind, 991
 Venkattan v Emperor, 1223
 Venkata Subbiah v Gohin Dorajulu,
 912
 Venn Re, 1003
 Vennicombe v Butter, 851
 Verabhai v Bai Hirabhai 760
 Ver Karmes v Robinson, 1167
 Very v Watkins 739
 Vertannes v Robinson, 1193 1201
 Vertue v L Clive, 153
 Veyindra v Maya Nandon, 323
 Vezey v Rasleigh, 932
 Viokey v Evans 805
 Vicksburge R Co v O'Brian, 97
 Vilayat v Misram 654
 Villiera v Villiers 792 808
 Vincent v Cob 770, 793 907
 Viravadavulu v Yellamanda, 918
 Virappa v Chinna Mathu 839
 Vir v Harnam, 453
 Viraraghava v Ramaswami, 75
 Viravan v Kannappa, 969
 Virjandas v Mahomed Ali 1015
 Vir Singh v Hornam, 289 337
 Virukana v Emperor, 7
 Vishnu v Ganesh 975
 Vishnu v Krishnam, 1152 1179
 Vishnu v New York 1249
 Vishnu Das on behalf of Varanhai,
 1091
 Vishnu Digamhor v B B & C I
 Ry, 1139
 Vislasi v Darasinga 555
 Vithal Mahadev v Daudvalad 895
 Vithoba v Hookum Chand, 958
 Vitthu v Rampi 61 1496
 Vivian v Moot, 517, 1204
 Volart v Soyer, 804 1249, 1263, 1387
 Volkart v Fateh, 103
 Volkart v Vettivelu, 190
 Vooght v Winch, 622
 Vowles v Young, 123, 530 532, 537,
 545
 V R Firm v Md Kassim 834
 Vyankatesh v Ganesh, 911
 Vythilinga v Venkata, 169, 180, 184
 191 217 220, 701

W

Wadcock's Case, 484
 Waddel v Gillassal, 958
 Waddington v Cousins, 85
 Waddington v Roberts 275, 873
 Wade v Brougham, 857
 Wader v East India Co, 1235
 Wadlawa v Emperor 404
 Wadaworth v Hamshaw 1244
 Wader v East India Co, 1239
 Wagan v Doyle, 1199
 Wagataff v Watson 308
 Wagstaff v Wetson, 308, 762
 Wahab v Emperor, 146
 Wahudan v Nasir Khan, 1142, 1167
 Wahid Bux v Emperor, 447, 488 529
 Wahidunnissa v Sugra Das 1161
 Wainright Re, 1078
 Waithman v Weaver 729
 Wajedkhan v Ewaj Ali 1089
 Wajban v Kadir, 314 800
 Wajibunnissa v Valaki Sahay, 1006
 Wajid Khan v Ewaj Ali 1044
 Wake v Harrop, 956
 Waker Re, 1078
 Wakelin v London and South Western Railway 1029, 1030
 Waldele v New York 83
 Walden v Casfield 748
 Waldrige v Kennison 352
 Walford Baker & Co v Macfie & sons, 33
 Walpi Korimji v Jagannath 12
 Walker v Beauchamp, 534
 Walker v Broadlock, 508
 Walker v Mooro 735
 Walker v Parks, 961
 Walker v Richardson, 2
 Walker v Smith, 1091
 Walker v Stephenson 716
 Walker v Wildman, 1244, 1249
 Walker v Wisler, 353 350
 Walker v Wingfield 532 537
 Walker's Cases 82, 119 1492
 Walker, Re 1175
 Wallace v Bank 1113
 Wallace v Laidlow 324
 Wallace v Mathews 764
 Wallace v Small 352 363 354
 Wallace v Barrow, 774
 Walling v Morgan Co, 49
 Wallis v Lattel 972, 974
 Wallis v Pratt 10
 Walter v Haynes 276 278
 Walton Experte 6
 Walton v Green, 256
 Walton v Webster 257
 Walter Michell v Zenert, 973
 Walverkar v Emperor 748 1117,
 Wamanrao v Emperor 1239
 Waras v Ali Baksh 35

- Whitechurch v Cavanagh 1154
 Whitecomb v Whiting 310 311 318
 White v Old Dominion 350
 Whitefield v Brand, 302
 Whitelock v Murgrave, 493
 Whiteby In re 310 315
 Whitfield v Aland 1376, 1379
 Whitehead v Scott, 819
 Whitehead v Tattersall, 333
 Whitecock v Baker, 531, 536, 546
 Whitford v Inten, 806
 Whitelocke v Musgrave 144, 843 845
 Whitefield v Aland, 1379
 Whiteside v State 367
 Whitewell v Wyer, 287
 Whitfield, v Fausset 794
 Whitford v Tuten 801, 817
 Whitker v Hume, 629
 Whitmarsh v George 320, 506
 Withay v Hatder 663
 Whorine v Rautledge, 818
 Whyan v Garth, 827
 Whyatt v Hud on 319
 Whyne v Iyrwheth 515
 Wickham v Marquis of Bath, 832
 Widow's Trust In re 1104 1125
 Wiedeman v Walpole, 280 365
 Wigglesworth v Dallison, 703, 980
 Wihe v Law, 594
 Wilberforce v Hesfield 602
 Wilcox v Godfrey 1367
 Wilkinson v Payne 54
 Willard v Darrah, 1014
 William v Corties, 175
 William Abbott In the goods of, 883
 William Arratoon v Bank of Bengal
 917
 William Cornell, In the goods of, 883
 William Graham, v Phanindra Neth
 223 588
 William Jack & Co v Joosab, 1156
 1158
 Williams v Bartholemew 1202
 Williams v Bickell 748
 Williams v Bludie 1249
 Williams v Bridges, 330, 332, 333
 Williams v Calender, 729
 Williams v East India Co, 1132
 Williams v Tabu, 730
 Williams v Gill 812
 Williams v Gonde 770, 960
 Williams v Graves, 512
 Williams v Ins Co 749
 Williams v Innes, 331
 Williams v Jones, 620
 Williams v Quebrada Ry Co 1213,
 1255, 1257
 Williams v Star News Paper 1236
 Williams v State, 386, 388
 Williams v Thomas 353
 Williams v Warral, 690
 Williams v William, 289 362, 391,
 550 708
 Williams matter of, 550
 Willis' Trust 734
 Willobeghby v Willoughby, 754, 755
 Wills v Bernard 72 256
 Wills v Palmer, 516
 Wills v Quinby 1319
 Wills v State 380
 Wills v Turist, 846
 Wilmot v Burhar, 1174
 Wilson v Anderson 1209 1210
 Wilson Bank of Louisiana, 764
 Wilson v Bohic, 818, 1387 1388
 Winson v Hodges 1065
 Wilson v King, 33
 Wilson v Powers 973
 Wilson, v Rastall 1242, 1247 1249
 Wilson v Frup 1243
 Wilson v Turner 308
 Wilson, v U S, 128
 Wilson v Wilson 673
 Wilson, In bonis 631 834
 Wilson's Case 436 1279
 Witt v Culter 611
 Winchalsen, v Wauchope 829
 Wing v Argrave, 1078
 Wing v Urgraves 1078
 Winner v Hoyt, 959
 Wintte Re, 588 591
 Wiper v Law, 588
 Wise v Bhooabomoyee, 170
 Wise v Sudaloonis-a 771, 773 774
 Withas v George 319
 Withier v Franklin, 145
 Wither v Gould 697
 Withercock v Wsters, 591
 Wodcock v Robinson 933
 Wolddrum v Word, 1247
 Wolf v Wyeth 560
 Wolfe v Railway Co, 231
 Wollaston v Berkeley, 1078
 Wolsey v Worthington, 1215
 Wolverton Mortgaged Estates, 1012
 Wood v Braddick, 309 310
 Wood v Cooper 1379
 Wood v Corporation of Calcutta, 1229
 Wood v Fitz 748
 Wood v Mackinson 1306, 1318
 Wood v Pringle, 1295
 Wood v Sawyer 710
 Woodbury v Ober 671
 Wooncock v Holdsworth, 275 277
 Woodfolk v State 435
 Woodhouse v Balfour, 851
 Woodhouse v W., 1253
 Woodly v Coventry 1213
 Woodman v Dane 854
 Woodnoth v Cobham 496
 Woodruff v Tyler 625
 Woolway v Reg, 322

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

Woolley : Rowe 179, 180, 281, 327
 338
 Woolmanta : Gauga 1101
 Woomech : Rulmim 16, 1053
 Woomech Chunder : Chunder Chunder
 1102
 Woomech Chunder : Chunder Chunder
 809

Woodnath : Lord Cobham 77
 Woodworth : Buchana 179
 Woodworth : Inp 79
 Word : Apprice 127
 Word : Herndon 715
 Word : Simfield 1115
 Work : Phila 1674
 Work : Phila 1674
 Worth : Gilling 970
 Worth : R Co 121
 Worthington : Moore 852
 Wright : Anderson 836
 Wright : Bunyard 801
 Wright : Court, 160
 Wright : Crawfordville 73
 Wright : Doe 178, 522
 Wright : Goff 964
 Wright : Greenough 8
 Wright : Hale 8
 Wright : Hurd 675
 Wright : Holdgate 1101
 Wright : McKee, 714, 715
 Wright : Netherwood 1078
 Wright : Sanderson 851
 Wright : Fatham 67, 69, 76, 81, 81
 129, 467, 522, 558, 567, 637, 701, 778,
 829, 851, 1089, 1398
 Wright : Vanderplank 1089
 Wright : Woodgate 216
 Wurdent : Humeston Ry Co 304
 Wuzer Ah v Kali Coomar, 803
 Wyck : Meal, 315
 Wyatt : Gore 1238
 Wyatt : Lord Hertford, 460
 Wyatt v Hodson 319
 Wyatt v Palmer 645
 Wyatt v Gore 1237
 Wyde v Hopcans 298
 Wymark : Case, 864
 Wynne v Trywhitt, 506, 801, 895

Y

Yudo v Beharal, 908
 Yadun The 8
 Yaggle v Allen 53
 Yahu v Ottumwa, 662

Yakub Khan : Guljar Khan 470
 Yamin : Emperor, 1168
 Yarikalanma : Anakala 626
 Yarmouth : Simmons 23
 Yasin : Ikamera Ayar 119
 Yasin : Emperor 122, 152, 900, 12
 Yawna : Ram Chandra, 679
 Yawna : Pathu 467
 Yawna : Yawna 195
 Yawna : Whyte, 176
 Yellappa : Liphaha 1073
 Yerraguntur : Mukunthappa, 1291
 Yerrant : Daulat, 211
 Yerrant : Subba 791, 83, 8
 Yerrant : Case 1719
 York & N M Ry R, 5
 Young : Holmes 127
 Young : Lexington 11
 Young : Makepeace 671
 Young : Richards, 819
 Young : Robertson 21
 Young : Stangerford 1102
 Young : State, 531
 Young Manufacturing Co v Young
 Yuzumman r Suppan, 978
 Yusuf Ali : Ayub Beg 35, 1072
 Yusuf Husun : Emperor, 1057
 Yusuf Mohomed : Abubucker 1061
 Yusufuzzaman r Bodhani, 1181

Z

Zahur Hosain : Saker Banoo 1207
 Zahur : Emperor 859
 Zainab : Hadjee, 577
 Zakeria : Sakina 197
 Zakaria : Sograb, 1103
 Zakiruddin : Akramuddin, 935
 Zaman Khan : Abdul Rahim 221
 Zamin Ali Khan : Genda 9
 Zaminadar of Liffary : Chidamboram, 1
 Zaminadar S G R Bombay : Vir
 Chetti, 1114
 Zardad : Empress 482
 Zaynub : Hadjee 517
 Zebbedn : Sheo 1184
 Zenora v Wickham, 972
 Zeta : Ramdayal 1015
 Zeta : Emperor 410
 Ziatunmisa : Hasratunaisa, 506
 Ziauddin v Fatma, 799
 Ziaulnisa : Motidov 800, 919
 Ziff : Colchester, 820

ADDENDA.

Preamble (p 9) The law of evidence is a law of procedure and alterations in the law of evidence are, therefore, retrospective in operation, Paras Ram v Meera Kumari Ind Rul. (1930) All 733=125 Ind Cas 762=28 A L J 793

S 3 (p 46) Evidence signifies only the instrument by which relevant facts are brought before Court. Gobaraya v Emperor, A I R 1930 Nag 242 (F B)

S 3 (p 52) The word "proved" means that it is probable that a fact is established that persons should as reasonable men act upon it. The law does not require that facts should be proved with anything like mathematical certainty. The word "disproved" is merely the converse of the previous proposition. The expression "not to be proved" indicates a state of mind between the two states of mind, when it is not possible to say precisely how the matter stands. Emperor v Shafi, 31 Bom L R 515

S 3 (p 58) "Reasonable doubt" is the doubt which is reasonably entertained and not the doubt of a weak or vacillating mind. Emperor v Shafi, 31 Bom L R 515

S 6 (p 81) Statement by a raped girl to her mother after transaction is over is not relevant under s 6—Sreehari v Emperor, 50 C L J 524=A I R 1930 Cal 132, see also Ghulam v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lab 336=31 P L R 109, where it was held that such statement, where it was a part of a res gestae, would be of very little value

S 7 (p 110) Where an accused takes the defence founded on an alibi reasoning from probabilities can not take the place of evidence. Gurdas v Emperor, A I R 1930 Pat 509=1930 Cr C 93

S 8 (p 114) Subsequent conduct when relevant is proof of guilt explained. Chandrika v Emperor A I R 1930 Oudh 234

S 8 (p 130) Complaint in answer to question is not relevant. Emperor v Soofi A I R 1930 Lih 84

S 9 (p 150) Where several persons are charged with conspiracies evidence to show previous association for criminal purposes with approver is admissible to corroborate approver under s 9 or s 11 as regards his statement regarding conspiracy. Emperor v Wahidudin, A I R 1930 Bom 157=32 Bom L R 324

S 10 (p 154) If two persons conspire together to commit an offence, each is regarded as being the agent of another and just as the principal is liable for the acts of the agent, so each conspirator is liable for what is done by his fellow conspirator in furtherance of the common intention which they had both entertained. First you must find that there was a conspiracy, and, secondly, that the person to whom the doctrine is to apply should have joined the conspiracy before they can be made liable for anything said or done by others. Emperor v Shafi Ahmad 31 Bom L R 515

S 11 (p 163) A deed which is not admissible in evidence on account of its being barred under s 49 Registration Act, can be admitted under this section if it is consistent with fact in issue Sheo Bardhan v Shah Deo, A I R 1930 All 130

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

S 11 (p 167) Declaration of religion in formal document and is relevant admission when religion of deceased person is a fact in issue Irong v L

S 13 (p 207) Judgment not inter partes although throwing light on title of landlord is not relevant Panda v Shua 31 Bom L R 375

S 13 (p 211) Judgment in which right under dispute was recognized by Court is admissible as relevant fact Muhammad v Behan Sahai, A I R 1930 All 9

S 13 (p 213) Objections in a judgment relating to a different matter though connected cannot bind a third party and the judgment itself cannot be evidence against him Narasimha v Official Assignee A I R 1930 Mad 701

S 13 (p 214) Where a judgment is not in rem nor relating to matter of public nature nor between the parties to a subsequent suit the fact that the Court by that judgment decides a point in a particular case is not relevant for the purpose of the decision of the same point in the subsequent suit Shankar v Kekeo A I R 1930 Nag 129 (F B) overruling Ramadhan v Punnahole 88 Ind Cas 699=22 N L R 49

S 13 (p 214) Judgments not inter partes in which an adoption was upheld constitute relevant piece of evidence under s 13 Yamunabai v Dhannal 114 Ind Cas 616

S 13 (p 214) Where the question was whether a certain transaction was benami and a prior judgment not inter partes was relied on to prove the motive for the benami transaction held that the judgment was admissible under ss 11 and 13 of the Evidence Act Babai v Ram, 8 Pat 783=A I R 1929 Pat 739 but see Ram Lakhan v Jas Upadhaya, A I R 1929 Pat 719

S 13 (p 217) Decrees not binding on parties as res judicata is not conclusive evidence of enforcement of custom Niamat v Abdul A I R 1930 Sind 103

S 13 (p 217) Recitals in sale deeds in favour of one party to suit showing nature of same land are admissible not only under s 32 but also under s 13 (b) Ali Ram v Moti Lal, A I R 1930 All 299=28 A L J 561

S 13 (p 217) Where the question related to the existence of a permanent tenancy and the will by which the land was conveyed by the tenant to his son contained a recital that there was a permanent tenancy held that the same was admissible in evidence under s 13 of the Act. Pramatha Nath v Champa Das 56 C 275=118 Ind Cas 353=A I R 1932 Cal 473

S 13 (225) Statement made in prior litigation is admissible in subsequent suit Bry Rao v Basant, 118 Ind Cas 154=A I R 1929 A 561

S 14 (p 231) Declaration of religion in formal document is relevant admission when religion of deceased person is a fact in issue Lelong v Leong A I R 1930 Rang 12=7 Rang 723

S 14 (p 250) Evidence of committing theft is not relevant to show stamp of mind in committing dacoity Emperor v Wahiduddin, A I R 1930 Bom 157=32 Bom L R 324

§ 14 (p 256) Previous speech though made about six months before is admissible as evidence of intention of speaker if both speeches form part of speeches on one topic Dan Prakash v Emperor A I R 1930 Lah 867=1930 Cr C 911

§ 17 (p 287) If a statement is to be relied upon as an admission, the whole statement must be taken Juala Das v Pu Santa Das A I R, 1930 P C 245

§ 17 (p 291) Admission raises presumption as to the truth of fact admitted Bhag Singh v Joy Singh, 10 Lah 624=116 Ind Cas 903=A I R 1929 Lah 318

§ 18 (p 314) Admission by one of the defendants that the land in suit is ancestral is not binding on the other, when they are not represented by him and have independent rights of their own Kishan v Lochman, A I R 1930 Lah 138

§ 19 (p 330) Admission and conduct of trustees of public institution cannot be allowed to prejudice institution's conduct materially Balak Ram v Nanupal, A I R 1930 Lah 579

§ 19 (p 330) In a suit on title, proceedings in a previous title suit instituted by defendant against third persons are relevant under s 19 of the Evidence Act Jatiram v Lokenath, Ind Rul (1930) Pat 558=125 Ind Cas 783

§ 21 (p 337) In a suit on title the pleadings of a defendant in the prior suit are admissible as admission under s 21 of the Evidence Act Jatiram v Lokenath Ind Rul (1930) Pat 558=125 Ind Cas 783

§ 21 (p 337) Statement in an unregistered compromise is admissible as admission Satish Chandra v Bireswar A I R 1930 Cal 559

§ 21(2) (p 342) Declaration of religion in formal document is relevant admission when religion of deceased person is a fact in issue Leong v Leon, A I R 1930 Rang 42=7 Rang 720

§ 21(3) (p 343) This clause is intended to apply to cases in which the statement is sought to be used in evidence otherwise than as an admission, for instance as part of the res gestae as a statement accompanying or explaining a particular conduct but it cannot be held that a statement which is inadmissible in evidence under the general rule can be made admissible as such by reference to s 21(3)—Ahca v Emma, A I R 1930 Oudh 441

§ 23 (p 354) Section 23 is no bar to use of admission in compromise, which is not rejected Sadhu Ram v Botha Ram A I R 1930 Lah 293

§ 23 (p 354) Section 23 does not cover cases of letters merely because of the insertion of 'without prejudice' Lucknow Improvement Trust v Ph Jantby, A I R 1930, Oudh 193

§ 24 (p 354) Confession is admission made by accused Khub Kha v Emperor A I R 1929 All 29

§ 24 (p 356) Admission by party in case in which charge is baseless and prosecution is carried to harass party are not voluntary and therefore not binding Secretary of State v G T Sarm, A I R 1930 Lah 364=120 Ind Cas 593

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

S 24 (p 357) A confession is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime stating the inference that he committed the crime Akubai v Emperor, A I R 1930 All 29

S 24 (p 378) Where an accused not shown to have understood English is asked in broken English as to whether he was responsible for the act and he nods his head and remains in reply the conduct does not amount to confession Emperor v Sope A I R 1930 Lah 84

S 24 (p 361) Where the confession is any thing but a full confession the Court is at liberty to use the confession as it stands and derive a deduction of the guilt of the man who made it even while rejecting portions of it which are false Uda Din v Emperor A I R 1930 Oudh 113=6 O W N 1017

S 24 (p 373) If the case against the accused entirely rests on the confession made by the accused and there is a conflict as to the manner in which the confession is obtained the accused is justified in asking the Court to give them the benefit of doubt Rahman v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 88=30 Cr L J 1090=119 Ind Cas 120

S 24 (p 378) The expression used in s 24 of the Evidence Act is not 'proved' but 'if it appears' which is not as strong an expression as "proved" Though the accused has not adduced evidence to substantiate the allegation that the confession was obtained by threat or inducement it is still open to him to show that the circumstances under which it was made would justify that inference Akhu Mondal v Emperor 33 C W N 1112= A I R 1929 Cal 720=57 C 649

S 24 (p 385) A villager exercising no influence or authority is not person in authority Emperor v Kutub A I R 1930 Cal 633=57 C 453, see also Kutappa v Emperor, 1929 M W N 791

S 24 (p 385) Though a too restricted meaning should not be given to the expression "person in authority" in section 24 the test to be applied is whether the person had authority to interfere in the matter and any concern or interest in it would be sufficient to give him that authority Emperor v Akhu Bur Ind Rul (1930) Cal 739=57 C 189=126 Ind Cas 545=A I R (1930) Cal 382

S 24 (p 386) A confession made by an accused person is not invalid merely because it was made under the belief that he would gain some benefit by making it Public Prosecutor v Chandaya, Ind Rul (1930) Mad 899=126 Ind Cas 109= A I R 1929 Mad 92

S 24 (p 389) The question whether a confession made by the accused was made voluntarily or not is a question to be decided by the Judge and not by the jury Akhu v Emperor Ind Rul 1930 Cal 602=33 C W N 1112=57 C 649=125 Ind Cas 730

S 24 (p 392) Retracted confession made voluntarily is sufficient to warrant conviction Rahman v Emperor A I R 1930 Lah 88=30 Cr L J 1089=119 Ind Cas 120 see also Nauab v Emperor 6 O W N 545=118 Ind Cas 757=A I R 1929 Oudh 381 Sauvaldas v Emperor A I R 1929 Sind 23 Kutappa v Emperor 1929 M W N 901=A I R 1929 Mad 837=57 M L J 641 W 642=129 M W N 901=A I R 1929 Mad 837=57 M L J 641 Rahman v Emperor 119 Ind Cas 420=30 Cr L J 1080 But it is a well established rule of practice that a retracted confession must be corroborated by independent evidence in material details before a conviction can be made to rest on it whether against the person who has made it or against the co-accused Miran v Crown 3 P L R 377=116 Ind Cas 621=30 Cr L J 640=A I R 1929 Lah 597, see also Sheonaran v Emperor, 8 Pat 262=10 Pat L T 228=117 Ind Cas 43=A I R 1929 Pnt 212=30 Cl L J 716, Kunja v Emperor, 8 Pat 289=10 Pat L T 549=30 Cr L J 675=A I R 1029 Pat 275 Ajjan Singh v Emperor, 30 P L R 646=119 Ind Cas 325=30 Cr L J 1046

S 24 (p 396) Confession excluded by trial Magistrate wrongly or rightly cannot be relied on in revision Billu v Emperor, A I R 1930 Sind 168=126 Ind Cas 58

S 25 (p 401) A confession made to a Police Officer is inadmissible in evidence under s 25 of the Evidence Act, even if the Police Officer is invested with the powers of a Magistrate Jas Bahadur v Emperor, Ind Rul (1930) Rang 257=125 Ind Cas 337=8 R 52

S 25 (p 401) The question whether or not a statement is to be regarded as admissible as being a confession or not usually arises in the case of a statement made to a man while in custody of police Ambar Ali v Emperor, A I R 1929 Cal 539

S 26 (p 410) Section 26 makes no difference between oral and written confession Jograj v Emperor A I R 1030 Lah 534

S 26 (p 410) Section 26 does not make admission dependant upon knowledge of accused as to the identity of Magistrate Josraj v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 534

S 27 (p 412) Section 27 has nothing to do with the question whether the fact discovered is or is not relevant Sulhan v Emperor, 10 Lah 283=11 Lah L J 150=115 Ind Cas 6=A I R 1929 Lah 344 (F B)

S 27 (p 412) Recoveries alone do not justify person's conviction Sham Singh v Emperor A I R 1930 Lah 01

S 27 (p 416) Joint discoveries are not admissible at all against any of the accused unless it can be shown who first made the discovery Faquara v Crown 30 P L R 397=116 Ind Cas 619=30 Cr L J 639=A I R 1929 Lah 665, see also Emperor v Shriputraya, A I R 1930 Bom 244=32 Bom L R 574

S 27 (p 421) Out of statement containing confession only such portion as leads to discoveries is admissible Superintendent v Bhajoo A I R 1930 Cal 291=34 C W N 106, Manommed v Emperor Ind Rul (1930) Sind 241=126 Ind Cas 62=A I R 1930 Sind 11, Mannun v Emperor A I R 1930 Lah 530=121 Ind Cas 728, Emperor v Shriputraya A I R 1930 Bom 244=32 Bom L R 574, Mohammed v Emperor A I R 1930 Sind 225 Superintendent of Legal Affairs v Bhajoo Majhi, 1030 Ind Rul Cal 605=34 C W N 106=125 Ind Cas 733, Emperor v Mela, 10 Lah L J 531=112 Ind Cas 55=29 Cr L J 967 Sulhan v Emperor, 10 Lah 283=11 Lah L J 1159=A I R 1929 Lah 344 (F B)

S 30 (p 441) This section should be construed strictly Abbor Naidu v Emperor, 1929 M W N 693

S 30 (p 439) Self implication is guarantee for truth of accusation against co accused Khubone v Emperor, A I R 1930 All 29

S 30 (p 452) In the absence of any corroboration connecting an accused with the commission of offence the confession of a co accused cannot be taken into consideration against him Arjan Singh v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 257=30 P L R 646 The question of what corroborative evidence is sufficient must depend on the circumstances of each particular case Ugappa v Emperor 30 L W 403=1929 M W N 272=119 Ind Cas 474=A I R 1929 Mad 498

S 30 (p 454) A retracted confession of a co accused cannot alone be sufficient evidence to justify a conviction but if that confession is un rebutted it is admissible as very strong piece of evidence Sheo Ratan v Emperor, 11 Ind Cas 771=A I R 1929 Oudh 167, see also Arjan Singh v Emperor 30 P L R 646=119 Ind Cas 325, Rahmat v Emperor 11 Lah L J 5=11 Ind Cas 65 Sordora v Emperor, 125 Ind Cas 638, Wajid v Emperor, A I R 1930 Oudh 412, but see Goborya v Emperor 125 Ind Cas 673 (F B)

S 30 (p 455) Confessional statements of accused cannot be used for corroboration of the evidence of the approver inasmuch as tainted evidence is not made better by being corroborated by other tainted evidence Daulat v Emperor 193 Nag 98=120 Ind Cas 321

S 30 (p 457) In cases where the sole evidence against the accused is the confession of a retracted confession such confession if it is relied on must be relied on as a whole and not only in part Durjan v Emperor, A I R 1930 All 92

S 31 (p 459) Under section 31 admissions are not conclusive evidence of the matters admitted Jagannath v Kali, 8 Pat 776=10 Pat L T 191=A I R 1929 Pat 745

S 32(1) (p 488) A dying declaration made at the time when a person is in a precarious condition does not cease to be such and become inadmissible under s 32 of the Evidence Act merely because the declarant happens to linger for a few days more Thakur Singh v Emperor 10 Lah L J 463=119 Ind Cas 177=A I R 1929 Lah 64

S 32 (1) (p 488) First information report is admissible under s 32(1) as the statement of a person since deceased relating to the instances of the transaction Kaper Singh v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 450=31 P L R 81

S 32 (1) (p 488) Where a person dies in hospital after being assaulted and hurt, not of the injuries but of a malady independent of such injuries, such as for example as pneumonia the dying declaration by such person is not admissible in evidence in a trial of his assailants under s 324 Wah Mohammad v Emperor, A I R 1930 Oudh 249

S 32 (1) (p 488) Statement by deceased before third class Magistrate competent to record statement under s 164 Criminal Procedure Code is relevant Gladys v Emperor A I R 1930 Lah 60

S 32 (1) (p 488) A statement cannot be admitted under s 32 (1) of the Evidence Act as dying declaration unless it is a statement made by a person as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death came into question Wali Mohammad v Emperor, 126 Ind Cas 511=A I R 1930 Oudh 749

S 32 (1) (p 488) Dying declaration can be proved by examining person recording it or person who heard its being made It must be taken as a whole and a portion of it cannot be allowed Tafiz v Emperor A I, R 1930 Cal 218=50 C L J 584

S 32 (2) (p 501) The entry in the certificate of guardianship is sufficient evidence to prove the age of particular person Mehpi Ali v Walayat, A I R 1930 Oudh 97

S 32 (2) (p 504) The principle upon which statements coming under s 32 (3) are regarded as admissible in evidence is that in the ordinary course of affairs a person is not likely to make a statement to his own detriment unless it is true Dal Bahadur v Byas Bahadur A I R 1930 P C 79=34 C W N 369

S 32 (3) (p 517) Recitals in deeds in favour of one party to suit showing nature of some law are admissible not only under s 32 (3) but also under e 13 (b) Takaram v Moti Lal A I R 1930 All 299

S 32 (3) (p 518) Statement by a Hindu widow since deceased, as to the power given to her to adopt is not admissible in evidence of such power under s 32 (3) as a statement against her own interest, when the facts are that she adopted one of her own relations after a life long enjoyment of her husband's property Dal Bahadur v Byas Bahadur 34 C W N 369=A I R 1930 P C 79=32 Bom L R 487=58 M L J 446=51 C L J 230

S 32 (3) (p 519) A statement of a neighbour disclaiming his own title to a land and recognising another's title is a statement against the proprietary interest of the person making it and is admissible under a 32, clause (3)—Tika Ram v Motilal, Ind Rul 1930 All 781=1930 A L J 564, but see Ailgiri Nayakar v Perumal, 30 L W 422

S 32 (5) (p 545) Entries in books of parties at places of pilgrimage are admissible to prove relationship Balakram v Nannumal, A I R 1930 Lab 579

S 32 (7) (p 552) A settlement deed under which a promissory note is transferred to the plaintiff if admissible as secondary evidence, may be employed to prove the promissory note under e 32 (7) read with section 13 (a), since a settlement deed constitutes a transaction in which a right was asserted Subba Rayaba v Vengama, A I R 1930 Mad 742=123 Ind Cas 107

S 33 (p 560) A previous disposition can be admitted in evidence only under the provisions of sections 33 of the Evidence Act but before it can be placed on the record of a criminal trial the Court must decide judicially that a proper effort had been made on behalf of the prosecution to secure the presence of the witness that in spite of that effort he had not been treated and could not be found out or that he was incapable of giving evidence or was kept out of the way by the adverse party or his presence could not be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which under the circumstances of the case the Court considers unreasonable Ghulam Haider v Crown 30 P L R. 192=116 Ind Cas 329=30 Cr L J 623=A I R 1929 Lab 542 It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule for the application of this section. Each case must depend upon its own facts and the matter is essentially one for the exercise of the discretion of the part of the presiding Judge. Jati Mah v Emperor, 33 C W N 1215=125 Ind Cas 597=A I R 1929 Cal 165

S 33 (p 570) The true reading of s 33 is that the party had both the the right and the opportunity of cross-examining. Mere opportunity of cross-examining is not sufficient. There must also be the right to do so. Dal Bahadur v Byari Bahadur A I R 1930 P C 79=31 C W N 369. In this section, which requires that the adverse party in the first proceeding "had the right and opportunity to cross-examine" the word 'and' cannot be read as 'or'. The true meaning of the section is that the adverse party had both the right and the opportunity of cross-examining. Ibid. So the deposition of a witness is admissible under this section when the witness is dead and the opposite party had an opportunity of cross-examining him, though he did not avail himself of it. Tafiz Paramani v Emperor, 50 C L J 581=125 Ind Cas 743=A I R 1930 Cal 228. But if the cross-examination of a witness is recorded by a Magistrate in committal proceedings of his own record that deposition is not complete and should not be admitted in evidence at the trial in the course of business. Emperor v Mahab A I R 1930 Sind 54. So also when a sub-Inspector was examined under s 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code but was not cross-examined by the defence his deposition is not admissible under s 30 in the Sessions trial, even when the Sub-Inspector dies before Sessions trial. Tafiz v Emperor 50 C L J 594=A I R 1930 Cal 228.

S 34 (p 581) Relevant entries in account books unless corroborated are not sufficient to fasten liability upon a person. Khum Mal v Duarka Das A I R 1930 All 710=1930 A L J 987.

S 35 (p 592) An entry in the scholar's register made by the father since deceased as regards his son's ngo is admissible under s 35 of the Evidence Act as one made in a public register made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty. Munnal Lal v Kameshwar 114 Ind Cas 801=A I R 1930 Oudh 113.

S 35 (p 592) Although an assessment list prepared by a municipality is not the final or sole test of the liability of the assessee to pay the particular taxes there is a presumption that the assessment list was duly published at the time the assessment was made. Bhuwalpur v Moulani, A I R 1930 Pat 370.

S 35 (p 592) Entries in revenue records prepared by public servant in the discharge of their official duty are relevant evidence of the facts recorded therein under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act s 35. Gangbar v Fakirgouda 51 C L J 592.

S 35 (p 592) Entry in death register may be rejected when used to prove or disprove death on particular day if register is prepared in casual way. Kalipoda v Sashi Bhuxan A I R 1930 Cal 636.

S 35 (p 601) It is doubtful whether entries made in the vaccination register regarding father's name of illegitimate child made three years after child's birth is admissible under this section. Kamappa v Kullammal, A I R 1930 Mad 194=1929 M W N 696.

S 39 (p 614) Because a document is admissible for a certain purpose all recitals statements and references therein cannot be used as proof of the facts to which they relate Til Ram v Moti Lal, A I R 1930 All 229

S 43 (p 668) Recitals of judgments not inter partes of relevant fact are not admissible in evidence Asa Ram v Mansha, A I R 1930 Lah 237

S 45 (p 668) In law and as applied to a witness the term "expert" has a special significance and no witness is permitted to express his opinion unless he is an expert within the terms of s 45 or in special cases is permitted to express such opinion by some special law Ram Das v Secretary of State, A I R 1930 All 587

S 45 (p 678) Evidence of person who is not expert in art of handwriting can be ruled out as inadmissible under s 45—Chet Ram v Jogi Ram A I R 1930 Lah 336=31 P L R 109

S 50 (p 705) That the proofs as to whether there was a marriage between two parties is to include a consideration of the character and conduct of various relations and an estimate is to be formed as to whether on the whole these relations prefer the tie of concubinage to that of marriage is a wrong doctrine regarding proof of marriage The evidence on this subject should not be allowed as it is without competence Mohabbat v Mahomed, 56 I A 201=31 Bom L R 856=33 C W N 645 P C

S 54 (p 724) Evidence to show character of persons associating with accused and nature of association is admissible Emperor v Wahiduddin, A I R 1930 Bom 157=32 Bom L R 324

S 57 (p 754) The question whether a certain property belongs to a particular person or is a wakf property cannot be deemed to be a matter of public history within the meaning of s 57 Evidence Act, and historical works cannot be referred to for the purpose of deciding the question Sant Singh v Rallia Ram, 126 Ind Cas 744=126 Ind Cas 171=A I R 1930 Lah 738

S 61 (p 784) Use of a document to settle dispute does not make it a true copy Abdul Bari v Hrishikesh, 49 C L J 546=A I R 1929 Cal 459

S2 6, Expl I (p 786) One specimen of news paper is counter part original of another of the same date Ram Chandra v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 371=170 Ind Cas 615

SS 65, 66 (p 806) Secondary evidence of sale deeds of houses adjacent to the house in suit, can be given in order to prove title only when the person in possession of the documents fails to produce them in spite of notice given to him Abdul v Kishan 11 Lah L 7 401, see also Molan Lal v Ganida, 13 R D 718, Subarayule v Vengamma, A I R 1930 Mad 742=123 Ind Cas 197

S 66 (p 816) Where oral evidence was given to prove contents of a letter, which was neither produced nor called for, and no objection was raised to the giving of evidence the secondary evidence was inadmissible under s 66 and the subsequent dispensing with the notice would not make the evidence admissible that was inadmissible at the time it was given Profulla v K P, 59 C L J 593

S 68 (p 831) This section has nothing to do with the question about the legality or validity of the instrument itself as an effective document of title, if there has been no proper attestation as required by law Balbahadur v Lakham A I R 1930 All 669=1930 A L J 623=125 Ind Cas 507

S 68 (p 838) Where the executant of a document, who is an illiterate man denies execution and having put his mark to it and all the attesting witnesses are either dead, or have turned hostile or are not available, there is no rule of law which prevents a Court from holding the execution proved when the signature of the attesting witnesses are proved to its satisfaction having regard to all the circumstances of the case Ponnu Sami v Kalyan sundora A I R 1930 Mad 770

S 74 (p 865) Statement during departmental enquiries by Magistrates are not public documents Government of Bengal v Santi Ram, A I R 1930 Cal 370

S 75 (p 866) Abstract statement prepared by a patwari even though based on papers in his possession and filed in suit is only private document Shcodas v Sheo Dyal, A I R 1930 All 712

S 81 (p 879) There is a presumption under section 81 of the genuineness of the specimen of the news paper actually produced Ram Chandra v Emperor A L R 1930 Lah 371=120 Ind Cas 615

S 90 (p 897) There is no presumption under section 90 with regard to unsigned accounts not purporting to be in the handwriting of any particular person Trimbakdas v Muthabai, A I R 1930 Nag 225

S 90 (p 897) The presumption arising under section 90 applies even to the fact that the testator was in a sound disposing state of mind, for the phrase "duly executed" means executed by a person legally competent to execute the document Kotayya v Harran Chut, A I R 1930 Mad 744

S 90 (p 898) The question whether the custody from which a document is produced is proper or not within the meaning of section 90 cannot be determined by any general principles but is one to be determined on the facts of the particular case Bhagwant v Ram Sahai, 126 Ind Cas 19=Ind Rul (1930) All 771

S 90 (p 901) Before any presumption as to the genuineness of a lost document can be made under s 90 of the Evidence Act it is incumbent on the party trying to rely upon the document to lay the foundation by leading secondary evidence under section 65 of the Evidence Act Gayo Prasad v Jaswant Rai, Ind Rul (1930) All 668=A I R 1930 All 815=125 Ind Cas 452

S 91 (p 909) Some evidence of fact is always admissible to assist in a judicial determination of the meaning of the language of parties to an agreement though the parties may not testify as to their intention Morris v David Jones 125 Ind Cas 867=Ind Rul (1930) P C 291

S 91 (p 909) Where there is a document in writing which does not contain the entire agreement between the parties but embodies only some of the conditions, oral evidence to prove certain other terms which had been agreed upon and which are not inconsistent with the instrument is clearly admissible in evidence Co-operative Co v Bhagwan Das A I R 1930 All 615

S 91 (p 909) Provisions of section 91 are not applicable to permission granted under C P Municipal Act s 111 Abdulla v Imbr Das, A I R 1930 Nag 130=120 Ind Crs 221

S 91 (p 910) Where the agreement has been reduced to the form of letters oral evidence of the agreement could not be admitted in evidence Raj Ram v Hukam Chand, 125 Ind Cas 618=Ind Rul 1930 Lah 634

S 91 (913) It is not necessary to get a family settlement reduced into writing and get the writing registered Oral evidence on the point of the alleged settlement is therefore admissible Rangu v Lakshman A I R 1930 Bom 438

S 92 (p 930) Documents evidencing family arrangement affecting immovable property require to be registered and if such documents are not registered they are wholly inadmissible in evidence Bhagwan v Shub Singh A I R 1930 All 341

S 92 (p 930) For the purpose of s 92 of the Evidence Act it is immaterial whether the oral agreement sought to be proved is prior to or subsequent to the disposition Gopala v Sankara Ind Rul (1930), Mad 799=1930 M W N 240=125 Ind Cas 545

S 92 (p 964) Under s 92, mistake of the plaintiff as regards a document can be proved Sukhdeo v Ram Narain A I R 1930 All 387

S 92 Proviso (2) (p 965) Under proviso 2, the existence of a separate oral agreement can be proved only when it is not inconsistent with the terms of the written document or when the matter involved in the oral agreement is a matter on which the document is silent Kala Devi v Jagat Pathak A I R 1930 All 400

S 92, Proviso (2) (p 968) It is open to a party to prove want of consideration or failure of consideration, but it is not open to him to prove a variation in the amount of consideration Mathey Krishnappa v Mohamed, A I R 1930 Mad 759=58 M L J 240

S 92, Proviso (4) (p 976) By proviso 1, oral evidence, varying or modifying terms of a written contract are entirely inadmissible Collector of Fatah v Kishori Lal, A I R 1930 All 721 (F B)=1930 A L J 1193

S 92 Proviso (6) (p 988) Oral agreement showing the nature of document is not admissible but Court can take into consideration circumstances if document is of doubtful tenor Lakshmaya v Murari A I R 1930 Mad 517=11 M L W 516=1930 M W N 129 Where the document is silent as to interest of two joint transferees, evidence of subsequent conduct is not barred as between the transferees inter se Pamayya v Yamataru A I R 1930 Mad 590

S 93 (p 988) In a suit for pronote where one defendant denies his liability on the ground that he signed the document as an attesting witness, oral evidence to prove that the defendant was executant and hence liable under the terms of the contract was held to be admissible Mohammad v Saichul A I R 1930 All 700

S 94 (p 1001) Where the dispute is not as to the existing facts but as to what is intended by the parties to be done by them in future, s 94 does not R apply and mutual mistake of fact can be proved Dalip v Dalip, A I R 1930 Lah 446=122 Ind Cas 193

S 101 (p 1031) Where all material facts are before Court, question of burden or proof is not pertinent Trimbal v Mithabai, A I R 1930 Nar 225, see also Ma-iappa v Palanuppa A I R 1930 Mad 796=125 Ind Cas 68

SS 101 102 (p 1031) The plaintiff has to state when his cause of action arose and it lies upon him to substantiate his statement To cast the burden on the defendants would run counter to the provisions of §§ 101 and 102, Evidence Act Subbarayudu v Lonnama, A I R 1930 Mad 712=123 Ind Cas 197

S 104 (p 1033) Grave and serious onus rests on persons seeking to displace natural succession by act of adoption Bilal Khan v Nanu Mal A I R 1930 Lah 579

S 108 (p 1075) The presumption raised by this section is confined to the presumption of death and not to the exact time when death may have occurred Jewan Singh v Kuar Rooti A I R 1930 All 127=1930 A L J 469

S 112 (p 1093) Child born nine months after death of his father was held to be legitimate Bharon Pershad v Gopi Kunwar, A I R 1930 P C 139

S 114 (p 1103) Presumption referred to in illustration (a) to section 114 is not confined to charges of theft but extends to all charges however penal not excluding even murder This presumption relates to offence of dacoity also Ram Surup v Emperor, A I R 1930 Pat 513=9 Pat 606

S 114 (p 1127) Where a person executing a deed required by law to be registered is of full age when appearing before the Registrar, and admits the execution of the deed, the presumption is that the transaction to which the deed relates is valid Mohammed v Mohammed, A I R 1930 All 605

S 115 (p 1155) Defence of estoppel can always be taken if it is warranted by the facts proved or admitted even if those facts have not been specifically pleaded Co operative Loan Bank v Shanmugan A I R 1930 Raj 265

S 115 (p 1180) Acts in representative character do not create estoppel on personal claims Ram Horalh v Hanuazt, A I R 1930 P C 249

S 115 (p 1187) Next presumptive reversioner consenting to and acting upon family arrangement agreed to on acceleration of estate by limited owners is estopped from challenging it Polhar Singh v Dulari Kunwar A I R 1930 All 683=1930 A L J 655=125 Ind Cas 1

S 116 (p 1201) The words 'continuance of tenancy' in s 116 apply to the tenancy in question in the same suit in which the estoppel arises and not to any previous tenancy Nagindas v Bahadur, A I R 1930 Bom 395=32 Bom L R 692

S 116 (p 1202) A tenant attorning to the mortgagee and paying rent to him will be estopped from questioning the mortgagee's title in a suit for ejectment by the mortgagee Nagindas v Bahadur A I R 1930 Bom 395=32 Bom L R 692

S 118 (p 1219) Evidence by child should be accepted with caution Mannu v Emperor A I R 1930 Oudh 406

S 145 (p 1330) Failure to object to the admission of a previous statement made by a witness does not amount to the use of it as substantive evidence or its use against the provision of s 145 of the Evidence Act Gobind v Baldeo 126 Ind Cas 369=A I R 1929 Pat 305

S 157 (p 1369) Deposition of attesting witness in prior proceeding if, he being alive is examined in subsequent case can only be used to contradict or corroborate him Ponnusami v Kalyan A I R 1930 Mad 770

S 157 (p 1370) Oral evidence of what a witness had said on the occasion of an identification parade in the presence of a competent Police Officer of the Bombay City Police is admissible in evidence under s 157 of the Evidence Act to corroborate a subsequent statement made by the witness Wahuuddin v Emperor Ind Rul (1930) Bom 429

S 159 (p 1378) Section 159 does not render the notes of a speech inadmissible in evidence Om Prolash v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 867=1930 Cr C 911

SS 159 to 161 (p 1378) §§ 159 to 161 permit a limited use being made of post mortem notes of medical officer, namely that for refreshing his memory or by a party for the purpose of contradicting the witness Mohamed v Emperor, A I R 1930 Sind 225=1930 Cr 865

---

INTRODUCTION

When we speak of the law of any subject, we are taken to mean those rules by which its consideration is to be governed. The laws of honour are the general rules of honourable conduct, the laws of thought are the fundamental principles of thought, the laws of war are the rules and usages recognised and accepted among civilized nations for regulating the conduct of the belligerents, the law of nature is the uniform occurrence of natural phenomena in the same way or order under the same conditions so far as human knowledge goes. The law of evidence, and by "evidence" is always to be understood "legal evidence," consists of those rules, statutory or otherwise, which regulate the acceptance or rejection of that information to a legal tribunal which will justify a conclusion or judgment upon the matter in issue before it. Those rules have been adopted from the experience of ages not only to regulate what evidence shall be admitted and what excluded but the way in which it shall be presented or objected to—the mode and order which its component parts shall assume—what shall be the extent of its recognition and cogency—what quantity and quality of proof if any, shall be called for with respect to any particular matter submitted. Such are broadly the rules of evidence which taken together, are called the 'law' of evidence. A rule of evidence is defined by Barlier P J, in Lapham v Marshall, 51 Hun (N Y) 561=3 N Y Supp 601, 603, to be the mode and manner of proving the competent facts and circumstances upon which a party relies to establish the fact in dispute in judicial procedure.

In Sir James Stephen's monumental Digest of the Law of Evidence, he named the great artery of law which defines rights and duties and liabilities the substantive, and the next in importance by which that substantive law is applied to particular cases, the law of procedure.

Wherever the human race has existed and under whatever conditions,—whether as some savage tribe in the heart of Africa or as the most enlightened community of modern times,—the distinct personality of its members has always been prominent. Man is, above everything an individual. However much he may combine for protective, social or commercial purposes, it is the distinct personality of the individual which is seen in all the relations which are established. In this fact that man is an individual complete in himself and not a component part of some larger personality lies the idea which distinguishes between "mine and yours"—the idea of ownership. This idea implanted in man as a part of his nature is at the basis of all law—upon it the whole system rests. Rules which have from the inception of the human race governed human action are developments of this idea. These rules made up a large part of the law of the primitive peoples. They were rules which expressed general rights with respect to person and property—broad principles which need no law making power to establish them but which were universally recognised as necessary to the existence of any intercourse between individuals

I have a right to defend my person from injury and to enjoy, without interference my property. This is because they are mine, because from the relation in which they stand to me, the mind conceives in respect to them the idea of ownership. Stated in the form of rules, we might say, (1) every person may defend his person from injury, (2) every person may enjoy his property without interference. These are rules of human action every where recognised and relied upon. They are laws and were in the beginning the law. Perhaps it was not long before they were qualified, explained, amplified and developed by means of numerous other rules but in the beginning they constituted the law.

Development of the substantive law. It certainly could not have been long after intercourse between human beings began before the question arose as to what makes property A's instead of B's and undoubtedly a general recognition of certain rules as to the ownership of property soon came about. For instance, it was probably not long disputed that what A subdued from a wild state, or reduced to his possession, or made with his hands, belonged to A, in preference to B. It may soon have become established that if A by gift or exchange put B in possession of that which had formerly been his (A's) it then became B's in preference to C's. It must soon have been recognized that A's right to defend his person from injury was qualified by the rule that he must not himself interfere with the person or property of B, and that, injured while so doing, he could claim no redress. The two general rules relating to the enjoyment of person and property unless they were thus amplified, would avail man little. While it is true that all men under normal conditions, instinctively recognise these rules in their general application to the relations between them, yet the conditions under which men act are so often not normal and the chances of a clashing of rights are so great, that if the law were expressed in these two general rules, with no subsidiary rules to explain, define and limit their application, men would be constantly in uncertainty as to the effect of their actions.

Such subsidiary rules are a part of the law. They are rules of human action and have become a part of the law because the varying relations between individuals in business and social life have demanded them. They have come slowly and been grafted into the law one by one, sometimes by the common recognition of men, later it may be, finding a definite expression in the decision of Courts, sometimes put forth in the first instance by the Courts, sometimes established by legislative bodies. Together they make up the body of law which defines the rights and obligations of men that which is known as the substantive law.

Development of the adjective law. It must not be supposed that this mass of rules alone constitutes the law as it exists to day. A being the stronger, might injure B's person with impunity and B be powerless to defend himself or A might trespass upon B's land, and, defying B may rear a trespasser during his own pleasure, were it not that means exist by which B can enforce his rights in respect to his person and property. So, too, a piece of property—a horse, for example—claimed by both A and B might go to the stronger, though not the one rightfully entitled to it, were it not for such means. In fact, the rules defining the rights and obligations of men, however complete and perfect they might be, would be of little use to mankind, unless there existed the means of compelling men to conform their actions to them, or of inflicting punishment upon them for failure to do so. So it happens that, with the growth of the substantive law, another kind of law has been established, which relates, not to the rights and obligations of men directly, but to the means of enforcing them. This is the law which defines the nature and powers of judicial tribunals, and then prescribes the methods of procedure therein. This is known as the adjective law.

The rules both of substantive and adjective law have attained such vast proportions that for convenience in explaining and discussing them, they are generally grouped into separate branches, classes according to the nature of the subject matter to which they relate. Each class is then spoken of by itself as the law of the particular subject to which it relates, as the "law of torts," the "law of contracts," "the law of evidence," and the like. What each subject includes is dependent largely upon the conception of the particular writer handling it, for there is no well defined dividing line between many of the subjects.

The adjective law includes all the laws which have built up the judicial system, whether they have had their origin in the constitution, the legislature, or the Courts. It embraces, too, the laws which have fixed the practice in the Courts—the methods of carrying on the work by Judge and jury, the laws prescribing the manner in which litigants might seek relief and carry on their cases are also included, and, finally, certain rules have grown up, as a part of this law, which relate, not to the machinery of the system, but, having regard to the imperfections of the machinery, are concerned with sorting out and selecting the materials which are supplied to it. These last mentioned rules make up the law of evidence.

'The law of evidence' says Sir James Fitzjames Stephens 'is that part of the law of procedure which with a view to ascertain individual rights and liabilities in particular cases, decides, (1) what facts may and what may not be proved in such cases, (2) what sort of evidence must be given of a fact which may be proved, (3) By whom and in what manner the evidence must be produced by which any fact is to be proved.'

Thus before the law of evidence can be understood or applied to any particular case, it is necessary to know so much of the substantive law as determines what, under given states of facts, would be the rights of the parties, and so much of the law of procedure as is sufficient to determine what questions it is open to them to raise in the particular proceeding.

Thus in general terms the law of evidence consists of provisions upon the following subjects —

- (1) The relevancy of facts
- (2) The proof of facts
- (3) The production of proof of relevant facts

The foregoing observations show that this account of the matter is exhaustive. If or if we assume that a fact is known to be relevant, and that its existence is duly proved, the Court is in a position to go on to say how it affects the existence, nature, or extent of the right or liability, the ascertainment of which is the ultimate object of the inquiry, and this is all that the Court has to do.

The matter must, however, be carried further. The three general heads may be distributed more particularly as follows —

I. The Relevancy of Facts. Facts may be related to rights and liabilities in one of two ways —

- (1) They may by themselves, or in connection with other facts, constitute such a state of things that the existence of the disputed right or liability would be a legal inference from them.

Facts in issue. From the fact that A is the eldest son of B there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir at law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intention or knowledge there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B and is liable to the punishment provided by law for murder.

Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue unless their existence is undisputed.

- (2) Facts which are not themselves in issue in the sense above explained.

Relevant facts. may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue, and be used as the foundation of inferences respecting them, such facts are described in the Evidence Act as relevant facts.

All the facts with which it can in any event be necessary for Court of Justice to concern themselves, are included in these two classes.

The first great question therefore which the law of evidence should decide is what facts are relevant. The answer to this question is to be learnt from the general theory of judicial evidence in chapter II of the Evidence Act.

What facts are in issue in particular cases is a question to be determined by the substantive law or in some instances by that branch of the law of procedure which regulates the forms of pleading. Civil or Criminal.

II. Proof of Relevant Facts. Whether any alleged fact is a fact in issue or a relevant fact the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist, and it is obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceeding in which its existence is to be determined. The question is whether A wrote a letter. The letter may have contained the terms of a contract. It may have been a libel. It may have constituted the motive for the commission of a crime by B. It may supply proof of an alibi in favour of A. It may be an admission or a confession of crime, but whatever may be the relation of the fact to the proceeding the Court cannot act upon it unless it believes that A did write the letter, and that belief must obviously be produced, in each of the cases mentioned by the same or similar means. If the Court requires the production of the original when the writing of the letter is a crime, there can be no reason why it should be satisfied with a copy when the writing of the letter is a motive for a crime. In short, the way in which a fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact, and not on the relation of the fact to the proceeding.

Proof of relevant facts.

'Some facts are too notorious to require any proof at all, and of these the Court will take judicial notice, but if a fact does require proof the instrument by which the Court must be convinced of it is evidence, by which I mean the actual words uttered, or documents, or other things actually produced in Court, and not the facts which the

1 Judicial notice, 2
Oral evidence 3 Do documentary evidence

Court considers to be proved by those words and documents. Evidence in this sense of the word must be either (1) oral or (2) documentary. A third class might be formed of things produced in Court, not being documents, such as the instruments with which a crime was committed or the property to which damage had been done but this division would introduce needless intricacy into the matter. The reason for distinguishing between oral and documentary evidence is that in many cases the existence of the letter excludes the employment of the former, but the condition of material things other than documents, is usually proved by oral evidence so that there is no occasion to distinguish between oral and material evidence.

III The production of Proof This includes the subject of the burden of proof the rules upon which answer the question by whom is proof to be given. The subject of witnesses the rules upon which answer the question, who is to give evidence and under what conditions? The subject of the examination of witnesses the rules upon which answer the question how are the witnesses to be examined and how is their evidence to be tested? Lastly, the effect upon the subsequent proceedings, of mistakes in the reception and rejection of evidence may be included under this head.*

The word relevancy is 'more fully defined in sections 6-11 of the Evidence Act. These sections enumerate specifically the different instances of the connection between cause and effect which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings. They are designedly worded very widely, and in such a way as to overlap each other. Thus a motive for a fact in issue (s 8) is part of its cause (s 7) Subsequent conduct influenced by it (s 8) is part of its effect (s 7) Facts relevant under section 11 would in most cases be relevant under other sections. The object of drawing up the Act in this manner was that the general ground on which facts are relevant might be stated in as many and as popular forms as possible, so that if a fact is relevant, its relevancy may be easily ascertained. These sections are by far the most important, as they are the most original part of the Evidence Act, as they affirm positively what facts may be proved, whereas the English law assumes this to be known and merely declares negatively that certain facts shall not be proved."

* Stephens' Introduction to the Evidence Act pp 11-12.

The definition given in sections 6-11 is that of logical relevancy. Logical relevancy plays a certain part in the law of evidence in that no evidence is admissible unless it is logically relevant. It does not follow that all evidence which is logically relevant is admissible and in fact much that is logically relevant is excluded. Certain rules are laid down, founded on various considerations by which many matters which are logically relevant are declared inadmissible.

The modern system of Evidence as Prof Wigmore 'rests upon two axioms. These underlie its whole structure. Implicitly but nevertheless actually and positively recognised in the practice of Courts and in the utterances of the Judges, they were first distinctly formulated by the great master and expounder of the history of our law of Evidence. The first is this: None but facts having rational probative value are admissible. This principle is indeed axiomatic, for any system of Evidence purporting to be rational. It assumes no particular doctrine as to the kind of ratiocination implied,—whether practical or scientific, coarse and ready or refined and systematic. It prescribes merely that whatever is presented as evidence shall be presented on the hypothesis that it is calculated, according to the prevailing standard of reasoning, to effect rational persuasion. The second axiom on which our law of Evidence rests is this: All facts having rational probative value are admissible, unless some specific rule forbids."

Two axioms underlying the law of evidence

The first is this: None but facts having rational probative value are admissible. This principle is indeed axiomatic, for any system of Evidence purporting to be rational. It assumes no particular doctrine as to the kind of ratiocination implied,—whether practical or scientific, coarse and ready or refined and systematic. It prescribes merely that whatever is presented as evidence shall be presented on the hypothesis that it is calculated, according to the prevailing standard of reasoning, to effect rational persuasion. The second axiom on which our law of Evidence rests is this: All facts having rational probative value are admissible, unless some specific rule forbids."

The great bulk of the Law of Evidence says Sir James Fitzjames Stephens 'consists of negative rules declaring what, as the expression runs is not evidence. The doctrine that all facts in issue and relevant to the issue, and no others, may be proved is the unexpressed principle, which forms the centre of and gives unity to all these express negative rules. The law has been worked out by degrees by many generations of Judges who perceived more or less distinctly the principle on which it ought to be founded. The rules established by them no doubt treat as relevant some facts which cannot perhaps be said to be so. More frequently they treat as irrelevant facts which are really relevant, but exceptions excepted all their rules are reducible to the principle that facts in issue or relevant to the issue, and no others may be proved.

"Four classes of facts which in common life would usually be regarded as falling in with this definition of relevancy are excluded from it by the Law of Evidence except in certain cases:

(1) Facts familiar to but not specifically connected with each other (Res inter alios acta)

2 The fact that a person not called as a witness has asserted the existence of any fact (Hearsay)

3 The fact that any person is of opinion that a fact exists (Opinion)

4 The fact that a person's character is such as to render the conduct imputed to him probable or improbable (Character)

To each of those four exclusive rules there are however important exceptions which are defined by the Law of Evidence

The rejection on one or another practical ground of what is really prohibitive is the characteristic thing in the English common law of Evidence stamping it out as the child of the jury system. In the shape it has taken it is not at all a necessary development of the rational method of proof, so that where people did not have the jury or having once had it did not keep it (as on the continent of Europe although they, no less than we worked out a rational system), they developed under the head of Evidence no separate and systematized branch of law. The greatest and most remarkable offshoot of the jury was that body of excluding rules which chiefly constitute the English Law of Evidence. This judicial oversight and control of the process of introducing evidence to the jury was what gave our system birth, and he who would understand it must keep this fact constantly in mind.*

The growth and the characteristic of the English Law of Evidence is thus described by an author of great eminence—'At once, when a man raises his eyes from the common law system of evidence, and looks at foreign methods, he is struck with the fact that English system is radically peculiar. Here, a

Peculiarity of English Law of evidence depends on jury system great mass of evidential matter, logically important and prohibitive is shut out from the view of the judicial tribunals by an imperative rule, while the same matter is not thus excluded anywhere else. English speaking countries have what we call a Law of Evidence but no other country has it, we alone have generated and evolved this large elaborate and difficult doctrine. We have done it, not by direct legislation, but, almost wholly, by the slow accumulated rulings of Judges made in the trying of causes during the last two or three centuries—rulings which at first were not preserved in print but in the practice and tradition of the trial Courts, and only during the last half or two thirds of this period have they been revised, reasoned upon, and generalized by the Courts in banc. When one has come to perceive these striking facts he is not long in finding the reason for them. Indeed the very structure of the system thus produced points to the reason when we observe its constant anxious, and over anxious endeavour to prevent the tribunal to which the evidence is principally addressed from being confused and misled, and from dealing with questions which it has no right to deal with. It might seem strange and not worth while to keep alive so long a tribunal which has needed so much watching and so many safeguards, if one did not recall the immense persistence of legal institutions and usages, as well as the deep political significance of the jury and its relation to what is most valued in the national history and traditions of the English race. It is the institution of the jury which account for the common law system of evidence—an institution which English-speaking people have had and used in one or another department of their public affairs ever since the Conquest. Other peoples have had it only in quite recent times and as indeed this may belong to those who begin with it centuries ago, and then allow it to become obsolete and forgotten. England alone kept it and in a singular fashion has developed it.

* Thayer's Pre Treat on Evidence pp 180 207 266 509

This institution the jury which is thus the occasion of our law of Evidence and which is at the bottom of our system of pleading and procedure and of very much in all branches of the substantive common law has a peculiar interest for us.

A system of evidence like ours, thus worked out at the forge of daily experience in the trial of causes not created or greatly changed until lately by legislation, not the fruit of any man's systematic reflection or forecast, is sure to exhibit at every step the marks of its origin. It is not concerned with the niceties of distinctions or the exacter academic operations of the logical faculty. It is attending to practical ends. Its rules originate in the innumerable suggestions of good sense, legal experience and a sound practical understanding in the cases in which they are given, to determine, not what is or is not in its nature, probably, but rather, passing by that enquiry what amount of probability matters shall nevertheless, for this or that practical reason be admitted or not even heard by the jury. From the diversity and multiplicity of the actual rulings by the Judges,—rulings often hastily made, ill-considered and given—often the endeavour to follow these as precedents and to generalize and build upon them from the forgetting by some Courts in making the attempt of the accidental and empirical nature of much in these determinations and the contribution of this fact by others there has resulted plenty of confusion. The principle under which a ruling must be made is often unfavourable to a certain and the law of evidence largely shaped at man's private took on a shape, which was very confused and unintelligible. One thing is to the sixteenth, thence to the seventeenth thence to A D 1790, thence to 1830 thence to 1860 and thence to the present time (1) From the section quoted we gather that up to the year 1200 we have no reliable data although to the formalities of the earliest tribunals there can be traced the sources of our present rules for the summoning of witnesses the effect of an oath, and the necessary production of original documents

(2) The next three centuries marked the establishment of the trial by jury. In this period no new specific rules seem to have sprung up. The practice for attesting witnesses, oaths, documentary originals is developed. The rule for the conclusion of a sealed writing is definitely established. But during these three centuries the general process of pleading and procedure is only gradually differentiated from that of proof,—chiefly because the jurors are as yet relied upon to furnish in themselves both knowledge and decision for they are not commonly caused to be informed by witnesses in the modern sense.

(3) Between 1500 and 1700 the foundation of the present English system was laid. In that period we find the regulation of the competency of witnesses, the rules of privilege and privileged communications, the rules for attorneys the compulsory attendance of witnesses, the privilege against self incrimination, the "parol evidence" rule and the enactment of the Statute of Frauds. The "parol evidence" enlarged its scope and came to include all writings and not merely sealed documents. The mark of the new period is seen at the Restoration. Justice on all hands, then begins to mend. Cruelties which Matthew Hale permitted, under the Commonwealth, Scroggs refused under James II. The privilege against self incrimination the rule for two witnesses in treason and the character rule—three landmarks of our law of Evidence—find their first full recognition in the last days of the Stuarts.

(4) The fourth period of ninety years saw the final establishment of cross examination by counsel the rule for impeachment and corroboration of witnesses the "best evidence" doctrine and the publication of the first treatise on the Law of Evidence by Chief Baron Gilbert in 1726. About the same time the abridgments of Bacon and Comeyns gave many pages to the title of Evidence, but no other treatise appeared for a quarter of a century, when the notes of Mr J. Bitburs (later Lord Chancellor) were printed, under the significant title of the 'Theory of Evidence'. Blackstone's commentaries were published in 1768. In this period, besides the rules for impeachment and corroboration of witnesses (which were due chiefly to the development of cross-examination) are to be reckoned also the origins of the rules for confessions for leading questions, and for the order of testimony. The various principles affecting documents—such as the authorization of certified (or office) copies and the conditions dispensing from the production of originals—now also received their final shape.

(5) The next forty years (1790-1830, saw a tremendous increase of the rulings upon evidence, there being more than in the preceding two centuries. In this development the dominant influence is plain, it was the increase of the printed reports of Nisi Prius rulings. This was at first the cause, and afterwards the self multiplying effect of the detailed development of the rules. As soon as Nisi Prius reports, multiplied and became available to all, the circuits must be reconciled the rules once made and recorded must be followed, and the precedents must be open to the entire profession to be invoked. There was to speak a sudden precipitation of all that had hitherto been suspended in solution. This effect began immediately to be manifested and emphasized by the appearance of new treatises summing up the recent acquisitions of precedent and practice. In nearly the same year Peake, for England (1801) and Mac Nally for Ireland printed small volumes whose contents, as compared with those of Gilbert and Buller seem to represent almost a different system. In 1806 Lysons' Notes to Pothier on Obligations was made the vehicle of the first reasoned analysis of the rules. In this respect it was epoch making. In 1814 and then in 1821 came Philipps and Starkie — in method combining Lysons' philosophies with Peake's strict reflection of the details of practice. There was now indeed a system of Evidence consciously and fully utilized. Across the water a similar stage had been reached. By a natural interval Peake's treatise was balanced in 1810 by Swift's Connecticut book while Philipps and Starkie were replaced by Greenleaf's treatise of 1842.

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

(6) The thirty years ending with 1860 will be ever associated with the names of Bentham, Brougham and Denham. The Theory of Judicial Evidence in spite of or perhaps by reason of its philippic tone created a mighty influence for good — in influence fortified by such doughty legal champions as Brougham and Denham. Their efforts culminated in England in the Common Law Procedure Acts of 1852 and 1854 while in the United States Livingston and Field were the sponsors of similar results.

(7) In the period following 1860 there has been no serious emendation of the law of evidence in England later than the Judicature Act of 1875 and the Rules of Court of 1883 and the law of evidence attained rest. It is still over patched and disfigured with multiplicitous fragmentary statutes, especially for documentary evidence. But it seems to be harmonious with the present demand of justice and above all to be so certain and settled in its acceptance that no further detoured development is called for.

The Indian Evidence Act is ever associated with the name of Sir James Fitzjames Stephens Q C, the great jurist and Judge who sponsored the amended Evidence Bill on which the present Act is based. At the final stage of the Bill he was vehemently criticised by competent critics but time shows how very judicious he was in enacting its provisions.

Before the passing of the Indian Evidence Act there was no complete code of evidence enforceable in every part of British India. The town of Calcutta had been from its foundation (1690) an English Colony governed by English law. The early charters empowered the Governor in Council of each settlement to exercise civil and criminal jurisdiction therein according to the laws of England, and charters of 1726 and 1753 provided, at least on paper for more regular tribunals at each of the principal settlements in shape of Mayor's Court for Civil and Courts of Oyer and Terminer and

No complete Code before the passing of the Evidence Act

Quarter Sessions for criminal proceedings These Courts were supposed to decide cases according to English law and adopting English procedure

Since the establishment of the Supreme Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, the English rules of evidence have systematically been followed in the Presidency towns and several of the reforms made in England by Parliament were from time to time applied to them by the Governor General in Council. Thus incompetency on the ground of crime and interest was abolished by Act IX of 1840 and Act VII of 1841. And Act XV of 1852 enabled parties to give evidence except in criminal proceedings and proceedings for adultery or breach of promise.

But in the Muffussil there was an absolute absence of any systematic law of evidence. The English laws of evidence were not in force in the Muffussil. The Muhammadan laws of evidence as laid down in the Hedaya, as modified by Regulations passed from 1793 to 1834 as well as to a certain extent by English practice and English text books were generally followed in the Muffussil Courts.

The Regulations of Bengal, Bombay and Madras laid down very few rules as regards evidence. Under section 15 of the Bengal Regulations III of 1793 a bond was required to be proved at least by two witnesses. But such documentary evidence was received without any proof unless objected to such as copies of judicial proceedings appearing to be authenticated by the signature of the proper officer, and copies of English correspondence from the Collectors or other Government officers similarly authenticated. Even copies of copies were so received. Rules as to witness, corresponding those contained in the present Codes of Criminal and Civil Procedure, were made by the following Regulations in Bengal, Beng Reg IV of 1793 ss 6 14, Beng Reg IX of 1796 ss 2, 3 and 4, Beng Reg IV of 1807, s 7, Beng Reg VIII of 1803 s 25, Beng Reg L of 1803, ss 2, 3 and 4, Beng Reg III of 1812 s 2, Beng Reg XXIII of 1814 ss 33 and 73, Beng Reg XXIV of 1814 s 11. In Madras also rules relating to this subject were contained in several regulations namely Mad Reg III of 1802 s, 7, Mad Reg IV of 1802, s 18, Mad Reg V of 1802 s 16, Mad Reg VII of 1802, s 18, Mad Reg VII of 1809 s 22, Mad Reg XII of 1809, s 8, Mad Reg IV of 1816 ss 15 16, Mad Reg VI of 1816 ss 28 34, Mad Reg VII of 1816 ss 4 5, Mad Reg X of 1816 ss 15 16, Mad Reg XIV of 1816, s. 9 Mad Reg IV of 1821 s 10, and Mad Reg VIII of 1832 s 3. Moreover Mad Reg VI of 1816, s 35 and Mad Reg VII of 1816 s 15, have excluded documents not duly stamped. Evidence declared by the Muhammadan law officer to be inadmissible is dealt with by Mad Regs I of 1825 s 8 and VI of 1829, s 2. In Bombay some rules as to witnesses in civil proceedings were made by Bom Reg IV of 1827 and rules as to witnesses in criminal proceedings were prescribed by Regs XII and XIII of the same year. All persons who had arrived at years of discretion and were of sane mind were made competent witnesses by Bombay Reg IV of 1827 s 33 and XIII of 1827, s 35. And the section ch

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

last mentioned contain provisions (wanting in the present law) as to irrigation animals and in inanimate objects produced in elucidation of the case.

The first Act of the Governor General dealing with the law of Evidence was Act X of 1835. That Act was made applicable to all the Courts in British India. By that Act all the Acts passed by the Governor General in Council could be proved by the mere production of the Gazette purporting to contain it.

Acts Previous to the Indian Evidence Act

This Act was followed in quick succession by other fragmentary enactments, laying down rules of evidence. Incompetency as a witness was abolished by Act XIX of 1837 which was also declared to be in force in all the Courts of British India. Hindus and Muhammadans were permitted to make solemn affirmations instead of oath or declaration in the Moslem Courts by Act V of 1840. That Act had no binding effect on any of the three Supreme Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras. Act IX of 1849 declared that if a witness in any of the Supreme Courts were objected to on the ground that if a witness in any ment would be inadmissible in evidence for or against him, he might be examined and the verdict or judgment should not be so inadmissible. The object of this enactment which was taken from 3 & 4 Will IV Chap 42 was to render less frequent the rejection of witnesses on the ground of interest. Incompetency of a witness on the ground of interest or crime was abolished within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts by Act VII of 1841. But that Act did not make the party on whose behalf an action was brought or defended a competent witness. By Act XV of 1852 parties to a cause were made competent witnesses except in criminal proceedings and proceedings for adultery or breach of promise of marriage. By this Act the parties were compelled to allow inspection of documents and Acts of state and judicial proceedings could be proved by the production of certified copies alone. It made the register of British ships and certificates of registry admissible without proof of signature. It dispensed with the production of the record of a conviction or acquittal. That Act was in force also in the Supreme Courts. Act XIX of 1853 extended some of these reforms to the Civil Courts of the East India Company in the Bengal Presidency. By this Act, parties to suits as well as husbands and wives of the parties were made competent witnesses. Although there was no express prohibition henceforth a husband or a wife is enabled to give evidence and produce documents. In a competency of a witness on the ground of relationship or interest was also abolished and a party could be compelled to give evidence and produce documents. But a witness was exempted from producing documents relating to a party's title deeds, State documents and irrelevant documents. Communication between a witness and his professional adviser was also privileged. The Court could compel a witness to produce any other documents. Section 26 of that Act rendered absconding witnesses liable for damages.

In 1855 Sir Lawrence Peel introduced a Bill for the further improvement of the law of evidence which was carried by Sir James Colville and found place in the Statute Book as Act I of 1855. This Act though totally devoid of arrangement

History of the passing of the Indian Evidence Act

• Whitley Stokes pp 812 813

was skilfully worded and contained many valuable provisions which applied to all Courts in British India (Vide Appendix C infra) Act V of 1855, which was in force in the Civil Courts of the East India Company in the Presidencies of Fort St George and Bombay enacted by s 10 a provision like section 26 of Act XIX of 1853. In 1859 the first Civil Procedure Code was passed by Act VIII of 1859 and in 1861 the first Criminal Procedure Code found place in the Statute book. Act XV of 1869 provides facilities for obtaining the evidence and appearance in Court of prisoners and for service of process upon them. So it is clear that down to 1872 there was no fixed rules of evidence, except those contained in Act XIX of 1853 and Act II of 1855 which could be applied in the Muffasnl Courts. The Commissioners appointed in England to prepare a body of substantive laws for India (ignoring the fact that their commission did not comprise adjective law) accordingly framed a draft code, which in October 1868 was introduced by Sir Henry Sumner Maine and referred to a select committee as a Bill to define and amend the law of evidence. This Bill was published and circulated to local authorities in the usual manner. But it was pronounced to be unsuited to India by some competent persons. It was far from complete it was ill arranged it was not elementary enough for the officers for whose use it was designed, and it assumed an acquaintance with the law of England which could scarcely be expected from them. A new Bill was therefore prepared by Sir James Fitzjames Stephens, the worthy successor of Sir Henry which was printed circulated and very freely criticised. Sir James accordingly recast it, and it was ultimately passed as Act I of 1872*. It is on the main based on the English law of Evidence.

This enactment purports to consolidate define and amend the whole law of Evidence with certain exceptions mentioned in sections 1 and 2. But rules contained in the Indian Evidence Act are also thus criticised by Sir Henry Sumner Maine. 'It must always be recollected that the affirmative or positive method of arrangement followed in the Indian Evidence Act does not represent the historical growth of the English law of Evidence. So far as it consisted express

Sir Henry Sumner
Maine's criticism on the Indian Evidence Act

rules it was in its origin a pure system of exclusion, and the great bulk of its present rules were developed as exceptions to rules of the widest application, which prevented large classes of testimony from being submitted to the jury. The chief of these were founded on general propositions of which the approximation to truth was but remote. Thus the assumptions were made that the statements of litigants as to the matter in dispute were not to be believed that witnesses interested in the subject matter of the suit were not credible, and that no trustworthy inference can be drawn from assertions which a man makes merely on the information of other men. A complete account of it cannot in fact be given unless the mode of its development be kept in view.

Another important reason, too, for remembering that our law of Evidence is historically a system of exclusion, is that we cannot in any other way account for its occasional miscarriages. The conditions under which it was originally developed must still be referred to in explanation of the difficulty of applying it in certain cases or of the ill success which attends the attempt to apply it. The mechanism of judicial administration which once extended over a great part of Europe and in which the functions of the Judge were distributed between persons or bodies representing distinct sources of authority—the King and the country, or the lord and his tenants—in England gradually assumed the shape under which we are all familiar with it in criminal trials and at Nisi Prius. A body of men, whose award on questions of fact is in the last resort conclusive are instructed and guided to have an eminent dignity sitting in their presence who is assumed to have an eminent acquaintance with the principles of human conduct whether embodied or not in technical rules and who is the sole judge of points of law, and of the admissibility of evidence. The system of technical rules, which this procedure carries with it fails then in the first place, whenever the number of facts—the person who has to draw inferences from or about them—has especial qualifications for deciding on them supplied to them by experience, study, or the peculiarities of his own character which are of more value to him than could be any general direction from book or person. For his reason a police man guiding himself by the strict rules of evidence would be chargeable with incapacity, and a General would be guilty of a military crime.

* Stokes Anglo Indian Code Vol II pp 812 817

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

Again the blending of the duties of the judge of law and of the judge of fact deprives the system of much though not necessarily of all of its utility. An Equity Judge, an Admiralty Judge, a Common Law Judge trying an election petition an historian may employ the English rules of Evidence particularly when stated affirmatively to steady and sober his judgment. But he cannot give general directions to his own mind without running much risk of entangling or enfeebling it and under the existing conditions of thought he can not really prevent from influencing his decision any evidence which has been actually submitted to him, provided that he believes it. English men are extremely prone to do injustice to foreign systems of judicial administration from forgetting the inherent difficulty of applying the English law of Evidence when the same authority decides both on law and on fact as is mostly the case in other countries.

When India came under the British rule there were many branches of law in which the political officers of the British Government could find few positive rules of any sort, or if any could be discovered, they were the special observances of limited classes or castes. Thus there was no law of Evidence in the proper sense of the words, hardly any law of contract scarcely any of Civil Wrong. Whole provinces of law became exclusively, or nearly exclusively, English. The law of Evidence became wholly English so did the law of Contract. The law of Evidence became more thoroughly English at the time when it was first substantially so did the law of Tort. It is quite possible to hold a respectful opinion of many parts of English law and yet to affirm strongly that its introduction by Courts of Justice into India has amounted to a grievous wrong. No branch of law had become more thoroughly English at the time when it was first comprehensively dealt with by the Indian Legislature than the law of Evidence, and the practical evils which hence arose were even greater than those which ordinarily result from the adoption of an exotic system of legal rules collected with difficulty from isolated decisions reported in a foreign language. The theory of judicial evidence is constantly misstated or misconceived even in this country. The English law on the subject is too often described as being that which it is its chief distinction not to be—that is, an Organon as a sort of contrivance for the discovery of truth which English lawyers have patented. In India, several special causes have contributed to disguise its true character. There is much probability that our English law of Evidence would never have come into existence if we had not continued much longer than other western societies the separation of the province of the Judge from the province of the jury, and, in fact, the English rules of Evidence are never very scrupulously attended to by tribunals which like the Court of Chancery, adjudicate both on law and on fact through the same organs and same procedure. Now, an Indian functionary when he acts as a civil Judge and for the most part when he acts as a criminal Judge decides both on law and on fact. He it is who applies the rules of Evidence to himself, and not to a body distinct from himself, and he has often to perform the delicate achievement of preventing his decision from being affected by sources of information which in reality have been opened to him.

The effects of their peculiar experience on many distinguished Indian functionaries may be seen to be of two kinds. In some minds there is a complete scepticism as to the value of the rules of Evidence, and though the man who for the time being is a Judge may attempt to apply them, he is intimately persuaded that he has gone into bondage to a foolish technical system under compulsion from the Court of Appeal above him. With others, the consequences are of a different sort, but practically much more serious. They accept from the lawyers the doctrine that the law of Evidence is of the extremest importance, and unconsciously allow this belief to influence them, not only in their judicial, but in their executive and administrative duties. It is often said in India that the servile reliance upon the English law of Evidence, which now-a-days characterizes many of the servants of Government, is producing a paralysis of administration, and though the assertion may be exaggerated, it is far from impossible that it may have a basis of truth."

'The jury trial system of rules of Evidence' says Prof Wigmore "is not the only safe system of investigation in matters of liberty and property, for other nations have had a long experience of successful justice without it. Nor is it correct to assume that the general wisdom of experience which is represented in the system at large is represented in all the detailed rules rigidly enforced, quite the contrary. What is commonly forgotten is that most of the rules—nineteen twentysix let us say—are merely rules of caution, i.e., they are based upon a possibility of error, so that the failure to observe the rule is perfectly consistent with a high probability of truth. The rule, for example requiring the original of a document to be produced is merely a rule against possibilities for thousands of banks and business houses daily deal with millions of wealth on the faith of copies not originals, to assert that truth was certainly missed because a copy was used is an absurdity. So too, with the hearsay rule, it aims to guard against possibilities, and is sound enough, as a rule, but all history of the past, and all public news of the present, is learned by hearsay, for less than a million of our population knew by personal observation, that our soldiers fought in a war with Germany and the entire financial and economic operations of the country are built on a complex structure of hearsay which is as solid as a steel and concrete building.

Prof Wigmore's criticism

A second thing to remember is that the jury trial rules are intended for a constantly changing tribunal of fact composed of inexperienced men dealing with hundred types of cases. When the tribunal is composed of experienced professional men, habitually inquiring day after day into some limited class of facts, an expert weighing of evidence can generally be counted upon. The cautions represented by the exclusionary jury rules and will be applied by such a tribunal in weighing the evidence, without the actual exclusion of it. Sir Henry Sumner Maine's comment on this feature represents a general truth. And in a community where the major part of such offices is filled by men already trained in the law, it is certain that the general wisdom of the cautions embodied in the jury rules of evidence will be employed by them.

Prof. Greenleaf, at the end of his famous book on Evidence says "The student will not fail to observe the symmetry and beauty of this branch of the law and will rise from the study of its principles convinced with Lord Esher that they are founded in the charities of religion, in the philosophy of nature, in the truths of history, and in the experience of common life." Commenting on this statement says Prof. James Bradley Thayer "I think that it would

Nature of the English rules of evidence be juster and more exact to say that our law of evidence is a piece of illogical, but by no means irrational, patchwork not at all to be admired, nor easily to be found intelligible, except as a product of the jury system as the outcome of the quantity of rulings by sagacious lawyers, while settling practical questions, in presiding over Courts where ordinary, untrained citizens are acting as judges of fact. Largely irrational in any other aspect, in this point of view it is full of good sense,—a good sense, indeed, that occasionally nods, that submits too often to a mistaken application of its precedent that is often short-sighted and ill-instructed and that needs to be taken in hand by the jurist and illuminated, simplified and invigorated by a reference to general principles.

I have said that our law of evidence is ripe for the hand of the jurist. It does not mean for the hand of the codifier, it is not—but for a treatment which beginning with a full historical examination of the subject and continuing with a criticism of the cases shall end with a re-statement of the existing law and with suggestions for the course of its future development. Such a work will be only a light co-operation from the legislature to give to the law of evidence a more complete and capacity for growth which would make it a law worthy its treatment of fact than it is."

11679
244/2001

4087R

SUPPLEMENT CONTAINING DIGEST OF CASES
UP TO July, 1932

S 4 (p 60)—Presumptions are of two kinds—presumptions of law and presumptions of fact. Presumptions of law are true presumptions, presumptions sometimes rebuttable, sometimes irrebuttable, which Courts are bound to take up before hand a priori before they ever consider the evidence in the case or the part of the case to which the presumption apply. Those presumptions are correctly called presumptions, positions which a Court must take up before hand. It is a little unfortunate that in legal phraseology the word 'presumptions' is used in what is spoken of as "presumptions of fact." Bommadevara v Sona, A I R 1932 Mad 343=35 M L W 493=1932 M W N 264

S 4 (p 64)—Where under a given rule extreme evidential value is to be assigned to a given piece of evidence, the probative force of such piece of evidence cannot be extended to collateral matters. Where one fact is declared by law to be conclusive proof of another the Court cannot allow evidence to be given in rebuttal. Parbhu v Jang Bahadur, A I R 1932 All 35=1931 A L J 360

S 8 (p 116)—Though under s 8 of the Evidence Act a motive is provable as a relevant fact, yet it cannot be proved by hearsay evidence. Where a statement made by the deceased person not falling under s 32 (1) is said to constitute a motive it cannot be proved unless it explains or accompanies any act of the deceased and falls under Expt 1 to s 8. Venkata Subba Reddi, In re, 54 M 931=61 M L J 608=A I R 1931 Mad 689

S 8 (p 116)—To Judge what the real state of a person's mind on a previous occasion was, the surrounding circumstances and subsequent events can be referred to. Ganesh v Emperor, A I R 1931 Pat 52=32 Cr L J 478

S 8 (p 129)—If a person is proving that he has retired from a firm he is quite entitled to show that immediately after the date of retirement he wrote to the Bank and informed them that he had severed his connection with the firm and could not continue to guarantee its account. If he does that any statement by him made at the time as the reason for his refusing to continue to guarantee is admissible to explain the conduct. Promotha v Bhagandas, 35 C W N 705

S 8 (p 136)—Though the statement made by the accused to the police may be inadmissible under s 162 Cr P Code, evidence of their conduct is certainly admissible under s 8. Syamo v Emperor, A I R 1932 Mad 391. Fact of production of share of property by an accused is admissible as conduct under s 8. Ganu v Emperor, A I R 1932 Bom 286=56 B 172

S 10 (p 159)—Before anything said, done or written by any one alleged member of a conspiracy can be used as evidence against another or against all, the Court must have reasonable ground for believing that the conspiracy between them existed. Mukundlal v Emperor, 1930 M W N 1264

S 10 (p 160)—Under s 10 narratives coming from the conspirators as to their past acts cannot be said to have a reference to their common intention. The word 'intention' implies that the act intended is in the future and the section makes relevant statement made by a conspirator with reference to the future. Emperor v Vishampayan 55 B 839=33 Bom L R 1159

S 11 (p 174)—Where the accused have been charged under the Arms Act for possessing arms and for conspiracy to commit a dacoity the fact that one of the accused was seen showing a revolver to a companion with whom it is alleged he was conspiring to commit a dacoity would be relevant as evidence of preparation under s 11. Saroj Kumar v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 474

S 11 (p 174)—Where the precise date of death of the test holder is in question a statement in a copy of the application for probate of his will that the deceased died on a particular date is admissible in evidence under s 11, if not under s 32 (5), where it is shown that the application was filed by a person who was admittedly the testator's nephew and claimed also to be his adopted son and therefore was in a position to know of the date of his death and the application was filed about one year after the testator's death - Lachhman Lal v Kamalshya A I R 1931 Pat 221=12 Pat L 1 891

S 13 (p 182)—Section 13 (a) refers to admissibility of transaction by which right is asserted Narendra v Sanyasi, A I R 1932 Cal 393, see also Devdas v Rammangandas, A I R 1932 Bom 291=31 Bom L R 236

S 13 (p 196)—A judgment not inter partes holding that a partition of a certain estate was proved is only admissible under the provisions of ss 13 and 13 as establishing a particular transaction in which the partition of the estate was asserted and recognized. The reason upon which the judgment is founded is no part of the transaction and cannot be so regarded nor can any finding of fact there come to, other than the transaction itself be relevant to prove partition in a subsequent suit Gobinda Narayan v Shantlal, 35 C W N 521 (P C)

S 13 (p 218)—Recitals in a kolala by the vendor that the lands sold to the vendee were niwar brahmottar and that his father was in possession of them in niwar right are not admissible in evidence against the zemindar (who was a party to the kolala) in a suit brought against the heirs of the vendee for possession of the land Jagadishchandra Narayan v Bilash, A I R 1932 Cal 427=59 C 451

S 13 (p 224)—Where in a prosecution for counterfeiting trade mark certain previous proceedings, in a Civil Court relating to the exclusive right of the complainant were referred to and the judgments in the prior case were filed, held, that the judgment were relevant under s 13 as a particular instance when the right claimed was claimed and was disputed Path Ram v Emperor, A I R 1931 Oudh 277=134 Ind Cis 477

S 13 (p 224)—A recital in the order of a President of a Union Board is not admissible under s 35 or s 13 in evidence unless such President has been examined with regard to the fact mentioned in his order Doraisami v Kausappa, A I R 1931 Mad 187=131 Ind Cis 654

S 13 (p 224)—Apart from ss 40 to 42 it is doubtful if s 13 covers previous judgments but it certainly will not cover judgments subsequent to the matter under investigation in both the clauses of the section it is the past tense that is used Jhunjur Raut v Emperor, A I R 1931 Pat 386=12 Pat L 1 647

S 13 (p 224)—Partition deed between two persons would not be admissible to show permanency or otherwise of tenancy Narendra v Sanyasi, A I R 1932 Cal 393

S 14 (p 253)—In a prosecution under section 400 I P Code, the previous conviction of the accused is admissible not as evidence of character but as evidence to prove habit and association Bachchu v Emperor A I R 1930 Oudh 455

S 14 (p 253)—In a prosecution under s 415 of the I P Code, evidence would be relevant on the question whether the accused was in embarrassed circumstances at the date when he entered into his contract Mohsinbhai v Emperor, A I R 1932 Bom 273=34 Bom L R 313

S 17 (p 291)—A decree holder making an erroneous admission in an application accompanied by an affidavit is entitled to retract that admission Sita Ram v Pir Baksh, 130 Ind Cas 406=32 P L R 413=A I R 1931 Loh 6

S 18 (p 297)—A party's admission should be accepted as true until contrary is proved Abdul Rafiq v Bhajan A I R 1932 All 199=1932 A L J 77, Amiruddin v Tajuddin, A I R 1932 Cal 538=58 C 541

S 18 (p 297)—Where there is no privity of contract between the parties an admission made by one party will not bind another Ganesh v Dhali, 132 Ind Cas 7=12 L L J 187

S 18 (p 299)—An admission alleged to have been made by one person on behalf of another is not binding on the latter unless it is proved that the former was really authorised to make the admission on behalf of the latter Purnima v Nand Lal, 12 Pat L T 582. A person called by a party as his witness cannot however be regarded as his agent within the meaning of section 18 Farukhudas v Lallubhai, A I R 1932 Bom 117=34 Bom L R 35

S 18 (p 321)—Where Mahants are nothing more than custodians or managers, a statement made by previous Mahant cannot be regarded as binding on the subsequent incumbent of the office Ram Parshad v Shuomou, 12 Lrh 497=A I R 1931 Lah 161

S 21 (p 337)—Admissions are relevant under the Evidence Act, unless they are rendered inadmissible by some circumstances which the Act declares to be of an invalidating nature Irunachala v Emperor, A I R 1932 Mad 500=62 M L J 680=35 M L W 607

S 21 (p 337)—The document affecting a transfer which is attacked as being fraudulent preference is admissible in such a proceeding under s 21 Kashi v Official Receiver, 1911 A L J 26=A I R 1931 All 142

S 24 (p 353)—A confession is an admission by an accused person in a criminal case. The making of a counterfeit coin is not a statement and hence the evidence of persons who say that the accused made counterfeit coins in their presence is not barred by ss 24, 25 or 26 Brij Nandan v Emperor, 133 Ind Crs 154=A I R 1931 All 9

S 24 (p 365)—Confession to be taken as a whole Emperor v Balmul und, 52 A 1011=A I R 1931 All 1 (F B). Even when a part of the confession is found to be false the entire confession should not be rejected simply for that reason. If sufficient grounds exist that part that charges the prisoner may be believed while that which is in his favour may be rejected Durga v Emperor 32 Cr L J 830

S 24 (p 367)—A true confession made by a person who takes part in a murder invariably adds something to the knowledge already possessed by the investigating officer and that is the greatest test of truth Maladin v Emperor 132 Ind Cas 228=A I R 1931 Oudh 166

S 24 (p 367)—The evidence of an admission of guilt to villagers may be as strong evidence against an accused person as a confession before a magistrate. It requires no corroboration Munnu v Emperor, A I R 1931 Oudh 415=131 Ind Crs 1018

S 24 (p 371)—Where the confession was recorded on a Sunday and at the house of the Magistrate and the Magistrate while certifying and stating on oath as a witness that he satisfied himself that the accused was making a statement voluntarily did not record the question and answers put and it was further objected that the evidence was recorded in English though made in Urdu. Held that the irregularities in recording the confession did not render it inadmissible Abdul Ghani v Emperor, 133 Ind Crs 55=A I R 1931 Lah 763

S 24 (p 380)—Court can under s 24 form its own opinion as to whether inducement, threat or promise was sufficient to lead accused to believe that he would benefit from making confession Emperor v Attursing, A I R 1932 Sind 64

S 24 (p 385)—Where a statement made by a person who at the time was not an accused but subsequently became one was tendered in evidence against him, it must be treated in the same way as if he had been an accused at the time he made it Ghani v Emperor A I R 1931 Lah 763=133 Ind Cas 55

S 24 (p 385)—A manager of the local branch of a limited company is a person in authority Emperor v Attur Sing, A I R 1932 Sind 64. Zamindars connected with investigation are persons in authority Nasir Kamal v Emperor, A I R 1932 Sind 55. A police officer is a person in authority Indar v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah 408

S 24 (p 385)—A confession made to a jail warden which was not read over to him, is absolutely valueless Ciochi v Pakrisami, 1930 M W N 1249

S 24 (p 396)—Retracted confession value of—Vide Durga v Emperor, 132 Ind Cas 70, Nanpey v Emperor A I R 1931 Oudh 412=134 Ind Cas 876, Nanak v Emperor A I R 1932 Lah 73. A retracted confession is not necessarily worthless Symo v Emperor, A I R 1932 Mad 391

S 25 (p 403)—An excise officer is not a police officer with the meaning of s 25 Pura Surdar v Emperor, A I R 1930 Cal 710=129 Ind Cas 101, Matlal v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 122=36 C W N 163, contra, Ibrahim v Emperor, A I R 1931 Cal 250, Behari Lal v Emperor, A I R 1927 All 343=8 Lah 326, vide article in A I R 1932 pages 47—55 (Journal)

S 25 (p 106)—Statement of Police officer that accused confessed having sent false incriminating telegram cannot be proved Kodangar v Emperor, A I R 1932 Mad 24=61 M L J 860

S 25 (p 106)—The confession under s 25 need not be a confession of the crime which the police officer is at the moment investigating. If A says to a police officer, 'I notice B murdering X while I was murdering Z' his confession that he murdered Z cannot be proved Kadangar v Emperor 61 M L J 860

S 25 (p 106)—A confession recorded by an Excise officer without the safe guard that are prescribed by s 162 Cr Pro Code, is not of much evidentiary value Ibrahim v Emperor, 53 C 1260=35 C W N 601=A I R 1931 Cal 350

S 25 (p 106)—No part of a confession made to a police officer is admissible in evidence Gurusuami v Emperor, 1931 M W N 725

S 26 (p 109)—A statement made by the accused at the dock before the Magistrate, if it amounts to a clear confession is certainly admissible in evidence, but the accused, its value is not discounted by the fact that the accused was at that time in the custody of the police Choun v Pakrisuami, 1930 M W N 1249. A confession made to a Sub magistrate is not vitiated by the presence of a police man Rajah Gadu v Emperor, 1931 M W N 723

S 26 (p 111)—Confession of accused to Magistrate not deputed by police is admissible Ala Mohammad v Emperor, A I R 1932 Lab 261

S 27 (p 115)—Section 27 is a special provision, whereas s 162, Cr Pro Code is general and does not in any way affect the operation of s 27, Evidence Act when the conditions mentioned therein fulfilled Syama v Emperor, A I R 1932 Mad 391=1932 M W N 305 (F B)

S 27 (p 115)—Section 27 is in form and substance a proviso to preceding section Ganu v Emperor, A I R 1932 Bom 286=34 Bom L R 303=56 B 172 Durlav v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 297=36 C W N 373

S 27 (p 115)—Section 27 has no application when nothing in connection with the crime is discovered as a result of information given by the accused Durlav v Emperor, A I R 1931 Oudh 119=14 O L J 210

S 27 (p 115)—Where any persons are charged and all the accused got together with the Police officer and take out the property at one and the same time but there is no evidence to show that any one of them said where it was buried, the fact of discovering has no value against any one of them under s 27 Dito v Emperor, A I R 1931 Sind 154=1931 Cr C 525

S 27 (p 120)—I or the purposes of s 27 "custody" does not necessarily mean detention or confinement, but submission to custody by word or action under s 16(1) Cr Pro Code, may be taken to amount to custody Jalla v Emperor, 131 Ind Cas 93=A I R 1931 Lah 278=32 P L R 347

S 27 (p 120)—Where the accused has made a statement of a self incriminating nature as a consequence of which a discovery was made only so much of the statement as relates to that fact is admissible but not the rest of the incriminating statement. The statement made to the Police Officer cannot be garbled so as to be rendered absolutely innocuous to the prisoner and removed entirely from the nature of a confessional statement Sonaram v Emperor, A I R 1931 Pat 115=12 Pat L R 491

S 29 (p 137)—Section 164 Cr Pro Code does not override the provisions of s 29 Evidence Act. It is the latter Act that must be looked at when there is a question of the admissibility of a particular piece of evidence. Hence a confession otherwise admissible does not become inadmissible because the accused person was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession and that evidence of it might be given against him Vellamoonji v Emperor, A I R 1932 Mad 431=62 M L J 559

S 30 (p 141)—This section creates an exception to the fundamental principles of criminal law and as such must be strictly construed in favour of an accused person Miruda muthu In re, 54 M 783=A I R 1931 Mad 520

S 30 (p 141)—The words "may take into consideration" mean may take into evidence. The weight that is to be attached to it as evidence against the accused, however depends on the circumstances of the particular case. Not is there any provision in the Act to the effect that the confession of one co accused implicating the accused cannot be corroborated by the confession of another co accused which also implicates the accused Aung Hla v Emperor, 9 Rang 404=A I R 1931 Rang 235

S 30 (p 449)—A self explanatory statement cannot be created as a confession of an offence so that any fact of it might be used against the other accused who was tried for the same offence Dilo v Emperor, A I R 1931 Sind 154 Where the accused in his confession did not implicate himself as fully and substantially as his co accused such confession cannot be used as evidence against co accused Shamblu v Emperor, A I R 1932 All 228=1932 A L J 162, see also Emperor v Chatterpal Singh A I R 1930 Oudh 502, Abdul Jalil v Emperor, A I R 1930 All 746=1930 A L J 1105, Emperor v Narain, A I R 1931 Oudh 83

S 30 (p 449)—The word "proved" in this section means proved before the case for the prosecutor comes to an end, either proved in the course of the prosecution case or proved in some proceeding previous to the trial So a confession by one accused made from the dock implicating himself and the other accused cannot be taken into consideration by the Court as such confession can not be made the basis of the conviction of the other accused Maruda mullu Padayachi, In re, 54 M 788=A I R 1931 Mad 820

S 30 (p 449)—It is permissible for the Court to consider a confessional statement made by the accused person as a confession proved within the meaning of s 30 whether made before the trial or during the trial, provided that it is recorded according to law Ganpat v Emperor, 27 N L R 163=A I R 1931 Nag 169

S 30 (p 449)—It is always desirable to pass a sentence completely before calling upon an accused pleading guilty in a joint trial to give evidence against his co accused, so that the witness may give his evidence with a mind free of all corrupt influences which the fear of impending punishment and the desire to obtain immunity to himself at the expense of the prisoner might otherwise produce But this course is not essential Mahammad v Emperor, 58 C 1214=35 C W N 490

S 30 (p 455)—A retracted confession is evidence and there is no provision in this section by which a confession is to be received one way or another The use to be made by a Court of a confession whether retracted or not is a matter of procedure rather than law, the business of the Court being to make up its mind in accordance with the dictates of common sense whether it is safe to believe the confession or not Amna v Emperor, 130 Ind Cas 641=32 Cr L J 579=A I R 1931 Lah 196 As regards value of retracted confession, vide, Emperor v Narain, A I R 1931 Oudh 83=14 O L J 630 Indra Dall v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah 408=132 Ind Cas 185=32 Cr L J 818, Surjan Singh v Emperor, A I R 1932 Loh 298=33 Cr L J 251, Nanal v Emperor A I R 1932 Lah 73

S 31 (p 458)—Admission is conclusive in itself but is only a piece of evidence which should be weighed against other evidence Sada v Jallu, A I R 1932 Lah 126=134 Ind Cas 128

S 31 (p 458)—A party making admission must show that it is incorrect Darindar v Lachmi, A I R 1930 Lah 985, see also Suquuddin v Johur, 134 Ind Cas 888

S 31 (p 458)—Express admission of a party to the suit, or admissions implied from his conduct are evidence, and strong evidence against him, but he is at liberty to prove that such admissions were mistaken or were untrue, and is not estopped or excluded by them unless another person has been induced by them to alter his condition Abdul v Rashuuddin, 131 Ind Cas 903=A I R 1931 Oudh 246

S 32 (p 469)—Section 32 provides an exception to the general rule that evidence must be given in Court by witnesses Rahman v Emperor, 32 Cr L J 1118=134 Ind Cas 117=A I R 1932 Inh 14

S 32 (1) (p 481)—A statement made by a deceased person relating to the facts leading to his death and recorded by the doctor who attended on the deceased at the time of his death in the presence of his compounder is admissible book keeping rather than to the truth or correctness of the entries in the account books Gulab v Baquran, A I R 1932 Oudh 225=9 O W N 532

S 34 (p 582)—Whatever particular words the plaintiff may have used in proving the balance of account based on a bahi khata, where the sum total of his statement leaves it in doubt whether he was speaking from personal knowledge, and the defendant fails to cross examine him to show that he had no personal knowledge either about all or any of the words sufficient to give the plaintiff the benefit of the doubt he should be deemed to have personal knowledge Har De v Srikishan, A I R 1932 All 60=1931 A L J 946

S 34 (p 586)—Though an entry in books of account when relevant under s 34 requires corroboration no corroboration is needed if the same becomes admissible under s 32 (2) Manikchand v Paralaji, 9 Mys L J 337

S 35 (p 592)—Where there is a statutory duty laid upon public officers to investigate and report facts in a report of the facts elicited by their investigation is an official record within the meaning of section 35 Ramlal v Inunarayana A I R 1932 Mad 198 An entry in a report made at a police station and recorded by a public servant is a relevant fact under s 35 Abheraj v Gaya, S O W N 1228 But a recital in the order of a President of a Union Board is not admissible under s 35 or 13 in evidence unless such President has been examined with regard to the fact mentioned in his order Doraisami v Kannappa, A I R 1931 Mad 487=1931 M W N 366 So also a recital in a judgment of a matter only incidentally mentioned cannot be evidence of what is there said in another case Bhupa v Jaichand, 32 P L R 763 Summary settlements have not the same value as a regular settlement A presumption arising from entries in a regular settlement cannot therefore be rebutted by entries in an earlier summary settlement Sadu v Mani Ram, A I R 1931 Lab 139=31 P L R 1024

S 35 (p 600)—The entry in the Mouzawari Register in which the Barrack pore Cantonment was entered as a 'mahal khas sircar' meaning in the possession of the Government is admissible to prove the title to the land when that is in dispute in proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act Secretary v Satish Chandra, 58 C 858=35 C W N 173 P C Fards Bachli are records of the acts of Public officers under s 151, Land Revenue Act and a patuarsi shall be deemed for the purposes of the Evidence Act to be public officer having the custody of a public document which any person has a right to inspect Mahil v Khushi, A I R 1931 Lab 605 The evidence of custom contained in the village regarding the right of tenant to the timber of trees in his holding is admissible under s 35 and the question of its probative value is one of fact Bidya Prasad v Sualhur A I R 1931 Pat 263=12 Pat L J 302

S 35 (p 600)—It would be unsafe to reject the settlement entry on the a priori arguments advanced against its correctness Ram Nath v Ram Seval, 12 P L R 17 Rev

S 40 (p 618)—Judgments not inter partes are not evidence at all so far as regards the matters which they decide unless they fall under s 40 or 42 They may be relevant under s 13 Purnima v Nand Lal 12 Pat L J 582

S 40 (p 618)—Unless a judgment is relevant under ss 40 to 42, it is not evidence at all so far as regards the matter which it decides Purnima v Nandlal, A I R 1932 Pat 105

S 41 (p 627)—Statement in judgment not inter partes is not admissible Bhupa v Jaichand, A I R 1932 Lab 50

S 41 (p 627)—Judgment in probate proceeding operates as a judgment in rem so far as genuineness or otherwise of will is concerned Phenka v Manki A I R 1930 Pat 618

S 41 (p 627)—This section applies to the foreign judgment of a competent Court no less than to domestic judgments Official Receiver v Lakshminarayana 54 M 724=A I R 1931 Mad 474

S 41 (p 627)—In order that declaration of title to specific thing should, have that under the judgment of the Insolvency Court one has become entitled to a specific thing but his title to such a thing must have been declared not as against any specified person but absolutely Venkataramanayya In re, 51 M 601=

A I R 1931 Mad 441—A right to recover a debt or a chose in action can not be deemed to be a "specific thing" Venkataramanayya In re, 51 M 601

S 41 (p 624)—"Legal character" means something equivalent to status. The legal character assigned to a person announces to all the world what the legal status of the person in question is. The meaning of 'legal character' must be narrowly construed for it must be remembered that an action availing against all the world. Venkataramanayya, In re, 51 M 601=A I R 1931 Mad 441

S 41 (p 627)—Though it be necessary as a step to making a declaration which will operate in rem to find a fact, that finding will not bind third parties in subsequent proceedings. Ibid

S 41 (p 627)—Judgment is admissible only to show its date and legal consequences. Trailokya v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 293

S 41 (p 631)—The judgment of Insolvency Court declaring a person as creditor of a insolvent does not confer any 'legal character' on him within the meaning of s 41 and hence declaration does not operate as a judgment in rem. Venkataramanayya In re 51 M 601=A I R 1931 Mad 441

S 42 (p 631)—Judgments determining similar question are relevant though not conclusive. Sundarabai v Hanmant, A I R 1932 Bom 393=31 Bom L R 802

S 43 (p 639)—A judgment not inter partes holding that a partition of a certain estate was proved is only admissible under the provisions of ss 13 and 43 as establishing a particular transaction in which the partition of the estate was asserted and recognised. Gobinda v Shamlat 53 C 1187=53 I A 125

S 44 (p 645)—The plea that a decree passed by a Native State Court was made without jurisdiction is open to the objector under s 44 and can be raised at any stage of the proceedings unless there is a bar or res judicata or any rule of equitable estoppel against him. Sheo Takal v Bimal, A I R 1931 All 689

S 45 (p 668)—The opinions or conclusions of skilled persons are certainly receivable by way of proof in point of fact but the witness must have made a special study of the subject or acquired a special experience therein. United State Shipping v St Albans, A I R 1931 P C 189=131 Ind Crs 771

S 45 (p 682)—To base a conviction upon evidence of an expert in hand writing is as a general rule very unsafe. Indar Dutt v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah 108=32 Cr L J 818

S 45 (p 681)—It cannot be laid down as a rule that it is unsafe to base a conviction on the uncorroborated testimony of a finger-print expert. The true rule seems to be one of caution, that is to say, that the Court must not take the expert opinion for granted, but it must examine his evidence in order to satisfy itself that there can be no mistake and the responsibility is all the greater when there is no other evidence to corroborate the expert. Harendra v Emperor, 35 I W N 693=A I R 1931 Cal 111

S 45 (p 685)—Where the so called expert witnesses give no data in support of their opinions, their evidence should be rejected. Pabhu v Secretary of State, A I R 1931 Lah 361

S 48 (p 700)—When any question of right or custom is to be decided opinions of persons who would be likely to know of its existence are admissible in evidence under s 48. Hubray v Chandrasen A I R 1931 Oudh 59

S 51 (p 724)—The evidence of a police officer that the accused person was under police surveillance in order to make the prosecution story sound and probable is hopelessly inadmissible. Parekh v Emperor A I R 1931 Pat 315. But if evidence is otherwise relevant it is not rendered inadmissible merely because it shows bad character or the commission of offences other than the offence with which the accused is charged. Snoy v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 471

S 57 (p 758)—A Court can take judicial notice of matters of universal notoriety, its general knowledge of daily life. But a judge cannot use from the Bench under the guise of judicial knowledge that which he knows only as an individual observer. He cannot therefore impart into a case his knowledge of the previous conduct of the accused. Shimshurani v Emperor 215 I R 110=12 Ind Crs 176

S 58, Proviso (p 768)—The general rule contained in order 12, r 6 of the Procedure Code, that the Court has a discretion to pass a decree on the basis of an admission is supported by s 53, proviso, of the Evidence Act Bhagwan L v Sheoraj, A I R 1931 Oudh 321=14 O L J 462

S 63 (p 787)—The question whether secondary evidence was in any case rightly admitted depends largely on the discretion of the Judge of first instance and his conclusion should not be overruled by the Court of appeal except in very clear case of miscarriage Visvanath v Rahibar, A I R 1931 Bom 100 55 B 103

S 63 (p 787)—A register containing copies and directly from the originals is legally admissible in evidence in proof of them Chandran v Sheo Lal A I R 1931 Oudh 146

S 63 (p 789)—A copy transcribed from a copy of an original document but not compared with the original is not secondary evidence of the original Rajendra v Behari, A I R 1932 Pat 157

S 65 (p 793)—It is doubtful whether a copy of a list attached to a plan obtained from some record in the Revenue Court is admissible in the evidence Bhagwati v Majad A I R 1931 Oudh 136

S 65 (p 793)—Where secondary evidence which is inadmissible has been erroneously admitted without objection in the Court of first instance such objection cannot be taken later in appeal Fauza v Allah Ditta, A I R 1931 Lah 722=133 Ind Cas 871

S 65 (p 800)—Where a document of title which is in possession of a party is not produced by him after notice to produce the same, the party giving notice is entitled to give secondary evidence of the document under s 65 (c) and s 66 proviso (2)—Narvidas v Ravirankar, A I R 1931 Bom 33

S 65 (p 809)—Where the original of a document has been proved to have been destroyed by fire certified copy of the same is admissible under this section Rajendra v Behari A I R 1932 Pat 157 But where a party fails to prove that the original of the document was lost secondary evidence of its contents is not admissible Abheraj v Gaya, 8 O W N 1228

S 66 (p 839)—A document which purports to be a mortgage but is not a mortgage owing to noncompliance with the provisions of s 59 of the T P Act regarding attestation is not a document which is required by law within the meaning of s 68 of the Evidence Act and is admissible to prove the personal covenant to pay thereon which is not required by law to be attested Venkat Venkata, 51 M 163=60 M L J 56=A I R 1931 Mad 140

S 68 (p 839)—Other evidence under s 71 cannot be admitted where the provisions of s 68 have not been complied with Banwari v Gopinath, A I R 1931 All 411, Pedu v Venkata, A I R 1932 Mad 148=31 L W 663

S 68 (p 840)—It is not correct to apply an Act which was passed subsequent to the trial of a case to the procedure in the case Proviso to s 68 of the Evidence Act was held inapplicable to a case disposed of before it took effect Banwari v Gopi, 131 Ind Cas 557=1931 A L J 342=A L R 1931 All 411

S 68 (p 842)—Proper reading of the proviso to s 68 is that if any of the defendants to a suit brought upon the basis of a document required by law to be attested, denies that the alleged executants executed the deed the plaintiff must produce one of the attesting witnesses to prove the document and the fact that the deed is registered and none of the executants of the deed have denied its execution will not involve the plaintiff from producing an attesting witness Ludha v Deoli, A I R 1932 All 320=1932 A L J 207

S 71 (p 850)—Other evidence under s 71 cannot be admitted where provisions of section 68 have not been complied with Banwari Lal v Gopinath A I R 1931 All 411=1931 A L J 342

S 74 (p 861)—A judgment of a Court is a public document within the meaning of s 71 Ladli v Emperor, I R 1931 All 487=132 Ind Cas. 327=A I R 1931 All 361

S 74 (p 861)—Petition of appeal produced from Government secretariat is not a public document Mahomed v Sayyid, 8 O W N 349=A I R 1931 Oudh 177

S 74 (p 861)—Report to police that certain woman married to certain person is not public document and hence inadmissible in evidence Nauab v Sher Zaman A I R 1930 Lah 1067

S 74 (p 864)—Where a power of attorney was executed before and authenticated by the Sub-Registrar under s 33(1) of the Registration Act and he did not keep a copy of the original held that s 74(2) of the Evidence Act was not applicable to such a case Bishen v Abdul, 1931 A L J 666=A I R 1931 All 649

S 76 (p 867)—The word "right to inspect" in s 76 exclude all such documents as a Government officer has a right to refuse to show on the ground of State policy or privilege Debidatt v Sri Ram, A I R 1932 Bom 291=34 Bom L R 236 The right of a member of the public to demand a copy of a judgment is limited by s 76 to "a person who has a right to inspect the document" The right of a person to inspect a judgment therefore must be looked from outside the Evidence Act Every member of a public can inspect a judgment in a criminal case Ladd v Emperor, A I R 1931 All 364=1931 A L J 405

S 76 (p 867)—Fard Baahs are records of the acts of public officers and are public documents Malik v Khushi 32 P L R 508=A I R 1931 Lah 605

S 78 (p 877)—An extract from a News paper about a government notification is inadmissible in Evidence A copy of the Government Gazette should be produced Moh Lal v Emperor, 1930 A L J 1535=A I R 1931 All 12

S 81 (p 879)—Where a copy of a Gazette Notification is produced for the first time before the High Court in revision from an order of conviction under s 3, the High Court can presume its genuineness under s 81, Evidence Act, and can hold the production of it in the High Court sufficient even if it had not been tendered in evidence before Nanah v Emperor A I R 1931 Lah 273=32 Cr L J 1227

S 90 (p 900)—The presumption of execution of the document extends to the marksman Shailendra v Gurya, 58 C 686=A I R 1931 Cal 596

S 90 (p 900)—Section 90 does not contain any restrictions that a presumption should not be drawn there under if the person claiming under the document in question is out of possession or has not actually signed or thumb marked the document himself It is for the Court to decide in each case whether the custody from which the document is produced is or is not proper and if it considers the custody to be proper it can raise the presumption Imam v Natha, A I R 1932 Lah 43=32 P L R 626

S 90 (p 900)—Court has discretion to raise or not to raise presumption under s 90 It is not compulsory upon any Court before whom a document purporting or proved to be 30 years old produced to presume that the said document is genuine The presumption that arises under s 90 of the Act only extends to the genuineness of the old documents coming from proper custody, it does not further go to the extent of holding that the document was in fact executed by persons possessed of the requisite authority Ram Naresh v Churlu, A I R 1932 Oudh 227=9 O W N 379

S 91 (p 911)—Where the terms of an agreement has been reduced to the form of a document no evidence about the terms of the agreement is permissible except the document itself or secondary evidence of its contents Sri Durga v Badri, 15 R D 399 Nazir v Ram Mohan 53 A 114=1931 A L J 64=A I R 1931 All 183 (F B)

S 91 (p 911)—It is a well established principle of law that every loan carries with it a contract to repay and if a hand note which forms the evidence of the transaction, cannot be accepted in evidence for some reason or other, there is nothing in law to prevent the plaintiff from giving other evidence as regards the loan and if he can satisfy the Court as regards the truth of his version there is no reason why a decree should not be made in favour of the plaintiff Abdul v Mahananda 133 Ind Cas 685=A I R 1931 Pat 293 Kumcar v Suraj, A I R 1932 Oudh 235, Aray v Ram, 130 Ind Cas 347, contra Nazir Khan v Ram Mohan A I R 1931 All 183=53 A 114 (F B), Saligram v Radhaya A I R 1931 All 560,

S 91 (p 911)—I act of partition may be proved by oral evidence although deed embodying terms of partition cannot be proved for want of registration Subbarao v Mahalakshamma, A I R 1930 Mad 883

S 91 (p 911)—Where an agreement to relinquish ex proprietary right which should be in writing and registered was not so executed held that oral evidence was not admissible regarding the agreement Ram Nath v Specu Managar, 12 L R 1 Rev

S 91 (p 911)—Documents merely evidence of transaction complete independently of them and not embodying terms of mortgage transaction do not require registration and are admissible in evidence Ralli Brothers v Pampa National Bank A I R 1930 Lah 920 But where it does require registration other evidence is not admissible to prove the nature of the transaction Alak v Nanukon, A I R 1932 All 250=1932 A L J 101

S 91 (p 911)—Unregistered sale deed cannot be made basis for suit for specific performance as if it were merely document creating right to obtain another document Dutan v Gumbachan, A I R 1932 Lah 276=33 P 1 R 227

S 92 (p 928)—Section 92 applies only in cases where a document contains or appears to contain on the face of it all the terms of the contract The burden of proving that the writing does not contain the whole of the agreement would be on the party setting up that plea Chumanram v Ditanchand, A I R 193 Bom 151=34 Bom L R 26

S 92 (p 930)—Acknowledgment is not a document contemplated in section 92 Chhedilal v Monoharlal, A I R 1930 Nag 298=26 N 1 R 930

S 92 (p 930)—Extraneous oral evidence is inadmissible especially where the terms of the bond are clear The parties must be presumed to know the difference between interest on interest and compound interest and if they deliberately choose to use one expression they cannot be permitted to prove the other Bhadu v Ganpati, A I R 1931 Nag 25

S 92 (p 930)—Oral evidence by plaintiffs for the purpose of showing that one of the parties to the extract had acted as agents, is admissible Ladhumal Chandumal, 25 S L R 91=A I R 1931 Sind 4

S 92 (p 930)—In case of loss in the name of one member of a joint family, evidence is admissible to show that it was for entire joint family Raghunath v Budhooram 133 Ind C 897=A I R 1932 All 112

S 92 (p 933)—Person not parties to the instrument can give evidence, challenging the nature of transfer Ram Sundar v Collector of Gorakhpur, A I R 1930 All 797=1930 A L J 724, Gopi v Rup Ram, A I R 1930 All 786=1930 A L J 926 Sale deeds and mortgage deeds are essentially transactions between the vendor and the vendee or the mortgagor and the mortgagee The vendor and the mortgagee must be regarded as parties to the transaction But in case of an instrument which is essentially a deed of family settlement between the claimants to an estate is quite different The mere fact that they agree to make provisions for certain relations or dependents does not make such persons parties to the instrument and oral evidence given by a person concerning maintenance allowance to be given to one of such relations cannot be excluded by reason of section 92, the relation not being a party to the deed of agreement Ilhanarayan v Rup Kuar, A I R 1932 Oudh 168=9 O W N 29 The word "as between the parties to such instrument" suggests that the section applies only to the 'dispositive' documents between the contracting parties Madiak v Farada 9 Mys L J 203

S 92 (p 933)—Person described in bond as principal debtor cannot be proved to be surety Nandlal v Surajmal, A I R 1932 Nag 62

S 92 (p 935)—An oral agreement between the parties to a decree varying the terms of the decree can be proved and the proof of it is not barred by s. 9 as the section only refers to dispositive instruments Ilal Chand v Prem Chand 20 S L R 279=A I R 1931 Sind 42

S 92 (p 935)—In case of a deed of gift by husband to wife the husband can prove that the same is of a fictitious nature Mahomed v Sayid A I R 193 Oudh 177=8 O W N 349

S 92 (p 936)—Decree operating to create lease is compulsorily registrable and consequently a lease comprised in the petition of compromise and incorporated in the consent decree is not admissible in evidence under s 92 if not registered Sachindra v Ramyash, A I R 1932 Pat 97=12 P L T 871

S 92 (p 940)—Where the terms of the mortgage contract are reduced as required by law to writing an oral agreement varying those terms cannot be admitted in evidence Mulhu Kumar Suami v Govinda, A I R 1932 Mad 218=35 M L W 145

S 92 (p 940)—Where, according to the terms of the registered mortgage deed the whole of the mortgage money is payable on demand with interest evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement between the parties that the amount would not be payable on demand, but shall be accepted in instalments, is inadmissible under the express provisions of s 92—Mohammad v Kishori, A I R 1932 All 375=1932 A L J 414

S 92 (p 946)—The discharge of a mortgage represented by a mortgage-deed by payment and receipt of a smaller amount than was due can be proved as a fact if it is separable from any oral agreement to vary the terms of mortgage contract and can be proved without the evidence of such agreement Suppan Chelth v Yegnarayan, A I R 1932 Mad 141

S 92 (p 946)—When a mortgage bond is silent as to how the money due on it is to be paid and the mortgagee executes a Kistbandi which merely provides that mortgagor is to pay the amount then found due in certain instalments spread over a certain number of years with a proviso that in default of any kist the entire amount under the mortgage bond would become due, the Kistbandi shows the arrangement between the parties and does not alter or vary the terms of the mortgage bond and it is admissible in evidence without registration Sasi v Ram, A I R 1932 Cal 136=35 C W N 861

S 92 (p 958)—Parties can show that they never came to an agreement or that written contract having no date was intended to operate from future uncertain date Radhalissen v Durgaprasad, A I R 1932 Cal 328=59 C 106

S 92 (p 963)—Where it is recited in the document sued on that consideration was paid in cash it is open to the defendant to plead want of consideration Gokal v Harcharan 32 P L R 577=134 Ind Cas 102 The consideration mentioned in a document is not one of the terms of the document but it is the recital of a fact which can be contradicted or raised under proviso (1) to section 92 Nabin v Shona, 35 C W N 279

S 92 (p 963)—Where a plaintiff makes no claim for rectification regarding the rate of interest contained in the mortgage instrument, the proviso to s 92 does not empower a plaintiff suing on an unambiguous unreformed and registered deed to lead evidence to show that by a mistake a term has been omitted from the deed, unless the mistake is such a one as would found a claim for rectification or cancellation Sayamma v Venkata, A I R 1931 Mad 785=61 M L J 637=51 M 973

S 92 (p 973)—A condition precedent within the meaning of proviso (3) to section 92 is a condition without the fulfilment of which there is in effect no written agreement at all and no contractual obligation of any description Shoo Lal v Bai, A I R 1931 Bom 297=33 Bom L R 490

S 92 (p 973)—Proviso (3) s 92 does not contemplate the division or splitting up of a contract, the result of which would be to vary the contract taken as a whole Radha Kissen v Durgaprasad A I R 1932 Cal 328=59 C 106 The true meaning of the words "any obligation" in proviso (3) is any obligation whatever, under the contract and not some particular obligation which the contract may contain Ibid Oral evidence to show that one of the executants of a bond was to be regarded only as a surety is inadmissible in view of s 92 Ibid

S 99 (p 973)—If the statement as to the consideration be taken as a recital of a fact section 92 is not attracted. If it be taken as a recital of a term the agreement might come under proviso (1) to section 92. Such an agreement cannot come under proviso (3) to section 92 as the expression "any obligation" there means any obligation whatever under the contract and not some particular obligation which the contract may contain Isfan Ali v Jogendra, 36 C W N 151

S 92 (p 976)—Where the mortgagor pleaded a subsequent oral agreement whereby the mortgagee agreed to waive the default rate of interest both for the past and for the future and alleged that—payments had been made in pursuance of the alleged agreement and that the entire claim for interest has thus been discharged. Held that s 92 of the Evidence Act was no bar to the plea. Vardyanatha v Kandappa, 54 M 839=61 M L J 556=A I R 1931 Mad 63.

S 92 (p 977)—Where a partnership is formed in 1921 between P and A to carry on certain business and under the terms of the contract which are reduced to writing and registered, the partnership is to continue for five years. An oral evidence to prove that the partnership had in spite of the terms in the contract, been dissolved in June 1922 and P was paid his share of the assets is admissible. Azul Hasan v Imambux, A I R 1932 Nag 42.

S 92 (p 980)—Where the lessee under a registered lease deed contends that they were cultivating an additional area by virtue of an oral agreement. Held that evidence of a simultaneous oral agreement was barred by s 92 and that evidence about subsequent oral agreement was not admissible under provision 4 to that section. Manixa v Jhabbu, 12 L R 336 (Rev).

S 92 (p 987)—Oral evidence is admissible to prove that the name of the creditor was through mistake put down as K instead of R in a deed containing acknowledgment of liability. Aisax v Ram, A I R 1931 Oudh 51=130 Ind Crs 347.

S 92 (p 987)—Importation of extraneous matter is forbidden unless required to show relation of language to existing facts. Irfan Ali v Official Receiver A I R 1930 All 837=1930 A L J 978.

S 93 (p 1000)—Section 93 of the Evidence Act does not prevent evidence being given that the municipal number given in rent-receipt which is different from the present number of the holding was in fact the old number of the same holding. Galstaun v Profulla, 36 C W N 583.

S 101 (p 1030)—The burden of proving a plea of permanent occupancy right in a suit for ejectment is on the tenant. Gopala v Jirappa, A I R 1931 Mad 577=133 Ind Cas 369.

S 101 (p 1030)—Where defendant denied that he had made thumb mark upon any hand note but admitted that he had put his thumb mark on blank paper which might have been utilized for hand note, the burden is on the defence to explain how document bearing defendant's thumb impression came into existence. Sahdeo v Pulesar, A I R 1930 Pat 598.

S 101 (p 1030)—Where a deed of gift by husband to wife is attested as being colourable, person attacking the same must prove the allegation. Nabab Musa v Nawab Falar, A I R 1932 P C 13.

S 101 (p 1030)—Where there is little to choose between evidence of either side, that side must lose on which burden of proof has been laid. Ghri v Manga A I R 1930 Lah 322=33 P L R 263=136 Ind Cas 710.

S 101 (p 1030)—Where adoption of D was acquiesced by members of adopting family for over 50 years and then one P a member of such family challenges it, the burden lies on P to disprove D's adoption because in case of a Hindu long recognized as an adopted son, raises a very strong presumption in favour of the validity of his adoption. Ramachandran v Tiru Narayana, A I R 1932 Mad 198=62 M L J 116=35 L W 73.

S 101 (p 1030)—Where a signature in the account book is admitted but want of consideration is pleaded, the burden of proving that there was no consideration rests on N. Nihal v Dal Singh A I R 1932 Lah 135.

S 102 (p 1030)—When the execution of a hand note is admitted the onus of proving that no consideration passed is thrown entirely on the defendant. Chalpa v Kuldip, 134 Ind Cas 632=A I R 1931 Pat 266. But when the execution of the hand note is denied by the defendant, the onus rests on the plaintiff of proving due execution. Ramlakhan v Gog Singh, A I R 1931 Pat 219=12 Pat L T 233.

S 102 (p 1030)—Where a person passes a receipt in favour of another for money borrowed for him, the burden of proving that the money borrowed did not belong to that person lies heavily on the debtor. Patiram v Sadash 132 Ind Cas 459=A I R 1931 Nag 97.

S 102 (p 1030)—It is for the person claiming the benefit from disposition of property by the purdannah lady to establish affirmatively that it was substantially understood by the lady and was really her free and intelligent act. If she is illiterate it must have been read to over her if the terms are intricate they must have been adequately explained, and her degree of intelligence will be a material factor, but independent legal advice is not in itself essential. Rama namma v Pirana, 54 C L J 183=61 M L J 94 P C=35 C W N 633

S 103 (p 1031)—Where the vendor admits receipts of full consideration in the sale deed, the burden lies heavily on him to explain the admission and prove non receipt of consideration. Johnstone v Gopal, 12 Lah 546=A I R 1931 Lah 419

S 103 (p 1031)—Where in a case of infringement of copyright the complainant produces his certificate of registration and the book published at that time, and he further testified that the book is not the same as that produced by his father the onus lies on the defence to show that matter contained in the complainant's book was also contained in the previous book. Emperor v Sheo Charan, 131 Ind Cas 865=1931 A L J 304=A I R 1931 All 353

S 106 (p 1064)—Where a person is charged with having been a member of an association declared unlawful by the Government the burden of proof is not on the accused to prove the discontinued his membership. It is for the prosecutor to prove he continued to be a member even subsequent to the notification by Government.—Emperor v Sripad, 55 B 484=33 Bom L R 90=A I R 1931 Bom 129

S 108 (p 1069)—Where the entry in the Mhut showed that a person was unheard of and there was other evidence to show that the person had not been heard of for 40 years, the presumption as to death could be drawn. Thrallipatti v Ranyit Singh, A I R 1931 Oudh 40=130 Ind Cas 124=7 O W N 1120

S 108 (p 1074)—Under s 108 there is only a presumption of death. It does not raise any presumption as to the date of death. Punjab v Natha A I R 1931 Lah 582 (F B)=133 Ind Cas 889, Meherkhan v Sahi A I R 1932 Lah 45=134 Ind Cas 97, Jangi v Gulri, A I R 1932 All 365=1932 A L J 175

S 111 (p 1087)—Where the donee is in active confidences burden of proof of good faith of the gift is on the donee even if donor is not a purdannah lady. Vithal v Narayan 34 L W 424=61 M L J 879

S 112 (p 1093)—Under s 112 first there is a presumption of legitimacy, this can be rebutted by non access, but once access is proved presumption becomes irrebuttable. Access means actual sexual intercourse not mere opportunity. Jogannath v Channa Suam 1931 M W N 755=61 M L J 878 see also Mayandi v Sami Asati, 1931 M W N 1278=61 M L J 874=A I R 1932 Mad 44

S 114 (p 1107)—Section 114 does not enable Court to presume certain state of things without any proof. B N Rly v Moolji, A I R 1930 Cal 815

S 114 (p 1107)—(i) The presumption under s 114 is discretionary with the Court having due regard to the circumstances, (ii) the presumption means that the law exempts the crown from proving the guilt of the accused unless he gives some explanation as to how he came by the goods. If he gives any explanation which in the opinion of the Jury may possibly be true although they do not necessarily believe it, then the crown cannot rely upon the presumption and must prove the guilt of the accused just as in any other criminal case accused did not prove his innocence affirmatively. Bhutanath v Emperor 35 C W N 291 Possession of stolen property about nine months after its loss does not give rise to any presumption under this section. Suchit Ahir v Emperor, 130 Ind Cas 800=32 Cr L J 614=A I R 1931 Pat 85

S 114 (p 1112)—It is seldom safe to base a conviction upon the statement of an accomplice unless there is independent evidence to corroborate it in material particulars. Gaya Prasad v Emperor 8 O W N 517=32 Cr L J 1181=134 Ind Cas 401, see also Durga v Emperor, 132 Ind Cas 70=32 Cr L J 830, Indar Dutt v Emperor 132 Ind Cas 185=32 Cr L J 818=A I R 1931 Lah 408, Jai Singh v Emperor, 8 O W N 1240, Venkat Subba Reddi, In re, 53 M 931=A I R 1931 Mad 689, Sher Jang v Emperor, 32 Cr L J 681=A I R

1931 Lah 178, Manal Chand v Emperor, 32 P L R 792; Aug Illa v Emperor, 9 Rang 401=1931 Cr C 875=A I R 1931 Rang 235, Bhureshwar v Emperor, 132 Ind Cas 234=A I R 1931 Oudh 172, Amarnath v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah 406, Ambica Charan v The Emperor, 35 C W N 1240, Surendra v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 377=54 C L J 470, Ranbir v Emperor, A I R 1932 Lah 204=33 P L R 241, Nandl Chand v Emperor, A I R 1932 Lah 73=133 Ind Cas 545=32 Cr L J 1036, Poras Ram v Emperor, A I R 1930 All 740

S 114 (p 1111)—It is not right to presume from the fact that a man is member of an association when it is lawful, that he continues to be a member after it is declared unlawful. This is not a matter of presumption, there must be evidence of continuing membership. Emperor v Dharmanand, 33 Bom L R 333=A I R 1931 Bom 203, Emperor v Shripad, 55 B 484=A I R 1931 Bom 129

S 114 (p 1118)—It must be assumed that a process issued by the Court and accepted by it as having been duly served in the manner provided by law with all the formalities laid down for the service thereof and the burden of proving that the formalities were not complied with is on the defendant. Chay v Kripa Ram, 31 P L R 1001=132 Ind Cas 181

S 114 (p 1118)—Under s 114 the Court may presume that an entry in a public record made by a public servant was properly made. Abheraj v Gaya, 8 O W N 1228

S 114 (p 1118)—The decision of the Privy Council in Jitendra Nath Ghose v Man Mahon Ghose, 57 I A 214, seems to lay down that in the absence of evidence to the contrary it has to be presumed that the procedure laid down in ss 12 and 13, B T Act was duly followed and that proper statutory notice was given of the encumbrances and execution sales. Sasi Sekhar v Bir Bilram, 30 C W N 1239

S 114 (p 1118)—It may be presumed that an attachment ordered by the Court was duly effected, in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Auerander v Beni, 58 C 598=A I R 1931 Cal 763

S 114 (p 1118)—Though ordinarily it may be presumed that a Government notification purporting to have been published in a Gazette of a certain date was in fact so published, yet where the interval between the issue of a notification and action taken on it is short, a Court might require stricter proof that all the formalities for publishing the notification had actually been carried out. Emperor v Balvishna, 55 B 356=A I R 1931 Bom 132

S 114 (p 1118)—Entries in collectorate books as to arrears due must be presumed to be correct and must be looked into to ascertain whether estate was in arrears. Radha Gobinda v Girja Prosanna, 35 C W N 912

S 114 (p 1118)—Illustration (g) refers to evidence which can be made and is not produced. Girish v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 18

S 114 (p 1120)—No presumption can be made against the defendant from their non production of their title deeds in response to a fishing application by the plaintiffs for discovery which did not disclose any material to support their claim. Someshwar v Maheshwar, A I R 1931 Pat 426=10 Pnt 630

S 114 (1121)—The Court may draw such inferences from the accused's refusal to answer questions as it thinks just according to s 342 Cr Pro Code and s 114 illus (h). Shei Jang v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah 178=32 Cr L J 684

S 114 (1122)—In a claim for recovery of the money on the basis of the lost agreement, the defendant produced the agreement, and alleged that the obligation had been discharged. The Court placed the onus on the plaintiff to show that the agreement was lost and not discharged. Held that the onus was wrongly placed on the presumption under s 114 illus (i) would be a piece of evidence in defendant's favour but it did not shift the onus of proof which was on the defendant to show that he had discharged his obligation. Jagannath v Amara, A I R 1931 Lah 299=131 Ind Cas 495

S 114 (p 1121)—Where there is nothing to suggest that the attesting witness signed after the mortgagor the Court can rely on the presumption under s 111 and hold that he signed after mortgagor. Radhia v Nagendra, 131 Ind Cas 767=53 C L J 586=A I R 1931 Cal 806

S 114 (p 1127)—Where it is shown either by proof or admission that the thumb impression on the suit hand note is that of the defendant but the defendant alleges that he put in his impression only on a blank piece of paper, no presumption of any kind can be raised in favour of the plaintiff under this section Ram Lalhan v Gog Singh, 12 Pat L T 233=A I R 1931 Pat 219

S 114 (p 1130)—A child born in India must under ordinary circumstances be presumed to have his father's religion and his corresponding civil and social status Mahomed v Raja Sayid, A I R 1931 Oudh 177=8 O W N 349

S 114 (p 1139)—The presumption that a particular witness has discharged his duty properly is a presumption which they "must make" and not one which they "may make" Emperor v Tharu Ali, 58 C 1095=A I R 1931 Cal 796

S 114 (p 1139)—In cases of arrears of revenue an entry in books of collectorate are produced to be correct Radha v Girja, A I R 1932 Cal 153

S 114 (p 1139)—Due notice under s 69 Embankments Act, should be presumed under s 114 Evidence Act, in the absence of evidence to the contrary Sasi v Bhr Bakram, A I R 1932 Cal 267

S 114 (p 1139)—An action taken by a properly constituted authority should always be held to be legal unless it is demonstrably not so President Union Board v Balkrishna Reddi, A I R 1932 Mad 509, see also John Carapet v Syed Mohammad 36 C W N 242

S 114 (p 1139)—Under s 114 of the Evidence Act the Court may presume unless contrary is shown that all judicial acts have been done regularly and according to law Prian Chunder v Blackwood 36 C W N 345

S 115 (p 1144)—The doctrine of estoppel by deed in its technical sense cannot be said to exist in India Johnstone v Gopal 12 Lah 546=A I R 1931 Lah 419

S 115 (p 1149)—As regards equitable estoppel, vide Niharbala v Sashadhar, 58 C 358, Ariff v Jadumath, 58 C 1235=35 C W N 550, Sheo Tahal v Binael, 1931 A L J 653=A I R 1931 All 689, Canadian Specific Railway v The King, A I R 1932 P C 108

S 115 (p 1150)—Where there is no representation by a person the value of estoppel cannot be invoked against him Sirajuddin v Johur 134 Ind Cas 888=53 C L J 222 In order to establish estoppel upon representation, declaration must have been made and believed and truth must have been inaccessible Mohammad v Mohammad, A I R 1930 All 847, Johnstone v Gopal, A I R 1931 Lah 418, Abdul v Mahboob, 6 Luck 382

S 115 (p 1151)—There can be no estoppel except when one person has by his declaration act or omission intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a certain thing to be true and act upon such belief Mahomed Hayat v Gulam 32 P L R 390=A I R 1931 Lah 598

S 115 (p 1153)—Pleas of estoppel—Burden of proof, vide Sheo Tahal v Binael Shul ul, 1931 A L J 653=A I R 1931 All 689

S 115 (p 1167)—As regards cases of estoppel by conduct, vide, Sheril h Dhumnoo v Sheolal, A I R 1931 Nag 158=27 N L R 183, Ram Udit v Ram Samu, 134 Ind Cas 465=A I R 1931 Oudh 263, Balasurya v Mrutyamavadu, 131 Ind Cas 669=A I R 1931 Mad 354, Suraj Prosad v Oudh Behari, A I R 1931 All 216, Nauberumal v Teera perumal, A I R 1930 Mad 956, Gopi v Bay Nalk, A I R 1930 All 840 Muhammad v Ali Saghir, A I R 1932 Pat 33, Rama Krishna v Tirumarayana, A I R 1932 Mad 198, Umrao v Ramisen, A I R 1932 Lah 281

S 115 (p 1167)—An infant is not estopped from setting up infancy even when fraudulent misrepresentation is proved Gadigeppa v Balangunda 55 B 741=33 Bom L R 1313

S 115 (p 1172)—There can be no estoppel against legislature Alora v Jhandu Ram, 12 Lah 367=A I R 1930 Lah 1034, H V Lou & Co Ltd v Sudhanna, 58 C 1453=35 C W N 587=A I R 1931 Cal 791 Abdul v Mahboob Ali, A I R 1931 Oudh 133 Dotie Korian v Lachmi, 58 I A 58=10

S 155 (p 1361)—Section 155, Cl (3) does not render nugatory the clear and explicit provisions of s 115 and in fact takes for granted the existence and binding effect of those provisions Mahla v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah 33=32 P L R 259

S 155 (p 1361)—Where two accused are alleged to have strangled a person to death and some of the prosecution witnesses say that the eye witnesses at the spot immediately after the offence was committed did not implicate one of the accused as having helped to strangle the deceased, their evidence can be used under s 155(3) to impeach the credit of the eye witnesses Nana v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah 189=32 Cr L J 1205

S 155 (p 1361)—In prosecution for rape general immoral character of prosecutrix may be shown Wahid Ali v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 523

S 157 (p 1369)—Where a girl who had mixed aconite in cooked food and served the same on her near relatives two of whom died, was granted a pardon and she made statements before the doctor and the Magistrate as to the circumstances under which the aconite was administered. Held that her statements were admissible in evidence Emperor v Amode Ali, 58 C 1228=35 C W N 573=A I R 1931 Cal 757

S 157 (p 1369)—Previous statements of witnesses are only ordinarily admissible to corroborate or contradict the witness who have made statements at the trial. As to corroborating a witness it is unnecessary for the prosecution to corroborate their witnesses by previous statements until the statement made at the trial has been in one way or another, challenged Abdul Jahl v Emperor, A I R 1930 All 746

S 159 (p 1378)—If it is merely a question for a man refreshing his memory and the document is not tendered in evidence and the witness merely gives evidence in the ordinary way after reading what has been written, section 159 applies. But where the witness says that he does not recollect the facts recorded by him in the statement but is sure that they were correctly recorded then section 160 applies and the document may be tendered in evidence Arishappa v Emperor, 60 M L J 404=A I R 1931 Mad 430, see also A I R 1931 Mad 352=131 Ind Cas 621, Jagannath v Emperor, 82 Cr L J 1172

S 165 (p 1394)—The power of a Judge under s 165 cannot be exercised for the purpose of introducing evidence in contravention of the law, namely s 162 Cr Pro Code Rahyoddi v Emperor, 35 C W N 317=58 C 1009=A I R 1931 Cal 189

S 167 (1403)—Improper admission of evidence of character of the accused goes to the very root of the administration of criminal justice and where it appears that such evidence has influenced the Magistrate's consideration of the other evidence in the case, the conviction should be set aside Phekan Singh v Emperor, 12 Pat L F 471=A I R 193 Pat 193 345=133 Ind Cas 449

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT. ACT I OF 1872

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 15th March, 1872

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate, define and amend the Law of Evidence, It is hereby enacted
Preamble as follows —

Title of an Act. "Originally bills in Parliament were mere petitions to the King. They were entered on the rolls of Parliament with the King's answer, and at the end of the Session the Judges drew up these records into Statutes, to which they gave a title (Co Litt 272 a). The title was first added about the eleventh year of Henry VII. In the Lords the original title of a bill is amended at any stage at which amendments are admissible when the alterations in the body of the bill have rendered any change in the title necessary, and in the Commons since 1874 either in committee or report or on the third reading stage of a bill." Maxwell Sixth Edition p 73. So it was held by Lord Mansfield in Rex v. Williams, 1 W Bl 95 that the title of a Statute was no part of the law see also Salkeld v. Johnston, 84 R R 255, Poncellet's Case 11 Rep 336, Mills v. Wilkins, 6 Mod 62 A G v. Weymouth, Amb 22, Chance v. Adams 1 Lord Raym 77 Shrewsbury v. Scott 6 C B N S 1 Jefferys v. Boosey 4 H L C 192, Morant v. Taylor 1 Ex D 191. "The title cannot be resorted to" says Lord Cottenham "in construing the enactment" Hunter v. Norklode 1 Mac & G 640 1 Hall & T 644, 14 Jur 256, 19 L J Chm C 177. In R v. Hileock 14 L J M C 104 Lord Denham expressed that view as well. But in Fielden v. Morley Corporation, 67 L J Ch 611 = (1999) 1 Ch 1 = 79 L T 231 = 49 W R 295 Lindley J observed "I read the title adversely, because now, and for some years past title of an Act of Parliament has been part of the Act. In old days it used not to be so and in the old books we are told not so to regard it but now the title is an important part of the Act. See also the observations of Romer L J in Ambler v. Bradford Corporation (1902) 2 Ch C A at p 594 and Sutton J in Jones v. Sherrington (1903) 77 L J K B 774. If there is in the provisions of an Act anything admitting of a doubt the title of the Act is a matter proper to be considered in the interpretation of the Act" Shaw v. Ruddin, 9 Ir C L R 214 S P Reg v. Mellow Union 12 Ir C L R 35 see also Fenton v. Thorley (1903) A C 447, A G v. Morgate Pier Co 69 L J Ch 331 London County Council v. Bermondsey Bioscope Co 80 L J K B 144 Taylor v. Newman 92 L J M C 189 Rauley v. Rauley 45 L J Q B 67, East and West India Dock 39 Ch D 531 Middleton v. Justices v. R 9 App Cas 772. But the enacting part of an Act is not to be controlled by the title and recitals, unless the recitals may be referred to for the purpose of a certifying the intention of Legislature. Bentley v. Rotherham Local Board, 1 Ch D 588 = 46 L J Ch 281. In India a reference may be made to the preamble and title of an Act in construing its words. Hurro Chander v. Shooroodhoo 9 W R (F B) 402 (404 406) see also Uda Begam v. Imamuddin 2 A 90 Alangamonjori v. Sonamani 8 C 637, Crauford v. Spooner, 4 M I A 187.

amble

Preamble The preamble is undoubtedly a part of the Act, and may be used to explain but not to control, the enacting part, which goes often beyond the preamble, if the words to be found in the former are strong enough for the purpose. Juna Bapin v Mahomed, 2 M H C R 322. "I very much regret and Lord Altonstone C J 'that the practice of inserting preambles in Acts of Parliament has disappeared for the preamble often helped to the solution of doubtful points.' London County Council v Bermondsey Bioscope Co, 60 L K B 111. So the preamble of an Act of Parliament cannot be referred to in order to ascertain the intention of the Act, unless there is an ambiguity in the enacting part. Tipler v Oldham County Corporation, 4 Ch D 39, 16 L Ch 105=35 L T 696=25 W R 178. In cases of doubt preamble can be legitimately invoked to determine the scope of the enactment. Emmanuel Constable v Russ 436. Brett v Brett 3 Addams 219. Ethered v Calcutt 61 L R 606. Carr v Royal Exchange Ass Co 33 L J Q B 63, St Masters, 33 L Q B 146. When the language and the object and scope of the Act are not open to doubt, the preamble cannot restrict or extend the enacting part. 4 L R 330. Per Lord Hanford in Jettison v Bailes (1777) Cowp 513. Per Lord Selkirk (1766) 1 W Bl 69. Copland v Davies (1872) L R 5 H L 308. Law v Rathnam (1876) 16 L J Ch 234. R v Jthos (1723) 8 Mod 144. The preamble in a statute is not the motive for legislation, the remedy may be consistently and wisely be extended beyond the cure of that evil. Per Lord Denham in Jethons v Clay (1843) 4 Q B 349. The preamble is undoubtedly a part of the Act. Sallid v Johnson (1818) 2 Ex 283. The meaning and effect of the preamble or a Code must be understood to override the whole Act, given colour to and controlling its provisions and by showing the intention of the legislature applying pro tanto the rule for the interpretation of these provisions. Ida Begum v Imamuddin 2 A 74 (99).

Where the object or meaning of an enactment is not clear 'the preamble of a Statute is a good means to find out the meaning of the Statute and it were a key to open the understanding thereof' (Cole Inst 79 i). Where the intention of the Legislature is declared by the preamble effect is to be given to the preamble to this extent namely that it shows what the legislature is intending, and if the words of enactment have a meaning which does not go beyond that preamble or which may come up to that preamble in either case the meaning is to be preferred to one showing the intention of the Legislature which would not answer to the purposes of the preamble or which go beyond the preamble. Per Lord Blackburn in Overseers of West Ham v Her (1883) 9 A C 388. See also The People v Utica Ins Co 15 Johns A 14. See also Cosans Mining Co v South Carolina, (1891) 144 U S 750 at p 751. It has been sometimes said that the preamble may extend, but cannot retract the enactment part of a Statute. R v Jthos 8 Mod 144, Copland v Davies 1 P Wm 20. per Lord Abinger in Haller v Richardson 16 L J Ex 229. Hayman v Huker 32 L J C P 132. Drummond v Drummond 1 L 2 Ch 11, Reams v Card Weavers Co 6 C B N S. But it would be difficult to support this proposition. Mazell, 6th Ed 91. contra per Lord C B and Lord Hardwicke in Ryall v Rolle 1 A 171, 182. per Lord Blackburn in West Ham Overseers v Her (1883) 9 A C 386 at p 388. So it is well settled that the preamble cannot extend, restrict or extend the enactment part when the language and the object and the scope of the Act are not open to doubt. A preamble in a Statute can govern clear expression in the enacting part thereof. Keshab v Bhabani C L J 187. Queen Empress v Indrajit 11 A 266. Kadi v Bhabani 11 A 115. Sutton v Sutton 22 Ch D 511, Mondal v Improvement 1st 11 C 313. In Toult v Kempton Park Race Course Co (1899) 1 C 14 P 185=68 L J Q B 392. Lord Husbury observed 'Two propositions quite clear one that a preamble may afford a clear light as to what a Statute intended to reach and another that if an enactment is clear and unambiguous no preamble can qualify or cut down the enactment.'

So where the enacting part is explicit and unambiguous the preamble can be resorted to to control qualify or restrict it but where the enacting part is ambiguous, the preamble can be referred to to explain and elucidate it.

Mol v Hurnam Singh, A 1 R 1923 Lah 35=28 P L R 595=101 Ind C 661 In Doe v Brandling 7 B & C 613, Lord Tenterden thus laid down the rule "If on a review of the whole Act a wider intention than that expressed in the preamble appears to be the real one, effect should be given to it not withholding the less extensive import of the preamble." In Fellows v Clay, (1843) 4 Q B 313, Lord Durham observed "The preamble is often no more than a recital of the inconvenience and does not exclude any others for which a remedy is given by the Statute. The evil recited is but the motive for the legislation but remedy may both consistently and wisely be extended beyond the cure of that evil." In the well known Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C L & Fin 85, Lord C J observed "If the words of the Statute are in themselves precise and unambiguous then no more can be need try than to expand those words in their natural and ordinary sense. The words themselves alone do, in such case, best declare the intention of the lawgiver. But if my doubt arises from the terms employed by the Legislature it has always been held a safe means of collecting the intention to call in aid the ground and cause of making the Statute and to have recourse to the preamble which according to Chief Justice Dyer is a key to open the minds of the makers of the Act, and the mischief which they intended to redress." In the Secretary of State v Maharaja of Bobbili 43 M 529 P C Lord Shaw said "It is the section that governs and not the preamble." See also Munshi Singh v Trustees of Improvement of Calcutta, 43 C 343=22 C W N 1 (F B). Though the preamble of an Act does not control any provision which follows it it may be a most useful guide when a question of doubt arises upon the construction of a particular provision and considerations relating to the scope of the Act are involved. Sital v Dhanney 20 C W N 1185, Saulanbai v Din Dyal 12 A 400=A W N (1890) F B 145, Kristonath v J F Brown, 11 C 176, Gopi v Jaykrishna 12 C L J 8, Kesavulu Auler v The Corporation of Madras 23 L W 233=92 Ind C 103 A I R 1926 Mid 381=50 M L J 301, Apen v Sayer Pramanal, 103 Ind C 602-A I R 1927 Cal 763, Roy Mal v Hannam Singh 101 Ind C 661=25 P L R 595. Where a section, or an Act is capable of two readings or is said to mean less or more than it says it is a maximum of interpretation that one must look at the scope and object of the enactment. Mulani v Ahmed L R 5 A 201=16 A 489=22 A I J 321=A I R 1921 A 328.

Preamble to Evidence Act. The rules of evidence which we are bound to administer are contained in the Evidence Act (I of 1872) and I say so because of the preamble to that enactment, but a consolidatory enactment repeating all rules of evidence other than those saved by the last part of section 2 of that enactment—Per Mahmood J in the Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhar Singh 12 A 11 B at p 35.

Interpretation of Statutes. A Statute is the will of the Legislature and the fundamental rule of interpretation to which all others are subordinate is that a Statute is to be expanded according to the intent of them that made it. Just 710 Sussex Peerage 11 C L & F 113. It is the fundamental principle of the interpretation of Statutes that their language must be understood in its most ordinary and popular reception. Per Mahmood J in Queen Empress v Abdul 7 A 35 (1875) (I B). The language of a Statute taken in its plain ordinary sense and not its policy or supposed intention is the safeguard in construing enactments. Philpott v St George's Hospital 6 H L C 1 285=1 Jur N S 1269. See also Income Tax Commissioners v Farnell (1891) A C 511, Giles v Patterson (1902) 2 Ir R 660 at p 667, Fordyce v Bridges 1 H L C 1, Liverpool & Manchester Comm. v Liverpool 2 App C 1 743 (1848). In Multon v Hart (1871) 25 L J C P 118 (114) Jerry C J observed "We ought to give to an Act of Parliament the plain fur literal meaning of its words where we do not see from its scope that such meaning would be inconsistent or would lead to manifest injustice. In construing Will and unwill Statutes and all written instrument the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adhered to unless that would lead to absurdity or some repugnance or inconsistency with the rest of the instrument in which case the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words may be modified so as to avoid that absurdity, repugnance, or inconsistency, but no further' Per Lord Wensleydale, in Grey v Pearson, 6 H L C 106 = 6 L J Ch 481, & also Rhodes v Rhodes, (1882) 7 App C 19 (P C) 19 (205) Vestry, St John's Hamstead v Cotton (1896) 12 App C 18 at p 6. In reporting this canon in Abbott v Middleton, (1878) 7 H L C 114 115, Lord Wensleydale observed 'This rule was in substance laid down by Mr Justice Berton in Warburton v Loveland (1 Huds & Bro 648). It had previously been described by Lord Ellenborough in Doe v Jeasop (12 East 293) as a rule of common sense as strong as can be.' It has been stated by Lord Cranworth (when Chancellor) is 'a Cardinal Rule from which, if we departed we should launch into a sea of difficulties not easy to fathom' [Gundry v Primmer (1852) 1 De G M & G 502 21 L J Ch 40], and is the Golden Rule when applied to Acts of Parliament by Jarvis C L in Mattison v Hunt, 23 L J C P 108 at p 114 Mazuell p 5. It is a cardinal rule governing the interpretation of Statutes that when the language of the Legislature admits of two constructions, the Court should not adopt a construction which would lead to an absurdity or obvious injustice. Khan Gul v Lakha Singh, A I R 1928 Loh 609 (F B). The Court should struggle against repugnancy and should construe an enactment as far as possible in accordance with the terms of the other Statutes which it does not expressly modify or repeal. Ibid A Statute ought to be so construed that if it can be prevented no clause, sentence or word shall be superfluous, void or insignificant. R v Bishop of Oxford 4 Q B D 245, Hough v Hindus, 1 Q B D 224, Vasanbai v Radhikai A I R 1928 Smd 118.

able

Rules of Construction, When language is plain. It is not allowable says Vattel, to interpret what has no need of interpretation. (Law of N S 24) Absoluta sententia expositioe no indiget (2 Inst 533). Such language he declares without more, the intention of the law giver and is decisive of it. [Per Buller J in R v Hodnett, 1 F R 966, Sussex Peerage (1844) 11 C & F 143, U S v Hartwell 6 Wallace, 395, U S v Wilberger, 5 Wheat 93]. The Legislature must be intended to mean what it has plainly expressed and consequently there is no room for construction. Per Park J in R v Bandury 1 A & E 142. Isher v Blight, 2 Cranch 330-Mazuell p 6. A Court is bound to construe a section in a Statute according to the plain meaning of the language used, unless it finds, either in the section itself or in any part of the Statute anything that will either modify or qualify or alter the statutory language even if the result of such construction leads to anomalies or be productive even of absurdity. Rayb v Lakhan 7 C 11-3 C W N 660 following Dani of England v Taghona, L R App C 18 (1891) p 145. St John Hamstead v Cotton, 12 App C 18 (1896). Alfred v Wilkinson 47 B 843. R v City of London Court (1892) 1 Q B 273. Mercsey Doels v Turner (1893) A C at p 177, British Farmers & Co, In re 48 L J Ch 56. Crauford v Spooner, 6 Moo P C 9, R v Steen, 25 L J M C 91, Afley v Dale 21 L J C P 101. The duty of the Court is not to make the law reasonable but to expound it as it stands according to the real sense of the word. Biffin v Yorle 63 R R 337. Dennis v Torrell 42 L J M C 33, Plasterers Co v Parish Clerks Co 20 I J F 362. A Statute need not be interpreted in the light of what is just and expedient where it is otherwise clear from plain and unambiguous language. Groupe v Brannell 7 Cl & F 512. Our decision, says Lord Fenterden in R v Benham 8 B & C 99 may in this particular case operate to defeat the object of the Act but it is better to abide by this consequence than to put upon it a construction not warranted by the words of the Act in order to give effect to what we may suppose to have been the intention of the Legislature. 'The Act' says Lord Abinger in Lockwood 9 M & W 395 'has practically had a pernicious effect not at all contemplated but we cannot construe it according to that result.' 'I can not doubt say Lord Campbell in Coe v Lawrence 22 L J Q B 119 'what the intention of the Legislature was but that intention has not been carried into effect by the language used. It is far better that we should abide by the word of a Statute than seek to reform it according to the supposed intention" "It may have been an oversight in the framers of the Act," observed Parke B in Alexon v Phillips 21 L J Ex 88, 'but we must construe it according to its plain and obvious meaning.' See also R v Mabe 3 A & E 531, York & N Midland Railway Co v R 22 L J Q. B 225, Guyane v Bunell 51 R R 42, Exp St Sepulchre's 33 L J Ch 372, Allins v Jope, 2 C P D 375, Coxhead v Mullis, 3 C P D 439, Palmer v Thatcher, 3 Q. B D 353, Rothschild v Ind Reu (1894) 2 Q. B 145.

The intention of the Legislature must be ascertained from the words of a Statute and not from any general inferences to be drawn from the nature of the objects dealt with by the Statute Fordyce v Bridges, 1 H L C 1=11 Jur 157. Because the Court knows nothing of the intention of an Act, except from the words in which it is expressed and is applied to the facts existing at the time Logan v Coorloun (184), 13 Ben 22=20 L J Ch 347, Achal Singh v Shagbunath, 2 O W N 713=90 Ind C 1 470 Naval Ram v Mehru Lal 1 A 487, Madamsudan v Bamacharan 1 Hyde, 100, Madhusudan v Raja Mohesh, 3 B L R A C 200, Jagodishwary v Karlash 24 C 725 (T B)=1 C W N 374 Gucebulla v Mohan Lal 7 C 127=8 C L R 109, Kuar Nugshar v Kuar Mathura 25 O C 189=9 O L J 235, Mirza Sadique v Mohomed Karim, 9 O L J 456=(1922) Oudh 289 Statutes should be interpreted as simply as possible The Collector of Rangoon v Abdul, (1922) L B 27=67 Ind. C 1 640 The duty of a Court is to construe the law as it stands and not to make a new though it may be a better law Ram Churn v Kumud Mohun, 25 C 571=2 C W N 297 The rule that a word used in a Statute is to be understood in the same sense throughout, is only a rule of presumption, by no means inflexible and certainly not of such a character as to be irrebuttable by other rules of interpretation founded upon the especial context of statutory words or reasons and objects whereof any special section is enacted Per Mahmood J in Baynath v Sital Singh, 13 A 224, but see Babu v Jaswant, 35 B 404.

The meaning of an Act is not to be interpreted with reference to what its framers intended to do but with reference to the language which they did in fact employ 7 Loh L J 201=26 P L R 501=90 Ind C 1 254=A I R 1925 Lah 436 Fool Kumari v Ahurod, 31 C W N 502=102 Ind C 1 115=A I R 1927 C 1 474 But it is more reasonable to hold that the Legislature expressed its intentions in an unguarded manner than that a meaning should be given to them which could not have been intended Ram Chunder v Gouri, 53 C 492=97 Ind C 1 376=A I R 1926 C 1 927 In a word then it is to be taken as a fundamental principle, standing as it were on the threshold of the whole subject of interpretation that the plain intention of the Legislature, as expressed by the language employed is invariably to be accepted and carried into effect, whatever may be the opinion of the judicial interpreter of its wisdom or justice. If the language admits of no doubt or secondary meaning, it is to be obeyed Gopal Chandra v Guru Charan, A I R 1929 Cal 141=32 C W N 1136.

A construction which leads to an anomaly can be given effect to only if the words of the Statute are clear and unambiguous and admit of no other interpretation Dial Singh v Gurdwara A I R 1928 Lah 324.

Where the construction of a rule of law is clear a Court cannot go behind the rule by any enquiry into the reason of the rule Aruna Chala v S R Balrishua, 48 M 579=48 M L J 134=86 Ind C 1 201.

No Addition or Omission. In Tellers Etans, 79 L J K B 955 Lord Loreburn L C observed 'We are not entitled to read words into an Act of Parliament unless clear reason for it is to be found within the four corners of the Act itself.' The observation of Lord Measey in Thompson v Goolb 79 I J K B 911 also runs as follows "It is a strong thing to read into an Act of Parliament words which are not there and in the absence of clear necessity, it is a wrong thing to do." See also Eierett v Wells, 2 M & Gr 277 Davis v Marlborough, 53 R R 29 Exp St Sepulchre's 33 L J Ch 375 Re Cherry's Estate, 31 L J 351. When the language of a Statute is plain in itself it is not open to the interpreter to add to it or to deduct from it or even to consider whether the rule is likely to create hardship, in particular cases if it be read in its ordinary sense. The words themselves alone must be considered to see the intention of the lawgiver A v Ahmad v Chhote Lal, A I R 1928 All 241=26 A L J 298, see also v T K S Ibrahimsa, A I R 1928 Mad 473 (F B) = 51 M L J 524 = 27 M Pream

L W 601 = 1928 M W N 313

Same expression used in same meaning It is a well settled rule of construction that the same words are to be prima facie construed in the same sense in different parts of the same Statute. Per Chitty J in Spencer v Metropolitan Board of Works (1883) 22 Ch D 143 = 52 L J Ch 249 = 47 L T 459. See also Court auld v Leg, L R 4 Ex 130, R v Poor Law Commrs 6 A & L 68, Re Kirlstall Brewery, 5 Ch D 535, Khan Gul v Lalha Singh, A I R 1928 Lah 609 (F B).

Beneficial Construction It is said to be the duty of the Judge to make such construction of a Statute as shall suppress the mischief and advance the remedy. Heydon's Case, 3 Rep 76, Thurle v Hartnell 6 T R 429, Faycross v Grant, 2 C P D 530. Even where the usual meaning of the language falls short of the whole object of the Legislature a more extended meaning may be attributed to the words if fairly susceptible of it. If there are circumstances in the Act showing that the phraseology is used in a larger sense than its ordinary meaning that sense is to be given to it. Per Lord Esher M R, in Bulou v Ross (1890) 24 Q B D 391 at p 359. Gross in the goods of (1904) 73 L J P 82. In Madura Duasthanam v Madura Municipality A I R 1928 Mad 569 at p 571 Wallace J observed. This result is also in consonance with the well known principle of interpretation of fiscal enactments, that if the language is at all ambiguous it must be interpreted in the manner most beneficial to the subject.

Special Act not affected by General Act A general Act should not so be construed as repealing a particular one by implication. Garnett v Bradley, 3 App Cr 950. A general Act does not abrogate an earlier special one by mere implication. Per Page Wood V C in London & Blackwall Ry v Lime House, 2 K & J 123. Thorpe v Adams, L R 6 C P 125. R v Chamneys Ibid 384. Kidner v Phillips (1891) 2 Q B 272, Ashton-under-Lyne v Pugh (1893) 1 Q B 41, Burd v Tunbridge Wells 64 L J Q B 151, Lodge v Hudlister's field Corp (1893) 67 L J Q B 565. This rule is founded on the maxim Generalia specialibus non derogant. Mazuel, 314. "Where general words in a later Act are capable of receiving a sensible and sensible application without extending them to subjects specially dealt with by earlier legislation that earlier and special legislation is not to be indirectly repealed, altered or derogated from merely by force of such general words without any indication of a particular intention to do so." Per Lord Selborne in Seward v The Vera Cruz 10 App Cr at p 68, Haulins v Gathercole 6 D M & G at p 31. Lyn v Wyn Bridge 122 Thames Conservators v Hall L R 3 C P 421, Dodd v Shepherd 1 L R D 75. Mazuel 314. Where a special enactment deals with a particular thing, or class of things, a more general enactment even though its terms would cover the particular thing or class of things is excluded from application thereto by reason of the particular enactment. Kala v Sahg, A I R 1928 All 536, Ho Manung Gyn v Dutt 401, A I R 1928 Rang 249 = 6 L J 474.

Construction to avoid inconvenience, etc — Where the language of a Statute in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction leads to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, or to some inconvenience or absurdity, hardship or injustice, presumably not intended a construction may be put upon it which modifies the meaning of the words and even the structure of the sentence. Byrnes v Venkata Chela Mudali 51 M L J 51 = (1916) 2 M W N 296 = 20 M L T 391 = 111 W 507 = 10 M 959. Where the Legislature has expressed itself in clear and unambiguous terms the consequence of the enactment ignorance of which cannot be attributed to it, and any construction of hardship or supposed hardship cannot affect the interpretation. Fool Kumar v Khurod Chaudia 21 C W N 502 = 102 Ind Cr 115 = A I R 1927 Cal 474. It is one of the cardinal rules of construction of a Statute that in construing it its utility should be avoided. Secretary of State v Jaffer Mohammad 15 C L J 185.

Retrospective operation of Statutes Every Statute which takes away and impairs vested rights must be presumed not to have a retrospective operation, struction is more firmly established than this that a retrospective operation is not to be given to a Statute so as to impair an existing right or obligation, otherwise than as regards matter of procedure unless that effect cannot be avoided without doing violence to the language of the enactment. If the enactment is expressed in language which is fully capable of either interpretation, it ought to be construed as prospective only." Per Wright J in Athlumney In re (1898) 2 Q B 551. Enactments dealing with procedure have an immediate effect and must unless the contrary is expressed apply to all actions whether commenced before or after the passing of the Act. A party has no vested right in mere procedure. Nisar Husain v Sundar Lal 104 Ind Cas 292 = AIR 1927 All 657, see also Kelar Nath v Aetram, 23 NLR 50 = 101 Ind Cas 284 = AIR 1927 Nag 127. While provisions of a Statute dealing merely with matters of procedure may properly, unless that construction be textually inadmissible, have retrospective effect attributed to them, provisions which touch a right in existence at the passing of the Statute are not to be applied retrospectively in the absence of express enactment or necessary intendment. Dellu Cloth etc Mills Co v Income Tax Commissioner Dellu 54 IA 421 = 8 Pat. L J 791 = 25 A L J 964 = 33 M L J 819 (P C) = A. I R 1927 P C 242. In Ram Singha v Shanlar Dayal A I R 1928 All 437 (F B) a suit for arrears of rent for less than Rs. 200 was filed in the Court of the Assistant Collector under the Agr. Tenancy Act when the old Tenancy Act was in force. Before it could be decided the new Act came into force by which the right of appeal was taken away. The point of law that arises before the Full Bench therefore is whether the coming into force of the new Tenancy Act, under which no appeal is provided deprives the defendant of his right of appeal, which he would have had if the old Tenancy Act had continued to be operative. The Full Bench answered the question in the following terms: "It is clear to us that an appeal is a mere continuance of the original proceeding initiated by the filing of the plaint, and that the right to continue that proceeding cannot be affected by a new Act unless it expressly says so. The point is also concluded by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of the Colonial Sugar Refining Co Ltd v Irving, (1905) A. C. 369 = 74 L J (P C) 77 = 21 T L R 513 = 92 L J 738. In that case ordinarily an appeal lay to their Lordships of the Privy Council from an order of the Supreme Court. While the matter was pending in that Court the law was amended so as to allow an appeal to the High Court. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the new Act could not deprive the party of his right to appeal to the Privy Council. Lord Macnaghten remarked at p. 372 "To deprive a suitor in a pending action of an appeal to a superior tribunal which belonged to him is of right is a very different thing from regulating proceedings. See also Dellu Cloth and General Mills Co Ltd v Income Tax Commissioner, Dellu, A I R 1927 P C 242 = 9 Lah. 284 = 54 I A 421 (P C). This principle has also been followed by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Davanayaga Ieddyar v Renulambal Ammal, A I R 1927 Mad 977 = 50 Mad 857 (F B). Datal J has taken the same view in Bala Prosad v Shyam Behari Lal, A I R 1928 All 163. Thus the earlier case of Zamin Ali Khan v Genda, 26 A 375 = 1 A L J 105 which decided otherwise, must be deemed to have been overruled by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in (1905) A C 369 and in A I R 1928 All 437 (F B). So it is now authoritatively settled that the right of appeal is not a mere matter of procedure but is a vested right which inheres in a party from the commencement of the action in the Court of first instance. Kripa Singh v Rasulldar, A I R 1928 Lah 627.

Codifying Act, Construction of In Faghna v Bank of England, 60 L J Q B 145 = 61 L T 353 = 39 W R 657 = 75 J P 676 = (1891) A C 102 at p. 107, Lord Halsbury, L C said "I am wholly unable to adopt the view that, where a Statute is expressly said to codify the law you are at liberty to go outside the Code so created, because before the existence of that Code another law prevailed." In the same case at p. 144, Lord Halsbury also observed "The proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the Statute and to ask, what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law and not to start with enquiring how the law previously stood and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave and as the language clearly supports a contrary construction. Makar 41 v Singh 36 C L J 12. Mt Iahm v Bala, 18 N L R 80-19. Nag 227. Seth Lal m Chand v Baprao, 5 N L R 251. Promotho v Mohia 17 C L J 163=21 C W N 1011=58 Ind Cas 37. Atmar v Bhagwat A I R (1925) Nag 117=8 N L J 17. Champak v Kungel v Ind Cas 12-A I R 192. Nag 219. The Succession Act, 1860, was not retrospective and did not apply to Wills made before the passing of that Act. Leahd loss Sinner v Durga Prosad 31 A 239-4. A W N 11. Ind Cas 66. Sathes v Prosonomoyee, 6 C 794. The Legislature in the Indian Statute is a retrospective operation rest upon the presumption that the Legislature does not intend what is unjust. This rule is based on the maxim Acta constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non praeteritis. A new rule ought to be prospective, not retrospective, in its operation. Retrospective laws are, as a rule of questionable policy, and contrary to the general principle that legislation by which the conduct of mankind is to be regulated ought when introduced for the first time to be decided with hit or miss and ought not to change character of past transaction. Cham v upon the faith of the then existing law. Per Waller J in Phelps v Gye L R 6 Q B 23. The case of Moon v Durbin, 7 Ex. Ch 2, is declining case on the subject. That was a case in which the plaintiff claimed money on the basis of a wagering contract. During the pendency of the suit Stat 8 and 9 Vict C 109 was passed. That Statute made all gaming contracts null and void and all suits brought on such contracts, not maintainable. The question raised was whether it operated to defeat the plaintiff's claim. The Court of Exchequer decided it did not. Parke B in delivering the judgment observed. The language of the clause if taken in its ordinary sense, as in the first instance we ought to take it, applies to all contracts both past and future and to all actions, both present and future on any wager past or future. But it is as Ford Coke says, a rule and law of Parliament that regularly, acta constitutio futuris formam imponere debet, non praeteritis. This rule which is in effect that enactments in a Statute are generally to be construed to be prospective, and intended to regulate the future conduct of persons is deeply founded in good sense and strict justice and has been acted upon in many cases. But this rule, which is one of construction only will certainly yield to the intention of the Legislature and the question in this and in every similar case is, whether that intention has been sufficiently expressed.

So it is abundantly clear that in the absence of clear words, a Statute will not be construed as taking away a vested right of action acquired before it was passed. Knight v Lee (1893) 1 Q B 41, Wright v Greenough, 1 R & S 758. Larpent v Bree 5 H L Cas 481. Jackson v Hooley 8 E & B 797, West v Gurney (1911) 2 Ch 15, Smith v Callander (1901) A C 597. Laur v Renad (1892) 3 Ch 421. Every Statute it has been said, which takes away or impairs vested rights acquired under existing laws, or creates a new disability in respect of transactions or considerations already past, must be presumed out of respect to the Legislature to be intended not to have a retrospective operation. Dash v Van Klee 7 Johnson 502. Marcell, 383. Tampraessa Khatun v Purna Chandra, 103 Ind Cas 853=A I R 1927 Cal 821. Kedar Nath v Netram 23 N L R 50=101 Ind Cas 294. Shiba Kish v Chundal 31 C W N 1007, Apen v Sager Piamant, 103 Ind Cas 66=A I R 1927 Cal 763. Della Cloth etc Mills v Income Tax Commissioner, Della 54 I A 421=8 Pat L T 791=25 A L J 964=53 M L J 819=A I R 1927 P C 242.

The general principle, indeed, seems to be that alterations in the procedure are always retrospective unless there be some good reason against it. Gardner v Lucas 3 App Cas 603. Kimbray v Draper L R 3 Q B 160. So no suitor has a vested interest in the course of procedure or a right to complain if during his litigation the procedure is changed provided no injustice be done. Costa Rica v Erlanger 3 Ch D 69. Turnbull v Forman 15 Q B D 75, see also Bright v Hale 6 H & N 227. 1 G v Sillem 10 H L Cas 763, Carlis v Storm, 22 QBD 513. The John, (1899) P 236. "No rule of con struction is more firmly established than this that a retrospective operation is not to be given to a Statute so as to impair an existing right or obligation, otherwise than as regards matter of procedure, unless that effect cannot be avoided without doing violence to the language of the enactment. If the enactment is expressed in language which is fairly capable of either interpretation it ought to be construed as prospective only. Per Wright J in Athloney v. Ince (1898) 2 Q B 551. Enactments dealing with procedure have an immediate effect and must unless the contrary is expressed apply to all actions whether commenced before or after the passing of the Act. A party has no vested right in mere procedure. Nisar Hussain v. Sundar Lal 101 Ind Cis 292 = A I R 1927 All 657, see also Kelar Nath v. Netram, 23 N L R 50 = 101 Ind Cis 281 = A I R 1927 Nag 127. While provisions of a Statute dealing mainly with matters of procedure may properly, unless that construction be textually inadmissible have retrospective effect attributed to them, provisions which touch a right in existence at the passing of the Statute are not to be applied retrospectively in the absence of express enactment or necessary intendment. Dellu Cloth etc Mills Co v. Income Tax Commissioner Delhi 51 I A 421 = 8 Pat L J 791 = 25 A L J 964 = 33 M L J 819 (P C) = A I R 1927 P C 212. In Ram Singha v. Shanjar Dayal, A I R 1928 All 437 (F B) a suit for arrears of rent for less than Rs 200 was filed in the Court of the Assistant Collector under the Agri Tenancy Act when the old Tenancy Act was in force. Before it could be decided the new Act came into force, by which the right of appeal was taken away. The point of law that arises before the Full Bench, therefore is whether the coming into force of the new Tenancy Act, under which no appeal is provided, deprives the defendant of his right of appeal, which he would have had if the old Tenancy Act had continued to be operative. The Full Bench answered the question in the following terms. It is clear to us that an appeal is a mere continuance of the original proceeding initiated by the filing of the plaint, and that the right to continue that proceeding cannot be affected by a new Act unless it expressly says so. The point is also concluded by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of the Colonial Sugar Refining Co Ltd v. Irving, (1905) A C 369 = 74 L J (P C) 77 = 21 T L R 513 = 92 L J 738. In that case originally an appeal lay to their Lordships of the Privy Council from an order of the Supreme Court. While the matter was pending in that Court, the law was amended so as to allow an appeal to the High Court. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the new Act could not deprive the party of his right to appeal to the Privy Council. Lord Macnaghten remarked at p 372 "To deprive a party in a pending action of an appeal to a superior tribunal which belonged to him as of right is a very different thing from regulating procedure. See also Dellu Cloth and General Mills Co Ltd v. Income Tax Commissioner, Delhi, A I R 1927 P C 242 = 9 Lah 284 = 51 I A 421 (P C). This principle has also been followed by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Daranayyaga Jeddijay v. Renulambal Ammal, A I R 1927 Mad 977 = 50 Mad 857 (F B). Dabal J has taken the same view in Bali Prosad v. Shyam Behari Lal A I R 1928 All 168. Thus the earlier case of Zamin Ali Khan v. Genda, 26 A 375 = 1 A L J 107, which decided otherwise must be deemed to have been overruled by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in (1905) A C 369 and in A I R 1928 All 437 (F B). So it is now authoritatively settled that the right of appeal is not a mere matter of procedure but is a vested right which inheres in a party from the commencement of the action in the Court of first instance. Kripa Singh v. Rasulbhai, A I R 1928 I L J 627.

Codifying Act, Construction of. In Yaghroo v. Bank of England 60 L J Q B 111 = 64 L J 333 = 39 W R 657 = 55 T P 676 = (1911) A C 102 at p 107, Lord Halsbury I C said "I am wholly unable to adopt the view that, where a Statute is expressly said to codify the law you are at liberty to go outside the Code so created because before the existence of that Code another law prevailed." In the same case at p 141, Lord Herschell also observed "The proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the Statute and to ask what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law, and not to try with enquiring how the law previously stood and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave able

it unaltered to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. If a Statute intended to embody in a Code a particular branch of the law, is to be treated in this fashion, it appears to me that it will be almost destroyed and the very object with which it was enacted will be frustrated. The purpose of such a Statute surely was that on any point specifically dealt with by it the law should be ascertained by interpreting the language used instead of, as before, by roaming over a vast number of authorities in order to discover what the law was, extracting it by a minute critical examination of the prior decisions, dependent upon a knowledge of the exact effect even of an obsolete proceeding such as a demurrer to evidence. I am of course far from a saying that resort may never be had to the previous state of the law for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the provisions of the Code. If, for example, a provision be of doubtful import, such resort would be perfectly legitimate, or again, if in a Code of the law of negotiable instrument words be found which have previously acquired a technical meaning, or have been used in a sense other than their ordinary one, in relation to such instruments the same interpretation might well be put upon them in the Code. I gave these examples merely, they, of course do not exhaust the category. What however I am venturing to insert upon is that the first step should be to interpret the language of the Statute and that in appeal to earlier decisions can only be justified on some special ground." See also Ganpat v Sopana, A I R 1928 B 33=30 Bom L R 1. In a recent case [Bristol Tramways Co. v Fiat Motors (1910) 4 L J K B 1103] Coburn Hardy M R also observed "I rather deprecate the citation of earlier decisions. The object and intent of the Statute was no doubt simply to codify the unwritten law applicable to the sale of goods, but in so far as there is an express statutory enactment, that alone must be looked at and not govern the rights of the parties even though the section may, to some extent, have altered the prior Common Law. But see the judgment of Farwell L J Wallis v Pratt, (1910) 79 L J K B 102.

The object of codification of a particular branch of law is that, on any point specifically dealt with by it such law should be sought for in the codified enactment and ascertained by interpreting the language used. In interpreting a Statute, the proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the Statute and to ask what is its natural meaning, uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law and not to start with enquiring how the law previously stood, and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with the view. Narendia Nath v Kamalabasi 23 C 563=23 I A 14=6 M I J 71. See also Kadir Bulsh v Bhawan 14 A 145. Empress v Lal Gangadhar Lal 22 B 112, Golud v Padmanand, 29 C 707 (P C)=29 I A 196=6 C W N 825=4 Bom L R 793. Hulum Chand v Kamalanand 33 C 927=3 C I J 67. In a body of codified law no one enactment should be so construed as to render the express provisions of another enactment absolutely inoperative. Pundit v Bhagwant Rao, 96 Ind Cas 493=A I R 1926 Nag 491. A codifying Statute does not exclude reference to earlier case law on the subject covered by the Statute for the purpose of throwing light on the true interpretation of the words of the Statute where they are open to rival constructions, but matters outside the Statute can not be invoked not by way of construing the provisions but of adding to it something which is not found in it. Tiru Lengada v Tripart Sundara 19 M 728=96 Ind Cas 978=27 Cr L J 1026. Courts are bound to construe a section of an Act according to the plain meaning of the language unless either in the section itself or in any part of the Act anything is found to modify, qualify or alter the statutory language even if absurdity or anomaly be the result of such interpretation. The proper course in interpreting an Act intended to codify a particular branch of the law is first to examine its language for its natural meaning, uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law and to start with enquiring how the law previously stood and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, & see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. Alfred Wilkinson v Wilkinson, 17 B 811=25 Bom L R 91=1973 Bom 521.

When law has been codified it can not be modified gradually from day to day as the changing circumstances of a community require by rules of practice made to meet these imperceptibly changing conditions. Any modification, however small, must be made by legislature, when a suitable opportunity arrives. Ribati v Emperor, A. I. R. 1929 Cal 57

Consolidating Act In construing an Act of Parliament which is a consolidating Act and does not profess to amend or alter the provisions of the Acts consolidated, prima facie the same effect ought to be given to its provisions as was given to those of the Acts for which it was substituted. Mitchell v Simpson, 25 Q. B. D. 183 = 59 L. J. Q. B. 355 = 63 L. F. 405 = 38 W. R. 565 = 55 T. P. 56. In In re Bdgell, Cooper v Adams (1894) 2 Ch. 557 at p. 561 Chitty J observed: "I referred yesterday to the Lord Chancellor's observations in Baul of England v Vaghono, (1891) A. C. 141 with reference to the Bills of Exchange Act. Those observations do not apply to the Bankruptcy Act of 1893. The substance of what fell from the Lord Chancellor is, that when there is an Act such as the Bills of Exchange Act codifying the law the proper rule of interpretation is to read the Act and to interpret its provisions without reference to previous decisions or to previous legislation, that being a prima facie rule only to which there would be reasonable exceptions. As the Lord Chancellor said: 'I am of course far from ascertaining that resort may never be had to the previous state of the law for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the provisions of the code.' Then he gives some examples which I need not cite at length. But I have here to deal not with an Act of Parliament codifying the law, but with an Act to amend and to consolidate the law, and therefore it is I say those observations do not apply and I think it is legitimate in the interpretation of the sections in this amending and consolidating Act to refer to the previous state of the law for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the Legislature." When a clause in an Act which has received a judicial interpretation is re-enacted in the same terms the Legislature is deemed to have adopted that interpretation. Campbell Erparte, In re 5 L. R. Ch. 703 = 23 L. T. 289 = 18 W. R. 1056

Construction imposed by Statutes The Legislature must be presumed to have known the interpretation put by Courts and others on the terms of a Statute and when a provision of an earlier Statute is re-enacted in practically the same language in a latter Statute it is legislative recognition of the correctness of the earlier interpretation. Parneshur v Emperor 3 Pat. L. J. 537 = 19 Cr. L. J. 281 = 44 Ind. Cis. 185 = (1918) Pat. 97 = 4 Pat. L. W. 157, Nagendra v Peary, 21 C. L. J. 605 = 20 C. W. N. 312, Kent County Council Erparte (1891) 1 Q. B. 725 = 60 L. J. Q. B. 435 = 65 L. T. 213 = 39 W. R. 465 = 55 J. P. 647, per Lord Blackburn in Young v Leamington, (Mayor) 8 App. Cis. 526 per James L. J. in Dale's Case 6 Q. B. D. 453 Greaves v Tofield, 14 Ch. D. 571 Clark v Hallond 52 L. J. Q. B. 322, Jay v Johnstone, (1893) 1 Q. B. 25 Naram v Gabriel 4 Pat. L. W. 189 = 44 Ind. Cis. 262 = (1918) Pat. 131. "When construction placed upon the provisions of the Code has been reproduced by the Legislature in successive Codes without alteration the inference is that this constitutes a legislative affirmation of the construction adopted by the Courts." Pratab v Sarat, 33 C. L. J. 201 = 25 C. W. N. 544 = 62 Ind. Cis. 348. In Kalimuddin Mollah v Sahibuddin Mollah 24 C. W. N. 4 (F. B.) at p. 14 Mulherjee J. observed: "It is a well settled principle of construction that the Legislature is presumed to know not only the general principle of law but also the construction which the Courts have put upon particular Statutes and therefore, where a section of an Act, which has received a judicial construction is re-enacted in the same words, such re-enactment must be treated as legislative recognition of that construction. [Jogendra v Shyam Das, 36 C. 549 = 9 C. L. J. 276 Gocool v Dibendra 14 C. L. J. 136 Nandlal v Bank of Bombay 2 Bom. L. R. 316]. The Legislature knows what the law is and has the power to alter the phraseology, if it transpires that its true contention has not been given effect to in judicial decisions. The absence of such action on the part of the Legislature during a period of time may well be taken to indicate that the Courts have rightly ascertained its intention especially if, in the interval, the Statute has been amended in other respect." See also Monohar Singh v Sheo Saran, 25 A. L. J. 545 = 103 Ind. Cis. 271 = A. I. R. 1927 All. 369

it unaltered to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. If a Statute intended to embody in a Code a particular branch of the law, is to be treated in this fashion, it appears to me that its utility will be almost destroyed and the very object with which it was enacted will be frustrated. The purpose of such a Statute surely was that on any point specifically dealt with by it, the law should be ascertained by interpreting the language used instead of, as before, by sifting over a vast number of authorities in order to discover what the law was. Extracting it by a minute critical examination of the prior decisions, dependent upon a knowledge of the exact effect even of an obsolete proceeding such as a demurrer to evidence. I am of course far from asserting that resort may never be had to the previous state of the law for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the provisions of the Code. If, for example, a provision be of doubtful import, such resort would be perfectly legitimate or again if in a Code of the law of negotiable instrument words be found which have previously acquired a technical meaning, or have been used in a sense other than their ordinary one, in relation to such instrument the same interpretation might well be put upon them in the Code. I give these examples merely, they, of course do not exhaust the category. What however I am venturing to insert upon is that the first step should be to interpret the language of the Statute and that an appeal to earlier decisions can only be justified on some special ground. See also Ganpat v Sopana, A I R 1928 B 31 = J Bom L R 1. In a recent case [Bristol Tramways Co. v Fiat Motors (1910) 79 L J K B 1109] ex obs Hardy, M R also observed "I rather depreciate the citation of earlier decisions. The object and intent of the Statute was no doubt simply to codify the unwritten law applicable to the sale of goods, but in so far as there is an express statutory enactment that alone must be looked at and must govern the rights of the parties even though the section may, to some extent, have altered the prior Common Law." But see the judgment of Taruell L J Wallis v Pratt (1910) 79 L J K B 102.

The object of codification of a particular branch of law is that, on any point specifically dealt with by it such law should be sought for in the codified enactment, and ascertained by interpreting the language used. In interpreting a Statute the proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the Statute and to ask what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law, and not to start with enquiring how the law previously stood, and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with the view. Arendia Nath v Kamalabasin, 23 C 563 = 23 I A 156 M L J 71. See also Kadu Bulsh v Bhawan, 14 A 145 Empress, 1 (Gangadhar Fila) 22 B 112 Golul v Padmanand 29 C 707 (P C) = 29 I A 196 = 6 C W N 825 = 4 Bom L R 793. Hulum Chand v Kamalanand 33 I 927 = 3 C L 1 67. In a body of codified law, no one enactment should be introduced as to render the express provisions of another enactment obsolete. Pundit v Bhagwant Rao, 96 Ind Cas 893 = A I R 1926 Nag 49. A codifying Statute does not exclude reference to earlier case law on the subject covered by the Statute for the purpose of throwing light on the true interpretation of the words of the Statute where they are open to rival constructions but matters outside the Statute can not be invoked not by way of construing the provision but of adding to it something which is not found in it. Tiru Lengada v Tirumalai Sundara 19 M 728 = 96 Ind C 978 = 27 Cr I J 1026. Courts are bound to construe a section of an Act according to the plain meaning of the language unless either in the section itself or in any part of the Act anything is found to modify, qualify or alter the statutory language even if absurdity or anomaly be the result of such interpretation. The proper course in interpreting an Act intended to modify a particular branch of the law is first to examine its language for its natural meaning uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law and to start with enquiring how the law previously stood and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. Alfred Wilkinson v Wilkinson, 17 B 813 = 2 Bom L R 91 = 12 Bom 121.

When law has been codified it can not be modified gradually from day to day is the changing circumstances of a community require by rules of practice made to meet the imperceptibly changing conditions. Any modification, however small, must be made by legislature when a suitable opportunity arrives. Rebate v Emperor, A I R 1929 Cld 57

Consolidating Act In construing an Act of Parliament which is a consolidating Act and does not profess to amend or alter the provisions of the Acts consolidated, prima facie the same effect ought to be given to its provisions as was given to those of the Acts for which it was substituted. Mitchell v Simpson 25 Q B D 183=59 L J Q B 355=63 L T 405=38 W R 565=55 J P 36. In re Bdgell, Cooper v Adams, (1894) 2 Ch 557 at p 561 Chitty J observed 'I referred yesterday to the Lord Chancellor's observations in Bank of England v Vagliano, (1891) A C 141 with reference to the Bills of Exchange Act. Those observations do not apply to the Bankruptcy Act of 1853. The substance of what fell from the Lord Chancellor is, that when there is an Act such as the Bills of Exchange Act codifying the law, the proper rule of interpretation is to read the Act and to interpret its provisions without reference to previous decisions or to previous legislation, that being a prima facie rule only to which there would be reasonable exceptions. As the Lord Chancellor said 'I am of course far from asserting that resort may never be had to the previous state of the law for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the provisions of the code'. Then he gives some examples which I need not cite at length. But I have here to deal not with an Act of Parliament codifying the law, but with an Act to amend and to consolidate the law, and therefore it is I say the observations do not apply, and I think it is legitimate in the interpretation of the sections in this amending and consolidating Act to refer to the previous state of the law for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the Legislature." When a clause in an Act which has received a judicial interpretation is re-enacted in the same terms, the Legislature is deemed to have adopted that interpretation. Campbell, Esparle, In re 5 L R Ch 703=23 L T 289=18 W R 1056

Construction imposed by Statutes The Legislature must be presumed to have known the interpretation put by Courts and others on the terms of a Statute and when a provision of an earlier Statute is re-enacted in practically the same language in a later Statute, it is legislative recognition of the correctness of the earlier interpretation. Parmeshur v Emperor 3 Pat L J 537=19 Cr L J 231=44 Ind Cts 185=(1918) Pit 97=4 Pat L W 157, Nagendra v Peary, 21 C L J 605=20 C W N 312. Kent County Council, Esparle, (1891) 1 Q B 725=60 L J Q B 435=65 L T 213=39 W R 465=55 J P 647 per Lord Blackburn in Young v Leamington, (Mayor) 8 App Cts 526 per James L J in Diles Case, 6 Q B D 453, Greaves v Tofield, 14 Ch D 571. Clarke v Wallond 22 L J Q B 322. Jay v Johnstone (1893) 1 Q B 25. Narain v Gabriel 4 Pat L W 189=44 Ind Cts 262=(1918) Pit 131. When construction placed upon the provisions of the Code has been reproduced by the Legislature in successive Codes without alteration the inference is that this constitutes a legislative affirmation of the construction adopted by the Courts. Priatab v Sarat, 33 C L J 201=25 C W N 544=62 Ind Cts 348. In Kahmuddin Mollah v Sahibuddin Mollah, 24 C W N 4 (F B) at p 14 Mulherjee J observed "It is a well settled principle of construction that the Legislature is presumed to know not only the general principle of law but also the construction which the Courts have put upon particular Statutes and therefore where a section of an Act which has received a judicial construction is re-enacted in the same words, such re-enactment must be treated as legislative recognition of that construction. [Jogendra v Shyam Das, 36 C 549=9 C L J 276, Gorool v Debendra 14 C L J 136. Nandlal v Bank of Bombay, 2 Bom L R 316]. The Legislature knows what the law is and has the power to alter the phraseology if it transpires that its true contention has not been given effect to in judicial decisions. The absence of such action on the part of the Legislature during a period of time may well be taken to indicate that the Courts have rightly ascertained its intention. Specially if, in the interval the Statute has been amended in other respects." See also Monohar Singh v Sheo Saran, 25 A L J 545=103 Ind Cts 271=A. I R 1927 All 369

mble

When an Act received judicial interpretation putting a certain meaning on its words and the Legislature in a subsequent Act in pari materia uses the same words there is a presumption that the Legislature uses those words intending to express the meaning which it knew had been put upon the words before, unless there is something to rebut the presumption the Act should be construed, even if they are such as might originally have been construed otherwise. Shan v Sifalcha 25 C W N 703 = 5 C L J 36 = (1922) CIL 331-68 Ind C 219, Wick v 1 27 L J M C 1 Jones v Mersey Dock, 11 H L C 480, Exp Phorn 3 Ch D 457 Attwater Exp, 5 Ch D 27, Exp Campbell, L R 3 Ch 706 Bullock v Lecl 15 Q B D 105, Auray v Wood, (1891) 3 Ch 115, Colonial Land v 1 30 Ch D 285

Previous State of Law Where a Statute is to be interpreted it is necessary to consider what the law was before the passing of the Statute, but what the Legislature has and is to be the law after the passing of the Statute. Chib v 1 25 C 517 = 5 C W N 640 But where intention is not clear in pre-existing law can be referred to Jan v Ram, 30 C 325 So reference to previous state of Law is permissible for solving doubts in construing Rogers v 1 32 C 1 = 82 Ind C 273 = A I R 1925 Cal 4. Where there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature the proper course is to examine the language of the Statute and to ascertain its proper meaning uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law or of the English Law upon which it is founded. M Ramam v 1 1928 P C 2 per Lord Sinha, see also Hem Raj v 1 1928 Lah 361

Legislative Proceedings An enquiry into the vicissitudes which a measure experienced in the course of its passage as a Bill through the Legislature is not a legitimate mode of ascertaining the intention of the Legislature. Waji Karm v 1 2 B 91 In construing an Act, the proceedings in the Legislative Council cannot be referred to Sarat Sundari v Uma Prasad 31 C 628 = 5 C W N 76 It is a mistake to refer to the debates on the Bill, when before the Legislative Council for the purpose of construing an Act Gopal v Sakhray 15 B 13 = P J 1893 42 Omen Empress v 1 20 C 1017 (F B) Kadir Bish v Bhouam Prasad 14 A 145 = A W N 1892 5, Dmonath v 1 27 C 115 = 36 C L J 220 O Russe & Co, v 1 13 Bar L 179 Krishna v Nella Perumall 43 M 550 = 38 M W 119 12 J W 92 = 56 Ind C 163 = 47 I A 33 (P C) Firm of Katan Chaud v 1 13 S I R 23 = 52 Ind C 139 The Court is not authorized to look into the proceedings of the Legislature to see what took place there during the passage of the Bill which passed into law or what was the reason why a particular clause was put in for the purpose of interpreting a Statute Gangul v 1 33 C 929 = 11 C L J 330 = A I R 1927 CIL 149 = 98 Ind C 116 Court while interpreting an Act cannot seek the assistance of the debates in the Legislative Council or the report of the Select Committee Gurdial Singh v 1 Central Board and Local Committee A I R 1928 Lah 337 Rez v 1 1928 Ind C 676 It is not proper to refer to the proceedings of the Legislative Council in order to determine the interpretation of the language of a section Abdul Khan v Shalima Bibi A I R 1925 All 124 = 25 A I J 1061

Objects and Reasons of a Bill One of the presumptions is that Legislature does not intend to make any substantial alteration in the law beyond what it explicitly declares either in express terms or by clear implication or, in other words, beyond the immediate scope and object of the Statute. Marcell v 1 11 C 100, trikur v 1 11 Mod 150 Herbert v Case, 3 Rep 136 But in India where a Court has to construe a Statute it is the Statute alone which the Court is entitled to look to. They are not entitled to look to the reports of the Select Committee. Kadir Bish v Bhouam 14 A 145 = A W N 1892 5, Firm v 1 101 Ind C 661 = 28 P L R 705, Gopal Pandey v 1 121 (I B) = A W N 1882 128 Imp Arshan v 1 211 (1922) Lah 211 Amundar v 1 23 = 28 M L T 75 = (1920) M W N 160 = 12 L W 217-78 Ind. Co. St. ... for introducing a Bill ... to only ...

of that council, ...
are altogether ...
resemblance to the ...
Indian General ... the "Object and ...
lature ...
So it is well ...
words are ...
Court to look to ...
Council with a ...
and be ...
Administrative ...
Lynganger v. ...
Dis. A. I. R. 1922 ...
74b-20 N. L. R.

Report of the ...
it is hardly ...
nessa v. ...

Headings of ...
some modern ... p 92 citing ...
C P 32 ...
36 L. J. F. ...
3 App. ...
R v. ...
Comp. ...
head ...
Melbourne ... a Statute ... be taken ...
They ... explaining ... may be ...
construct ...
preamble ...
when the ...
it is not ...
Burlington ...
71 J. P. ... ought ... power ...
Commerce ...
(P.C.) ...
section ...
part of ...
89 Ir. ...
ce J.

Headings of ...
Saves ...
th ...
the ...
In ... place ...
Y ...
pl ...

ed,
tion
Garl,
Shaw nt, their t is the given as trations

amble notes nor the punctuation appeared on the roll, they formed no parts of the Act. Borington Obs on Stat 391, see Barrow v Wallin 21 B & 327, R v Oldham 21 L J M C 131. This practice was discontinued in 1819, since which time a copy of each Act, printed on vellum by the King's printer, is preserved in the House of Lords and constitutes the official record of Statutes (May, Parl. J P 12th Ed Corp 15 p 599). Both marginal notes and punctuation now appear on the rolls of Parliament nevertheless, it has been said they are not to be taken as parts of the Statute. But as regards marginal notes, the rule as to their rejection for the purposes of interpretation is now of imperfect obligation. For the purpose of interpretation a marginal note was used by Martin B in Nicholson v Fields, 31 L J Ex 233 and by Collins M R in Bushnell v Hammon 73 L J K B 851. In Bushnell v Hammon ubi supra Collins M R observed: "The rule now, although formerly a part of the section is of some assistance, in as much as it shows the drift of the section" vide Marshall p 77 see also Gola v Emperor A I R 1929 Nag 17 (F.B.). It is settled that the marginal notes are no part of the enactment. Claydon v Green 3 C P 511, Attorney General v Great Eastern Railway Co 11 Ch D 449, Bhagia v Emperor 160 Ind C 820 Sutton v Sutton, 22 Ch D 511, Dukhumullah v Halu 23 C 1, Bahadur v Ismail 52 C 463 = 29 C W N 151 = 41 C L J 41. They cannot be referred to for purposes of construing the section. Punardas Narain v Ram Saran 2 C W N 577 = 25 C 878 Jumna Das v Damodar Das, 20 Bom L R 413 C 1 Sayambhu v The Municipal Council of Nagapattam, 1 M L J 37, Queen Empress v Hari 21 A 391 Balay Kunwar v Jagat Pal Singh 26 A 393 = 8 C W N 699 = 31 A 132 = 1 A L J 384 = 11 Bom L R 166 = 7 O C 248 (P.C.) Nanab v Gopinath, 13 C L J 625 (631) Sheikh Channan v Emperor (1919) Pat 463 = 1 Pat L T 11 Ramlal v Emperor 1 Luck C 5, Lyallam Kesava v The Secretary of State, 12 M 151 = 36 M L J 222 = 51 Ind C 16 Claydon v Green, L R 3 C P 521. When the language of a section is not very clear it is legitimate to look at the marginal note to see what the drift of the section is. Smith In re, 45 M L J 731, Gajendra v Durga, 46 A 637 = 3 A L J 561 (F.B.), Bahadur v Ismail 52 C 463, Lahore Bank v Aadar, 31 Ind C 746 = 36 P R 1916 Emperor v Lalman 27 Cr L J 1233 = 98 Ind C 49 = A I R 1927 Sind 39, P Natesa Mudaliar, In re, 51 M L J 704. The marginal note is not a part of the Act. Sholapur Spinning and Weaving Co. Ltd. v Pandharinath A I R 1928 Bom 341. The question whether a marginal note can be referred to for an exposition of the meaning of a section depends upon whether the note has been inserted by or under the authority of the Legislature. Ram Saran v Bhagwan, A I R 1929 All 53.

Punctuation In England before 1849 bills were engrossed on parchment without punctuation as such they formed no part of the Act. Since 1849 punctuations appear on the rolls of Parliament, nevertheless it has been said they are not to be taken as parts of the Statute. Ibid, Claydon v Green 3 C P 521, 1 G v G F R Co 11 Ch D 465, Sutton v Sutton, 22 Ch D 511, Duke of Devonshire v Oconner, 24 Q B D 478. It is an error to rely on punctuation in construing Acts of the Legislature. The Mahataya of Burdwan v Krishna Kamini 14 C 365 = 14 I A 30 (P.C.), Mani Lal v Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta 45 C 343 = 22 C W N 1 = 27 C L J 1 = 44 Ind C 770. But see Blanche Somerset v Charles George, 17 Bom L R 56 = 39 B 18 = 27 Ind C 494.

Proviso Arguments from a proviso which seek to extend the operative effect of the substantive enactment are not legitimate unless there is real ambiguity in the substantive Act. West Derby Union v Metropolitan Life Assurance Co 1897 A C 647, Ramchandra v Gouri Nath 53 C 492 = A I R 1926 Cal 927 = 97 Ind C 376.

Schedule A schedule is as much part of the Statute and is as much an enactment as any other part. Per Brett L J in All Gen v Lamplough (1878) 3 L J D 229. Forms in schedules are inserted merely as example and are only to be followed implicitly so far as the circumstances of each case may admit. Per Tindall C J the Barlett v Gibbs (1843) 5 M & G 96. But where there are contradictions between the schedule and the enacting portion, "it would be quite contrary to the recognised principles upon which the Courts of law construe Acts to enlarge the conditions of enactment and thereby restrain its operation by any reference to the words of a mere form given for convenience sake in a schedule" Per Lord Penzance in Dean v Green (1882) 8 P D 89, Allen v Fisher 10 A & E 640, R v Russell, 18 L J M C 106, Interpretation of Deeds, Wills etc, p 206, see also R v Bames, 12 A & E 227 Schedules annexed to an Act and the headings under which they are placed are parts of the enactment, but they are not to be taken into consideration if the language of the enactment is clear 30 C W N 334

Illustrations The Law Commissioners say—"The illustrations are not mere examples of the law in operation, but are the law itself showing by examples what it is. The statements that 'the definitions and the enacting clauses contain the whole law,' and that 'the illustrations make nothing law, which could not be law without them,' are correct if understood as merely importing that in view of the Legislature the illustrations determine nothing other wise than what without them would have been determined by a right application of the rules to which they are annexed—Report of the Law Commissioners—vide Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated 1st July 1864 p 53 The Law Commissioners who were in charge of framing Penal Code observed The illustrations make nothing law which would not be law without them. They only exhibit the law in full action and show what its effects will be on the events of common life. Thus the Code will be at once a Statute book and a collection of decided cases in the English Law Books in two most important points. In the first place, our illustrations are never intended to supply any omission in the written law, nor do they ever, in our opinion, put a strain on the written law. They are merely instances of the practical application of the written law to the affairs of mankind. Secondly, they are cases decided not by the Judges but by the Legislature, by those who make the law and must know more certainly than any Judge can know what the law is which they mean to make "The power of construing the law in cases in which there is any real reason to doubt what the law is, amounts to the power of making the law. On this ground the Roman Jurists maintained that the office of interpreting the law in doubtful matters necessarily belonged to the Legislature. The contrary opinion was measured by them with great force of reason, though in language perhaps too bitter and sarcastic for the gravity of a Code

"The decisions on particular cases which we have annexed to the provisions of the Code resemble the Imperial Rescripts in this, that they proceed from the same authority from which the provisions themselves proceed. They differ from the Imperial Rescripts in this most important circumstance, and that they are not made ex post facto, that they cannot therefore be made to serve any particular turn, that the persons condemned or absolved by them are purely imaginary persons, and that, therefore whatever may be thought of the wisdom of any judgment which we have passed there can be no doubt of its impartiality" Report of the Indian Law Commission dated the 14th October 1837. In Mahamed Syedol Ariffin v Yeoh Ooi Gail, (1916) A C 575=43 I A 256=21 C W N 257 (P C) at page 264, Lord Shaw in delivering the judgment of the Court observed "On the second point their Lordships are of opinion that in the construction of the Evidence Act, it is the duty of a Court of law to accept—if that can be done—the illustrations given as being both of relevance and value in the construction of the text. The illustrations should in no case be rejected because they do not square with ideas possibly derived from another system of jurisprudence as to the law with which they or the sections deal. And it would require a very special case to warrant their rejection on the ground of their assumed repugnancy to the sections themselves. The great usefulness of the illustrations, which have, although no part of the sections been expressly furnished by the Legislature as helpful in the working and application of the Statute should not be thus impured. In Lala Balla Mall v Shah, 35 M L J 614=16 A L J 905=29 C L J 163=23 C W N 231 (P C) at p 237, Lord Atkinson observed "Four illustrations are given. These are to be taken as part of the Statute. The illustrations represent cases decided by the highest authority i.e. the Legislature" Charlesworth v McDonald 23 B 103 (112). In Satish Chandra Chakravarty v Ramdayal De, 32 C L J

31-24 C W N 902 (46 957) Mr Justice Malherjee observed "We are not unmindful that illustration is useful so far as it helps to furnish some indication of the probable intention of the Legislature and does not bind the Courts to place reliance upon the section which is inconsistent with it language." See also Kaylesh v Sonitau 7 C 132, Goppu v Jaitch, 6 C 171 E & C 18 197=11 Bur L F 1, Queen Empress v Kaluappa, 15 B 491 (496), Amal v Whirlal 1 A 187 (491) Satya v Gobinda 11 C W N 111, Raj v Lohani, 1 B 11, Chotay Lal v Emperor 85 Ind C 722=192, All 190, Omud v Nalla 22 W R 367, Sarjoo v Bissambhar, 23 W R 311, Gowda v Thapumal 28 M 7 (61), Balam v Mangla 31 C 950 Hayee Jan v Balam d Co 23 M L F 320=1, Ind C 912 K K Janoo v Joseph H & Sons Ltd 46 Ind C 197, Lalmalund v Sohanoo, A I R 1929 Pat 14, but see Pra Krishna Suman v Jayappa 24 Ind C 924. If the meaning of the enactment itself were doubtful, reference to the illustration in order to elucidate the meaning would be permissible. But if there be any conflict between the illustrations and the enactment at the illustrations must give way to the latter. Upadham sa v Hulayat Husam 22 A L J 425=80 Ind C 896=194 All 748.

Illustrations and Marginal notes, which is to be preferred. Illustrations do not bind on the interpretation of marginal notes. Marginal notes may not be created by the Legislature and the commonly accepted view now is that they cannot be resorted to for the purpose of construing the enactment. Pradip v Emperor A I R 1928 Oudh 15=1 L C 579. In Thalwarum Balraj Karmar v Kae Jagat Lal Singh 26 A 393=11 I A 132=7 O C 248, Lord Macnaghten thus laid down the value of marginal notes in interpreting a Statute. "It is well settled that marginal notes to the sections of an Act of Parliament cannot be resorted to for the purpose of construing the Act. The contrary opinion originated in a mistake and it has been exploded long ago. There seems to be no reason for giving the marginal notes in an Indian Statute any greater authority than the marginal notes in an English Act of Parliament." On the other hand illustration in part and parcel of an enactment and it seems that when the Court is called upon to interpret a piece of an enactment which comprises both the substantive provision and an illustration of the same the Court is not justified in rejecting the illustration as a guide to the interpretation of the substantive provision. Ram Lal v Emperor supra see also the observation of Lord Shaw in Mahomed Syedol Irifan v Yeshi Chaudhary A I R 1916 (P C) 242=13 I A 256 (P C).

May'—May mean shall. The word "may" in certain circumstances may be used. There may be something in the nature of the thing to be done, in the object for which it is done or in other circumstances, which may convert the option into a duty. Bengal and N B Induay v Special Manager Court of Funds 12 O L J 112=9 Ind C 199=A I R 1925 Oudh 419.

Or And. In construing Statutes it is sometimes necessary to read the conjunctions "or" and "and" one for the other. Arayan v Chairman of Haridwar Municipality 57 Ind C 229=A I R 1925 Cal 1065.

New words to be read in a Statute. Words not to be found in a section may be supplied by necessary implication if the context so requires. 90 Ind C 180=1 R G & Co 1 A I R 192, All 610 (I B).

Every word should receive proper connotation. In a statutory enactment every word should receive its full and proper connotation in the construction of the provision. Opporthe Lal v Lala Gulla A I R 1927 Mad 998. In the interpretation of every section of a Statute a reasonable construction must be given to every word contained therein. Emperor v Shesha and others A I R 1925 All 207 (F B), 26 A L J 21, 91 L K A Cr 34=9 A I Cr 762. When two distinct words are used in the same section the ordinary rule of construction is that they do not mean accidentally the same thing. Emperor v Phuchan A I R 1929 All 57 (F B).

Statutes ousting jurisdiction—Construction of. It is an elementary rule of a Statute which purports to oust the jurisdiction of a Civil Court must be strictly construed. Shankar Prasad v Gokulmangla (1919) Pat 117=4 Ind C 41.

see also Ganesh Das v Harilal, 90 Ind Cis 279. An Act by which the jurisdiction of the ordinary Court is taken away must be strictly construed. Cheta v Bayu, 105 Ind Cis 507 = A I R Lah 452 (F B), Shenai ram v Ghulam, 103 Ind. Cis 440, Baldeo v Lal A I R Pat 1928, 615 = 9 P L F 731. Jurisdiction vested in a superior Court is not ousted except by express language in or obvious inference from the provisions of a Statute. Mahamed Abdul v Emperor, 101 Ind Cis 471 = 28 Cr L J 439, see also Burma Oil Co. v Bayuath, 59 Ind Cis 960 = 3 U B R 212, Kama v Bhayanlal 45 Ind Cis 654, R v Abbot, (1780) Dowg 553.

Pream

Repeal by implication 'Repeal by implication is not favoured. It is a reasonable presumption that the Legislature did not intend to keep really contradictory enactments on the Statute Book, or on the other hand, to effect so important a measure as the repeal of a law without expressing an intention to do so. Such an interpretation is not to be adopted, unless it is inevitable. Any reasonable construction which affords an escape from it, is more likely to be in consonance with the real intention.' Mazuel p 296 cited in Gola v Emperor, 1929 Nag 17 (F B) at p 20 = 24 N L R 153, see also Foster's Case, 11 Rep 63(1). 'The Legislature does not intend to make any substantial alteration in the law beyond what it explicitly declares, (Lithum v Brolenham, 11 Mad 150, Harberts Case, 3 Rep 13 b) either in express terms or by clear implication, or, in other words, beyond the immediate scope and object of the Statute. In all general matters beyond, the law remains undisturbed. It is in the last degree improbable that the Legislature would overthrow fundamental principles, infringe rights, or depart from general system of law, without expressing its intention with irresistible clearness, and to give any such effect to general words, simply because they have that meaning when used either in their widest, their usual or their natural sense would be to give them a meaning other than that which was actually intended. General words and phrases, therefore, however wide and comprehensive they may be in their literal sense, must, usually be construed as being limited to the actual objects of the Act, and as not altering the law beyond Minet v Leman 20 Bea 278. Ruer H car Commissioners v Adamson, 1 Q B D 561, St I G v Exeter Corp, (1911) 80 L J K B 636." Mazuel pp 149-150. So a general later law does not abrogate a special one by mere implication. It is remarked by Lord Selborne in the case of Maney Seward v The Vera Cruz, (1884) 10 App Cis 59 "Where general words in a later Act are capable of reasonable and sensible application without extending them to subjects specially dealt with by earlier legislation you are not to hold that earlier and special legislation indirectly repealed, altered or derogated from merely by force of general words without any indication of a particular intention to do so."

Application of the maxim—Expressio unius est exclusio alterius—A general rule of construction of Acts of Parliament is expressio unius est exclusio alterius. (The express mention of one thing implies the exclusion of another) Per Sir Barnes Peacock in Blacburn v Fletelle, (1881) 6 App Cis 628 at p 631. In Dual water v Arthur, (1879) 10 Sup Ct N S W 103, Margraic, I observed "If there be any one rule of Law clearer than another as to the construction of all Statutes and all written instruments (as, for example, sales under powers in deeds and wills) it is this that where the Legislature or the parties to any instrument have expressly authorised one or more particular modes of sale or other dealing with property, such expressions always exclude any other mode except as specially authorised." This rule or, as it is otherwise worded, expressum facit esse tacitum (Co Litt 210 a, 183 b) enunciates one of the first principles applicable to the construction of written instruments. Broom's Legal Maxims 7th Ed p 491. An implied covenant is to be controlled within the limits of an express covenant. Notes Case 1 Rep 80, Merrill v Frame 1 Taunt, 329. Gainsford v Griffith, 1 Simd R 78, Mathew v Blacmore, 1 H & N 762. So also where a lease contains an express covenant by the tenant to repair, there can be no implied contract to repair arising from the relation of landlord and tenant. Stauden v Chasmas, 10 Q B 135, 111, Churchward v Ford 2 H & N 116. Gott v Grady 12 L & R 517. Cornush v Cliff 31 L & C 451. In Stafford Steel Co v Ward 12 R 31 x 177, Willes J thus laid down the rule. "If authority is given expressly, though able by affirmative words upon a defined condition the expression of that condition excludes the doing of the Act notwithstanding, under other circumstances than the defined. Expressio unius est exclusio alterius."

Provisions sometimes found in Statutes enacting imperfectly or for particular cases only that which was already and more widely the law, have occasionally furnished ground for the contention that an intention to alter the general law was to be inferred from the partial or limited enactment, resting on the maxim, expressio unius est exclusio alterius. But that maxim is inapplicable in such cases. The only inference which a Court can draw from such superfluous provisions (which generally find a place in Acts to meet unfounded objections and idle doubts) is that the Legislature was either ignorant or unmindful of the real state of the law, or that it acted under the influence of excessive caution, and if the law be different from what the Legislature supposed it to be, the implication arising from the Statute, it has been said, cannot operate as a negation of its existence. (Molloy v. Court of wards L R 1 P C 419, 437, Shrewsbury v. Scott, 6 C B N S 31) and any legislation founded on such a mistake has not the effect of making that law which the Legislature erroneously assumed to be so. Marucll p 548. The above dictum was reiterated by Justice Moolerjee in Krishna Kamam Datta v. Ahmednabad Shik 73 Ind C 312 at p 316 = A I R 1923 Cal 66 in the following words. But it is important to bear in mind that the method of construction summarised in the maxim cannot be applied without limitation for a future to make an expressio complete, may easily arise from the accidents of legal procedure and it is common to find provisions put into Statutes ex abundanti cautela and at the instance of the parties interested. Consequently provisions sometimes found in Statutes enacting imperfectly or for particular cases only, that which was already and more widely the law have occasionally furnished ground for a specious argument, based on the maxim that an intention to alter the general law was to be inferred from the partial or limited enactment. But the maxim is plainly inapplicable in such cases. The only inference which a Court can draw from such superfluous provisions (which often find a place in Acts to meet unfounded objections and idle doubts), is that the Legislature was either ignorant or unmindful of the real state of the law or that it acted under the influence of excessive caution."

This point of view is lucidly explained in the following passage from the judgment of Farrell J in Leue v. Darling, (1906) 2 K B 772 = 75 L J K B 1019. Acts of Parliament are not in my experience expressed with such accuracy and precision as to justify the Court in striking out unambiguous words in order to make a sentence grammatical or logical. The generality of the maxim 'expressum facit cessare tacitum' which was relied on renders caution necessary in its application. It is not enough that the expressions used are merely meaningless; it must be clear that they cannot co-exist.

In Colquhoun v. Brooks 19 Q B D 406, Halliday J says: "I may observe that the method of construction summarised in the maxim 'expressum facit cessare tacitum' is one that certainly requires to be watched. Perhaps few so-called rules of interpretation have been more frequently misapplied and stretched beyond their due limits. The failure to make the expressio complete very often arises from accident very often from the fact that it never struck the draftsmen that the thing supposed to be excluded needed specific mention of any kind and the application of this and every other technical rule of construction runs so much under differing circumstances and is open to so many qualifications and exceptions, that it is rarely that such rules help one to arrive at what is meant."

In the same case (reported in 21 Q B D 72) in the Court of Appeal Lord J observed "the maxim 'expressio unius est exclusio alterius' has been put upon us in error with what is said in the Court below by Halliday J about it. It is often a valuable servant but a dangerous master to follow in the construction of Statute and documents. The exclusio is often the result of inadvertence or accident, and the maxim ought not to be applied when it applies to a thing, regard to the subject matter to which it is to be applied leads to incongruity or injustice. See Colquhoun v. Brooks 21 Q B D 661 and its application to the Privy Council in (1889) 14 A C 493."

The warning given by Lord Halsbury in following the maxim is expressed in the following words: "It might be that modern Statutes were drawn up with great particularity and minuteness. The misfortune in the framing of those Statutes was that any body of persons seeing a possibility of liability on their part, apply to Parliament to have special provisions inserted in their protection. That application was occasionally complied with and then the argument arose which their Lordships had heard that day, namely that any body who is not included in the enumeration of the particular persons so intimated must be taken to be excluded by the operation of the Statute from protection just because they were not excluded and others were. The doctrine applicable to such cases was that a great many things were put into a Statute ex abundantia cautelæ and it was not to be assumed that any body not specifically included was for that reason alone, excluded from the protection of the Statute." Mac Laughlin v Westgarth

Penal Statutes Construction of A penal Statute, when its language is ambiguous should be construed in the manner most favourable to the liberties of the subject, and this is more especially so when the enactment is of an exceptional character. Reg v Bhistabai Malama, 13 B 308 (FB). It should be construed very strictly. In re Ganesh Narayan, 13 B 600. Q v Norottam, 13 B 681. A penal Statute must be construed very strictly, that is nothing is to be regarded as within the meaning of the Statute which is not within the letter—which is not clearly and intelligibly described in the very words of the Statute itself. Empress v Kola Lalang, 8 C 214=10 C L R 155. Penal provisions have to be strictly construed, nor is the liability to punishment for the neglect of a statutory obligation to be extended by inferential reasoning. Kazi Zeamuddin v Queen Empress, 24 C 504=5 C W N 771. In construing a Statute which affects the liberty of the subject, the Court should not only adopt the natural and ordinary construction but should construe strictly every expression occurring therein. Bissumilur Singh v Queen Empress, 5 C W N 108. In interpreting Statutes of a penal character, it is important to see that the powers conferred upon the Magistrate are duly exercised with reference to the rendering unlawful acts that would be otherwise lawful. Queen Empress v Sheodin, 10 A 115=A W N 1888. Penal Statutes must have a strict interpretation by which it is meant that in cases shall be deemed to fall within them which do not fall within the reasonable meaning of their terms and their spirit. Lakshmi Chand v The Emperor, 96 P L R 1901=24 P R 117 C L. In a penal Statute, if the Legislature has not used words comprehensive to include within its prohibition all the cases which it was the mischief intended to be prevented it is not competent to a Court to extend the Statute. Queen Empress v Kya Lan, L B R (1893=1900) 22 C L R 117. Queen Empress v Nga Kyau, L B R (1872=1892) 279 C L R 117. Queen Empress v Nga Kyau, L B R (1893=1900), 284. Aue v Queen Empress, L B R (1893=1901), Vol I 291. Emperor v Naga Tima, 11 B L R 117=13 C L R 117. 853=17 Ind Cas 789. Penal Statutes must be strictly construed. In a penal Statute, duties cast upon bodies with delegated powers must be construed as imperative rather than directory. Emperor v Naga Tima, 11 B L R 117=13 C L R 117. 853=17 Ind Cas 152=A I R 1926 Lih 447.

Where in Act is ambiguous and the of which would mitigate the penalty should prevail. Emperor v Ahmed
1926 Sind 273 (F.B.) The person charged although within the Ram Chander v Gouri Nath, 33 C.
Statutes and fiscal enactments ought to be adopted. Emperor v
1937=103 Ind. Cr. 59. Emperor v
Bulwant Singh 102 Ind. Cr. 6.
Mittoo of Multan v Emperor
1927 Lah 276. in favour of the accused.
1927 All 393.

able No violence should be done to its language in order to bring people within it but care must be taken to see that no one is brought within it who is not within its true language. Where in equivocal word or ambiguous sentence leaves room for doubt of its meaning, which the canons of interpretation fail to solve, the benefit of the doubt must be given to the subject and against the Legislature which has failed to explain it properly and clearly. Ismail v Emperor, 26 Cr L J 1387=89 Ind C 15 523

The rule is similarly different in England. "The rule which requires that penal and some other Statutes shall be construed strictly was more rigorously applied in former times when the number of capital offences was very large." Maxwell p 462 "I cannot concur" says Day J in Newby v Sims, 63 L J M C 229 in the contention that because these Acts impose penalties, therefore their construction should, necessarily be strict. I think that neither greater nor less strictness should be applied to these than to other Statutes.

"The degree of strictness applied to the construction of a penal Statute depended in great measure on the severity of the Statute. When it merely imposed a pecuniary penalty it was construed less strictly than where the rule was invoked in proem vita." Maxwell p 466

Ejusdem Generis Principle of When two words or expressions are coupled together one of which generally includes the other it is obvious that the more general term is used in a meaning excluding the specific one. Maxwell p 461 Though the words "cows," "sheep" and "horses" for example standing alone comprehend horses, lambs and ponies respectively, they would be understood as excluding them if the latter words were coupled with them. R v Col 2 L St P C 616 R v Loom 1 Moo C C 160 So also the word "land" does not include buildings when it is coupled with the word "building." Dent v 10 E 106 66 R R 696, Peto v West Ham 28 L J M C 240 "It is in the sense that the maxim occasionally misapplied in argument, expressio unius est exclusio alterius finds its true application." Maxwell p 573 In construing expressions used in a section of a Statute it must first be ascertained from the language of the section the class of cases which were intended to be affected. If the intention is clear the occasion for the introduction of the ejusdem generis rule of interpretation would not arise. Halliday v Voosa v Secretary of State for India 13 M 65=37 M L J 332=53 Ind C 15 345

"I accede to the principle said Lord Campbell in R v Edmundson 2 L J M C 213, 'and down in all the cases which have been cited, that where there are general words following particular and specific words, the general word must be confined to things of the same kind as those specified.' See also Kali v Keshu 51 Ind C 15

Stare decisis Scope of the doctrine The maxim of stare decisis (to stand by matter decided) is closely allied with another maxim viz Communis error facit jus (common error some times passes as law). The law so favours the public good that it will in some cases permit a common error to pass for right. 119 v Sussex 2 B & S 680 Jones v Topping 12 C B N S 816 s c 11 H L C 1 290 Wellham v Sparle 1 Ld Ry 112 Doom's Legal Maxims p 112 Communis error facit jus is a sound maxim. Jagdish v Sheo 28 I A 100 106=7 C W N 602=23 A 369 See also Bhagwan Singh v Bhagwan Singh 36 I A 173 (166)=21 A 112=3 C W N 151=1 Bom L R 311 Kidar v Hari 43 C 1 (10) Though it is true that the Admiralty should have no jurisdiction over contracts made in the bodies of counties nevertheless seamen engaging in England have always been admitted to sue for wages in that Court. (Smith v Tilly 1 Kech 712) where the remedy is easier and better than in the Common Law Courts on the ground it has been said (Per Lord Holt, Clay v Sudgrave 1 Salk 13) that communis error facit jus or rather as was observed by Lord Kenyon (in K v F ser 11 R 791) not communis error but uniform and undeviating factus. Maxwell p 533 Where the language is obscure instead of being clear it would not be justified in differing from the construction put upon it by contemporaries and long-continued usage. There would be no such if it property or liberty if it could be successfully contended that all lawyers and jurists have been mistaken as to the true meaning of an old Act of Parliament. Per Lord Campbell in Gorham v. Inlet, 15 Q B 73, see also Hebbert v. Purchase, L R 3 P C 650. Morgan v. Clauspary, L R 5 H L 301, 320.

The maxim of communis error facit jus, although well known must be applied with very great caution. 'It has been sometimes said,' observed Lord Lushington in Isherwood v. Ollivier, 3 M & S 396-397 'communis error facit jus' but every communis opinio is evidence of what the law is—not where it is in opinion merely speculative and theoretical floating in the minds of persons but where it has been made the ground work and substratum of practice."

The judicial rule Stare decisis does however admit of exceptions, where the former determination is most evidently contrary to reason. Broom's Legal Maxims p 121. In Crintra Bank v. Sheikh Ali Bar, 24 C W N 818 at p 854 Justice Mitterjee observed, 'We are sensible of maintaining, wherever possible the authority of long established decided cases but this doctrine is manifestly not of universal application. In Young v. Robertson, 1 Mac H L C 511 Lord Cranworth observed 'There is another duty incumbent upon a Court of ultimate appeal which has been invariably observed namely, that as regards those rules which regulate the settlement and devolution of property those Courts which have to interpret the instruments and acts of parties must take care to be very guarded against letting any supposed notions as to the unaccuracy of any rule which has in fact been acted upon induce him to alter it so as to endanger the security of property and titles.

In Mercy Docks v. Cameron 11 H L C 443 at p 510 Lord Chelmsford observed, 'The Courts rightly abstain from overruling cases which have been long established, because if they did so, they would only disturb without finally settling the law. But when in appeal from any of their judgments is made to this House however they may be warranted by previous authorities, the very object of the appeal being to bring those authorities under review for final determination the House cannot, upon principle of stare decisis refuse to examine the foundation upon which they rest' Equally explicit is the pronouncement of Lord Loreburn in Wesham Union v. Edmonton Union (1908) A C 1 (4) where he observed "Great importance is to be attached to the old authorities on the strength of which many transactions may have been adjusted and rights determined. But where they are plainly wrong and specially where the subsequent course of judicial decision had disclosed weakness in the reasoning on which they were based and practical injustice in the consequences that must flow from them, I consider it is the duty of the House to overrule them if it has not lost right to do so by itself affirming them.

In a matter of final enactment where the question is in doubt the rule of stare decisis should apply. Moti Singh v. Harbajan Singh, 103 Ind C 15 657 = A I R 1927 Lah 635.

Rules of Interpretation of Evidence Act In considering the rules of evidence it is necessary to look to the reason of the matter. Gajju Lall v. Fatch Lall, 6 C 171 (182). Bharoo Lall v. Kamnee Soondaree 14 W R 519 (320). In construing the Indian Evidence Act the following statement of Justice Jackson in Gajju Lall v. Fatch Lall 6 C 171 (F B) at pp 183 184 should be borne in mind 'In order to a conclusion on this point (i.e. on a question of construction) it seems to me a relevant fact that the Indian Evidence Act 1872 was passed by the Legislature of this country under the direction of a skilled lawyer, for the express purpose of consolidating defining and amending the law of evidence in India that the construction of the Act, is marked by careful and methodical arrangement, and many of the more important expressions used in it are plainly interpreted. It would be wholly inconsistent with the plan of such an enactment that a specific rule contained in one part of it should at the same time be contained in or deducible from one or more other rules relating apparently to topics quite distinct, which rules should at the same time be so expressed as to include not merely the specific rule in question, but also matters which that rule taken by itself would specifically exclude' In the same case Garth C J observed at page 188 'I suppose it must be generally acknowledged that with some few exceptions the Indian Evidence Act was intended to and did in fact, consolidate the English law of Evidence and I can not help thinking with all deference to the opinions of those learned Judges who have expressed a contrary opinion, that if it had been really the intention of the Legislature to depart entirely from English rule they would have expressed their intention more plainly. "In Empress v. Ashutoh Chudamany 1 C 183 at pp 191 192 Mr Justice Jackson observed. In considering such questions as these, it appears to me that embarrassment and difficulty will be greatly lessened, if instead of assuming the English Law of Evidence and then inquiring what changes the Evidence Act has made in it, we regard as I think we are bound to do, the Act itself as containing the elements of the law the principles and the application of these principles to the circumstances of the particular case. It may be that, as observed by Mr Austin in his Preface (Law of Evidence 8th Edition), the framers of the Act overestimated what had been done, when he claimed to have reproduced within the compass of the 167 sections the whole of Tylor's Work that was applicable to India, and there can be no doubt that cases must arise for which no positive solution can be found in the Act itself and in such cases we shall probably be justified and shall draw with safety in identifying English rules in so far as they follow or are in accord with the general tenor of the Act. But in respect of matters expressly provided for in the Act, we must so to say start from the Act and not deal with it as a mere modification of the law prevailing in England." See also R v. Gopal Das 3 M 271 179 283 Ramchodas v. Bapu 10 B 439 (442), Probhatas Bhat v. Vishwanath Pandit 8 B 313 (321).

In Amrit Nathuram v. Emperor (1915) M W N 229=17 M L T 213 28 M L J 429=16 Cr L J 294=28 Ind Cr 518=39 M 449 Seshagiri ibid. I observed. The question remains whether the provisions of the Act are exhaustive of the rules of evidence and whether we can involve the aid of the principle of jurisprudence or of English Law in supplementing and explaining the rule of evidence given in the Act. The high authority of Edge C J in the Collector of Central Pro v. Palat Dhan Singh, 12 A 1 can be cited for the proposition that English decisions relating to evidence can be relied upon in India. I cannot agree with the learned Public Prosecutor that we are not entitled to refer to English decisions as the Act is self contained. Such a practice has the authority of every eminent Judge in India and I am not prepared to depart from it. See also Manchar Shaw v. New Dhurumsey S. W. Co., 4 B 576 (581) 19 Rama Reddi 5 M 52 Manchar Shaw Beomji v. New Dhurumsey Spinning and Weaving Company 4 B 576 (581) 19 Jagan Lal, 1 C L R 508, Prampji v. Mohan Singh, 18 B 279 R v. Lalwara, 15 B 502, R v. Rama Naraya 3 B 16 J v. Abdulha 7 A 400 Smith v. Ludhwa Ghella 17 B 129.

In Queen Empress v. Jayaram 16 B 114 at p 433 Alang J observed. According to the principle, therefore stated by R. Couch C J, in Hamah v. Ramnaji 7 Bom H C Rep (A C J) p 61 we are justified in looking to English decisions to elucidate the meaning of the Evidence Act, and evidence which the Judges in England have admitted and juries have acted upon must be held to be clearly within the terms of sections 11 11, 15. In Prampji v. Mohan Singh 18 B 280 reference was made to American Case Law and in P v. F. H. Far B 1 11 Sup vol I B 459 English, American and Scotch law were referred to.

Mandatory provision. There is no universal rule that disobedience of a mandatory provision in a Statute has the consequence of nullification of the proceeding irrespective of any question of prejudice. Whether a mandatory provision is imperative or only directory depends upon a consideration of various circumstances. Torbey v. H. Haider 12 C L J 131=26 Cr L J 1221.

Means and include. When a definition is intended to be exhaustive the Legislature uses a rule such as the word "means" and not the word "includes." Queen Empress v. Virat, A W N 1901 10.

Proviso. The office of a proviso is either to except something from the main clause or to qualify or restrain its generality or to exclude some part of the ground of interpretation of its extent. Key v. Yagnatsumani 2 B H C 108. In case of repugnancy between a proviso and an enacting part, the former repeals the latter. 1 C v. Chelvan 111 29 165.

11679
24/200

VALUE OF ENGLISH CASES

23

Pream

Saving clause A saving clause cannot properly be looked for for the purpose of extending an enactment nor can it give a new or different effect to the previous sections of an enactment. Queen Empress v. Satharam 11 B 657. Where the enactment and the saving clause (which reserves something which would be otherwise included in the words of the enacting part) are repugnant, the saving clause is to be rejected, because otherwise the enactment would have been made in vain. Per Lord Coole in Allon Wood's Case 1 Rep 17, see Yarmouth v. Simmons, (1878) 10 Ch D 518, Clelland v. Her (1813), 6 Ir Lq Rep 35. "But it may be questioned says Maxwell whether there is any solid ground for this distinction between a saving clause and a proviso in a Statute. The latter of two passages in a Statute being the expression of the latter intention should prevail over the earlier as it unquestionably would if it were embodied in a separate Act" Maxwell, 6th Ed p 253.

English Cases English cases on construction of English Statutes are of great assistance sometimes in construing Acts of the Indian Legislature but of course, it is always necessary to see that the Indian Statute and the English Statute resemble one another in their purposes and not only in a portion of a section which, for convenience of drafting has been adopted by the draft men of the Indian Act. Perhad Singh v. Ram Patab Roy 22 C 77. Where in Indian Act was passed for the purpose of extending to India the provisions of the English Act English decisions may be referred to as a guide to the Act. Ganesh v. Harihar 26 A. 299 P C = 31 I A. 116 = 9 C W N 521 = 11 M L J 190 = 6 Bom L R 505. Seth Utom Vasoomal v. Seth Haridas 18 L R 26 = 7 Ind Cis 595. Mulchand v. Sanga Chand, 1 B 23 but see Mahamed v. Ali Hudar, 12 O L J 1. "In construing a section of an Indian Act which is professedly based on English enactment, which in fact reproduces word by word the language of the English enactment, which in fact reproduces word by word the language of the English enactment, we are in practice if not in theory, bound by the decisions of the English Court. Per Hooleyce J in Ramendra v. Brojendra, 21 C W N 794 = 41 Ind Cis 911. "When we are construing an Act which in many instances is taken, word for word, from an English Act and when we are dealing with a branch of law which is essentially English law, though we may not be actually bound by it, yet we ought certainly to pay the greatest respect to the decisions of the English Court of appeal" Per White C J in the Mercantile Bank of India Ltd v. The Official Assignee of Madras 39 M 270 = 31 Ind Cis 912. In interpreting an Indian Act, help may be derived from the English cases which are as much authoritative as the decisions of the Superior Courts of India, and where the Indian Law is similar or the same their authority is conclusive 12 Q. B D 721, see also Lorelool and Lewis v. Malabar Ambel and saw mills 13 M L J 282. Unless the English Statute, and the Act of the Indian Legislature are in pari materia references to English decisions instead of affording any help will tend to confuse the consideration of the matter in issue. Eisa v. The Secretary of State, 30 C 36 = 7 C W N 249. In construing a section of the Indian Act, cases bearing upon the construction of the similar provisions of an English Act, different in its language can be of little or no assistance. Collector of Dinapore v. Girija Nath, 25 C 316. A Judge should not interpret Statutory law when it provides for a specific procedure by reference to a decision pronounced under a different system of procedure. Radha v. Lakshmi 31 C L J 283 = 24 C W N 451 = 36 Ind Cis 511. But where the point to be decided arises under the law of India reference to English law is unnecessary. The India General Navigation v. The Delapara Tea Co 28 C W N 302 = 34 M L J (P C) 53 = 1921 M W N 158 = 22 A L J 173 = 5 C 304 = 26 Bom L R 571 = 80 Ind Cis 1038 = A. I R 1924 P C 40. So also rules relating to procedure under an Indian Act should not be interpreted by a reference to decisions relating to another Statute in England even where the language of the two Statutes is the same. Bojotal v. Sharayubata, 51 C 715 = 1921 CIL 864, see also Radha Kessen v. Ialhm 21 C W N 151. The Statute law in India is no doubt based on the principle of English law but in its application the Courts should follow the opinion of Indian Courts acquainted with Indian ways of life and thought and not of English Courts which deal with people widely different from Indians in their social habits and intellectual development. Syed Mohdumal v. Syed Ali Hyder 1 O W N 803.

nble

American Cases, Value of In Scaramanga v Stamp, 5 C P D 293, p 393, Coelburn C J observed "Although the decisions of the American Court are of course not binding on us, yet the sound and enlightened views of American lawyers in the administration and development of law—a law, except so far as altered by statutory enactment, derived from a common source with our own—entitle their decisions to the utmost respect and confidence in our part." In Del v Piron, Tray J in relying upon American authorities made the following observations. In coming to that conclusion as I do upon principle I am much strengthened by the American authorities to which my attention has been called. The following observations of Sir John Woodroffe, J in the preface to the High Light of his Evidence Act should be taken into consideration while interpreting the same. Amongst the text books and under contribution we will particularly to indicate the work of Professor J H Wigmore, a valuable and exhaustive book written in an original and modern spirit and thus free of what Bentham called "gum-grubber nonsensical reason" for the rules of evidence. The law of Evidence as it obtains in the Courts of the United States, is founded upon the English Law and is in nearly every respect identical with the law which prevails in England and in India, and though it is not binding authority upon Indian Judges, yet the decisions of those Courts are as Lord Chief Justice Coelburn said in England (Scaramanga v Stamp L R 5 C P D 293, 303), and Sir Laurence Peel observed in India (Bradford v Abbot 1 Indor and Bills Reports, 312, 359, 360, Volcan v Smith ibid 283, 288) of great value to a correct determination of questions in which our own or the English Law offers no solution. But in the connection the advice given by Lord Halsbury L C in Re Missouri Steamship Co 12 Ch D 321, (330) should also be borne in mind. In that case he observed "We should treat it with great respect the opinion of eminent American lawyers on point which comes before us but the practice which seems to be increasing, of quoting American decisions as authorities, in the same way as if they were decisions of our own Court is wrong. Among other things it involves an inquiry, which often is not in every case one whether the law of America on the subject in which the point arises is the same as our own."

English Law of Evidence, its origin, growth and peculiarity "At once when a man raises his eyes says Prof Thayer 'from the common law system of evidence and looks at foreign methods, he is struck with the fact that our system is radically peculiar. Here, a great mass of evidential matter logically important and prohibitive is shut out from the view of the judicial tribunals by an unpardonable rule while the same matter is not thus excluded anywhere else. English-speaking countries have what we call a law of evidence, but no other country has it, we have developed and evolved this large elaborate, and difficult doctrine. We have done it not by direct legislation but, almost wholly, by the slowly accumulated rulings of Judges made in the trying of cases during the last two or three centuries—rulings which at first were not preserved in print, but in the practice and tradition of the trial Court—and only during the last half or two-thirds of this period have they been revised, reasoned upon, and generalized by the Courts in bank."

"When one has come to perceive these striking facts, he is not long in finding the reason for them. Indeed the very structure of the system thus produced points to the reason when we observe its conservatism and overcautious endeavour to prevent the tribunal to which the evidence is principally addressed from being confused and misled, as it were, in dealing with questions which it has no right to deal with. It might seem that it is not worth while to keep alive so long a tribunal which has need of so much wit and sagacity as a safeguard if one did not recall the immense importance of legal institutions and practices, as well as the deep political significance of the jury and its relation to what is most valued in the national history and tradition of the English race. It is this institution of the jury which accounts for the conservatism of the law of evidence—an institution which English speaking people regard as one of the most precious and another partment of their public affairs, ever to be preserved. Our people have held it only in quite recent times, not in the past, when it was common with other nations to allow it to fall into disuse. England alone kept it and in a strong form."

"This institution the jury, which is thus the occasion of our law of evidence and which is also at the bottom of our system of pleading and procedure, and of very much in all branches of the substantive common law, has a peculiar interest for us

I hope that those who attentively consider the long and strange story of the development of the English jury and the immense influence it has had in shaping our law, will find here a basis for conclusions as to the scope and direction of certain much needed reforms in the whole law of evidence and procedure

"A system of evidence, like ours, thus worked out at the forge of daily experience in the trial of causes, not created or greatly changed until lately, by legislation, not the fruit of any man's system the reflection or forecast, is sure to exhibit at every step the marks of its origin. It is not concerned with nice definitions, or the exacter academic operations of the logical faculty. It is attending to practical ends. Its rules originate in the instinctive suggestions of good sense, legal experience, and a sound practical understanding, and they are seeking to determine not what is or is not, in its nature prohibitive, but rather passing by that enquiry what, among really prohibitive matters, shall nevertheless for this or that practical reason, be excluded and not even heard by the jury. From the diversity and multitude of the several rulings by the Judges—rulings often hastily made, ill considered, and wrong,—from the endeavour to follow the non precedents and to generalize and theorize upon them, from the forgetting by some Courts in making this attempt, of the accidental and empirical nature of much in these determinations and the remembering of this fact by others there has resulted plenty of confusion. The pressure under which a ruling must be made is often unfavourable to clear thinking and the law of evidence largely shaped at non prims, took on a general aspect which was vague, confused, and unintelligible. One thing in particular added greatly to the confusion, namely, the habit of assuming, whenever evidential matter was rejected or received, that the result was attributable to some principle of the law of evidence, while very often indeed, the reason lay wholly in the rules of pleading procedure, or substantive law which happened to control the case. In this way the law of evidence came to be monstrously overloaded and was made to swallow up into itself much which belonged to other branches of law, or to the wide regions of logic or legal reasoning. Thus, not only were many of these other subjects clouded and thrown out of focus, but the law of evidence itself was intolerably perplexed." Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on Evidence pp 1-4

Gradual change in the Law of Evidence as Jury system changed. The old forms of trial were chiefly these: (1) Witnesses, (2) The party's oath with or without fellow Swearers, (3) the ordeal, (4) Battle. Trial by witnesses appears to have been one of the oldest kinds of 'one sided' proof. To such witnesses, no cross-examination was allowed. They were to state the facts on oath only. (Thayer pp 16-17) "In my opinion says Brunner (Schw 205) 'undoubtedly we are to include under the head of the formal witness proof these: (1) the proof of age (2) the proof of death (3) the proof of property in a moveable chattel. In Bracton's Note Book III case 1131 (A D 1234) and case 1362 (in 1220) we find that age of a particular plaintiff was proved by twelve legal men produced by him. Now these twelve men are not at all a 'jury', for the party selects them himself (Thayer Pre Tre p 19). In a peculiarly interesting part of his great work on the jury, Brunner points out that the old witness proof was in some cases transformed at the hands of the royal power into an inquisition so that the witnesses were selected by the public authority, is they were in ordinary jury (Thayer p 19). A witness to prove age must be 42 years of age. By 1515 A D it was settled that a trial of a person's age "shall be by twelve jurors, but in giving their verdict every juror should show the reasons inducing his knowledge of the age, such as being son, gossip, or that he had a son or daughter of the same age or by reason of an earthquake or a battle near the time of the birth, and the like" (Kilway, 176-177). Gradually "the peculiar function of the jury—as being triers—grew to be this chief, and finally, as centuries passed then only one while that of the other witnesses was more and more defaced, refined upon and hedged about with rules. It is surprising to see how slowly these rules came about. The attempt, which long held its place as the only way of remedying a false verdict, proceeded on the theory that the first jury had wilfully falsified, and so was punishable. An independent original knowledge of the facts was attributed to the jury

III INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

Preamble and not a merely inferential and reasoning knowledge. So long as this theory was true and was really a controlling feature of trial by jury, with its multiplicity of very abundant put. They were not necessary in any case. When they appeared the jury could do it, and all they said, and should if it were not according with what they knew. Gradually it was recognized that while the jury might not be bound by the testimony, yet they had a right to believe it, and that they were the only ones to judge of the credibility. Thayer Pre Treat pp 13-15. On this the jury was permitted for a false verdict, but in the course of time in case of unreasonable verdict without punishing the jurors a new trial was granted. In 1811, a new trial it became necessary for the Courts to know the fact which the juror knew. Accordingly the old doctrine of having the juror's verdict their personal knowledge has been discouraged. The jurors were told that if any of them knew anything relating to the case they ought to state it publicly in Court.

In 1670 in Bushell's Case Vaughan 135-142 Vaughan, C. J. finally laid down the different functions of the witness and the jurors in the following words: A witness swears but to what he hath heard or seen, and the jurors in the following words what hath been told under his oath. But a juror swears by the act and force of his mind and conclude from the testimony of such witnesses to what he can make understanding to be the fact inquired after which differs nothing in the reason though must in the punishment, from what a Judge, out of various cases considered by him infers to be the law in the question before him. So two things stand out prominently in Vaughan's opinion in Bushell's Case (1) The jurors' evidence is evidence in fact, and my rightfulness derive a case without any evidence publicly given nothing, and my rightfulness derive a case without any evidence publicly given.

for or against either party. Thayer Pre Treat p 168. When the juror swears merely as a body of witnesses suppose only familiar with the facts, who from their own knowledge stated what the facts were. The Court could, in the application of the law to the facts exercise a control over the result which was impossible when the character of the jury changed. With the development of the jury into a reasoning inference drawing body of men possessing the power to determine the ultimate facts in issue and by their verdict to judicially settle the controversy the situation to the mind of the Judge was full of embarrassment. To what conclusions might not the eleven come men ignorant of the law and its method unfamiliar with the ways of counsel, open to the influence of testimony and argument presented solely for the purpose of playing upon their sympathetic of its dangers as far as possible. This was a situation to be deplored and to be relieved uncertain quantity which needed to be guarded against. The jury, from the time it began to take on the character of a tribunal of the facts must have been a disturbing element in the work of the Court.

In the submission of the facts which constitute the evidence in a case there have been embarrassments real or imaginary which have resulted in the development of a set of rules. The rules relate to the use of facts in Court is evidence and make up the "Law of Evidence". Accordingly with the beginning of the use of evidence before juries we find the beginning of the law of evidence. Statements to which the Courts might listen without imputing, were carefully kept from the jury by excluding rules established by the Judges.

It must not be supposed that these excluding rules came into being all at once. The development of the jury into its final shape was a gradual one and the growth of rules governing the use of evidence before the jury was equally gradual. It is immaterial to enquire here as to the kind of evidence which was excluded that is to be found in any English treatise on the law of evidence. It is sufficient to say that, in general, every thing except what was actually within the person's knowledge of the witness was considered unsafe to put before the jury. Thus hearsay and opinion were both objectionable. In this way the substance of the jury played its part in moulding the law of evidence into its present form.

The supposed ignorance of the average jury was also an important factor in the evolution of the rules of evidence. Things likely to complicate the case by confusing the mind or misleading to the real facts in issue were accordingly excluded. — McClellan's Law of Evidence pp 9-10

How important a part the jury played in the development of the Law of Evidence may be realised when one considers such a decision as that in Bell v. Waller, 74 N. W. 617, where it was held that the admission of improper evidence in a case tried without a jury is not ground for reversal, and every practitioner is familiar with the custom prevailing where cases are tried before the Judge alone, or a referee, of taking little account of the ordinary rules of evidence.

Other Factors, having influence to shape the Law of Evidence With the expansion of the work of the Courts and the ever increasing volume of business brought before them, a necessity arose for the shortening of trials and the expediting of the work in every possible way. This influence was a powerful one in its effect upon the admission of evidence. Much that was logically relevant, and indeed worthy of consideration, if minute inquiry were possible, became inadmissible upon the theory that it was too remote or of slight importance. Collateral matters these were in the main,—matters likely to lead to prolonged collateral inquiry with a meagre result in the way of inference—compelling proof when finished. Other things operated to make it easy and natural for the Courts to establish rules relating to the use of evidence. The policy of the law in respect to persons charged with wrongs, which extends to them the extreme limit of fairness is responsible for the growth of an important class of excluding rules. Such rules shut out from the consideration of the jury any facts bearing upon character or habit, and thus, although in many instances previous character would be logically a most important piece of evidence from which to infer the truth as to the facts in issue. We may thus get some idea of the elements which have for centuries been at work moulding forms into which matters of evidence for judicial tribunals must be cast, building barriers within which they must be confined, and wearing grooves along which the wheels of judicial inquiry must run. McClure's Law of Evidence p. 10.

Law of Evidence, what it is "What is our Law of Evidence?" asks Prof. Thayer. Then he answers the question in the following words: "It is a set of rules and principles affecting judicial investigations into questions of fact for the most part, controverted questions. It is concerned with the operations of Courts of Justice, and not with ordinary inquiries in pais, and even within this limited range it does not undertake to regulate the processes of reasoning or argument, except as helping to discriminate and select the material fact upon which these are to operate." Thayer's Pica Pica p. 263. "The law of evidence," says Sir James Fitz Stephen in his Introduction to his monumental Digest of the Law of Evidence, "is that part of the law of procedure which with a view to ascertain individual rights and liabilities in particular cases decides I. What facts may, and what may not, be proved in such cases II. What sort of evidence must be given of a fact which may be proved. III. By whom and in what manner the evidence must be produced by which any fact is to be proved." After defining under the first head facts in issue and facts relevant to the issue, he names four classes of facts which are excluded from his definition of relevancy to the issue. "1. Facts similar to but not specifically connected with, each other (Res inter alios acta). 2. The fact that a person not called as a witness has asserted the existence of any fact (Hearsay). 3. The fact that any person is of opinion that a fact exists (Opinion). 4. The fact that a person's character is such as to render conduct imputed to them probable or improbable (Character). To each of these four exclusive rules there are however important exceptions which are defined by the law of evidence." As to the second division, he points out that some facts prove themselves, some require proof orally or by documentary evidence, and that such documentary evidence is furnished either primarily by the production of the document itself, or secondarily by a copy or an oral account of it. Under the third main division the person by whom, and the manner in which the proof of a particular fact must be made, he lays it down that when a fact is to be proved, evidence must be given by the person upon whom the burden of proving it is imposed except he is estopped from proving it by his conduct or relation to the opposite party, that the witnesses must be competent that the evidence must be given upon oath and in certain cases without oath that the witness may be examined and cross-examined and his credit tested. That brief statement says the learned Judge will show what he regards as constituting the Law of Evidence properly so called. With such valuable dicta for comparison the statutory definition of the Law of Evidence seems to cover all the ground necessary for the guidance for its administration. In the California Code of Civil Procedure, section 1525 and Hort's Ontario Laws, section 687 which may be taken as fair types of code definition, it is thus comprehensively dealt with:

Preamble

- "The law of evidence is a collection of general rules established by law
- "1 For declaring what is to be taken as true without proof
- "2 For declaring the presumptions of law, both those which are disputable and those which are conclusive
- "3 For the production of legal evidence
- "4 For the exclusion of what ever is not legal
- "5 For the determining in certain cases, the value and effect of evidence"

The Blue Book of Evidence § 1

Things excluded from the Evidence Act.—'This brief statement says James Fitz James Stephen in his Introduction to his Digest of the Law of Evidence "will show what I regard as constituting the Law of Evidence properly so called. My view of it excludes many things which are often regarded as forming part of it. The principal subjects thus omitted are as follows:—

'I regard the question What may be proved under particular issues? (what many writers treat as a part of the Law of Evidence) as belonging partly to the subject of pleading and partly to each of the different branches into which the substantive Law may be divided.

Again I have dealt very shortly with the whole subject of presumption. My reason is that they all appear to me to belong to different branches of Substantive Law and to be unmitigable except in connection with them. Take for instance the presumption that every one knows the law. The real meaning of this is that speaking generally ignorance of the law is not taken as an excuse for breaking it. This rule cannot be properly appreciated if it is treated as a part of the Law of Evidence. It belongs to the Criminal Law. In the same way numerous presumptions as to rights of property (in particular covenants and incorporeal hereditaments) belong not to the Law of Evidence but to the Law of Real Property. The only presumptions which in my opinion ought to find a place in the Law of Evidence, are those which relate to facts merely as facts and apart from the particular right which they constitute. Thus the rule that a man not heard of for seven years is presumed to be dead, might be equally applicable to a dispute as to the validity of a marriage in action of ejectment by a reversioner against a tenant pro ante i.e. the admissibility of a declaration against interest, and many other subjects after careful consideration I have put a few presumptions of this kind into a chapter on the subject, and have passed over the rest as belonging to different branches of the Substantive Law.

'Practice again appears to me to differ in kind from the Law of Evidence. The rules which point out the manner in which the attendance of witnesses is to be procured, evidence is to be taken on commission, depositions are to be authenticated and forwarded to the proper officers, interrogatories are to be administered etc. have little to do with the general principles which regulate the relevancy and proof of matters of fact. Their proper place would be found in Codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure. I have however noticed a few of the most important of the matters.

'A similar remark applies to a great mass of provisions as to the proof of certain particulars. Under the head of Public Documents, Mr Taylor, gives amongst other things a list of all, or most of the Statutory provisions which render certificates or certified copies admissible in particular cases.

On several other points the distinction between the Law of Evidence and other branches of the law is more difficult to trace. For instance, the law on e-toppel and the law relating to the interpretation of written instrument both run into the Law of Evidence. I have tried to draw the line in the case of e-toppels by dealing with e-toppels in pars only to the exclusion of e-toppel decided and by matter of record which must be pleaded as such, and in regard to the law of written instruments by stating those rules only which seemed to me to bear directly on the question whether a document can be supplemented or explained by oral evidence.

PART I

RELEVANCY OF FACTS

CHAPTER I

PRELIMINARY

Short title

1 This Act may be called the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 S 1

It extends to the whole of British India, and applies to all judicial proceedings in or before any Court, including Courts-martial, (other than Courts-martial convened under the Army Act)* (or the Air Force Act)† but not to affidavits presented to any Court or officer, not to proceedings before an arbitrator,

Extent and it shall come into force on the first day of September, 1872

Commencement of Act

The Law of Evidence—lex fori. "The law of evidence is the lex fori which governs the Courts. Whether a witness is competent or not whether certain evidence proves a certain fact or not that is to be determined by the law of the country where the question arises, where the remedy is sought to be enforced, and the Court sits to enforce it" See Lord Brougham in Dunn v. Whitehead and Furness Junction Railway Company 3 II L. C. 1 at p. 19 Hampden & Co. v. Tulsar Distillery, (1891) A. C. 203. It would seem however where evidence is taken in one country in aid of a suit or action elsewhere either on ordinary commission or with the assistance of the local Courts that the prevailing law must be the law of the country where the suit is actually pending for which the evidence is taken as being the true forum. See per Cockburn C. J. in Dessau v. Iels, 10 L. T. R. 423—Foot's Private International Law p. 530, but see the observation of Woodroffe J. in In the matter of Rudolph Stallman, 39 C. 165=15 C. W. N. 1033 at p. 1065 cited under the head the Act is not a Complete Code under section 2 infra.

Extent and application of the Act. Act I of 1872 has been declared in force in Upper Burma generally (except the Shan States) by the Burma Law Act, 1898 (XIII of 1898)—see the First Schedule Burma Code in the Hill District of Arakan by the Arakan Hill District Laws Regulation, 1871 (6) of 1874) S. 3, and Reg. I of 1916 S. 2 in British Baluchistan by the British Baluchistan Laws Regulation 1890 (I of 1890) S. 3 and Reg. II of 1915, S. 3 in the Sinthal Parganas by the Sinthal Parganas Settlers' Regulation (III of 1872) as amended by the Sinthal Parganas Justice and Laws Regulation 1899 (III of 1899) in the Angul District by the Angul District Regulation 1891 (I of 1891) S. 3 and Reg. 3 of 1913 S. 3, in the Chittagong Hill tracts by the Chittagong Hill tracts Regulation 1900 (I of 1900), in the Kachin Hill tracts by the Kachin Hill District Regulation, 1895 (I of 1895).

* Inserted by Act XVIII of 1919

† Inserted by s. 2 of the Repeal and Amendment Act, 1920

S 1 S 3, and in the Chin Hills as regards Hill tribes, by the Chin Hills Regulation 1896 (V of 1896) S 3 also (by notification under S 3 (3) of the Scheduled Districts Act 1871 (11 of 1871) in the following Scheduled Districts, namely, the District of Hazaribagh Jharkhand (now the Ranchi District—Calcutta Gazette 1899 Pt I p 11) and Muzaffarnagar and Pargana Dhalbhum in the Kolhan in the District of Singhbhum—see Gazette of India, 1881 Pt p 504 (this Jharkhand or Ranchi District included at this time the Patna District separated in 1891) and the Jurn of the Province of Agra and Pt I p 505 Gungum and Veragupatim—see Gazette of India, 1899 Pt p 730 and under ss 3 and 5 of the same Act it has been declared in the Pargana of Mampur—see Gazette of India 1899, pt II, p 419 powers of a Local Government and those of a High Court were at the same time conferred on the Agent Governor General, Central India for the purpose of Act—rule Government Edition, 1921, p 9

British India. For definition of "British India" vide section 3 Cl (1) of the General Clauses Act (V of 1897). The following places are within British India—Aden, Laccadive Islands (Queen v Cheria Koya 13 M 383) Andaman and Nicobar Islands (Freeman v B B & C I Bay Co, 9 B 1) Island of Pem (see Queen v Mangal Telchand 10 B 258) and Ajmer Mirwar (see Freeman v Bombay Bayoda and Central India Railway Co, 9 B 244). The Native States and Princely Mahals are not within British India vide Emp v Raghunath Rao 5 Bom L R 873, Muhammad v O 25 C 20 P C Queen v Abdul Latif 10 B 186, Empress v Keshab 8 C Beluchanand v Bhugul, 16 C 667, Empress v Chumanlal, 37 B 152

Application of the Evidence Act in places outside British India. A complete list of places into which the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1873) has been declared to be in force is given in the Appendix. The Evidence Ordinance Ceylon is merely the application to Ceylon of the Indian Evidence Act. Vanasapillai Gabriel v Plutambay 52 I A 372=A I R 1925 P C 220

Judicial proceedings. "An enquiry is judicial if the object of it is to determine a legal relation between one person and another or a group of persons or between him and the community generally but even a judicial enquiry without such an object in view is not, it being judicially." Queen Empress v Tufja 12 B 36 Alexander John Forbes v Amritdessa Begum 10 M 1 A. According to section 4 (m) of the Criminal Procedure Code "judicial proceeding includes any proceeding in the course of which evidence is or may be taken on oath. A proceeding under s 318 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1873 was held to be a judicial proceeding. Dapuri v Magistrate of B 1 B H C A C 153

The proceedings under Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1895 are judicial in their nature and must not be conducted as if they were merely ministerial matters. The notes of evidence, therefore, must be adequate and vague and the order recorded must be based on the findings of fact. Imani v Ram Dial 5 A 224=A W N 1882 220 A. Under the order under Ch XX of the Criminal Procedure Code is a judicial proceeding. Log v Ganpatrao, Rat Un Cr C 59 (FB). An execution proceeding is a judicial proceeding. Khondra v Panchdora 12 C L J 614-8 Ind C S 110 C L J 21, see also Bahadur v Eradatulla 37 C 642 (FB). Empress v Shoo Sanitarpani 10 N L R 177 Ghaman v Crown 1 P R 1910 Bhol v Emperor 10 C W N 55 Dakhneswar v Harish Chandra 10 C L J 21. An enquiry in which evidence is legally taken is for the purposes of the Act included in the term "judicial proceeding." Queen Empress v Tufja, 12 B 36. Where the Legislature has authorised the formation of a judgment on a point or the withholding of a certificate on that judgment, the inquiry is a judicial enquiry. Queen v Prince L R 6 Q B 418, see also Atharv Ganapaya 15 W 135 (FB).

An enquiry conducted by a Magistrate into the truth of allegations against a subordinate official contained in a petition presented to a District Commissioner is a judicial proceeding. Emperor v Kuma Sah 28 A W N 1905 195=2 A L J 717=2 Cr L J 454. The test whether to be applied to a particular proceeding before a Court to determine whether it is or is not a judicial proceeding for the purposes of s 476, is, whether, in the course of that proceeding, the Judge has power legally to take evidence on oath, not whether he has actually taken such evidence. Chaman v Crown 1 P R 1910 Cr = 161 P L R 1910 = 5 Ind Cas 257 = 11 Cr L J 90

An enquiry under the Legal Practitioners Act is a judicial proceeding. Subba Chetti v Queen, 6 M 252, Gouri Saital v Aditya Emperor 9 A L J 156, Nalluswami v Ramalingam 32 M L J 402 = 18 Cr L J 785. So also is an enquiry by a Magistrate before issuing an order under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Queen Empress v Timmarasinha, 19 M 18. The proceeding of a Court holding a preliminary enquiry under s 476 of Criminal Procedure Code is a judicial proceeding. Abdulla v Emperor, 27 C 52.

An enquiry under s 8 of the Reformatory Schools Act is a judicial proceeding. Queen Empress v Manaji 14 B 381. See also Queen v Manoj Rat Un Cr C 491. An enquiry on an application under s 100 Cr Pro Code to issue a search warrant is a judicial enquiry. 34 P R 1916 = 36 Ind Cas 171. A proceeding in which the statement of a witness is recorded under s 161 Cr Pro Code is a judicial proceeding. Emperor v Vishwanath, 8 Bom L R 589. Crown v Andai, 55 B R 174. Investigation proceeding under s 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code is a judicial proceeding. Kanchan v Ram Ashwin, 36 C 72. Enquiry by a Registrar of the Presidency Small Causes Court, as to the proper service of summons is a judicial proceeding. Lal Chaud v Rural Nath, 18 C W N 1328. A proceeding under section 283 of the Cantonment Code 1899 is a judicial proceeding. Mangi Ram v King Emperor, 9 P R 1909 Cr = 37 P L R 1910 = 11 Cr L J 17 = 1 Ind Cas 611 = 30 P W R 1909 Cr. The Collector hearing objections to assessment under the Income Tax Act is a Revenue Court and his proceedings are judicial proceedings. Emperor v Rapi Singh, 41 P R 1901 Cr = 187 P L R 1901 = 3 Cr L J 128. The announcement of an order under s 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code is a stage in a judicial proceeding. Queen Empress v Suba Ram, 18 P R 1897 Cr. A magistrate making an enquiry before the issue of an order under s 114, is acting in a stage of a judicial proceeding. Queen Empress v Tatu Narasimha Chari, 19 M 18 = 2 Weir 591 = 5 M L J 219. An investigation by the police under s 161 Cr Pro Code is a stage of a judicial proceeding. Aga Po Ke v Queen Empress, U B R (1897 1901) Vol I 31. An order made under s 202 of the Bengal Municipal Act is a judicial proceeding. The Nabadwip Municipality v Pinna Chandra 27 C W N 817.

Judicial Proceedings—what are not. An enquiry about matters of fact where there is no discretion to be exercised and no judgment to be formed, but something is to be done in a certain event as a duty, is not a judicial but an administrative enquiry. Queen v Price, L R 6 Q B 118, see also Mohiya v Gangappa 15 M 138 (1 B). Queen Empress v Fula 12 B 36, R v Choham Ismail 1 A 1 (13). Alexander v Immumissa 10 M I A 310. An enquiry by a Collector under the Land Acquisition Act is not a judicial proceeding. Ira v The Secretary of State 30 C 36. Durga Das v Queen Empress 27 C 820. Enquiry by District Magistrate into a crime alleged about to be committed is not a judicial enquiry. Chandrasingh v Mohan Singh PC 1 (181) = 8 Bom L R 701 (PC) = 30 B 523 = 1 M L J 301. A departmental enquiry under section 197 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code is not a judicial proceeding. In re Chola Lal 22 B 936. An order passed by a first class Magistrate under sections 518 520 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1872 was held not to be a judicial proceeding. Inference No 62 of 1877, Rat. Un Cr C 129. A Magistrate cannot be said to be acting judicially in directing a search to be made without any proceeding having been instituted before him which he would be called on to determine judicially. Clarke v Brajendra Arshore 30 C 133 = 13 C W N 178 = 9 C L J 291 = 5 M I J 367 = 2 Ind Cas 146. It is doubtful whether the proceeding under the Land Registration Act is a judicial proceeding. Hara Nand Ojha v Imperia, 9 C W N 127.

Court. 1 or definition of the term vide S 3 infra

S 1

Courts Martial This Act applies to Native Courts Martial (Ind. A. V of 1869). It is also applicable to proceedings before the Indian Military Courts (vide S 63 of Act XIV of 1897). Courts martial under the Army or Air Force Act must adopt the same rules of evidence as those followed in the Courts of ordinary jurisdiction in England, and therefore no witness before a Court martial can be compelled to answer any question or produce any document which he could not be required to answer or produce in similar proceedings in a criminal Court (Pouell p 23). This is an exception to the general rule that the lex fori determines the law of evidence (Woodroffe p 161).

Affidavits Order XIX of the Civil Procedure Code lays down the rules regarding affidavits under rule 1 of this Order discretionary powers in respect of the Court (i) to order any particular fact or facts to be proved by affidavit (ii) to allow the affidavit of any witness to be read at a hearing or trial on such condition as it may think reasonable, with this proviso, that when the opposite party bona fide desires to cross-examine a witness, and the witness can be produced, such witness's evidence shall not be allowed to be given by affidavit. The first of these powers, which can be exercised by the Court, even against the wishes of both parties, can be advantageously employed to the manifest saving of expense in proof of formal matters. The second, which, subject to the proviso, can be exercised by the Court at the instance of one party but against the wish of the other, enables, in proper cases, the evidence of an absent witness to be brought before the Court without the expensive interposition of a commissioner or examiner (Pouell p 69). An affidavit is ordinarily not evidence, unless the party seeking to use it complies with the requirements of order XIX. Krishna v. Madhava 65 Ind. Cn. 238. Where the opposite party desires to cross-examine a witness who can be produced, the affidavit cannot be read at the trial if the cross-examining party objects. Bl. v. Brookes 7 Ch. D. 68. An affidavit once filed cannot be withdrawn for the purpose of preventing the deponent being cross-examined thereon. In re Quire Hill etc., 21 Ch. D. 612. This rule is applicable to a foreigner resident out of jurisdiction making an affidavit. Strauss v. Goldschmidt (1892) 8 T. L. R. 239. The Parisian, (1887) 13 P. D. 16. But the Court has a discretion to refuse to order the attendance of a witness for cross-examination. La Trinité v. Inoué W. N. (1897) 203, Strauss v. Goldschmidt (1892) 8 T. L. R. 239. Where it is not possible to cross-examine the deponent the Court may yet upon the affidavit. Shea v. Green, (1866) 2 T. L. R. 533. It is essential where evidence by affidavit is given that every case is taken by the solicitors and other engaged in their preparation that the affidavits shall represent the real facts in order that they may be thoroughly relied upon, vide the remarks of Lie J in Rammens v. Leek (1910) 129 I. 1 263. An affidavit of information and belief not stating the source of information and belief is inadmissible in evidence, whether on a interlocutory or a final application. Re, J. L. Young Manufacturing Co v. Young (1900) 2 Ch. 753 C. A.

Proceedings before Arbitrator As to proceedings before arbitrator vide Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code. The Indian Evidence Act is not applicable to proceedings before an arbitrator. In Hamard v. Wilson 1 C. 231, it was held that an award is void in law on the ground that the arbitrator used in evidence a letter written by a party's attorney and stated to be a bona fide letter. An application to confirm the award was refused by the learned Judge of the first instance upon the ground that the defendant had not improperly changed the letter. In the Court of Appeal Garth, C. J. (dissenting) in delivering the judgment observed: "Then as regard the letter itself upon which the learned Judge in the Court below has laid so much stress it is perfectly true that it was a very improper thing for the defendant's attorney to use a letter in evidence which was written without prejudice, and obviously in the course of negotiation between the attorneys on both sides for an amicable adjustment of the plaintiff's claim. Communications such as these are inadmissible in evidence. They are excluded on grounds of public policy and convenience and the rule of law which excludes them is as binding upon the arbitrator as upon Courts of law notwithstanding s. 1 of the Evidence Act (see Tyler on Evidence 7th edition p. 79, and the authorities cited therein).

One is only surprised that a rule, so well known amongst professional men should have been transgressed, in this instance by the defendants, attorneys. After all, the utmost that can be said is, that the arbitrator made a mistake in receiving and using as evidence a document which, according to law, ought not to have been received. It is not suggested that he knew he was doing wrong nor does it even appear that the plaintiff's advisers, who were present, objected to the letter being received, upon the ground that it was written without prejudice. They objected upon a different ground. Under these circumstances we think there was no sufficient reason to justify the learned Judge in refusing to confirm the award. His decision will therefore be reversed and our order will be, that judgment be given in accordance with the award in the usual way. The same view was taken by Parrell L J in Enoch and Zurek Jy, In re, 79 L J K B 363 at p 367 = (1910) 1 K B 327 where he observed "Where a case is referred to two arbitrators and an umpire, I think it is well understood that the arbitrators act as counsels who try and settle a case without going into Court, but the umpire or a single arbitrator occupies a judicial position and exercises judicial powers and, is bound, as far as practicable to follow legal rules."

So where the arbitrator allows to be given and acts upon, evidence which is absolutely inadmissible and goes to the very root of the question before him the award may be set aside, notwithstanding the parties may have agreed that he should not be bound by the strict rules of evidence. Walford Baler & Co v Macfie & Sons (1915) 84 L J K B 2221.

In re, Keighley Marsted & Co (1893) 1 Q. B 405 Lord Esher said "The parties have agreed to go before an umpire, who is not bound by the strict rules of evidence enforced in a Court, and to be bound by his decision, and in my judgment the Court ought not to fetter the arbitrator or the parties by its own rules of evidence but should consider whether something has been discovered since the award which the arbitrator might think material and which might alter his decision."

This rule is of course contrary to the decision laid down by Chief Baron Alexander in Attorney General v Davison, 4 Mele & Y 160 166 where he observed "But I have already understood, that arbitrators are bound by the same rules of evidence as the Courts of law." But in India an award of the arbitrators cannot be set aside on the ground that they have not acted in strict compliance with the rules of evidence. Sappu v Goindra Charyal, 11 M 85 (87). The view expressed by Lord Esher in In re Keighley Marsted & Co, ubi supra is scarcely in accord with the decision of the House of Lords in the case of East & West India Dock v Kirk and Randall, 12 App Cas 738 57 L J Q. B 295.

If in intending to decide rightly, an arbitrator come to a wrong decision as to the competency of a witness, the admissibility of documentary or oral testimony, or the relevancy and propriety of allowing proof of particular facts it is now settled law, that the Court will not review his decision, or set aside an award for the mistake. Hagar v Baker 14 M & W 9, Armstrong v Marshall 4 Dowd 593, Perriman v Stegall, 9 Bing 679, Wilson v King, 2 C & M 689, Campbell v Tucklow 1 Price 81. But an award may be set aside when an arbitrator refuses to hear evidence on a matter referred to arbitration. Samuel v Cooper 2 A & E 753, Brophy v Holmes 2 Moll 1, Raghubar v Yuna Koor, 12 C L R 564 P 566. An award cannot be set aside by receiving by the arbitrator evidence of collateral matter. Eastern Counties Rail Co v Robertson 1 D & L 498. An arbitrator ought not to hear or receive evidence from one side in the absence of the other. If he does so he must give the other side an opportunity to meet his opponent's case. Cursetji v Crowder, 18 B 299 (311). It is the duty of the arbitrator in hearing evidence to act according to the terms of the agreement in pursuance of which the dispute is placed before him. Krishna v Badya 2 B L R Ap 25. Where an arbitrator has taken no evidence upon matters referred to for arbitration and has not allowed a party an opportunity of proving his contention, he is guilty of misconduct. Deoki v Jaykumar, A W N 1889 121.

S 2

Repeal of enactments

2 On and from that day the following laws shall be repealed --

- (1) all rule of evidence not contained in any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India,
- (2) all such rules, laws and regulations as have required the force of law under the 25th section of the Indian Councils Act, 1861, in so far as they relate to any matter herein provided for, and
- (3) the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any provision of any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India and not hereby expressly repealed

Repeal or enactments Where an Act is repealed, and the repealing enactment is repealed by another, which manifests no intention that the first bill continue repealed the common law rule was that the repeal of the second Act revived the first, and revived it, too ab initio, and not merely from the passing of the reviving Act. Manuel p 727 citing 2 Inst. 686, 1 Inst. 327, Case of Bishops, 12 Rep 7 Phillips v Hopwood 10 B & C 39, Tattle v Gramwood 3 Bing 196 Keller v Redman, 29 L J Ch 321, Kemp v Waddingham, (1866) 1 Q B 359 But this rule does not apply to repealing Acts passed since 1850 So the mere repeal of a Repealing Act, or the repealing portion of a Repealing Act does not by itself revive the original Act or the repealed portion thereof 1 Weir 781=7 M H C App 8 see Stat 52 & 53 Vict, c 63, s 11 In the absence of a contrary intention in a new Act, the repeal of an old Act cannot be deemed to affect any proceedings commenced before the new Act came into force Mulund v Ladu, 3 Bom L R 534 In India, the rule of estoppel based on a dictum in Pooler v Small, 1 R R 212, viz, that a mortgagee is not at liberty to dispute the title of his mortgagor does not apply, and section 2 (1) of the Evidence Act expressly repeals all rules of evidence which are contained in any Statute Act or Regulation in force in British India Aur Mahmood v Kesumal, 7 S L R 11=20 Ind Cas 523

Repeal by implication Statutes are not to be considered as repealed by implication, unless the repugnancy between the new provision and a former Statute be plain and unavoidable Sripathi v Queen 6 M 32 One Statute may be impliedly repealed by a subsequent Statute necessarily inconsistent with it but the inconsistency must be so great that they cannot both be to their full extent obeyed Emperor v Mulshankar, 12 Bom L R 750=7 Ind C 963=11 C L J 548 For such a repeal the provisions of the latter Act must be so inconsistent with or repugnant to those of an earlier Act that the two cannot stand together Co Litt 112 Shep Touchet 88 West Ham v Fourth City (1892) 1 Q B 651 O Flaperty v McDouell 6 H L C 142 Brown v G B R Co (1885) 9 Q B D 753 Sims v Doughty 5 Ves 213, Constantine v Constantine (1801) 6 Ves 100

The Act is not a complete Code The Indian Evidence Act is not a fragmentary enactment, but a consolidatory enactment repealing all rules of evidence other than those saved by the last part of this section Collector of Goralpur v Laladhar 12 A 35 The Indian Evidence Act has repealed all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute or Regulation Lakshay v Mahpat Singh 7 I A 63=5 C 744 This section in effect prohibits the employment of any kind of evidence not especially authorized by the Act itself Per Mahmood J in Queen Empress v Abdulla 7 A 385 (399) F B

"The Evidence Act does not contain the whole law of evidence governing this country. Section 2 of the Act says the rules of evidence contained in any Statute, Act or Regulation in force. The law of evidence is contained in the Evidence Act and in other Acts and Statutes which make specific provision on matters of evidence. One of such Statutes is the English Extradition Act which is applicable to this country, is as much part of the lex fori as the Evidence Act." Per Woodroffe J in In the matter of Rudolph Stallman, 39 C 165=15 C W N 1053 at p 1065. In the same case the learned Judge continued "Where evidence is taken in this country the evidence receivable must be governed by the rules of procedure here in force. It has however been argued that where evidence is received from abroad its admissibility depends on the law under which it has been taken and that though the English cases do not deal specifically with hearsay evidence yet the language of the judgment is sufficiently comprehensive to warrant the statement that evidence taken abroad, whatever be its nature and however it may have been taken, must be admitted and that such a rule is necessary to give effect to the treaty obligations though the weight to be attached to the evidence is naturally a matter for the consideration of the investigating Court (See Pigott's Extradition pp 153, 159, 97, 98 and cases there cited). The matter is one which may on a future occasion require consideration but though disposed to assent to the argument of the Advocate General I desire to reserve a final decision on the point as such a decision is not necessary for this judgment." The Evidence Act is, as it was intended to be, a complete code of the law of Evidence for British India. Queen Empress v Kartic Chunder Das 14 C 721 (728).

The rule under Mahomedan Law prescribing 2 years as the period of "gestation" is a rule of evidence within the meaning of this section. When this is read with s 5 of the Punjab Laws Act, the result is that the Courts are not bound by that rule under that Act. Waras v Ali Balsh 76 P R 1891, see also 1 P R 1854. It is not open to Court to apply the principles of justice, equity and good conscience inconsistent with the Act. Meer Jangoo v Chote Sahib, 6 N L R 161—8 Ind Crs 1124.

The Evidence Act is a separate Statute dealing with an important branch of law, and its provisions are independent of the rules of procedure contained in the Criminal Procedure Code and must have full scope unless it is clearly proved that they have been repealed or altered by another Statute. Rannun v Emperor, 7 Lah 84=94 Ind Crs 901=27 Cr L J 709=27 P L R 583=A I R 1926 Lah 88.

Clause I. All rules of Hindu and Mahomedan Law relating to evidence are repealed by clause (1). Mauroj v Abdul, 19 A L J 713. Yusuf Ali v Ayub Beg 11 A L J 355. Dhondu v Ganesh 11 B 433. Marhar Ali v Budh Singh 7 A 297, Parameswar v Bisheshwar, 1 A 53, Alladad Khan v Ismail, 10 A 289. This clause also repeals the English common law on the subject of evidence. Lelhray v Mahpal 7 I A 70=5 C 751.

Clause II. This clause refers to various rules as to evidence issued by the Government in "Non Regulation" provinces previous to the India Council's Act, 1861, 24 & 25 Vict c 67, which became law by virtue of section 25 of that enactment. In the Punjab for instance there was a special rule as to the production of a day book and ledger for proof of book debts. Other provisions of a like nature were in force in other "Non Regulation" provinces—Cunningham p 77.

Proviso. There are various Statutes of the British Parliament and Acts of the Indian Legislature which contain provisions relating to evidence. Those Statutes and Acts of Indian Legislature which were passed before the Indian Evidence Act, (I of 1872) are unaffected by this Act. In re Rudolph Stallman 15 C W N 1053. Lelhray Kuar v Mahpal Singh 7 I A 70=5 C 751, Queen Empress v Kartic Das 14 C 721. A complete collection of such Statutes and Acts are made in Whitely Stokes Anglo Indian Codes Vol II pp 822—827. So in Ower v Ower 19 B 365=27 Bom L R 231=A I R 1925 Bom. 231, it has been held that s 58 of the Evidence Act has no application to the Indian Divorce Act.

3 In this Act the following words and expressions are used in the following senses, unless a contrary intention appears from the context —

“Court” includes all Judges and Magistrates, and all persons, except arbitrators, legally authorized to take evidence

Interpretation clause “A definition is the most difficult of all things. There is far greater probability of a correct use of terms than of a correct definition of them. The best definition therefore is that by use. A correct use renders definition unnecessary, because the law will speak plainly without it. And where it is unnecessary to define it is also dangerous, because an incorrect definition will confound the correct use.”—vide Solicitors’ Journal Vol XX p 869

Subject to contrary intention in Context “A definition clause does not necessarily in any Statute, apply in all possible contexts in which the word may be found therein. If defined expressions are used in a context which the definition will not fit, then the words may be interpreted according to their ordinary meaning.” Per Lord Justice General in Strathern v Padden, (1926) S C (D) 9—Q of Justs, see also Uda Begam v Imamuddin, 2 A 71 (86), Jokha v Jinn Din 3 A 419 (425)

Court The definition of Court in this Act is framed only for the purpose of the Act itself and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope. Special laws must be confined in their operation to their special subjects. Queen Empress v Tulja, 12 B 36. The definition of the word Court in the Act is not meant to be exhaustive. R v Jhutoosh, 4 C 488 (193). So in a trial by Jury the Court does not exclude the jury. In such a case it means and includes both Judge and Jury. Ibid. A Sub Registrar is a public officer, his proceedings are judicial proceedings within the meaning of section 225, Penal Code, and his Court is a Court within the meaning of that word in the Evidence Act. In re Sadhase Lal 22 W R Cr 10=13 B L R App 40. The Court means all persons except arbitrators, legally authorized to take evidence. Atchayya v Gangayya 15 M 138 (147)=2 M L J 64 (F B). So the definition of Court applies to a Registrar holding an enquiry and taking evidence under the Registration Act. Ibid at p 14, In re Venkata Chela, 10 M 154, but see R v Ramlal, 141 (143) R v Tulja 12 B 36 (43), Attorney General v Moore, 3 Ex D 270. A commissioner appointed under order XXXI r 1—r 10 of Civil Procedure Code and ss 503—508 of Criminal Procedure Code is a person legally entitled to take evidence and as such he is a Court. Atchayya v Gangayya 15 M 138 (147). The term Court includes all Magistrates. Queen v Alagu, 16 M 421 (422).

Includes Where in an interpretation clause it is stated a term includes so and so, the meaning is that the term retains its ordinary meaning and the clause enlarges the meaning of the term and makes it include matters which the ordinary meaning would not include. The official Assignee Bombay v Firm of Chandalar, A I R 1924 Sind 89, see also Bilas Singh v Emperor 23 A L J 845=89 Ind Cas 630.

Judges No definition of the word ‘Judges’ is given in this Act. The word ‘Judge’ means the presiding officer of a Civil Court in accordance with the definition of the term given in the Civil Procedure Code—vide s 2(8) of the Code. The word is also defined in section 19 of the Indian Penal Code. Section 3(1a) gives the definition of the term ‘District Judge’. The word ‘Judge’ in its ordinary and normal sense means a Judge of the High Court. Elschy v Kirby 12 L J Ex 97. A District Judge acting in the capacity of a District Registrar is not a Court. Dina Nath v Ael Ram 21 A L J 88.

Magistrate No definition of this term also is given in the Act. The General Clauses Act (X of 1897) lays down the following definition of the term Magistrate. “shall include every person exercising all or any of the powers of a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force.”

Vide s 3(31) It is doubtful whether a Village Magistrate in the Madras Presidency is or is not a Magistrate within the meaning of the General Clauses Act 27 M 223=2 Weir 203=14 M L J 74 A Magistrate as such is not a Court unless he is acting in a judicial capacity Clarke v Brojendra Kishore, 36 G 433 The Court of a Police Patel is not a Court under s 6 of the Criminal Procedure Code Queen-Empress v Ramia, Rat Un Cr C 317 A Magistrate is not a Court while he is passing an order under s 141 of the Criminal Procedure Code Natarajan v Ranga suami 44 M L J 328

Judicial interpretation of "Court" in connection with other Acts The Collector is not a Court of Justice, under s 3 of the Majority Act Brynmohun Lal v Perlash, 17 G 941 A Deputy Collector's Court is a Court of Justice within the meaning of s 237, Act VIII of 1879 Johun Conie v Barbara 10 W R 43 A tribunal of Commissioners appointed by the Viceroy and Governor General of India in Council for enquiring into, and reporting upon the truth or otherwise of an imputation against the Rules of a Native State is not a Court In re Maharaja Madhara Singh, 42 G 1=31 I A 239=8 G W N 841 A Registrar of the Presidency Small Causes Court of Calcutta, who is entitled to decide the question of service of summons, and in doing so is entitled to receive evidence in order to come to a finding on that matter is a Court Balchand v Taral Nath 18 G W N 1323=16 Cr L J 151 There is a difference of opinion as regards whether a registering officer is a Court or not. In Queen v Ramlal 15 A 141, he was held not to be a Court. In Queen Empress v Tulya 12 B 36, the enquiry contemplated by sections 73, 75 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) appears to have been regarded as administrative and a reference is made to the case of the Queen v Prince, L R 6, Q B 418 But a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Atchayya v Gangayya, 15 M 138 held it otherwise. In delivering his judgment Collins C J observed at p 145 "It is therefore clear to my mind that the Registrar exercises more than mere administrative functions—in the examination of witnesses he is bound to observe the rules of evidence, and he is to consider the weight and credibility of the evidence and form his own conclusions. The learned Judges in Queen Empress v Tulya, 12 B 36 appeared to consider the Registrar's functions purely administrative and the fact appears to have mainly influenced their judgment." See also Venkata Chala In re 10 M 154, Kristo Nath v T F Brown and others, 14 C 176 A District Registrar is not a Court within the meaning of section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 Manabala v Goundan, 30 M 326 Under the Land Acquisition Act the proceedings of the Collector regarding the measurement and valuation of the land and resulting in his award are administrative and not judicial Era v The Secretary of State, 1 C L J 227=32 C 605=9 C W N 454 affirming 5 C W N 131, Durga Das v Queen, 27 G 820, Galstann v Banka, 31 C W N 825 A Collector acting in appraisement proceeding under ss 69 and 70 is a Court Raghu bany v Kohil, 17 C 872 So also a Certificate officer holding an enquiry under s 6 of the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act (Ben Act I 1895) Sunder v Sital 28 C 217 but see Jharu Lal v Mohant 2 Pat 257 Similarly a Deputy Collector is a Court, when he is holding an enquiry under the Bengal Land Registration for registering the name of a person Ranga Singh v Hara Khud, 47 Ind Cas 710, see also Queen Empress v Munda, 24 M 121 A tribunal constituted under the Calcutta Improvement Act (V of 1911) is also a Court Aundo Lal v Khethra Mahan 45 C 585 So also is an Income Tax Collector Nataraja v Emperor, 36 M 72, In re Punam Chand 38 B 642 A District Judge is a Court while he determines election disputes under s 22 of the Bombay District Municipalities Act (Bom Act III of 1901) In re Nauchand, 37 Bom 865

A commissioner appointed to take down evidence of a witness is not a Court Seadul Ali v Emperor, 11 C W N 909 Neither an arbitrator appointed by a Court is a Court Anila Mal v Chirangi, 3 P R 1914 Puttiah v Veera Sann, 17 M L J 420

As regards the meaning of the word "Court" in s 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code vide Kanhaiyalal v Bhagwan Das 48 A 63, Bilas v Emperor, 47 A 934, Galstann v Banka 31 C W N 825, Nunda v Khethra, 45 C 585

S 3

Fact

"Fact" means and includes—

- (1) any thing, state of things, or relation of things capable of being perceived by the senses,
- (2) any mental condition of which any person is conscious

Illustrations

- (a) If there are certain objects arranged in a certain order in a certain place is a fact
- (b) That a man heard or saw something is a fact
- (c) That a man said certain words is a fact
- (d) That a man holds a certain opinion, has a certain intention yet in faith or fraudulently, or uses a particular word in a particular sense, or is or was at a specified time conscious of a particular thing is a fact
- (e) That a man has a certain reputation, is a fact

Facts, different meanings of "Fact" and its other form factum stand in English Law books for various things (a) for an act (b) that completed and operative transaction which is brought about by "doing" (executing a certain sort of writing, and so for the instrument itself the factum) (c) As designating what exists in contrast with what should be fully ex-facto as contrasted with de-jure (d) And so generally, a thing, event, action, condition, as happening, existing really to place. This fact is the notion which concerns us now. It is what Law expresses (vide Human Understanding Book IV C 16 s 5) when he speaks of some particular existence or as it is usually termed matter of fact. A fundamental conception is that of a thing as existing, or being true. It is limited to what is tangible or visible or in any way the object of sense, the invisible mere thoughts, intentions, fancies of the mind, when conceived as existing or being true are conceived of as facts. The question of whether a thing be a fact or not is the question of whether it is, or whether it exists whether true. All inquires into the truth the reality, the actuality of thing, arises into the fact about them. Nothing is a question of fact which is a question of the existence, reality truth or something of the re veritas. The Pre Treat Pt p 191. Ordinarily, a fact is something done or which has to pass, an act or deed or event, an effect produced or a result achieved, thing regarded as strictly true or actually existent whether material or mental reality actuality. Standard Dictionary. These dictionary definitions found support in several American cases which adopt the idea of achievement and accomplishment with respect of it. Vide Gates v Hale Ind 570=50 N E 299, Lackey v Vanderbilt 10 How Pr (N Y) 153. "A fact is something fixed unchangeable" Huber v Guggenheim, 89 Fed 598.

Fact legal meaning of The legal meaning of the term fact is not limited to what is tangible or visible or in any way the object of sense. It has also been stated things invisible mere thoughts intentions fancies of the mind when conceived of as existing or being true are conceived of as facts. Thayer Pre Treat 11 191. Mr Stephen in the first two editions of his D of Evidence defined fact in the following words 'Fact means (1) a thing capable of being perceived by the senses (2) every mental condition of which every person is conscious'. For this definition he was keenly criticised by a very able writer in vol XX of the Solicitors Journal at pp 863, (September 9 1876) who said the proper subject of affirmation and negation is not fact but propositions and among other valuable remarks inquired how it was with such matters is negligence custom, ownership, the defamatory quality of a writing and qualities of persons and things generally. He added it is really applicable only to the rudest form of jurisprudence. The writer himself thought no definition was necessary. The cisms took effect in his third edition, and all later ones. Stephen dropped any attempt at definition, and substituted in art 1, this "A fact includes the fact that any mental condition of which any person is conscious exists," and in his preface to the third edition, after saying that he 'had been led to modify the definition of fact by an acute remark made on this subject in the Solicitors' Journal,' he added that, 'the real object of the definition was to show that I used the word "fact" so as to include states of mind' Thayer Pre Treat Li p 192

A 'fact' as the term is used in legal proceedings is an event or thing done or said, an act or action which is the subject of testimony. The condition or state of mind at a given time is a fact. If any emotion is felt, as joy, grief, or anger, the feeling is a fact. If the operations of the mind produce an effect as knowledge, skill, intention, this effect on the mind is a fact. When the mental process is led up to and produces a desire or intention to do a certain thing such state of mind is a fact. Wilfulness is a desire or intention to produce a certain result, hence wilfulness is a fact. Thus, at least, is the general rule. We ascertain the existence of a fact by means of evidence. The evidence, and each item of the evidence are not necessarily such facts as call in operation of the law. Burr Jones Li § 10 (n)

What is the real meaning of the word "fact"? The popular acceptance of the term 'fact' does not include any mental condition of which any person is conscious. It stops at a fact being an existing or true thing. The legal meaning is not limited to what is tangible or visible in any way the object of sense. Burr Jones Li § 10 (1). The framer of the Evidence Act also intended that the word be not understood only in its popular sense as denoting some event which occurred or something which was done, as opposed to something said or some opinion or feeling of mind or body. So under this definition statements, feelings, opinions and states of mind are just as much facts as any other circumstance of which through the medium of the senses or by ourself consciousness, we become aware, and all, if they comply with the requirements of the Act is to relevancy are equally admissible for the purpose of proving or disproving the matter to which they relate. Cunning Li p 80, see also Stephen's Dig Li Preface to Third Edition. The state of a man's mind is as much a fact as the state of his digestion. Bowen L J in Edington v Fitzmaurice 29 Ch D 193 cited in Field's Evidence 7th Ed p 15

Bentham's definition Bentham defines fact as follows — "By fact is meant the existence of a portion of matter, unanimate or animate either in a state of motion or in a state of rest." This is very unattractive. Mr Best has given no definition but he seems to have indorsed the definition given by Bentham. But all such definitions including that of Bentham indorsed by Best labour under the disadvantage that no accurate definition has yet been given of what is legally understood by the term 'fact' and in defining the term evidence. Mr Justice Stephen (Dig Law Li 3rd Ed art 1) has abandoned the attempt at definition contained in his two earlier editions and contents himself with the statement that 'fact includes the fact that any mental condition of which any person is conscious, exists' Wheldon v Wilson, 44 Me 1, Stevens v Stevens, 150 Mass 557, Bornhart v Full 119 Ill 93, Cal 497, Oser v Schuyling, 102 Ind 191, Homan v Corning, 60 N H 418, Jefferts v Alford, 151 Mass 91, Humburg v Wool 66 Fen 168, Mutual Life Ins v Hillmon, 145 U S 285, Chamberlayne v Notes on Best, 8th Ed p 19

Bentham's division of Facts Bentham divides facts into (1) physical and psychological (2) events and states of things (3) positive and negative. This division of course does not accord with the definition given by him. See Thayer Pre Treat Li p 191

Physical and Psychological facts A physical fact is a fact considered to have its seat in some inanimate being or if an animate being by virtue not of the qualities by which it is considered animate but of those which it has in common with the class of inanimate things. A psychological fact is considered to have its seat in some animate being and that by virtue of the qualities by which it is constituted animate. Bentham, Jud Li C 3, Best Li § 12. Thus the existence

S 3 of visible objects the outward acts of intelligent agents the res gestae of a law suit, et cetera, range themselves under the former class while to the latter belong such as only exist in the mind of an individual, as, for instance, the conviction or recollections of which he is conscious, his intellectual assent to any proposition the desires or passions by which he is agitated, his animus or intention in doing particular acts, et cetera. Best on Evidence art 12 Mr. Stephen in his Introduction to the Evidence Act classifies facts stated in clause (1) as external facts and those stated in clause (2) as internal facts. 'During the whole of our waking life' he says 'we are in a state of perception. Indeed consciousness and perception are terms for one thing according as we regard it from the passive or active point of view. We are conscious of everything that we perceive, and we perceive whatever we are conscious of. Moreover our perceptions are distinct from each other—some both in space and time as is the case with all our perceptions of the external world others in time only as is the case with all our perceptions of thoughts and feelings of our own minds. "External facts"—Whatever may be the objects of our perceptions they make up collectively the whole sum of our thoughts and feelings. They constitute in short, the world with which we are acquainted without entering upon the question of the existence of the external world, it may be asserted with confidence that our knowledge of it is composed first, of our perceptions, and secondly, of the inferences which we draw from them as to what we should perceive if we were favourably situated for that purpose. The human body supplies an illustration of this. No one doubts that his own body is composed not only of the external organs which he perceives by his sense but of numerous internal organs, most of which it is highly improbable that either he or anyone else will ever see or touch, and some of which he never can, from the nature of things see or touch as long as he lives. When he affirms the existence of the organs, say the brain or the heart, what he means is that he is led to believe from what he has been told by other persons about human bodies, or observes himself in other human bodies, that if his skull and chest were laid open, the organs would be perceived by the senses of persons who might direct their senses towards them. "Internal facts"—There is another class of perceptions, true in their duration and not perceived by the five best marked senses, which are nevertheless, distinctly perceptible and of the utmost importance. Those are thoughts and feelings—love, hatred, anger, intention, will, wish, knowledge, opinion, are perceived by the person who feels them. When it is affirmed that a man is angry that he intends to sell an estate that he knows the meaning of a word that he struck a blow voluntarily and not by accident each proposition relates to a matter capable of being as directly perceived as a noise or a flash of light. The only difference between the two classes of propositions is this when it is affirmed that a man has a given intention, the matter affirmed is one which he and he only can perceive, when it is affirmed that a man is sitting or standing the matter affirmed is one which may be perceived not only by the man himself but by any other person able to see and favourably situated for the purpose. But in circumstances that either event is regarded as being or as having been capable of being perceived by some or the other is what we mean and all that we mean when we say that it exists or existed or when we denote the same thing by calling it a fact. The word fact is sometimes opposed to theory sometimes to opinion sometimes to feeling but all these modes of using it are more or less rhetorical. When it is used with any degree of accuracy it implies something which exists and it is as difficult to attach any meaning to the assertion that a thing exists which neither is nor under any conceivable circumstances could be perceived by any sentient being as to attach any meaning to the assertion that anything which can be so perceived does not, or at the time of perception did not, exist. Stephen Introduction pp 19 to 21

How psychological events are proved. It was formerly considered that psychological facts were incapable of direct proof by the testimony of witnesses and their existence could only be ascertained either by confession of the party who a mind is their seat, or by presumptive inference from physical facts. L. J. v. F. 1st 12 But it is now recognised that the state of a man's mind is as much a subject of evidence as the state of his digestion (vide per Bouvier L. J. in Johnson v. F. 1st 12 and accordingly witnesses are permitted testify directly as to their own mental condition, although not generally to that of others (Best on Ev § 12) S 3

Events and states of things There are two other divisions of facts which deserve to be noted. One is that they are either events or states of things. By an "event" is meant some motion or change, considered as having come about either in the course of nature, or through the agency of human will, in which latter case it is called "an act" or "an action." The fall of a tree is "an event," the existence of the tree is "a state of things," but both are alike "facts." (Best on Evidence § 13)

Positive or Negative facts The remaining division of facts is into positive or affirmative, and negative. In this may be seen a distinction, which belongs not, in the former case, to the nature of the facts themselves, but to that of the discourse which we are under the necessity of employing in speaking of them. In the existence of this or that state of things, designated by a certain denomination we have a positive, or say, an affirmative fact. In the non-existence of it a negative fact. But the non-existence of a negative fact is equivalent to the existence of the correspondent and opposite positive fact, and unless this sort of relation be well noted and remembered, great is the confusion that may be the consequence. The only really existing facts are positive facts. A negative fact is the non-existence of a positive one, and nothing more. Though, in many instances, according to the mode of expression commonly employed in speaking of it, the real nature of it is disguised. Thus, by health, is meant nothing more than the absence, the non-existence, of disease, by minority, the individual's non-arrival at a certain age, by darkness, the absence of light, and so on.—(Bentham Jud Ev Vol I p 50)

Meaning of fact in understanding the Statute "In the first place what is a fact? The question is answered by s 3, which defines 'fact to mean and include anything state of things or relation of things capable of being perceived by the senses' and, 'any mental condition of which any person is conscious.' Thus then, is the only sense in which, in interpreting the Statute, I can understand the word fact." Per Mahmood J in Queen Empress v Abdullah, 7 A 33, (399) F B. "A misrepresentation as to the intention of a person (in stating the purpose for which the consent is asked) is a misrepresentation of a 'fact' within the meaning of section 3 of the Evidence Act." Emperor v Soma, 36 Ind Crs 851 (854)—17 P R 1916 Cr = 18 Cr L J 18, see also Re N Jaladu, 36 M 452. The word 'fact' used in s 157 of the Evidence Act, does not mean merely "event" but also a continuing fact such as possession. Muthala giri v Pappi Nuel en, 25 Ind Crs 510.

Matter of fact Matter of law "Matter of fact is anything which is the subject of testimony, 'matter of law' is the general law of the land, of which Court will take judicial cognizance." (Best Et 8th Ed p 19) The true question of law is used in three distinct though related senses. It means in the first place a question which the Court is bound to answer in accordance with a rule of law—a question which the law itself has authoritatively answered to the exclusion of the right of the Court to answer the question as it thinks fit in accordance with what is considered to be the truth and justice of the matter. All other questions are questions of fact—using the term fact in its widest possible sense to include everything that is not law. The term question of fact has more than one meaning. In its most general sense it includes all questions which are not questions of law. Everything is matter of fact which is not matter of law. Salmonds Jurisprudence 7th Ed p 79. "It is enough for our present purpose says Prof Thayer 'to say, that unless there be a question as to a rule or standard which it is the duty of a judicial tribunal to apply there is no question of law. The enquiry whether there be any such rule or standard the determination of the exact meaning and scope of it the definition of its forms, and the settlements of a written constitution are all naturally and justly classed together and allotted to the same tribunal, and these are called questions of law.' Thayer Pret Treat Fo p 19." The right inference or conclusion, in point of fact, is itself matter of fact. (Ibid p 19)

S 3

Illustrations Illustrations (a), (b), and (c) are illustrations of the first clause and (d) and (e) of the second. This division which was made by Bentham has been adopted in the Code to prevent any metaphysical doubts as to 'mental conditions' being facts. Aorton p 93, Stephen's Dig Pt 3rd Ed Introduction

One fact is said to be relevant to another when the one is connected with the other in any of the ways referred to in the provisions of this Act relating to the relevancy of facts.

Relevant facts The relevant facts are facts other than facts in issue which are in the eye of the law so connected with or related to the facts in issue that they render the latter probable or improbable, or toughly throw light upon them. Relevancy may indeed be considered as synonymous with 'connection' a word which frequently appears in discussions on the subject. Of course both words must be taken in their legal meaning which is generally restricted. Common sense or logical relevancy is a rule wider than legal relevancy. A Judge might in ordinary transactions take one fact as evidence of another, and act upon it himself when in Court he would rule that it was legally irrelevant. And he may exclude fact although relevant if they appear to him too remote to be really material to the issue. Colle Case 76. Every fact which is the basis of an inference is evidence and is thus frequently termed is "evidentiary" fact while the fact which is inferred from it, is called the "ultimate" or "principal" fact. The first condition which a fact, proof of which, is an evidentiary fact, is often must fulfil is that it must be evidential of the main fact. It must furnish a basis from which the main fact can be inferred. The first duty of the Court in England is to apply the underlying principle of the law of evidence namely logical relevancy for the purpose of determining whether or not the fact offered can be evidence. If the fact meet this test it may or may not be admitted. For strike around the general principle in the law of evidence that what is logically relevant is admissible, we numerous excluding rules which say that this or that fact though logically relevant is inadmissible. McClellan's Law of Evidence p 1. The word relevant in the Indian Evidence Act means admissible. Per Lord Hobhouse in Lala Lalram Chand Hawder 3 C W N 269 (notes). So a fact in order to become relevant must be admissible in evidence under any one of the sections 5 to 55. Such facts which in themselves in issue may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue. Stephen's Introduction p 13.

English Law—Test of relevancy The meaning of the term according to Scottish law comes nearer to the conception of the term according to English lawyer namely the sufficiency in law of what is alleged in support or defence of an action. (Standard Dictionary). The word comes from the French relevet to raise. So whatever testimony is offered which would assist in knowing which party spoke the truth of the issue was relevant and when admitted it did not override other formal rules of evidence it ought to have been taken. Hunter v Hunter 78 N Y 90. Prior v Oglesby 70 Fla 248. It is necessary however that it should itself be directly upon the point in issue, if it be but a link in the chain of evidence tending to prove the issue by reasonable inference it may nevertheless be relevant. Schuchowitz v Allen 1 Wall (U S) 131. Hunter v Hunter, 131 Ill 482. Huntington v Attrill 118 N Y 40. Relevancy is that which conduces to prove a pertinent theory in a case. Levy Campbell (Tex) 20 S W 196. But there is no definition or Statute or theory of relevancy which can very greatly aid in solving the constantly recurring problem whether a given fact offered in evidence is relevant to prove the proposition in issue. Burr Jones 13. Prof Thayer who seems of all the writers on evidence have acquired a giant grasp of his subject says: There is a principle not much a rule of evidence a presupposition involved in the very conception of rational system—which forbids receiving anything irrelevant not logically probative. How are we to know what these forbidden things are? Not by any rule of law. The law furnishes no test of relevancy. For this it tacitly refers to logic and general experience, — assuming that the principles of reasoning are known to its Judges and ministers just as a vast multitude of other things are assumed as already sufficiently known to them. There is another precept which should be laid down as preliminary, in stating the law of evidence, namely that it unless excluded by some rule or principle of law, all that is logically prohibitive is admissible. These rules of exclusion have had their exceptions, and so the law has come into the shape of a set of primary rules of exclusion and then a set of exceptions to these rules." Preliminary Treatise Evidence pp 263—266

Reasons of the exclusionary rules The qualification to the general rule is that it does not always follow, merely because a fact is logically relevant that it is always admissible. There may be a very great number of minute details all logically relevant, but which if they existed in many cases would take such a long time to be given in evidence, that the business of the Court would be clogged. In Amoskeag Co., v Head 59 N H 332, Doe C J thus stated the reason. "The trial to which parties are entitled is not an endless one nor one unnecessarily protracted and exhausting. There may be a vast amount of evidence, relevant in a certain legal sense but not so unimportant when computed with an abundance of better evidence easily available, as to be properly excluded. The parties being allowed, upon collateral issues in equal range amply sufficient for the purposes of justice, under the circumstances of the particular case, they are not necessarily entitled as a matter of law to go further in that direction. But there is another reason for the exclusion of logically relevant evidence. It is thus stated by Prof Thayer "Some things are rejected as being of too slight a significance or as having too conjectural and remote a connection, others as being dangerous in their effect on the jury, and likely to be misused or over-estimated by that body, others as being impolitic or unsafe on public grounds, others on the ground of precedent. It is this sort of thing as I said before,—the rejection on one or another practical ground, of what is really prohibitive,—which is the characteristic thing in the law of evidence, stamping it as the child of the jury system" Thayer Pre Treat Ex p 266

'Facts in issue'

The expression "facts in issue" means and includes—any fact from which, either by itself or in connection with other facts, the existence, non-existence, nature or extent of any right, liability, or disability, asserted or denied in any suit or proceeding, necessarily follows.

Explanation—Whenever, under the provisions of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure, any Court records in issue of fact, the fact to be asserted or denied in the answer to such issue is a fact in issue.

Illustration

A is accused of the murder of B.

At his trial the following fact may be in issue — that A caused B's death, that A intended to cause B's death that A had received grave and sudden provocation from B that A, at the time of doing the act which caused B's death was by reason of an madness of mind incapable of knowing its nature.

Facts in issue what are they Facts in issue are those facts which are alleged by one party and denied by the other on the pleadings in a civil case or alleged in the indictment and denied by the plea of "not guilty" in a criminal case so far as they are material to the case. There is therefore still difficulty in ascertaining what are the facts in issue. Cooley Case 76 Mr Stephen in his introduction to his Evidence Act, explains "facts in issue" in the following—

S 3 words "They may by themselves, or in connection with other fact, constitute such a state of things that the existence of the disputed right or liability would be a legal inference from them. From the fact that A is the eldest son of B there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir at law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involve. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intention or knowledge, there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B and is liable to the punishment provided by law for murder. Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue, unless their existence is undisputed. Introduction to the Evidence Act p 12. A "relevant fact" is often called the evidentiary fact and "a fact in issue" as the 'ultimate,' 'main' or 'principal fact'. Vide Mckechnys Evidence p 5.

"Document" means any matter expressed or described upon any

Document ' substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, for the purpose of recording that matter

Illustrations

A writing is a document

Words printed lithographed or photographed are documents

A map or plan is a document

An inscription on a metal plate or stone is a document

A caricature is a document

Documents The term 'document' is one of difficult definition. Many so-called documents being more properly classed under the head of real evidence. Best defines "document" as including "all material substance on which the thoughts of men are represented by writing or any other species of conventional mark or symbol" and expressly includes milk man's score, exchequer tiller and the like. (Best p 213). Stephens's definition is similar, though more restricted. "Any substance having any matter expressed or described upon it by marks capable of being read" (Dig Law Part I). Within those definitions, a ring or hammer with an inscription, a musical composition, and a savage tattooed with words intelligible to himself, would all be documents. Photographs, caricatures, woodcut tillers, and the like would probably be excluded under Stephens's definition, not apparently under the others. Best p 213. The definition given in this Act is wider than the definition mentioned in Stephens's Digest. This definition seems to include all those things mentioned above. This definition is in accord with the definition of the term given in s 29 of the Indian Penal Code and s 3 (16) of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897). Where a draft petition was prepared with the intention of being used as evidence of a matter it was held that it fell within the terms of this section. Q v Shufait Ally 10 W R Cr 61=2 B L R 12. An agreement in which some of the executors signed is a document. Lama Suami Jyoti v Emperor, 41 M 589=43 Ind Cas 593=19 Cr L J 177. Letters or marks imprinted on trees and intended to be used as evidence that the trees had been passed for removal by the Ranger are documents. Emperor v Krishappa, Khandappa (1925) A I R 327=27 Bom L R 599=26 Cr L J 1014=87 Ind Cas 539.

Harton defines a document as "an instrument upon which is recorded by means of letters, figures or marks matter which may evidentially be used. In this sense the term applies to writings to words printed, lithographed or photographed to seal plates or stones on which inscriptions are cut or engraved to photographs and pictures to maps and plans. So far as concerns admission it makes no difference what is the thing on which the words or signs are recorded. It may be recorded on stones or gems or on wood as well as on paper or parchment. Harton v Pe § 614 see also Leg v Dyer (1908) 2 K R 22. A book is, of course, a document. Arnold v Lauzel Val Water Co 2 Ail 55.

'Evidence'

'Evidence' means and includes—

S 3

(1) all statements which the Court permits or requires to be made before it by witnesses, in relation to matters of fact under inquiry such statements are called oral evidence,

(2) all documents produced for the inspection of the Court such documents are called documentary evidence.

The ambiguity of the word evidence The meaning of the word 'evidence' in English Text Books is ambiguous. It sometimes means the words uttered and things exhibited by witnesses before a Court of Justice. At other times it means the facts proved to exist, by those words or things and regarded as the ground work of inferences as to other facts not so proved. Again it is sometimes used as meaning to ascert that a particular fact is relevant to the matter under enquiry.

Evidence—Different meanings of the words 'The ambiguity of the word is the cause of a great deal of obscurity apart from that which it gives to the rules above mentioned. In scientific inquiries, and for popular and general purposes, it is no doubt convenient to have one word which includes—(1) The testimony on which a given fact is believed, (2) the facts so believed, and (3) the arguments founded upon them. In judicial inquiries however, the distinction is most important, and the neglect to observe it has thrown the whole subject into confusion by causing English lawyers to overlook the leading distinction which ought to form the principle on which the whole should be classified. I mean in the distinction between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts.

"The use of the one name 'evidence' for the fact to be proved and the means by which it is proved has given a double meaning to every phrase in which the word occurs." Thus, for instance the phrase 'primary evidence' sometimes means a relevant fact, and sometimes the original of a document as opposed to a copy. 'Circumstantial evidence' is opposed to 'direct evidence'. But circumstantial evidence usually means a fact from which some other fact is inferred, whereas 'direct evidence' means testimony given by a man as to what he has himself perceived by his own senses. It would thus be correct to say that circumstantial evidence must be proved by direct evidence—a clumsy mode of expression which is in itself a mark of confusion of thought. The evil, however, goes beyond mere clumsiness of expression. People have naturally enough supposed that circumstantial and direct evidence admit of being contrasted in respect of their cogency, and that different canons can be laid down, as to the conditions which they ought to satisfy before the Court is convinced by them. This, I think, confuses the theory of proof and is an error due entirely to the ambiguity of the word 'evidence'. Stephen's Introduction pp 4, 5, 8, 9.

Evidence,—meaning of the word generally When we look back to the derivation of the word 'evidence' we are aided by the vast area the subject embraces, and from its original conception of 'that which is seen out (ec= out, video=I see) necessity imperitively demands the alteration and limitation of the general definition to the specific subject of treatment. In its ordinary acceptance evidence is understood to be anything that makes evident or clear to the mind or such things collectively any ground or reason for knowledge or certitude in knowledge, proof whether from immediate knowledge or from thought, authority or testimony, a fact or body of facts on which a proof, belief or judgment is based that which shows or indicates. (Standard Dictionary) "Evidence is and must be the test of truth, and I suppose, the ultimate ground on which we believe anything." Wittol—Nature and Thought "In this wide and universal sense it embraces all questions by which any alleged fact, the truth of which is submitted to examination may be established or disproved." Hubbel v. Linn, States (U S) 15 Ct. of Cl 516, 606.

S 3

Evidence—Meaning of the word in the Act In this Act the word 'evidence' is used to mean words uttered and documents exhibited by witnesses before a Court of Justice (vide Step Intro p 1) The English law divides evidence into personal (oral) and real, which it subdivides into the evidence of documents and things. But as the Act uses the term "evidence" to signify only the instruments by means of which relevant facts are brought before the Court, which are witnesses and documents, a thing such as a struggle etc. in the case of murder [see post section 7, illustration (b)] is not evidence in the sense in which the term is used in the Act but a 'relevant fact' to be proved by evidence, the oral testimony of those who saw it. Norton 1, p 95. So the definition of evidence in this Act is defective. When in a controversy between a tailor and his customer involving the fit of a coat, the customer put on the coat and wears it during the trial, (as in Brown v Foster 113 Misc. at p 137), a basis of inference is supplied otherwise than by reasoning or by statements, whether oral or written and it seems impossible to deny to this the name of "evidence." It is what Bentham called 'real evidence,' a phrase which imports a very valuable discrimination when limited to that which is presented directly to the ears of the tribunal. Flayer Pre Frat p 264. So this definition is open to the criticism that it does not include those facts which in a judicial proceeding may be adduced directly to the sense of the Court or Jury. Burr Jones Li § 3. According to Prof Greenleaf "evidence in legal acceptation includes all the means by which any alleged matter of fact the truth of which is submitted to investigation is established or disproved." Green Li vol I § 1. It "includes all the legal means exclusive of mere argument which tend to prove or disprove every matter of fact the truth of which is submitted to judicial investigation." Taylor vol I, 1, Pouell Et 1.

The word "evidence" as defined in this Act does not include the whole material of the Judge's belief for instance, a Magistrate or Sessions Judge may question the prisoner, and the prisoner's answers to the Magistrate may be used against him but they are not "evidence" under the definition is not being made by a witness. The Nyan v Q L B R (1893—1900), 308. Where however the answers of an accused person are used against him as they may be in another trial, the record of them would be strictly 'evidence' as being a "document produced for inspection of the Court". So also would be the examination of the accused before the committing Magistrate when given in evidence at the Sessions trial. When one of the several accused persons makes a confession implicating himself and some of the co-accused it may be taken into consideration, and all the persons so involved (vide s 30 infra). Such statement will be excluded from the definition of the word "evidence." Cun Li p 81. The term "evidence" in its ordinary sense signifies that which makes apparent the truth of a matter. It is no doubt more frequently applied to proof before a judicial tribunal, but it is not necessarily confined to this sense. It applies with equal correctness to information required by any person, who undertakes an enquiry on any matter in question. Queen v Queen 4 M 393 (395). The demeanour of a witness in evidence vide R v Madhub 21 W R Cr 13 14. "A consideration of the demeanour of the witness upon the trial" says Stallie "and of the manner of giving evidence both in chief and upon cross examination is often times not less material than the testimony itself." Stallie Et 4th Ed 822 823, Best § 21, A. Bertrand L R 1 P 535 see also Hoornesh v Rashmoni, 21 C 279.

So it is clear that the definition of 'evidence' is incomplete. It does not include the statements and admission of parties their conduct and demeanour before the Court, and circumstances coming under the direct cognizance of the Court and having material bearing on the question in issue. It does not include the absence of producible witnesses or evidence as to which vide section 111 (k). Whitely Stokes Code Vol II p 853. Besides facts proved there are certain notorious facts of which, without proof, the Court takes judicial notice (vide s 57 infra) and the facts which the Court either must or may presume. These are also not evidence under the Act (vide Cun Li p 81). In an action for breach of promise to marry the fact that the defendant was silent on a certain occasion has been held to be statutory 'evidence' corroborative of his promise to marry (vide Bessela v Stern 2 C P D 266 (C A)) though it would not under Stephen's definition. Physson 6th Ed p 2.

S 3 imination of those who must be called to have this competency" Per Hume & J the Curtis v. Bradby 65 Conn 49 = 18 Am St Rep 177

Several classification of Evidence By the text writer evidence is classified under the following heads (1) Direct or circumstantial evidence, (2) real or personal (3) original or unoriginal

Direct and circumstantial Evidence Two of the most important divisions are direct evidence and circumstantial evidence and the latter is also styled indirect evidence while the former is called positive evidence. Direct or positive evidence is evidence to the precise point in issue, as in the case of murder, if the witness saw the man shoot the blow which caused the death, or if the prosecution for arson that the witness saw the defendant apply the torch which lighted the fire, or in the case of an agreement that the witness was present and witnessed it. Circumstantial evidence is that which relates to a series of other facts than the fact in issue which by experience have been found so associated with that fact that in relation of cause and effect they tend to a satisfactory conclusion, for example when foot prints are discovered after a recent snow, it is proper to infer that some animated being passed over the snow since it fell, and from the form and number of the foot prints it can be determined whether they are those of a man or a bird or a quadruped. Such evidence, therefore, is founded on experience and observed facts and coincidences establishing a connection between the known and proven facts and the facts sought to be proved. Commonwealth v. Webster, 2 Cush (Mass) 29 = 52 Am Dec 711 (1823), see also sections 6-16 of the Act. Direct evidence is that which proves the fact in dispute directly without any inference of presumption and which of itself tends conclusively to establish the fact. Indirect evidence is that which tends to establish the fact in dispute by proving another and which, though true does not of itself conclusively establish the fact but which affords an inference or presumption of its existence. Indirect evidence is that which immediately points to the question at issue. Indirect or circumstantial evidence is that which only tends to establish the issue on proof of various facts, sustaining by their consistency the hypothesis claimed. Vide Cal Code Civ Pro §§ 1831-1832. So evidence is either direct or indirect according as the principal fact follows from its evidentiary—the factum probandum from the factum probans—immediately or by inference. Vide Best § 27. Various cases of circumstantial evidence is collected under ss 6-16 of the Evidence Act.

Classification defective—It is clear from the definition given above the direct evidence means testimony given by a man as to what he has himself perceived by his senses, whereas circumstantial evidence usually means a fact from which some other fact is inferred. These facts are called relevant facts in the Evidence Act. But a relevant fact or a fact which is called circumstantial requires to be proved by some evidence, oral or documentary. So it is correct to say that circumstantial evidence must be proved by direct evidence—a clumsy mode of expression which is in itself a mode of confusion of thought. Vide Stephen's Introduction pp 89. In direct evidence the facts apply directly to the factum probandum while circumstantial evidence is proof of a minor fact, which by inference logically and rationally demonstrates the factum probandum. Beason v. State 43 Tex Cr 442. But in Hart v. Newland 10 N C 122, a different definition given of circumstantial evidence. Evidence is of two kinds that which it directly proves the fact in issue and that which proves another fact from which the fact in issue may be inferred. But this definition of circumstantial evidence is against the accepted definition of the term. Vide Burrows on Circumstantial Evidence 4, Best on Presumptions 12, Walls on Circumstantial Evidence p 19.

When the existence of any fact is attested by witnesses as having come under the cognizance of their senses, or is stated in documents the genuineness & veracity of which there seems no reason to question, the evidence of the fact is said to be direct or positive. By circumstantial evidence on the contrary, is meant that the existence of the principal fact is only inferred from one or more circumstances which have been established directly. Best on Presumptions p 246. In S v. Goldsborough 1 Hurst C C (Del) 302 Gelpin C J in charging the jury it defines circumstantial evidence "Circumstantial or presumptive evidence where some facts being proved, another fact follows as a natural or very probable conclusion from the facts actually proved, so as readily to gain the assent of the mind from the mere probability of its having actually occurred. It is the inference of a fact from other facts proved, and the fact thus inferred and assented to by the mind is said to be presumed, that is to say, it is taken for granted until the contrary be proved. And this is what is called circumstantial or presumptive evidence.

"Direct and circumstantial evidence" says Burr Jones "are not different in their nature. For as Wharton says, All evidence consists of reason and fact co-operating as co-ordinate factors." Circumstantial evidence is merely direct evidence indirectly applied. And direct evidence, when closely analysed, is found to possess the inferential quality. Direct and circumstantial evidence are not, therefore, in any sense opposed to each other. Burr Jones Et § 6 b

Will's explanation "On a superficial view, direct and indirect or circumstantial, would appear to be distinct species of evidence, whereas, these words denote only the different modes in which those classes of evidentiary facts operate to produce conviction. Circumstantial evidence is of a nature identically the same with direct evidence, the distinction is that by 'direct evidence' is intended evidence which applies directly to the fact which forms the subject of inquiry, the factum probandum, circumstantial evidence is equally direct in its nature but as its name imports, it is direct evidence of a minor fact or facts of such a nature that the mind is led intuitively, or by a conscious process of reasoning, towards or to the conviction that from it or them some other fact may be inferred. A witness deposes that he saw A inflict on B a wound, of which he lastingly died. This is a direct evidence B dies of poisoning, A is proved to have had malice and uttered threats against him, and to have clandestinely purchased poison, wrapped in a particular paper, and of the same kind as that which has caused death the paper is found in his secret drawer, and the poison gone. The evidence of these facts is direct, the facts themselves constitute indirect or circumstantial evidence, as applicable to the enquiry whether a murder has been committed, and whether it was committed by A." Will Cr Et p 20

Direct and circumstantial evidence—Advantages and disadvantages. As regards admissibility, direct and circumstantial evidence stand generally speaking on the same footing. (Best § 294) Direct and presumptive evidence (using the words in their technical sense) says Mr Best "being, as has been shown, distinct modes of proof, have each their peculiar advantages and characteristic dangers. Abstractedly speaking, presumptive evidence is inferior to direct evidence, seeing that it is in truth only a substitute for it, and an indirect mode of proving that which otherwise might not be provable at all." Best § 295, see also R v Buddell, 1 B & A 95 (123). In direct evidence there are but two chances of error—namely those which arise from mistake or mendacity on the part of the witnesses—while in all cases of merely presumptive evidence there is a third—namely, that the inference from the facts proved may be fallacious. Best § 295, see also Norton Et pp 14, 18. The proper effect of circumstantial as compared with direct evidence was more accurately stated by Lord Chief Baron Macdonald in Rex v Patch cited in Will's Cr Et p 16. The learned Judge observed, "When circumstances connect themselves with each other when they form a large and a strong body so as to carry conviction to the minds of a jury, it may be proof of a more satisfactory sort than that which is direct." "So where the proof arises from the irresistible force of a number of circumstances which we cannot conceive to be fraudulently brought together to bear upon one point, that is less fallible than under some circumstances direct evidence may be." Rex v Smith, cited in Will Cr Et 47.

In People v Videto, 1 Park Cr 603 (605) Walcott J thus forcibly set forth the advantages of circumstantial evidence in delivering a charge to the jury. In most cases of conviction upon presumptive proof or circumstantial evidence there are many different witnesses swearing to several distinct circumstances all tending to the same result each of which circumstances is a necessary link in the chain of evidence required to produce a conviction of the accused, and there is therefore the less danger of perjury in such cases in consequence of the number of purposed witnesses which would be necessary for the prosecution to produce to effect

S 3 an unjust conviction. For if one perjured witness should swear to a fact forming only one link in a chain of circumstances, the rest of the witnesses being honest, he will be in danger of detection from the discrepancy between his testimony and theirs, when he might be sworn positively, but falsely, to the commission of the crime by the accused, without the possibility of being contradicted. For this reason although from the imperfection and uncertainty which must ever exist in all human tribunals, I have no doubt that there have been cases in which innocent persons have been convicted on pre-emptive proofs, yet from my knowledge of criminal jurisprudence, both from reading and observation, I have no hesitation in expressing the opinion that when there has been one unjust conviction upon circumstantial evidence alone, there have been three innocent persons condemned upon the positive testimony of perjured witnesses." In Commonwealth v. Harman 4 Pa. 269 Chief Justice Gibson of Pennsylvania observed "Circumstantial evidence is in the abstract, nearly, though perhaps not altogether, as strong as positive evidence in the concrete it may be infinitely stronger. A fact positively sworn to by a single eye witness of blemished character is not satisfactorily proved as is a fact which is the necessary consequence of a chain of other facts sworn to by many witnesses of undoubted credibility."

Circumstantial Evidence—Two kinds of Circumstantial evidence is of two kinds, conclusive and presumptive. "conclusive" when the connection between the principal and evidentiary facts—the factum probandum and factum probans—is a necessary consequence of the laws of nature, as where a party accused of a crime shows that at the moment of its commission he was at another place, etc. presumptive when the inference of the principal fact from the evidentiary is only probable whatever be the degree of persuasion which it may generate. Best Ev. 293

Real or Personal Again evidence is either real or personal. By real evidence is meant evidence of which any object belonging to the class of things is the source, persons being also included in respect of such properties as belong to them in common with things. 1 Benth. Jud. Ev. 53. This is the 'evidentiæ rei vel facti' of the civilians. Personal evidence is that which is afforded by human agent. Best § 28. Again real evidence may be either immediate when the thing comes under the cognizance of our senses, or reported, where its evidence is related to us by others. Ibid

Real Evidence—Meaning of. Real evidence is that which is addressed to the sense of the tribunal as where objects are presented for the inspection of the jury. Prof. Wigmore styles this class of evidence "Autoptic preference," and by that the term 'real evidence' is not happily applied in this connection, because real is an ambiguous term because the process is not the employment of evidence at all in the strict sense and lastly because the inventor of the term Benth. used it originally in a different sense. Id. Wigmore on Ev. §§ 1150—1160. The real evidence is known by the name of 'immediate' evidence. For obvious reason there is no class of evidence so convincing and satisfactory to a Court or a jury as that which is addressed directly to the senses of such Court or jury. Such objects are when it is convenient, brought into the court room for such inspection. If this is not convenient or possible, the Judge or Jury may if it seems practicable and necessary leave the court room and take a view of the object or premises in question. Evidence thus addressed directly to the senses of the tribunal has been described as real or natural evidence. That the Court early paid a high tribute to this class of evidence is shown by the fact that, where the point or issue was evidently the object of sense, the Judges sometimes dispensed with a Jury and decided the question in dispute upon the testimony of their own senses. 3 Black. Com. 11. It is true that evidence for the most part is by oral testimony of witnesses and by documents but when the thing to be proved can be seen by the jury subject always to the control of the presiding Judge concerning its admission, that if the ends of justice can be furthered by its production, it should be produced by them. It is not calling for any unusual exercise of any of their senses. Jur. Jur. § 97. In Lecky Territory 129 Am St Rep 861, Jurman P.J. observed "But this does not make them witnesses in the case. They have simply to test the credibility of the witnesses by the personal experience and observation."

of the jurors. A thousand things in the lives and observations of the jurors may influence them in doing this but a knowledge of these things has never been regarded as making the jurors witnesses in this case. In this case the jurors were permitted to smell the contents of the bottle offered in evidence to enable them to decide as to whether the prosecuting witness had told the truth about its being whisky. By this the jurors did not learn any facts in evidence by the use of one of their senses. Or, in other words, they were permitted to hold an autopsy on part of the evidence already before them to test its true character. Similarly in Gentry v. Mc Ginns, 3 Dm., (Ky) 382 Robertson C. J. said "The counsel denies that personal inspection by the jurors on the trial is proper or allowable evidence. To a rational man of perfect organization the best and highest proof of which any fact is susceptible is the evidence of his own senses. This is the ultimate test of truth and is therefore the first principle in the philosophy of evidence. Hence autopsy, or the evidence of one's own senses, furnishes the strongest probability and indeed the only perfect and indubitable certainty of the existence of any sensible fact. (Jurors) when they decide altogether on the testimony of others, do so only because the fact to be tried is unsuceptible of any better proof. Their own personal knowledge of the fact would always be much more satisfactory to themselves and much more certain of truth and justice. Hence, the policy of having a Jury in the vicinage and hence too jurors have not only been permitted but required to decide on autopsical examination whenever it was practical and convenient."

So the remains of a deceased person may be produced when in a fit condition for the purpose of showing the nature of an injury. So all instruments by which an offence is alleged to have been committed, all clothes of parties concerned, from which inference may be drawn all materials in any way part of the res gestae may be produced at the trial of the case. Injury to the person may also be proved by inspection. Thus, in an action to recover damages for an injury to a limb, the injured limb may be exhibited on trial to be inspected by the Court and jury while the surgeon who was employed to set it testifies to the injury. When the issue is infancy, on an indictment, the Court and Jury may decide by inspection and so when the question arises as to the colour of a person. On an issue of bastardy, the jury may judge of likeness by inspection, and so on an issue of adultery for the purpose of connecting a child with a putative father. Wharton on Criminal Evidence § 312, vide also section 60 infra

Original or unoriginal Evidence All evidence is either original or unoriginal. By original evidence is meant evidence, either ab initio or ab extra unoriginal also called derivative, transmitted, or second hand evidence is that which derives its force from through or under some other. And of this derivative evidence there are five forms, (1) when supposed oral evidence is delivered through oral this is hearsay evidence in the strict and primary sense of the term (2) When supposed written evidence is delivered through written (3) When supposed oral evidence is delivered through written (4) When supposed written evidence is delivered through oral (5) When real evidence is reported either by word of mouth or otherwise. Best § 29

Hearsay Evidence "There is a great head of the law of evidence comprising indeed with its exceptions, much of the largest part of all that truly belongs there, forbidding the introduction of hearsay. The true historical nature of this rule is hinted by the remark of an English Court two centuries ago and over, when they checked the attempt of a woman to testify what another woman had told her. The Court, it was quietly remarked 'are of opinion that it will be proper for Wills to give her own evidence' [Fliz. Canning's Case 19 St Tr 383 (166)] That is to say the objection went to the medium of communication witnesses before the jury in giving ordinary testimony, had by that time been allowed for some three centuries but it must be unoyant et regnant a hearer and seer as they said in the Old Year Books, one who could say as the witnesses to Courts in older times always had to say quod vidi audire it must not be testimony at second hand" Thayer Prel Treat on Li pp 718-519, vide s. 60 infra

S 3

A fact is said to be proved when, after considering the matter before it, the Court either believes it to exist, or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists.

A fact is said to be disproved when, after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes that it does not exist, or considers its non-existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it does not exist.

Not proved A fact is said not to be proved when it is neither proved nor disproved.

"Proved" meaning of Proof's said Lord Moulton in Hawkins v Powell Co Ltd L R (1911) 1 K B 958 at p 995 = 80 L J K B 769 = 104 L T and 'does not mean proof to rigid mathematical demonstration, because that is impossible. It means such evidence as would induce a reasonable man to come to a conclusion. In the same case Lord Wrenbury observed: "All that can be done is to adduce such evidence as that the mind of the tribunal is satisfied that the fact is so. This may be done by direct evidence or by inference from facts but the matter must not be left to rest in simple conjecture or guess." In the ordinary affairs of life men do not require demonstrative evidence because it is not consistent with the nature of the subject and to insist upon it would be unreasonable and absurd. The most that can be affirmed of such things is that there is no reasonable doubt concerning them. The true question therefore in trials of fact, is not, whether it is possible the testimony may be false, but there is a sufficient probability of its truth that is whether the facts are shown by competent and satisfactorily evidence. Things established by competent and satisfactory evidence are said to be proved. Greenleaf Lx § 1.

In the Goods of Gopessan Dutt, 16 C W N 265 at p 270 Jenkins C J thus observed: "Demonstration or a conclusion at all points logical can not be expected nor can a degree of certainty be demanded of which the matter under investigation is not reasonably capable. Accepting the external test which experience commands, the Evidence Act in conformity with the general tendency of the day adopted the requirements of the prudent man as an appropriate concrete standard by which to measure proof. See also Prasanna Moyni v Baiduntha 49 C 132, Ganesh v Lachmi 23 C L J 209. So none but mathematical truth is susceptible of that high degree of evidence, called demonstration which excludes all possibility of error and which, therefore may reasonably be required in support of every mathematical deduction. Matters of fact are proved by moral evidence alone by which is meant, not only that kind of evidence which is employed on subjects connected with moral conduct but all the evidence which is not obtained from intuition, or from demonstration. Greenleaf Lx § 1.

Standard of belief 'There is no standard for the sufficiency of evidence to induce belief and the various degrees of more or less must ordinarily be left to the unprejudiced consideration of the Jury' said Judge Wardlaw of South Carolina in Means v Means 5 Strobb L (S Cal) 167, (169). Belief is rarely the consequence of strictly logical process. It is either partially or entirely the outgrowth of education—bias, affection, fear or some other influencing passion. We believe what we wish to believe and what we are in the mood of accepting as true. The same evidence which to one may be convincing to another may seem absurd. See Lee Chancellor Pitney in Durale v Durale 34 Atl Rep 888 at p 896. So there is no standard by which the weight of conflicting evidence can be ascertained. Per Sutherland J in People v Superior Ct 5 Wind (N Y) 114 (126) In estimating the weight of evidence we cannot mark it as so many ounces, pounds, or tons, and yet we know that it may have all degrees of weight from the lightest feather to the most absolute moral certainty. All we can do is to note all the facts and circumstances carefully and estimate its absolute and relative weight by the lights of conscience and experience. Boylan v Miller 28 N J 11 274 (333) We have no test of truth of human testimony except its conformity to our knowledge, observation and experience. Per Vice-chancellor Van Fleet in Daggers v Van Dyck 37 N J 121 130 (132) and in Jersey City Bank v O'Connell, 40 N J 19 92 (94) The effect, then, which all evidence has upon the mind is determined by observation and experience—the only original instructors of wisdom. Whitaker v Parler, Per Beel J 12 Iowa, 785 (787)

Legal proof, what it is. In Bandra Kumar Ghose v The Emperor 11 C W N 1111 at p 1178, Carduff J observed: "Legal proof" is as it seems to me, neither more nor less than what is indicated by the definition of the word 'proved' which is to be found in section 3 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872: that is to say 'a fact is said to be proved when after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes it to exist or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case to act upon the supposition that it exists.' When the section speaks of the matters before the Court, it means of course, the matters properly before it: whence it follows that, if and when relevant matter has been admitted in evidence, one must be careful—I would here refer to the provisions of section 107 of the Evidence Act—to exclude it from consideration and refuse to be in any degree influenced by it. But, given evidence on the record which is admissible and excluding from consideration any that may have been wrongly admitted I doubt whether it is possible to draw a distinction between 'legal proof and moral conviction'. Section 114 of the Evidence Act enacts a rule of presumption and read with s 4 of the Act it indicates that this is not a hard and fast presumption incapable of rebuttal: a thesumptio juris et de jure. Emperor v Shrinivas, 7 Bom L R 963=3 Cr L J 33

Suspicion, conjecture, etc., probative force of. "Suspicion cannot give probative force to testimony which in itself is insufficient to establish or to justify in inference of a particular fact." Per Andrews C J in People v Van He 143 N Y 372 (373) "The art of suspicion" says Caldwell J in Boyd v Caldwell (C C A) 116 Fed Rep 151 "has no shore and the Court that embarks upon it is without rudder and compass." "One must be very careful not to allow conjecture or suspicion to take the place of legal proof." Per Carduff J in Banda Kumar Ghose v Emperor, 37 C 467=14 C W N 1111 at p 1178. In the same case Jenins C J observed: "Another matter to which I desire to allude is the general character of the evidence. From the nature of the case it is to a large extent circumstantial and in dealing with it, the rules especially applicable must be borne in mind. There is always the danger in a case like the present that conjecture or suspicion may take the place of legal proof, and therefore it is right to recall the warning addressed by Mr Baron Alderson to the jury in Jay v Hodges 2 Lewis C C 227. Where he said the mind was apt to take a pleasure in adapting circumstances to one another, and even in straining them a little if need be to force them to form parts of one connected whole and the more ingenious the mind of the individual, the more likely was it, considering such matters to over reach and mislead itself, to supply some link that is wanting to make for granted some fact consistent with its previous theories and necessary to render them complete. So rules of evidence cannot be departed from because there may be a strong moral conviction of guilt." Queen v Doyoo Choudhuree 25 W R Cr 43

So neither juries nor Courts are permitted to render verdicts or judgments upon guesses or surmises. Jaggie v Allen 24 N Y App Div 594, see also Mahammad v Mander, 17 C W N 49=31 A 511 (P C). "It is not the habit of any Courts of Justice" says Mr Justice Story in The Ship Henry Fabian 1 Summ (U S) 100 "to yield themselves up in matters of right to mere conjecture and possibilities. A mere conjecture built upon a bare possibility will not suffice to transfer the money or property of one man to the possession and the profit of another. Paulley v Steam Gauge & Co, 131 N Y 90, Altar v Thelem 15 C 1049 P C = 12 C W N 1019. A proposition is not proved until the evidence becomes inconsistent with the negative. Smith v Lawrence, 98 Me 9. If a plaintiff has produced sufficient evidence to establish his case he is not to be defeated upon mere surmise or conjecture. Lord Chief Justice Kenyon observed in Boydell v Boon, 108 Me 101, that in an action on the same law it was suggested that the gun with which the defendant fired was discharged with shot but that the bird might have died in consequence of the fall and the jury having given a verdict for the defendant, the Court refused to grant a new trial. Williamson v Payne 11 R 160.

S 3

In Uma Kumari v Bejoy Singh, 11 I A 72 at p 77 = 11 C 662 = 21 C W N 785. Sir Lawrence Jenkins observed that though in cases of alleged benevolence there may be grounds for suspicion, yet the Court's decision must rest not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. See also Abdul Latif v Abdul Husein 25 C W N 62 = 81 Ind C 667, Prasanna Kumar Jany v Kati Mohan Saha 27 C W N 305, Sith Manil Lal v Raja Brij Singh 25 C W N 109 P C = 62 Ind C 356, Sreeman Chander v Gopal Chunder 11 M I A 29 (41) Mohomed Mahbub v Bharat Indu 23 C W 321 (P C) Taman v Gaudharp 11 I A 127 = 15 C 20 Lipin Krishna v L. Datta 26 C W N 36 (41) = 34 C L J 276. So it is clear that Court's decision must rest not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. Luchman v Radha Charan, 31 C L J 107 = 49 C 93 = 68 Ind C 15. Jasoda Lal v Dattaram 35 C L J 589 = 69 Ind C 67.

Mere suspicion of fraud. 'Astute as Courts should be' says Knapp v Murhead v Smith 35 N J Lq 303 (109) 'in the detection of fraud they are justified in finding it on grounds which show no more than its possible existence. When the acts of parties admit of a reasonable interpretation in favour of honesty and fair dealing, they should receive it.' In a suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance tangible facts must be proved, from which a legitimate inference of fraudulent intent can be drawn. It is not enough to create a suspicion of fraud, nor should a jury be permitted to guess at the truth. Per Chubb v J. Jucker v Kelly 52 N Y 271 (276). In Turner v Hand, 3 Wall JP (C C) (112) Mr Justice Gier addressed the jury as follows 'you must remember that the burden of proof is on the party who alleges fraud. That fraud, though proved by circumstances can never be presumed for fraud is a crime. It is not enough to show suspicious circumstances. Suspicion is not proof. It does not require a display of ingenuity to cast suspicion of fraud upon any transaction.' Sreeman Chander v Gopal Chunder, 11 M I A 28 at p 44, Lord Westbury. In matters of this description 'he was dealing with a charge of fraud in connection with a sale in execution of a decree' 'it is essential to take care that the decision of the Court rests not upon suspicion, but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony.' So a Court should not rest its decision merely on suspicion supported by legal testimony. Promode v Kali 27 C W N 305 = 70 Ind C 555 = 36 C L J 396.

Suspicion in Will cases. In Tyrell v Panton (1894) P 151 at p 1 Findley L J said 'The rule in Barry v Butlin 2 Moo P C 480, Fulton v Anderton L R 7 H L 448 and Brown v Fisher 63 L T 46, is not in my opinion confined to the single case in which a Will is prepared by or on the instructions of the person taking large benefit under it, but extends to all cases in which circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the Court that wherever such circumstances exist and whatever their nature may be, it is the duty of the Court who proposed the Will to remove such suspicion and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the document, and it is only when this is done that the onus is thrown on those who oppose the Will to prove fraud or undue influence or whatever else they rely on to displace the case made out by the Will. The suspicion to which allusion is made must, I think, be inherent in the transaction itself and not the doubt that may arise from a conflict of testimony which becomes apparent on an investigation of the transaction. In the goods of Gopessur Dutt, 16 C W N 26. But when a case impugns a Will on the ground that it was obtained by the exercise of undue influence, excessive persuasion or moral coercion, it lies upon him to establish the case. In matters of this description it is essential to take care that the decision of the Court rests not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds, established by legal testimony. Motibai v Jamsethyjee, 20 C W N 15 (P C.) = 80 Ind C 18 777

Matters before it "When the section speaks of the matters before the Court if means of course, the matters properly before it" Bairandra v Emperor 11 C W N 1114 (1178). The expression 'matters before it' in this definition includes matters which do not fall within the definition of 'evidence' is given in section 3. Bhauron Prasad v Lalnu Narayan A I R 1924 Nag 385. Therefore in determining what is evidence other than 'evidence' in the phraseology of section 3 the definition of the word 'evidence' must be read with the definition of the word 'proved'. The result of a local enquiry by a presiding judicial officer does not come under either of the two heads of the definition of the word 'evidence'. But is it a matter before the Court, the Court is entitled to take it into consideration in deciding a case. For this reason it is clear, that the Legislature intentionally refrained from using the word 'evidence' in this definition but used instead the words "matters before it". For instance, a fact may be orally admitted in Court. The admission would not come within the definition of the word 'evidence' as given in this Act but still it is a matter which the Court before whom the admission was made would have to take into consideration in order to determine whether a particular fact was proved or not. Per Miller J in Joy comar v Buidhoo Lal 9 C 363 (366) = 12 C L R 490, Itai Rai v Jhunger 16 C W N 426 R v Asulosh, 4 C 492 Duarlanath v Prosonna, 1 C W N 682

In Itai Rai v Jhunger Teuan, 16 C W N 426 the Court observed "What we desire to point out here is that there are in effect three different kinds of local inspections--(1) Those that are authorised or directed by the Code of Criminal Procedure and which are governed by the rules and limitations imposed by the Code itself (2) Those which are in the nature of the view by the jury laid down in section 293 of the Code. Magistrates having the functions of both Judge and Jury in cases decided by them may in our opinion view the place in any case in order, as the rulings on the point say to follow or understand the evidence. We are fortified in this opinion by the ruling in In re Lalji 19 A. 303. It is as the Judges there say, not only not objectionable, but in many cases highly advisable that a Magistrate trying a criminal case should himself inspect the scene of the occurrence in order to understand fully the bearing of the evidence given in Court. But if he does so he should be careful not to allow any one on either side to say anything to him which might prejudice his mind one way or the other. This is the same rule which is applied in the Code itself to the inspection by the jury. But there is a third class of local inspections under which we think the present and very many other cases fall and that is the class referred to in the ruling in Joy Comar case, 9 C 363 above mentioned. See also d v v Gurs 68 Ind C 38 Hruday v Emperor, 52 C 148. So all these local inspections should be considered by a Court in deciding a case, although they are not evidence as defined by the Act. Rai Kishori v Kumudini, 15 C L J 138. So also commissioner's report is evidence in the case, but Courts should take care to see that it is filed as an exhibit. Ajunt v Dayanidhi, 93 Ind Cas 301 = 51 M L J 67. Ordinarily in a boundary dispute commissioner's report is of great importance. Abdul v Phagendia 90 Ind C 642. In Babbu Sheikh v Emperor 37 C 340 = 14 C W N 422 "there are no doubt pre-judgments in the judgment of the oedroffe I which might seem to imply that the observation of a fact by the Magistrate could not be admitted. But a careful perusal of the judgment as a whole shows that what is meant is that mere observation cannot be allowed to override the necessity of evidence and a case cannot be decided merely on an observation made by the Court locally. If in looking at a place in order to understand the evidence the Magistrate thereby understands that the description of the place given in the evidence is erroneous or false he is certainly not precluded by the laws of evidence from holding that the facts stated by the witnesses who gave that erroneous or false description are not proved and in so holding he does not make himself a witness but acts as a Judge deciding on matters before him. We have shown that the judicial system in the country of which the Evidence Act is a part is an important factor gives the Court power to inquire into the existence of facts on matters before it - as well or according as they are deposed to in the evidence. To do otherwise would be in direct conflict with Jay Kumar's case, 9 C 363, which is further as we know has never been dissented from. Atan Rai v. Jhugur Tewari, 16 C W N 126 (129) 39 C 176. But a Judge without giving evidence in a case is a witness. I can import into a case his own knowledge of particular facts. Hariprasad v. Sreeniwas, 26 W R 11 P C - 31 A 286, see also Mithan Lal v. Bishere Lal in H M I A 213 = 7 W R P C 27.

S 3

A local inspection by a Magistrate must be held sparingly and only for the purpose of elucidating, and not substituting, the evidence in the case and should never be substituted for evidence in the case. Ramtanu v. Tara, 17 Ind C 19. Syed Ahmad v. Muzaffar Syed, 25 M L J 798 = 29 Ind C 101. The party against whom the result of the local inspection is used is generally prejudiced and is put to an irreparable disadvantage in not being able to remove the wrong impression from the mind of the Magistrate by cross-examination. The danger is intensified if the Magistrate holds the local inquiry ex parte. Ram Sahai v. Durga Singh, 71 Ind C 172 = 1 P L J 369. So where a Magistrate makes use of knowledge derived from a local inspection without affording the accused an opportunity to cross-examine or to explain the point against him he acts with material irregularity sufficiently to vitiate the trial. Mohan v. Emperor, 61 Ind C 179 = 2 Pat L J 145. If it is not only not objectionable but in many cases highly advisable that a Magistrate trying a criminal case should himself inspect the scene of occurrence in order to understand fully the bearing of the evidence given in Court. But if he does so, he should be careful not to allow any one on either side to say anything to him which might prejudice his mind one way or another. Laguay v. Emperor, 61 Ind C 174.

Under order XVIII rule 18, Civil Procedure Code read with order XXVI rule 9 Civil Procedure Code a Judge in a civil case makes a local inspection in person at his discretion. The decisions in Rai Kishori Ghosh v. Kumudini Kanta Ghosh, 14 Ind C 377 = 15 C L J 138. Man Lal v. Gopal Sahu, 35 Ind C 311 and Dutaka Prosad v. Mulhu Lal, 52 Ind C 241 are cases the decisions of which are based on the omission from order XXVI, rule 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure of the words that occurred in section 392 of the old Code, which provided for the issue of a commission for a local investigation only in cases where it could not be conveniently conducted by the Judge in person. Safapathy v. Perumal, 61 Ind C 179 = 44 M 610. As the rule now stands a Judge may issue a commission in any case when he deems it fit to do so irrespective of his own convenience. But sometimes the question arises whether the report of a proceeding ex parte should be considered by a Court is matter before it. But the report of a proceeding ex parte is not admissible in evidence unless he be examined as a witness with regard to it. Fateh Muhammad v. Halim Khan, 96 Ind C 825 = A. I R 1926 Lah 611. So the Court can take into consideration the following things which do not fall within the definition of the word evidence in deciding a case: (1) any material object brought before it (rule 560 of the Evidence Act and section 215 of the Criminal Procedure Code) (2) The demeanour of witness (rule 106 of the Evidence Act) (3) Ch 705, Bombay Cotton v. Nots Lal, 2 J A 110 (11) certain notorious facts of which the Court can take judicial notice under rule 58 (4) admissions made by the parties or their pleaders (5) confessions of the accused (6) statement of the accused and (7) local investigation report both in Civil and Criminal Codes either by a Court or by commissioner appointed by a Court. Vale Simulasa v. Owen, 1 M 393 (39).

Proof in Civil and Criminal Cases "Demonstration or a conclusion at all points logical cannot be expected nor can a degree of certainty be demanded of which the truth under investigation is not reasonably capable. Accepting the external test which experience commands the Evidence Act in conformity with the general tendency of the day adopted the requirements of a proof at once as an appropriate contents stipulated by which to measure proof. The Evidence Act is at the same time expressed in terms which allow full effect to be given to circumstances or conditions of probability or improbability, so that where, as in this case, forgery comes in question in a civil suit, the presumption against misconduct is not without its due weight as a circumstance of improbability though the standard of proof to the exclusion of all reasonable doubt required in criminal cases may not be applicable [cf per Hulls J in Cooper v Stale, 6 H L C 746, Doe d Devine v Wilson, 10 Moo P C 502 (531)]. Per Jenkinson-C J in In the goods of Gopessur Dutt, 39 C 245=16 C W N 265 (370) "In my opinion" says Woodroffe J in Donald Watson v Peary Mohan 18 C W N 185 at p 214, "there is but one rule of evidence which in India applies to both civil and criminal trials and that is contained in the definition of the terms 'proved' and 'disproved' in section 3 of the Evidence Act. This Act, to use the language of the Chief Justice in the case cited, 'in conformity with the general tendency of the day adopted the requirements of the prudent man as an appropriate concrete standard by which to measure proof. The test in each case is, would a prudent man after considering the matters before it (which vary with each case) deem the fact in issue to be proved or disproved? In a matter of this kind the conscience of the Court can never be bound by any rule, but that which coming from itself dictates a conscientious and prudent exercise of its judgment. And speaking for myself where, whatever be the form of proceeding, charges of a fraudulent or criminal character are made against a party thereto, it is right to insist that such charges be proved clearly and beyond reasonable doubt though the nature and extent of such proof must necessarily vary according to the circumstances of each case. There is a presumption against crime and misconduct, and the more heinous and improbable a crime is the greater of necessity is the force of the evidence required to overcome such presumption. I cannot myself imagine a Court saying to a party, who is in this case may be a person holding high and responsible position with a previous unblemished record, 'It is true that I have reasonable doubts whether you did the grossly criminal acts with which you are charged, but I find that you did so all the same.' And this exclusion of reasonable doubt is all that the so-called 'criminal proof requires.'" See also Stairie v 817, Best v 76, Taylor v 112, R v White, 4 Fort & Fin 383 R v Madhub 21 W R Cr 13, R v Behare 3 W R 23 25, R v Gorool, 25 W R Cr 36 Trial of Lord Cornwallis 77 St Trials 149, Trial of R T Crossfield, 26 St Tr 218. The phrase "proof beyond a reasonable doubt" by no means import a proof which call for a mathematical reduction in the shape of the demonstration of guilt but is often far removed from it Burr Jones § 5. A reasonable doubt is not to be a mere quibble in idle doubt created by questioning for the sake of a doubt, nor suggested without some foundation in the evidence. It is such a doubt only as in a fair, reasonable effort to reach a conclusion upon evidence, using the mind in the same manner as in other matters of importance prevents the jury from coming to a conclusion in which their minds rest satisfied. Commonwealth v Costley 118 Mass 1, (16)

Perhaps the best definition of reasonable doubt ever promulgated was uttered by Chief Justice Shaw in Commonwealth v Webster, 5 Cush 295=52 Am Dec 711 (730). He observed in that case "Then, what is reasonable doubt? It is a term used probably pretty well understood but not easily defined. It is not mere possible doubt because everything relating to human affairs, and depending on moral evidence, is open to some possible or imaginary doubt. It is that state of the case, which after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the mind of jurors in that condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty, of the truth of the charge. The burden of proof is upon the prosecutor. All the presumptions of law independent of evidence, are in favour of innocence, and every person is presumed to be innocent until he is proved guilty. If upon such proof there is reasonable doubt remaining, the accused is entitled to the benefit of it by acquittal. For it is not sufficient to establish a probability though a strong one arising from the doctrine of chances that the fact charged is more likely to be true than the contrary, but the evidence must establish the truth of the fact to a reasonable and moral certainty, a certainty that convinces and directs the understanding and settles the reason and judgment of those who are found to act conscientiously upon it. This we take to be proof beyond reasonable doubt, because if the law, which mostly depends

S 3 upon considerations of a moral nature, should go further than this, and require absolute certainty, it would exclude circumstantial evidence altogether. People v Strong, 30 Cal (Am) 151, 155, Currey C J says that it is "probably the most satisfactory definition ever given to the words 'reasonable doubt' in any case known to criminal jurisprudence."

Similarly in Com v Costley, 118 Mass 1 Gray C J said "Proof beyond reasonable doubt is not beyond all possible or imaginary doubt, but such proof preclude every reasonable hypothesis, except that which it tends to support. It is proof to a moral certainty, as distinguished from an absolute certainty. As applied to a judicial trial for crime, the two phrases are synonymous and equivalent, and has been used by eminent judges to explain the other, and each signifies such proof as satisfies the judgment and conscience of the jury, as reasonable men and applying their reason to the evidence before them that the crime charged has been committed by the defendant, and so satisfies them as to leave no other reasonable conclusion possible."

The general rule would seem to be that each case must be considered on its merits and that the Court must decide after most careful consideration of the effects of a confession coupled with other evidence on the record whether the degree of proof referred to in s 3 of the Evidence Act has been reached or not. King Emperor v Nga Po Tha, U B R (1913) 2nd Cr 170=28 Ind Cr 166=1 Cr L J 566. The rule of evidence contained in s 133, Evidence Act and in section 114 (b) amounts to nothing more than a direction to all Judges and Magistrates that a fact cannot reasonably be held proved within the meaning of s 3 if there be no other evidence of it than the statement of an unreliable witness. Crown v Ramchandra, 6 S L R 195=14 Cr L J 262=19 Ind Cas 534.

Stricter degree of proof in criminal cases. Section 3, lays down what degree of certainty is sufficient to hold that a fact is proved. Whid v Crow 32 P R 1873 Cr Under s 3 a fact is said to be proved, when, after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes it to exist or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought under the circumstances of a particular case to act upon the supposition that it exists. A stricter degree of proof required in criminal proceedings, the persuasion of guilt must amount to such a moral certainty as convinces the mind of the tribunal as reasonable men, beyond all reasonable doubt. It is the business of the prosecution to bring guilt home to the accused to the satisfaction of the minds of the jury, but the doubt to the benefit of which the accused is entitled must be such as rational, thinking men may fairly and reasonably entertain not the doubt of a vacillating man, but that has not the moral courage to decide but shelter itself in a vain and scepticism. There must be doubts, which men may honestly and conscientiously entertain. In Lol v King Emperor, 3 L B R 216=1 Cr L J 382. There is a strong and marked difference as to the effect of evidence in civil and criminal cases. In the former a mere preponderance of probability, due regard being to the burden of proof is a sufficient basis of decision. But in the latter, especially when the offence charged amounts to treason or felony, a much higher degree of assurance is required. The serious consequences of an erroneous condemnation both to the accused and society the immeasurably greater evils which flow from them from an erroneous acquittal have induced the laws of every wise and civilised nation to lay down the principle though often lost sight of in practice, that the persuasion of guilt ought to amount to a moral certainty, or is an amount which reasonable men beyond all reasonable doubt? Per Parke B in R v Sturt 11 Q B 281. See also Surry Sum Ass 1513 Best § 95. The expression "moral certainty" is used in contradistinction to physical certainty or certainty properly so called for the physical possibility of the innocence of any accused person can never be excluded. Ind Moral certainty is in the law of criminal evidence that degree of assurance which induces a man of sound mind to act upon without doubt upon the conclusion to which it leads. Black's Law Dict. It is also defined as a high degree of impression of the truth and fact falling short of an absolute certainty sufficient to justify a verdict of guilty even in a capital case. Burrill Cr F § 1. "In ordinary civil cases a Judge of fact must find for the party in whose favour there is preponderance of proof, although evidence be not entirely free from doubt In criminal cases no weight of preponderance of evidence is sufficient short of that which excludes all reasonable doubt" Per Burch J in Queen v Madhub Gur 21 W R Cr 13 at p 20 Convictions must be based on substantial and sufficient evidence not merely moral convictions Queen v Sorob Roy 5 W R Cr 28 When prisoners confess in the most circumstantial manner to having committed a murder the finding of the body is not absolutely essential to conviction Queen v Petta, 4 W R Cr 19 see also Queen v Poorusoolah, 7 W R Cr 14 A Judge was held to have exercised a proper discretion in not passing sentence of death in a case in which the dead body was not found Queen v Badduruddeen, 11 W R Cr 20, Abbu Sikdar v Empress, 11 C 642

The difference between the trial of a civil and a criminal case is that, in the former, it is the duty of the parties to place their case before the Court as they think best, whereas in the latter it is the duty of the Court to bring all relevant evidence on the record and to see that justice is done Emperor v Janki, 45 A 283=60 Ind Crs 322

If the Judge of the Appellate Court had any doubt that the conviction was a right one and had any doubt as to whether the offence charged had been committed, whatever the original Court did he should discharge the accused Milan Khan v Saqar Bepari 23 C 347, Protapchandra v Empress, 13 C L R 25 But in civil appeal an Appellate Court should not set aside the order of the original Court unless he is satisfied that the order is wrong Ibid, see also Protap v Rex, 11 C L R 25, Lahce v Gurdar, 43 C 838, Shumnu garoya v Manikka, 32 M 400, Imlad v Pateshri, 34 A 321 The Pathans of the Peshwar district being always disposed to exaggerate and add two charges against the guilty and totally false one against the innocent, Peshwar murder cases invariably introduced into the evidence an element of doubt of a very intangible character But an acquittal cannot be based on this kind of doubt Section 3 of the Evidence Act, lays down what degree of certainty is sufficient to hold that a fact is proved Abdul Karim v Crown, 32 P R 1873 Cr

The terms 'evidence' and proof These terms are often used in such a manner as to include at one time the media by which the facts are established, and at other the effect or conclusions produced by the testimony It is true the attempt has frequently been made, but without great success to distinguish between the terms "evidence" and "proof" The latter term in its popular meaning more often refers to the degree or kind of evidence which will produce full conviction, or establish the proposition to the satisfaction of the tribunal More accurately, proof is the effect or result of evidence, while evidence is the medium of proof Burr Jones § 4 "Whenever all the evidence is of such a character as to convince the intellect and conscience of men of a fact, then that fact is proved Proof is that degree and quantity of evidence that produces conviction" Neiling v Commonwealth, 98 Pa. 322, 328 Proof is that quantity of appropriate evidence which produces assurance and certainty Evidence therefore differs from proof as cause from effect' Wills Cir Li 2, 3, Greenl Et § 1

4 Whenever it is provided by this Act that the Court may presume, may presume a fact, it may either regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved, or may call for proof of it

Whenever it is directed by this Act that the Court shall presume a fact, it shall regard such fact as proved unless and until it is disproved

When one fact is declared by this Act to be conclusive proof of another, the Court shall, on proof of the one fact, regard the other as proved, and shall not allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving it

S 4

Presumption, meaning of The word "presumption" in its legal significance is used in English Law to describe either an inference or a rule of law. Where the word is used synonymously with "inference" it deserves no special consideration except to guard against any misconception which may arise from the use of the word in so many other senses. Where the word does not mean an inference it is used to describe some "rule of law." This is the shortest way of saying that it may mean a great many different things, for the rules of law are many and various. As a matter of fact, it sometimes designates a rule of substantive law and sometimes a rule of procedure, or other branch of adjective law. McKelleys Evidence p 79. So in English Law, following the Civil Law, presumptions are divided into three kinds: (1) presumptions of fact (presumptiones facti vel naturae); (2) rebuttable presumptions of law (presumptiones juris), and (3) conclusive presumptions of law (presumptiones juris et de jure). There is another class recognized in English text books, viz mixed presumptions, or presumptions of mixed law and fact. Not Ex 97. The effect of this section is to do away with the distinction known to the English Law between presumptions of fact and presumptions of law, all the presumptions are made to fall under one or other of the three classes mentioned in the present section. Cum Ex 84.

Origin of Rules These rules, it is likely, all had their beginnings in logical inference however independent of it they may have become in their final shape. Now, the basis of inference is experience. The Judge and the jury go into Court with the experience of ordinary human beings, and, in the process of drawing inferences, constantly call upon such experience. Compelled with the facts introduced as evidence at the trial, it forms the basis of the inferences necessary to arrive at a determination of the facts in issue. It happens that, in the almost innumerable cases that are tried certain facts or groups of facts have been repeatedly presented to Courts as foundations for inferences, and the inferences being reasonable ones, judged by the experience of the Court and jury have been repeatedly drawn until a rule has crystallized. It is not difficult to see why these rules developed so early, and were so readily adopted by the Courts. Judges have always been suspicious of juries and have seized every opportunity to establish rule for their guidance and to control their conclusions from the evidence introduced. The mind of the Judge was supposedly influenced if not logical while the untrained minds of the jury were open to the influence of prejudice, sympathy and a thousand other things. Logical inference was therefore made the basis of a vast number of such rules which the Judge established and which they called presumptions,—rules relating to the manner of proving cases and in this sense having to do with the law of evidence, for example, when sufficient evidence was introduced or when a party introduced further evidence if he would win his case. McKelleys Ex 80. As the effect of a presumption Prof Thayer v/s "They have the same effect (if no other) which they have in all the other reasons of legal reasoning." Their effect results necessarily from their characteristic quality—the quality viz which imports to certain fact or groups of fact, a prima facie significance or operation in the conduct, then, of an argument, or of evidence they throw upon him against whom they operate the duty of meeting this imputation. Should nothing further adduced they settle the question involved in them in a certain way. He therefore who would not have it settled so, must show cause." Thayer Cas F 11 p 11.

Presumption of facts Presumption of facts according to English Jurisprudence consists of those inferences which have never hardened into rules of law, as to which therefore the Judge is not entitled to direct the jury that they be bound as a matter of law to draw them in other words they are common inclusions of fact which the jury may draw or not as in their judgment circumstances of the case may appear to warrant. Hills F 2nd Ed 43. A presumption of fact is nothing more than an argument more or less cogent that inference or not as they think fit they are not bound as a matter of law to draw it. It is the duty of the Judge when there is no evidence from which a reasonable man would honestly draw the inference, to withdraw that quesfrom the jury, but if there is any evidence upon the matter, he must leave it to the decision of the jury. If they do draw the inference their verdict will not be disturbed, but equally it will not be disturbed if they decline to draw it. Pouell Et 386. So there are no special rules which govern the subject of logical inferences, and presumptions which are merely inferences relate to all classes of things and cases. Melchey's Et § 37. The cases which are so often cited as illustrating the proposition that there is a presumption against the party who suppresses or destroys evidence or fails to call a witness within his control are all cases where what is talked of is inference. Carpenter v Penn. Ry Co., 13 App Div 328=43 N Y Supp 203. 'The first clause' says Mr Norton "appears to point at presumptions of fact, or natural presumptions, or as the civilians termed them hominis tantum" Nort 1, 96. Inferences or presumptions are always necessarily drawn whenever the testimony is circumstantial, but presumptions, specially so-called, are based upon that wide experience of a connection existing between the facta probantia and the factum probandum, which warrants a presumption from the one to the other, wherever the two are brought into contiguity. Presumptions are drawn from the course of nature, for instance, that night will follow day, the seasons follow each other in their ensue from a mortal wound and the like, or from the course of human affairs from a familiarity with the ordinary springs of human action, from the usage of society, domestic relationship and transactions in business. (vide section 111 illustrations and notes) Nort Ex 97. Such inferences are formed not by virtue of law but by spontaneous operation of the reasoning faculty, all that the law does for them is to recognize the propriety of their being so drawn if the Judge think fit. The Court may presume them, i.e. may either draw the inference which the fact suggests at once, and call on the opposite party to disprove it, or may refuse to draw the inference and call for proof independently of the facts by which the inference was suggested. Thus, in the case of a man found in possession of stolen goods shortly after the theft and unable to account for his possession, the Court may either presume the guilt of the accused and throw upon him the onus of proving his innocence or it may refuse to presume his guilt and may throw upon the prosecution the burden of proving it. Besides these natural presumptions there are several instances of presumptions as to documents dealt with in sections 86-88, and 90, in which the Court, in like manner, empowered to throw the burden of proof on which party it pleases to presume a fact or to call for proof of it, as it thinks best. Cun Et 85. "A presumption of any fact" says Abbott C J in R v Burdett 4 B & Ad 161 "is properly an inferring of that fact from other facts that are known, it is an act of reasoning."

Presumptions of law Presumptions of law are of two kinds. First conclusive or imperative presumptions that is, legal rules not to be overcome by any evidence that the fact is otherwise. Thus by the Statute of Limitation a simple contract debt, not kept up in certain specified manners is extinguished after a lapse of certain number of years, nor can it be recovered by proving that the sum due has never been paid. Again, a sane man is presumed to contemplate the probable consequences of his own acts, and this presumption is conclusive, nor may he rebut it by showing that in fact he did not foresee them. "It is in universal principle" said Lord Ellenborough "that when a man is charged with doing an act of which the probable consequence may be highly injurious, the intention is an inference of law resulting from the doing the act" Hex v Dixon 3 M & S 15. So that by this rule a man is made responsible for the consequences of his acts, whether his conduct is marked by heedless negligence or obstinate rashness. Of the same nature are all rules respecting the limitation of actions and title by prescription, which Mr Sturte calls artificial presumptions. Sturte Et Vol 3, 1235. In some cases of conclusive legal presumption a party is said to be estopped and to have created an estoppel against himself. An estoppel is when a man has done some act which affords a conclusive presumption against himself in respect of the matter at issue. Formerly in England, all children born in lawful wedlock, if the husband was not impotent, or beyond the four seas during a period exceeding that of gestation were legitimate, nor could evidence to the contrary be received in a court of law. Co Litt 244 C. The presumption

S 4 of law was then imperative whatever might have been the real facts of paternity and however clearly they might be proved, still the husband was considered the father of his wife's children. Since that time however the rule has been changed in England, and probable evidence that the husband was not the father of the child, is admissible. Banbury Peerage Case, Girlington Peerage by Le Marchant, 42. The presumption therefore in this case now belongs to the second or more comprehensive kind, which is termed disputable or rebuttable presumptions of law—Presumptions of Law and Presumptive Evidence, 6 Law Magazine, 41. 'Conclusive proof' in this section is equivalent to irrebuttable presumption, or the presumptiones juris et de jure of the civilians. Their number is comparatively few, sound reason seems to favour an inclination to reduce their number till further, and to allow as many legal presumptions as possible to stand only donce probetur in contrarium (until the contrary be proved) the effect of a presumption is to shift the burthen of proof, and to throw the onus probandi on him who has to displace a presumption when once it has arisen. Nort Li 91. A well known instance of an irrebuttable presumption of law can be found in section 92 of the Indian Penal Code where it is laid down that nothing is an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

Rebuttable presumption of law The second or the more comprehensive kind of presumption of law is known by the term "rebuttable presumption of law" or the Presumptiones juris tantum of the civilians. This kind of presumption arises when presumptions of law are certain assumptions or legal rules defining the amount of evidence requisite to support a particular allegation, which fact being proved may be either explained away or rebutted by evidence to the contrary but are conclusive in the absence of such evidence. The distinction between the two kind of legal presumptions is thus clearly stated by Lord Mansfield in Darwin v Upton, 2 Stroud 175 b note "The enjoyment of rights with the defendant's acquiescence for twenty years, is such a presumption of a right by grant or otherwise, that unless contradicted or explained the jury ought to believe it but it is impossible that length of time can be said to be an absolute bar, like a Statute of limitation, it is certainly a presumptive bar which ought to go to a jury." Legal presumptions of this kind (which may be termed disputable or rebuttable presumptions) are defined by the quantity of evidence or the state of facts sufficient to make out a prima facie case in other words of the circumstances under which the burden of proof lies on the opposite party. Of this very extensive class of presumptions a few examples will suffice. Thus, a man is presumed innocent until he is proved guilty that is if a man is charged with a crime, he is not bound to prove that he did not but his accuser is bound to prove that he did commit it. So also if a child is born in wedlock, one who questions his legitimacy must disprove it if a child is born during a divorce at mensa et thoro one who maintains his legitimacy must prove it. Again the presumption of law is that a man is alive unless anything has been heard of him for seven years when the presumption is that he is dead that is to say, if it is averred that a man is dead the party must prove his assertion but if nothing has been heard of him for seven years the opposite party must prove that he is alive. Waste lands which belong to a lord is presumed to belong to the owner of the adjoining land and whose title is therefore valid unless some one can show a paramount claim. The circumstances which will raise such a legal presumption or in other words will impose on the other party the necessity of proving that the fact is not so sometimes differ with regard to the same fact in different cases that is evidence which in one case is sufficient to establish a certain fact in another is not sufficient. Thus in settlement cases proof of a long cohabitation of two persons who passed as man and wife is sufficient to raise a presumption of marriage or to compel the other party to prove that there was no marriage. But in trial for felony and actions for criminal conversation proof in a civil marriage is requisite. Presumptions of Law and Presumptive Evidence, 6 Law Magazine 41.

Mixed presumptions Mixed presumptions of law and fact are called mixed presumptions. These are of two kinds. The Indian provisions are nearly all of this kind. The law of real property. The Indian provisions are nearly all of this kind.

give them much study, nor is it necessary to pursue the subject further here. The Code provides only that a few of the ordinary presumptions recognised by law may or shall be drawn' Nort Et 97

May presume This is a presumption of fact of the English jurists. Presumption of fact has a totally different meaning from presumption of law, and refers not to propositions, but to arguments—not to assuming, but inferring. When evidence is offered which can only be brought to bear on the matter at issue by a process of reasoning, the inference is termed a presumption of fact. In Rex v. Burdett 4 B & A 161, Lord Tenterden said "A presumption of any fact is properly an inferring of that fact from other facts that are known, it is an act of reasoning, and much human knowledge on all subjects is derived from this source. A fact must not be inferred without premises to warrant the inference, but if no fact could thus be ascertained by inference in a Court of law, very few offenders could be brought to punishment." The statement on which this inference is founded is termed presumptive evidence. Our experience of the world, for instance, leads us to infer that a man who is in possession of stolen goods shortly after the theft and can give no account of them, is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen. Our knowledge of human nature leads us to infer that a man, who does answer a question, could not but answer it in a manner favourable to himself. Such inferences are formed, not by virtue of any law, but by the spontaneous operation of the reasoning faculty. All that the law does for them is to recognize the propriety of their being so drawn. If the Judge think fit. The Court may presume them, i.e. may either draw the inference, which the facts suggest, at once, and call on the opposite party to disprove it, or may refuse to draw the inference and for proof of it, independently of the facts by which the inference was suggested. Besides these natural presumptions there are several instances of presumptions as to documents dealt with in sections 86-88, and 90, in which the Court is in like manner, empowered to throw the burden of proof on which party it pleases, to presume a fact or to call for proof of it, as it thinks best. Cun Et 85, see also Shafiquinissa v. Shabhan Ali 26A 581 (586)=31 I A 21=7 O C 290=6 Bom L R 750. A Court, where it "may presume" a fact has the discretion to presume it as proved or to call for confirmatory evidence of it, as the circumstances require. Raghu Nath v. Holi Lal 1 A L J 121 (123). The presumption mentioned in this clause is not a hard and fast presumption incapable of rebuttal a presumptio juris et de jure. Imperator v. Srinivas, 7 Bom L R 969 (974)=3 Cr L J 32. The word 'may presume' in s 90 ought generally to be construed in more rigorous of the sense allowed by section 4. Meher v. Nur Muhammad, 110 P L R 1902 see also Safiquinissa v. Shabhan Ali, 7 O C 290, Ramien v. Verappa, 11 M L T 69.

Shall presume In cases in which a Court shall presume a fact the presumption is not conclusive, but rebuttable. A W N (1906) 316 (317). Of course there is no option left to the Court but it is bound to take fact as proved until evidence is given to disprove it, and the party interested in disproving it must produce such evidence if he can. Presumption of this sort arises chiefly as follows: (1) Where from the nature of the case the truth of the thing presumed is in a high degree probable as, for instance, the genuineness of a document purporting to be the Gazette of India, or of a duly signed record of evidence, or (2) when it is as, for instance, that a document, called for and not produced was duly stamped, attested and executed (section 89) or that circumstances bringing an offence within the exceptions to the Indian Penal Code do not exist. Section 107 sections 79-85 make mention of such presumptions. Cun Et 85. The definition of the word "shall presume" given in the section cannot be extended to other Statutes except by express legislation to that effect. Per Knox J in Durga Prasad v. Haari Singh 33 A. 799 (803) P B. In the Indian Evidence Act the word "shall presume" indicates that the presumption mentioned therein is a rebuttable presumption. Ibid, see also Wares Ali v. Pursotam Narain 12 A 127 (1 B). Presumptions of law are rules of law whether disputable or the contrary. If the disputable presumption is not contradicted or removed by evidence it is a rule of law to be applied inflexibly as a presumption that is not disputable. In other words, a presumption of law that is disputable, when not changed by S 4. evidence, becomes to the Court a rule indisputable for the case and the Court is bound to apply it. Per Thornton J in Huddell v Stevens, 60 CIL 114 (4m) at m 41. Under section 90 of the Evidence Act read with section 4 of the same, the Court has a discretion to call for proof of a document although it be more than 30 years old and purports to come from proper custody. Safiqunnissa v Shabban 47 O C 290, see Ramien v Perappa 11 M L T 69 = (1912), 1 M W N 11. The words 'shall per-sume' in section 201 of the Agency Act have no higher force than similar words contained in the Evidence Act. Dillwan v Udai Lal 29 A 148.

Conclusive proof The third class is of those cases in which one fact is conclusive proof of another. An artificial probative effect is given by the law to certain facts and no evidence is allowed to be produced with a view to the combating of that effect. These cases generally occur where it is against the policy of Government or the interest of society, that a matter should be further open to dispute. Thus judgments of certain Courts are conclusive proof of the matters stated therein (section 41) and a notification in the Gazette of India of a cession of British Territory is conclusive proof of a valid cession having taken place (section 113). So also formerly all children born in wedlock, if the husband was not impotent, or beyond the four years during a period exceeding that of gestation were legitimate nor could evidence to the contrary be received in a Court of law. Co Litt, 244 A. see also section 112 of the Evidence Act. But that presumption strictly speaking is no longer considered as conclusive presumption in England. "I apprehend" said Lord Redesdale in the Bunbury Peerage Case Gardner Peerage by Le Merchant 432 "the law takes that the birth of a child during wedlock raises a presumption (of law) that such child is legitimate, that this presumption may be rebutted both by direct and presumptive evidence, that under the first head may be classed impotency and a necessity that is impossibility of access, and under the second all those circumstances which can have the effect of raising a presumption that the child is not the issue of the husband. As regards conclusive proof, vide Manul Chand v Corporation of Calcutta, 66 Ind Cis 600 = 48 C 496. The definition of "conclusive proof" given in this section though refers only to the Evidence Act, yet it may properly be applied to the expression 'conclusive proof' in the Oath Act (X of 187) Vithu Gobinda v Ramji, 1 M L T 63 = 8 Bom L L 19 (22).

Presumptions as rules of law—Process of Development Rules of law of this sort were undoubtedly developments. They were not always rules. The first stage was that of a mere inference permissible to Judge or jury, the second a mere disposition on the part of the Judge to advise the jury as to the desirability of such an inference, the third an instruction that such an inference ought to be drawn, and the fourth a rule that the inference was a necessary one which the jury were bound to draw. Take the case of the seven years' absence rule. The fact that a person is not heard from for a space of seven years by those who would be likely to hear from him if alive, is a fact from which the inference may be reasonably drawn that he is dead. An absence of six years under the same circumstances would not be quite so strong but an absence of eight years would be stronger. The space of seven years however became fixed in the law as the limit period from which death might be inferred. Having once fixed the period from which the inference was permissible the Judges were not long in instructing the jury that the inference ought to be drawn and finally taking it out of the jury's hand entirely and establishing the rule that it must be drawn. Such a rule has no connection with the logical inference; it matters not whether such inference exists. The rule has become one of equivalent, i.e. that seven years' absence under the circumstances mentioned is equivalent to death. In such a case it is only a rule of prima facie proof; it prevails until such evidence may be introduced to show that the inference which the rule requires is not in accordance with the facts. It fixes the prima facie proof but is not a table laid and hence directly affects the burden of proof. M Kellogg Fr & Co. The conclusive presumption was the result of further development of the same rule of equivalent. In the process of development the law has now at one step further and said that fact no 1 be equivalent to fact No 2, at all events, and no evidence would be permitted to show that it was not Ibid p 81 S 4

Relation of Presumption to the Law of Evidence 'What is the relation of presumptions to what we call the law of evidence. They are ordinarily regarded as belonging peculiarly to that part of law. This appears to be an error; they belong rather to a much larger topic, already briefly considered that of legal reasoning in its application to particular subjects. Presumptions are aids to reasoning and argumentation, which assume the truth of certain matters for the purpose of some given enquiry. They may be grounded on the general experience or probability of any kind, or nearly on policy and convenience. On whatever basis they rest they operate in a place of argument or evidence or irrespective of it by taking something for granted, by assuming its existence. When the law is legitimately implied it designates a rule or a proposition which still leaves open to further enquiry the matter thus assumed. The exact scope and operation of these prima facie assumptions are to exist upon the party against whom they operate, the duty of going forward in argument or evidence on the particular point to which they relate. They are thus closely related to the subject of judicial notice, for they furnish the basis of many of those spontaneous recognitions of particular facts or conditions which make up that doctrine. Presumptions are not in themselves either argument or evidence, although for the time being they accomplish the result of both.

Presumption assumption, taking for granted are simply so in many names for in fact or process which aids or shortens inquiry and argument. These terms relate to the whole field of argument whenever and by whomsoever conducted, and also to the whole field of the law in so far as it has been shaped or is being shaped by the process of reasoning. That is to say, the subject now in hand is one of universal application in the law, both as regards the subjects to which it relates and the persons who apply it. Thayer Piel Lect 7c pp 314, 315 "A presumption, as already noticed, is in its characteristic feature a rule of law laid down by the Judge and attaching to one evidentiary fact certain procedural consequences as to the duty of production of other evidence by the opponent. It is based in policy, upon the probative strength, as a matter of reasoning and inference, of the evidentiary fact, but the presumption is not the fact itself nor the inference itself, but the legal consequence attached to it. But, the legal consequence being removed the inference as a matter of reasoning may still remain, and a 'presumption of fact' in the loose sense, is merely an improper term for the rational potency, or probative value, of the evidentiary fact regarded as not having this necessary legal consequences.

They have no significance so far as affects the duty of one or the other party to produce evidence because there is no rule of law attached to them, and the jury may give to them whatever force or weight it thinks best,—just as it may to other evidence. So long as the law attaches no legal consequences in the way of a duty upon the opponent to come forward with contrary evidence, there is no propriety in applying the term 'presumption' to such facts—however great their probative significance. The employment here of the term 'presumption' is due simply to historical usage by which 'presumption' has originally a term equivalent in one sense to inference, and the distinction between presumption of fact and of law was a mere borrowing of an applied continental term. There is in truth but one kind of presumption, and the term 'presumption of fact' should be disregarded as useless and confusing. Nevertheless it must be kept in mind that the peculiar effect of a presumption of law (that is the real presumption) is merely to involve a rule of law compelling the jury to reach the conclusion in the absence of evidence to the contrary from the opponent. If the opponent does offer evidence to the contrary (sufficient to satisfy the Judge's requirement of some evidence) the presumption disappears as a rule of law and the case is in the jury's hands free from any rule. It is therefore a fallacy to attribute (as do some Judges) an artificial prohibitive force to a presumption increasing for the jury the weight of the facts, even when the opponent has come forward with some evidence to the contrary. For example if death be the issue and the fact of absence for seven years unheeded from be conceded, but the opponent offers evidence that

S 4 the absence, before leaving, proclaimed his intention of staying away for ten years, until a prosecution for crime was barred, this satisfies the opponent's duty of producing evidence, removing the rule of law, and when the case goes to the jury, they are at liberty to give any probative force they think fit to the fact of absence for seven years unbroken. It is not weighed down with any artificial additional probative effect, they may estimate it for just such intrinsic effect as it seems to have under all the circumstances. In strictness, there cannot be such a thing as a 'conclusive presumption'. Wherever from one fact another is conclusively presumed in the sense that the opponent is absolutely precluded from showing by a evidence that the second fact does not exist the rule really provides that, where the first fact is shown to exist the second fact's existence is wholly immaterial for the purpose of the proponent's case, and to provide this is to make a rule of substantive law, and not a rule apportioning the burden of persuading as to certain propositions or varying the duty of coming forward with evidence. The term has no place in the principles of Evidence, and should be discarded. Wigmore § 2491, 2492

CHAPTER II ### OF THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS

Relevancy of Facts—meaning of The words "relevancy of fact" have been used in two distinct senses in this Act. In the title of Part I the word relevancy is used in the sense of admissibility. In the heading of Chapter II of this part 'relevancy' means the having some probative force. Stokes, 819. When a fact is offered as evidence the very offering of it is an implication that it has some bearing on the proposition at issue,—that it tends naturally to produce a conviction about that proposition. The situation is thus in its elements the same as when the persons engaged are not occupied in a legal controversy. One may suppose that the question would be essentially one of the ordinary law of reasoning whether it were to be decided, as here, by a Judge or a jury, or by the audience of a lecturer or by a policeman notified of an alleged misdemeanour in his district, or by a class in rhetoric. But the application of the laws of reasoning is here attended with peculiar consideration not existing for any investigation but a judicial one. Wigmore § 27. Stephen defines the word "relevant" as meaning that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that, according to the common course of events, one, either taken by itself or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present or future existence or non-existence of the other. Steph Dig Ev tit 1. He also repeats the same definition in his Introduction to the Evidence Act which he states. The rule therefore, that facts may be regarded as relevant which can be shown to stand either in relation of cause or in the relation of effect to the fact to which they are said to be relevant may be accepted as true subject to the caution, that when inference is to be founded upon the existence of such a connection every step by which the connection is made out must either be proved or be so probable under the circumstances of the case that it may be presumed without proof. That is this mode of describing relevancy might be correct it would not be really useful. It is for this reason that relevancy was very fully defined in the Evidence Act (Ss 6-11 both inclusive). These sections enumerate specifically the different instances of the connection between cause and effect which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings. Introduction pp 70-72. This is a definition of legal relevancy. Legal relevancy plays a certain part in the law of evidence in that no evidence is admissible unless it is legally relevant. It does not follow that all evidence which is legally relevant is admissible and in fact much that is legally relevant is excluded. Certain rules are laid down founded on various considerations by which many matters which are legally relevant are excluded. Wigmore Ev tit 1. So also in the Indian Evidence Act the legal relevancy in one sense and legal relevancy in another sense are not the same.

The modern system of Evidence says Prof Wigmore 'rests upon two axioms. These underlie its whole structure. Implicitly, but nevertheless actually and positively recognised in the practice of the Courts and in the utterances of the Judges, they were first distinctly formulated by the great master and expounder of the history of our law of Evidence. The first is this: None but facts having rational probative value are admissible. This principle is indeed axiomatic, for any system of Evidence purporting to be rational. It assumes no particular doctrines as to the kind of discrimination implied—whether practical or scientific, coarse and ready or refined and systematic. It prescribes merely that whatever is presented as evidence shall be presented on the hypothesis that it is calculated according to the prevailing standards of reasoning to effect rational persuasion. The second axiom on which our law of Evidence rests is this: All facts having rational probative value are admissible unless some specific rule forbids. Wigmore §§ 9-10

'There is another precept' says Professor James Bradley Thayer 'which it is convenient to lay down as a preliminary rule in stating the law of evidence viz that unless excluded by some rule or principle of law all that is logically probative is admissible. This general admissibility of what is logically probative is not like the former precept a necessary presupposition in a rational system of evidence, but yet it is important to notice this also is being a fundamental proposition. In a historical sense it has not been the fundamental rule to which the various exclusions were exceptions. (But) the main propositions which I have stated should in the order of thought be first laid down and always kept in mind. Thayer Prel Treat Ev pp 265-268. This principle then does not mean that anything that has probative value is admissible; this would be an entire misconception. In Wright v Tatham, 5 Cl & F 670 Lord Coleridge said: "The fallacy that whatever is morally convincing and whatever reasonable beings would form their judgments and act upon, may be submitted to a jury." The true meaning is that every thing having a probative value is ipso facto entitled to be assumed to be admissible and that therefore any rule of policy which may be valid to exclude it is a superadded and abnormal rule. Some of these rules may be extensive in scope—the hearsay rule for example or their applicability may in a particular case be so plain on the face of the offer of evidence that the objector has no burden of proving that this rule of exclusion is applicable. Nevertheless, when the rules of Evidence are taken in view as a system these rules of policy appear as merely so many reserved spaces in the vast territory of logically probative material." Wigmore § 10

The following observations of Mr Justice Edward Livingston, in his Introductory Report to the Code of Evidence, Vol I, 421 (1872 Ed) are worth studying in this connection: "Ultimately, the whole machinery of jurisprudence in all its branches is contrived for the purpose of enabling the judging power to determine on the truth or falsehood of every litigated proposition. This is to be done by hearing and examining evidence that is to say hearing and examining everything that will contribute to bring the mind to the determination required. If we refuse to hear what will in any degree, produce this effect we must determine on imperfect evidence and in proportion to the importance of the matter thus refused to be heard, must evidently be the chance of making an incorrect rather than a just determination. But as in morals we are forbidden to do evil that good may come of it so in legislation we should refrain from doing that kind of good which may produce more than its equivalent in evil. The desirable end to be attained by the admission of every species of evidence may be more than counterbalanced in some instances by the evil attending it: sometimes, in the shape of inconvenience and expense inseparable from its procurement sometimes, from the danger of error arising from the deceptive nature of the evidence itself. The great art is to weigh these difficulties and in those cases where they are most likely to preponderate, but in no others to exclude the evidence." So "the law (of evidence) with a few exceptions on the ground of public policy now is that all which can throw light on the disputed transactions is admitted,—not of course matters of mere prejudice nor anything open to rectorial or sensible objection."

S 5 all things which fairly throw light on the case' Per Coleridge C J in Blake v Assurance Co, 1 R 1 C P D 91

Distinction between Relevancy and Admissibility Strictly speaking admissibility is a quality standing between relevancy, or probative value on the one hand and proof or weight of evidence on the other hand. Admissibility signifies that the particular fact is logically relevant and something more,—that it has also satisfied all the auxiliary tests and extrinsic policies. Yet it does not signify that the particular fact has demonstrated or proved the proposition to be proved but merely that it is received by the tribunal for the purpose of being weighed with other evidence. Wigmore § 12. But in the Indian Evidence Act the word relevancy is sometimes used in the sense of logical relevancy and sometimes in the sense of admissibility. (I see Stephen's Introduction p 65 Whitely Stotes Vol II p 819, Lala Lachmi v Sayed Haider, 3 C W N (xxviii). From sections 5–55 of the Indian Evidence Act the word 'relevancy' is used in the sense of admissibility.

5 Evidence may be given in any suit or proceeding of the Evidence may be existence or non-existence of every fact in given of facts in issue and of such other facts as are relevant and relevant facts declared to be relevant, and of no others

Explanation—This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure

Illustrations

(a) A is tried for the murder of B by beating him with a club with the intention of causing his death

At A's trial the following facts are in issue —

A's beating B with the club

A's causing B's death by such beating

A's intention to cause B's death

(b) A suitor does not bring with him and have in readiness for production at the first hearing of the case a bond on which he relies. This section does not enable him to produce the bond or prove its contents at a subsequent time of the proceedings otherwise than in accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure

Principle "Of all rules of evidence the most universal and the most obvious is this—that evidence adduced should be alike directed and confined to matters which are in dispute or which form the subject of investigation. The theoretical propriety of this rule never can be a matter of doubt whatever difficulties may arise in its application. The tribunal is created to determine matters which either are in dispute between contending parties or otherwise require proof and anything which is neither directly or indirectly relevant to those matters ought at once to be put aside as beyond the jurisdiction of the tribunal and as tending to distract its attention and to waste its time. Frusta probatur quod probatum non relevat (It is useless to prove that which when proved is not relevant)' Best § 201. The principle underlying this section is associated with another maxim. Interest ree publicae ut sit finis litium (For the interest of the public there should be an end of every litigation)

Scope of the Section Evidence may be given of two sets of facts. (1) of facts in issue (2) of facts relevant to the issue. Evidence of (1) is generally known as direct evidence that of (2) as circumstantial evidence. Cochie Cas 16. What are facts in issue are ascertained by the substantive law and the law of procedure. What facts are relevant or admissible in evidence is answered by the law of evidence. This chapter contains the law of relevancy. There is still a further restriction. Evidence the production of which is barred by some provision of Civil Procedure Code is not admitted in evidence even if it be relevant. This restriction is put by the explanation at the end of the section. S 5

Evidence may be given. Evidence may be given of any fact which is relevant under this Act. But there are certain limitations to this rule. This section should be read subject to Parts II and III of this Act and subject to the hearsay character and opinion rules of evidence. See Step Dig 1c Intro p 12. This section does not also make evidence admissible which is not admissible under some special or local law, such as Stamp Act, Registration Act Criminal Procedure Code, etc. The general and broad requirement of relevancy is that the claimed conclusion from the offered fact must be probable or more probable hypothesis with reference to the possibility of other hypothesis. Wigmore § 38 "It is sufficient if the circumstantial evidence be such as may afford a fair and reasonable presumption of the facts to be tried, and if the evidence has that tendency it ought to be received and left to the consideration of the jury to whom alone it belongs to determine upon the precise force and effect of the circumstances proved and whether they are sufficiently satisfactory and convincing to warrant them in finding the fact in issue." Gibson v Hunter, 2 H Bl 998

Facts in issue. The facts in issue are those which are alleged by one party and denied by the other on the pleadings, in a civil case, or alleged in the indictment and denied by the plea of 'not guilty' in a criminal case so far as they are in either case material. There is, therefore little difficulty in ascertaining what are facts in issue. Coelle Cas 56. Facts in issue are facts about which there is a question in issue between the parties and although all relevant facts are not necessarily facts in issue, the facts that are in issue cannot be other than relevant to the determination of the suit. Facts must be either relevant or irrelevant and there is no separate third class of facts in issue. Raghubhushana v Loharamulla 44 Ind Cr 875. Evidence can be given of a fact in issue or a fact which by that Act is declared to be relevant. Ibnash v Puresh, 9 C W N 402 (406)

Facts declared to be relevant. The relevant facts are all those facts which are in the eye of the law so connected with or related to the facts in issue that they render the latter probable or improbable, or roughly, throw light upon them. Relevancy may indeed be considered as synonymous with connection, a word which frequently appears in discussions on the subject. Of course both words must be taken in their legal meaning which is generally restricted. Common sense or logical relevancy is a rule wider than legal relevancy. A Judge might in ordinary transactions, take one fact as evidence of another and act upon it himself when, in Court he would rule that it was legally irrelevant. And he may exclude facts although relevant if they appear to him too remote to be really material to the issue. Coelle Cas Et 56. One great principle in the law of Evidence is that all facts which are relevant to the issue may be proved. Wright v Tatham, 7 A & T 313 381. "The Courts so far as they can are disposed to receive in evidence whatever can throw any light on the matter in issue and advance the search after truth." Per Pollock C B in Miles v Flesler 7 H & N 796. So in describing the nature of relevancy under the English law of Evidence, Coleridge C J in Blake v Assurance Co L R 1 C P D at p 91 said "The law of Evidence with a few exceptions on the ground of public policy now is that all which can throw light on the disputed transaction is admitted, —not of course matters of mere prejudice nor any thing open to real moral or sensible objection but all things which fairly throw light on the case." Sir James Stephen, in the Introduction to his Digest of Evidence said "The great bulk of the law of Evidence consists of negative rules declaring what, as the expression runs, is not evidence. The doctrine that all facts in issue and relevant to the issue, and no others, may be proved is the unexpressed principle which forms the centre of and gives unity to all these express negative rules."

But the framers of the Indian Evidence Act have departed from the above mode of treatment of the law of relevancy. Facts which are relevant are "fully defined in ss 6—11 of the Indian Evidence Act. These sections enumerate specifically the different instances of the connection between cause and effect."

INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

S 5

which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings. They are deemed to be relevant in such a way as to overlap each other. The Act is so framed that it is part of its essence (s 7) Subsequent conduct influenced by it (s 8) is part of its effect (s 7). The object of drawing up the Act in this manner was the general ground on which fact in itself might be stated in this manner is that it is relevant to the fact in itself. These sections are relevant in themselves. The object of the Evidence Act is to provide that certain facts which are relevant in themselves will be admissible in evidence. The Act is so framed that it is part of its essence (s 7) Subsequent conduct influenced by it (s 8) is part of its effect (s 7). The object of drawing up the Act in this manner was the general ground on which fact in itself might be stated in this manner is that it is relevant to the fact in itself. These sections are relevant in themselves. The object of the Evidence Act is to provide that certain facts which are relevant in themselves will be admissible in evidence.

In deciding what facts are relevant under ss 6-11 of the Act which are very widely worded the following extracts from the Introductory Report to the Code of Evidence by Mr Justice Larnach already quoted at p 67 must be borne in mind. Ultimately the whole machinery of jurisprudence in all its branches is tried for the purpose of enabling the judging power to determine the truth or falsehood of every litigated proposition. This is to be done by hearing and examining evidence. It is to be done by hearing and examining everything that will contribute to him the mind to the determination required. If we refuse to hear what will in any degree produce this effect we must determine on imperfect evidence and in proportion to the importance of the matter thus refused to be heard must evidently be the chance of making an incorrect rather than a just determination. But as in morals we are forbidden to do evil so that good may come of it, so in litigation we should refrain from doing that kind of good which may produce more than its equivalent in evil. The desirable end to be attained by the admission of every species of evidence may be more than counterbalanced by the error arising from the deceptive nature of its procurement sometimes from the danger to which the difficulties and in these cases where they are not likely to be prejudicial but in no others to prove a material part of the issue which the witness has a tendency to exclude the evidence. "So generally speaking" People v Arnold 15 Cal 181. "People were formerly frightened out of their wits and Chief Justice Cockburn in R v Birmingham 1 B & S 763. "The admission of evidence is a process which should go wrong. In modern times we admit it in Johnson v State 11 Gr 61 and in Haynes v State 17 Gr 481. Lunt L.J. thus widely laid down the rule. "The Judge, both in England and in this country, are struggling constantly to keep open the door wide as possible to the introduction of all the facts calculated to affect the minds of the jury in arriving at a correct conclusion. Truth, common sense, and enlightened reason alike demand the abolition of all those artificial rules which shut out any fact from the jury, however remotely relevant, or from whatever source derived, which would assist them in coming to a satisfactory verdict. This Court stands pledged by its past history, for the abolition to the extent of its powers, of all exclusionary rules which shut out from the jury facts which may serve, directly or remotely, to reflect light upon the transaction upon which they are called upon to pass.

And of no others. This section excludes everything which is not covered by the purview of some other section which follows in the Statute. The Collector of Goralpur v Palaldhari, 12 A (F B) 1 at p 43, see also Hearsay v Eta, 12 A L J 285=21 Ind C 16. But in Queen Empress v Abdulla 7 A 385 (F B), Mahmood J at p 401, observed. In conclusion I feel that, although what I may call the principle of exclusion adopted by the Evidence Act,—i.e., the principle that all evidence should be excluded which the Act does not expressly authorize, is the safest guide in regard to the admissibility of evidence, yet it should not be so applied, as to exclude matters which may be essential for the ascertainment of truth. Adopting an expression once used by Mr Justice Story I think that the law of Evidence would not be worthy of its name if it made possible any such result. So one who wants to give evidence on a particular fact must show that it is admissible under some one or other of the following sections. Abinash Chandra v Paresk Nath 9 C W N 402 (406), Lalray v Mohpal, 7 I A 70. The words "and of no others" impliedly impose a duty on the Court to exclude evidence of irrelevant facts irrespective of objection by the parties. Whitley Stocks Vol II p 871, see also ss 60-61 and the last clause of the second proviso to section 165.

As regards admissibility, ordinarily the Court is bound to adhere to the rules laid down in the subsequent section. Vide People v Furel 31 Cal (Am) 584. But where a Judge is in doubt as to admissibility of a particular piece of evidence he should declare in favour of admissibility rather than of non-admissibility. Per Straight J in The Collector of Goralpur v Palaldhari 12 A 1 (F B) at p 26, see also Kali Kishore v Bhusan, 18 C 201 P C p 203, Madhavao v Deonol, 21 B 695, but see R v Parbhuday 11 B H C R 90 (97). Under the Evidence Act admissibility is the rule and exclusion the exception, and circumstances which under other systems, might operate to exclude are, under the Act to be taken into consideration only in judging of the value to be allowed to evidence when admitted. R v Monapuna 16 B 661 (669). Even when there is a moral conviction of guilt the rules of evidence can not be departed from. Himudra v R 37 C 91, R v Brojo, 25 W R Cr 13. R v Soob Roy 5 W R Cr 28, R v Oddy 5 Con C C 210 (213).

Classification of the Rules of Admissibility. Relevancy Auxiliary probative Policy, and Extrinsic Policy. The rules of admissibility may be classified under three heads: the first dealing with the probative value of specific facts; the second including artificial rules which do not profess to define probative value but yet aim at increasing or safeguarding it; and the third covering all those rules which rest on extrinsic policies irrespective of probative value.

The first group of rules attempts to define for legal purposes the probative value which suffices to entitle a fact to be regarded as evidential. Here the law is concerned with the rules of logic and inference as applied in practical experience with relevancy. Circumstantial testimony and real evidence are the three great classes, and each has its special problems.

The second group of rules, lays down auxiliary test and safeguards usually for particular kinds of facts, over and above the required minimum probative value. The hearsay rule, the rules of quantity, the rule of the oath and a dozen others, belong here. These two groups together are rules of Probative Policy.

The third group of rules involves for the exclusion of certain kinds of facts extrinsic policies which override the policy of ascertaining the truth by all available means. These rules concede that the evidence in question has all the probative value that can be required and yet exclude it because its admission would injure some other aim more than it would help the cause of truth, and because as to its admissibility until the final judgment in the case. No doubt that course had advantage and is a proper enough course to follow in certain cases, but having regard to the observations of the Appeal Court in the case of Jadu Ray v. Bhabatarn Nundy, 17 C 173, I do not think that course is open to me in the present instance", but see Ramany v. Dalhousie, 30 C W N 259 (262). The principle of the Evidence Act differs from the English Law in that it defines the evidence which may be given, so that in order to produce any particular evidence it must be shown to be admissible under some particular section of this Act, where the principle of the English Law is to assume that everything is admissible subject to certain exceptions. Field Esq 6 Ed p 69. But where a Judge is in doubt as to the admissibility of a particular piece of evidence he should declare in favour of admissibility rather than of non admissibility. The Collector of Gwalior v. Palal dhar, 12 A 1, Madhab v. Denal, 21 B 698, Mosarty v. Lodnon C & D Ry Co L R 5 Q B 314. In the last mentioned case Lush J said at p 323 "I also think on further consideration that the evidence was receivable. I had formed no definite opinion on the subject at the trial. It was a new point and I adopted what I considered to be the usual and the safer course where evidence is pressed by one party, and objected by the other, receiving the evidence at the peril of the party presenting it. Under the Evidence Act admissibility is the rule and exclusion the exception. R v. Monagum 16 B 661 668, see also R v. Uttam Chand 11 B H C R 121, Gopee Nath v. Anand moyle, 9 W R 169, Mason v. Golan 15 W R 490, but see R v. Poribhudas 11 B H C R 93, R v. Ham Chandra Gornul, 19 B 755, Gajju Lal v. Futeh Lal, 6 C at p 193, Hareesh v. Charu Mayjee, 22 W R 355, 356 357.

Objection. In England the initiative in excluding evidence is left entirely to the opponent—so far at least as concerns his right to appeal on that ground to another tribunal. The Judge may, of his own motion deal with offered evidence, but for all subsequent purposes it must appear that the opponent invoked some rule of Evidence. A rule of Evidence which is not invoked is waived. Diaz v. U S 223 U S 470, Sanyer v. French, 235 S W 126. But in India it has already been stated that the Court is bound to exclude evidence of irrelevant facts irrespective of objections by the parties. Whately Stokes vol II p 851, see also Amba Ali v. Lutfi Ali, 21 C W N 996, Narahari v. Ambabai 14 B 192, Sumitra v. Ramdhar, 57 Ind Cis 561, Damodar v. Jodunath, 91 Ind Cis 119, Lucharam v. Radhaachoran 31 C J J 107. "It is perfectly true" said Mr Justice Moolerjee, in Amba Ali v. Lutfi Ali, 21 C W N 996 at p 1001, "is pointed out by Sir Richard Couch, in Miller v. Madho Das, L R 23 I A 106 that in erroneous omission to object to evidence which is irrelevant and consequently inadmissible under any circumstances, does not make it admissible." See also Huak v. Bishnu, 8 C W N 101. The moment a witness commences giving evidence which is inadmissible, he should be stopped by the Court. P v. Pulamhar, 7 W R Cr 25, see also R v. Chander Kumar 24 W R Cr 77, Lukhee v. Shalunnee, 2 W R 252, R v. Kallychann 7 W R Cr 2, Re Kedar Nath 18 W R Cr 16, R v. Ramnopal, 10 W R Cr 75, Petumbar v. Ruttan W R (1864) 213.

Time of objection. The general principle governing the time of the objection is that it must be made as soon as the applicability of it is known to the opponent. Wigmore § 18, Kissen Kamini v. Ham Chandra, 12 W R 13, Sheetal Pershad v. Jummeyoy 12 W R 211. For evidence contained in a specific question the objection must ordinarily be made as soon as the question is stated and before the answer is given unless the admissibility was in issue, not to the subject of the question but to some feature of the answer. Wigmore § 18. In Bull City v. Buller 2 B & C 131 117 Holroyd J said "If the objection was known a priori, it should have been made before the evidence was given. When an irrelevant document is tendered, an objection should be made at that time. Objection as to the mode of proof of a particular document should be taken when it is tendered in evidence. Abdul Samad v. Gurendia 82 Ind Cis 974 (976) see also Sundari v. Gaganendra 9 C W N 111. So when such objection is not taken in time it is considered to be waved Kalibananda v Shivanand, 63 Ind Cis 625. So when rent receipt were admitted in evidence without objection in the Court of first instance, no objection could be taken in the Appellate Court that they were not properly proved Rajeswar v Pulin Behary 25 C W N 581=62 Ind Cis 647, see also Gunnubia v Rajendra, 1 C W N 530, Prianath v Durgataram 14 C L J 578. "In fact this proposition rests upon a well known principle with regard to the rule of evidence and that is this. Where an objection has got to be taken as to the mode of proof of a particular document, such objection must be taken at the time when the document is tendered for admission, for any lacunae in the mode of proof may then be at once supplied by the party who produces the document and wants to have it proved." Per Moolerjee J in Abdul Samad v Gunubia, 82 Ind Cis 971 at p 976, see also Choon v Nilmadhub, 41 C L J 374, Manmatha v Probodh, 43 C L J 274=99 Ind Cis 279. But irrelevant document does not become relevant for want of objection Sumitra v Ramkrishna 57 Ind Cis 571=5 Prit L J 410.

5

Grounds of objection. In Bun v Whitehead & F R Co, 3 H L C 1, 16 Lord Brougham, said "Now it is necessary that when a party excepts to the reception of evidence, to the rejection of evidence, or to the direction of the Judge given to the jury, whatever is the subject matter of this exception, he must state the ground of his exception otherwise he cannot except. If he objects to the reception of A's evidence, he must show why it should not be received as by stating that A is an incompetent witness. If, on the other hand, he objects to the rejection of A's evidence, he must show why it should not be rejected as for instance, that A is a competent witness and that his evidence is admissible and that the rejection of his evidence is contrary to law. In all these cases the ground of objection must be clearly stated and beyond the ground of objection thus stated, the court is not at all bound to look."

Waiver of objection. An objection may of course be expressly waived. Of implied waivers, the usual instance is that of failure to make objection at the proper time. The question whether a party is bound by his consent that the examination of witnesses before a Judge should be dispensed with and another method substituted for the Judge's taking cognizance of oral testimony is regulated partly by the Evidence Act and partly by the law and practice relating to the Civil and Criminal Procedure and in the absence of any such law by the discretion of the Court. What is regarded by such procedure is not the law relating to the relevancy of evidence but the law under which the evidence will be taken as contained in O XVIII r 1 of the Civil Procedure Code. The parties have a right to waive such rules of procedure as are intended to protect a personal interest and are not based on public policy. So where the lower Court admitted in evidence on the consent of parties evidence as to the death of a person which could not be admitted in evidence under s 33, it is not binding upon the parties Krishna Reddy v Sundara Reddy (1911) M W N 931.

When the opponent fails to object to the admission of the document that is of course on general principles a waiver as to the need of any evidence authenticating its genuineness, and this waiver is commonly held to extend to the fact of authority of an agent purporting to sign the document for a principal, but not as to the legal sufficiency of the instrument for any purpose. Hymett v Hymett § 2132. It is a familiar principle that if testimony is offered which is relevant but repugnant to some rule of evidence it must be objected to at once, otherwise the objection will be considered waived Barton Coal Co v Cor 59 M L 11 M L J 189 (n). But an erroneous omission to object to the admission of testimony which is not relevant does not make it available as a ground of judgment. B Miller v Muthu Das 19 A 76=23 I A 106. Sunder v Shrinivas 1923 Lch 60. The objections as to the admissibility of evidence will not as a general rule be entertained for the first time in a second appeal. Lal Shrikrishna v Krishna 20 M L J 198=101 Ind Cis 518. It is open to parties to consent, or waive objection to the mode in which statements which are admissible in evidence and which the Evidence Act should be admitted to the record. When they have so consented they cannot afterwards object. Gannabathula v G Chennappa

22 L W 756 The question of the mode of proof is a question of procedure and is capable of being waived by a party Mt Bibi Kaniz Zainab v Syed Mobarak 72 Ind Cis 718

Where the genuineness of a document relied on by a party was not disputed by the opposite party, and the only question was as to its binding character the opposite party must be deemed to have tacitly waived its proof by consenting to its admission in the first Court and could not be permitted to question its admissibility for the first time in appellate Court—Inayahara v Ramaswami, 10 M L J 242 So also where no objection was taken in the Court of first instance to the admission of the copy of a document, it is not competent to the appellate Court to raise and entertain the objection to its admissibility Itchunt v Kallani 5 M L J 81 In Sayaruddin v Samauddin 72 Ind Cis 985—(1913) A. I R (Cal) 378, Mt Justice Mulherjee said, 'We may here point out that although as ruled by the Judicial Committee in Millet Official Assignee v Babu Madho Das, 23 I A 106=19 A 76, an erroneous omission in the trial Court to object to an admission which was irrelevant did not make it relevant and admissible in evidence, still, as explained in Gurindia Chandra v Rajendra Nath 1 C W N 530, an objection that a document, which per se is not admissible in evidence, has been improperly admitted in evidence, cannot be entertained in the Court of Appeal, when if the objection had been taken in the trial Court it might have been met and the proceeding regularised' See also Mammatha v Probodh 43 C L J 274 When a document is produced and marked in the presence of the opposite party who took no objection there but an objection was taken in appeal Held that under those circumstances the Court may take it until the contrary is shown that the formal proof of the document was waived by consent of parties Collector of Gunjam v Bhunayya, 24 L W 677

When documents are admitted in evidence with or without formal proof in the first Court it is not open to the appellate Court to reject the documents as not having been properly proved Arjun v Dayanidhi, 93 Ind Cis, 301=51 M L J 632, Alfoo v Laburali Mha, 97 Ind Cis 411, Abdul Samad v Gunendra 82 Ind Cis 974=A I R 1923 Cal 452, Mt Bibi v Syed Mobarak, 72 Ind Cis 718, Sudhanya v Gow, 35 C L J 473=27 C W N 134=62 Ind Cis 86=(1922) CIL 60, Ali Mohammed v Maharaj Bepari, 36 C L J 186=64 Ind Cis 266, Gopce v Nataraya Chetty 43 M L T 418=10 L W 122=1922 M W N 464=31 M L J 125 (H C)=69 Ind Cis 15 If a certain piece of evidence is not admissible the fact that no objection was raised does not make it admissible Damodar v Jadunath 91 Ind Cis, 449, Arjun v Dayanidhi 93 Ind Cis 301=51 M L J 637

6 Facts which, though not in issue, are so connected with a

Relevancy of facts forming part of same transaction fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, are relevant, whether they occurred at the same time and place or at different times and places

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B or the by-standers at the beating or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction, is a relevant fact

(b) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed troops are attacked and guns are broken open. The occurrence of these facts is relevant as forming part of the general transaction though A may not have been present at all of them

(c) A sues B for a libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence. Letters between the parties relating to the subject out of which the libel arose and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained, are relevant facts though they do not contain the libel itself

(d) The question is whether certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A. The goods were delivered to several intermediate persons successively. Each delivery is a relevant fact

6

Scope of Sections 6 to 55 The Evidence Act lays down in 6 to 55 certain rules of logic which are directions to the Court as to the cases in which the Court is to consider as a matter of logic that one fact has any relevance or logical bearing on another. The rules of logic are to be distinguished from rules laying down how the materials on which the Court is empowered to base its conclusions—that is how the legal media concludendi are to be brought to the cognizance of the Court is the method of proving relevant facts. These rules have reference to the mode in which the Court has to collect the materials for the hypothesis, while the first class of rules refers to the use to be made of the materials, that is the inference to be drawn from the hypothesis. To prove relevant facts parties have unrestricted power to make admissions. But in regard to the logical conclusions to be deduced from the existence of the facts proved or admitted the parties have no power to alter the directions given to the Court by the legislature or to empower the Courts to act in a manner declared by the legislature to be illogical. Krishna Reddy v Sundra Reddy, (1914) M W N 9

Scope of the section Acts, declarations, and circumstances which constitute or accompany and explain the fact or transaction in issue, are admissible for or against either party is forming parts of res gestae. Phip Ps 46, 13 Halsbury § 585. All facts which are parts of the same transaction are relevant to each other so that when one of such facts is in issue, the others are admissible. Such facts which are thus parts of the transaction in issue are generally known as res gestae. H v Ellis 6 B & C 145, Carmorthen and Carligan Rail Co v Manchester and Milford Rail Co (1873) L R 8 C P 685. But in admitting facts as part of res gestae care should be taken that facts which are res inter alios actae are not proved. Hyde v Palmer 32 L J Q B 126, Wright v Tatham 5 Cl & Fin 670 H L, Ignatiev v London Tramway Co 21 W R 179 (Fos). Relevant facts are usually those which are either the cause or the effect of a relevant fact or a fact in issue (vide s 7). But where the inference is wider it may also be drawn from facts which either accompany or explain the transaction in issue. Rough v Great Western Rail Co, (1811) 1 Q B 51.

Ordinarily, the acts of strangers to a transaction—res inter alios actae—they are called that is things transacted by others are excluded from admission. Thus what others did or said about a particular matter would, prima facie be mere hearsay and not be received accordingly. But where this interwoven with the matter so as to form as it were portion of the transaction itself part as it is technically termed of the res gestae it would be admitted as an incident of whole and explanatory of it. This is in truth only the exposition of the main fact itself by the aid of the circumstances which surround it and, is a general principle whatever surrounding circumstances may be necessary to explain the nature of the prominent or principal fact in issue are received as original evidence. Goodale Ps 127. Those facts when the nature and quality of the act are in question are either to be regarded as part of the act itself or as the best and most approximate evidence of the nature and quality of the act then connection with the act either sanctions them as direct evidence or constitutes them indirect evidence, from which the real motive of the actor may be duly estimated. Stallie on Evidence p 87.

Res gestae—meaning of the term—This phrase in one or another form—res gesta, res acta, res gestae—was familiar in classical Latin literature, and may be seen by any dictionary. It is found also in the Corpus juris. The meaning of the term seems to have been quite untechnical, it imported simply 'a fact', 'a transaction', 'an event'. The plural sometimes indicated not so much the plural of the English equivalent—facts, transactions—as the details or particulars of which a single fact or transaction might be composed. It would seem that either form was quite legitimately used as meaning what we should express by the singular form—in occurrence a transaction. Prof Bradley Thayer—in 15 American Law Review 51. The term was used for the first time in 1637 in Ship Money Case 3 How St Trial 988 where Mr Holborne arguing refers to the truth of an libel in for res gestae as thus: Wignore 1767. It was again used in Horne Foles Trial 25 Houell's State Trials 440 (1794). A letter from a certain society had been sent to in association with which Poole was connected declining a previous proposal from the latter and Mr Garrow alluded to its admission probably upon the ground that 'it is fit to be received as a part of the res gesta upon the subject'. The phrase is found again in Hooie v Allen, 3 Esp 276 (1801) where in an action for seduction of the plaintiff's wife, her statement of her reason for leaving the husband (plaintiff) was admitted by Lord Kenyon as part of res gesta. Similarly in Robson v Kemp 4 Esp 233 (1802), Lord Ellenborough observed "Where the declaration of the bankrupt is part of the res gesta it may be evidence". See also Mason v Kinnaird 6 East 155 (1805). So far as text books are concerned the phrase occurs for the first time in Dian's Appendix to Pothier on Obligation where in Vol II at page 217, the author says "In question of fraud or bonafides an adequate judgment can, in general only be formed by having a perfect view of the whole transaction which of course including the conversation which forms part of it, and according to the phrase usually applied to his subject the language which is used on any occasion forms a part of the res gesta". The American Law Review Vol XV, pp 351 per Prof James Bradley Thayer.

Phrase inexact and indefinite 'This phrase is conceded on all hands is inexact and indefinite in its scope and is ambiguous in its suggestion of reasons for the doctrine. If it were possible to say that it is properly applicable in etymology or in usage to any particular doctrine it would be simple enough to attach this doctrine and to urge the restriction of the phrase to the one meaning. Or if the phrase genuinely indicated some independent principle of Evidence existing in its own right and not otherwise named or namable nor attributable to any other place in our system of Evidence it would be allowable to preserve the name for that principle. But neither of these things is true. The phrase has nothing to entitle itself on either ground to preservation. It has had various uses. But it is ambiguous and unmanageable in all of them. The doctrines to which it has been applied possess all of them a right to existence under well recognized pre-existing principles and can be explained without a resort to this phrase. No more can be said for it than that it has been much used in the course of the development of some important aspects of two of the doctrines. Wigmore Et § 1767. In the first edition of Phillips's Evidence, the phrase occurs but in his fourth edition he substituted for it the English word transaction.

Transaction, meaning of 'The word "transaction" is not defined in this Act. But a definition of the word is given in Stephen's Digest of Evidence. There the author says "A transaction is a group of facts connected together to be referred to by a single legal name, is a crime, a conflict, a wrong or any other subject of enquiry which may be in issue. Every fact which is part of the same transaction as the facts in issue is deemed to be relevant to the facts in issue although it may not be actually in issue, and although if it were not part of the same transaction it might be excluded as hearsay. Whether any particular fact is or is not part of the same transaction as the facts in issue is a question of law upon which no principle has been stated by authority and on which single Judges have given different decisions.' Steph Dig Ev Art 3. This definition has received judicial recognition in Cham Mahto v Emperor 11 C W N 266 (270), Janala Sahai v Emperor 31 P R 1914 Cr - 27 Ind Cr 664 = 16 Cr L J 184. But this definition in spite of judicial recognition is a curious definition.' Stol's Anglo Indian Code Vol II 831. The word transaction occurs also in Criminal Procedure Code, ss 235 and 279. In connection with s 235 of Cr Pro Code the Joint Committee of 1922 said "We think it would be dangerous if not impossible to attempt any definition of the phrase 'in the course of the same transaction'. An exhaustive definition is not feasible and if the phraseology is altered the Courts would be deprived of the guidance which they now have from a long series of rulings on the point. We do not find that there has been any pronounced conflict of opinion the reason being, that the Courts instead of attempting to lay down general principles as a rule discuss each case on its merits. A part of the Select Committee (1922). In this connection it may also be stated that before accepting any definition not given in the Act the Court should remember the following warning given in the Solicitor's Journal (Vol 20, 669) and quoted with approved by such a great Justices Prof James Hadley Thayer in his Preliminary Treatise of Evidence at p 190. "A definition is the most difficult of all things. There is far greater probability of a correct use of terms than of a correct definition of them. And where it is unnecessary to define it is also dangerous because one incorrect definition will confound the correct use, etc." The word transaction is used in a limited sense in illustration (n) of this section and in more general sense in the remaining illustrations of the section. Queen Empress v Fakirappa 15 B 491 (196).

6

Transaction meaning of the word in ss 235 and 239 of Criminal Procedure Code. "What does or does not form part of the same transaction may be considered to be question of fact in each particular case. Certain tests have been laid down in various cases by which it may be determined whether certain acts do or do not form part of the same transaction. In some cases it has been held that acts may be considered to form part of the same transaction if there is proximity between these acts, proximity of time, community of intention and continuity of action." Per Cunningham J in R v Khan v Rayabali 31 C W N 327, see also Banga Chandra v Inando 35 C L J 327. Amrita Lal v King Emperor 41 C 977. Emperor v Madhah Larman 13 B 117 = 20 Bom L R 607, Khu lai Mallu v Emperor 50 C 1601. Crown v Ghulam, 1 S L R 73. Emperor v Lulman 21 S L R 107. So no comprehensive formula of universal application can be stated to determine whether two or more acts constitute the same transaction. Amrita Lal v King Emperor 12 C 917. In Reg v Sherwath 27 B 135 at p 138 Chandrasekhar I observed "Here again the occasions when the two offences were committed were different, but there was a continuity and community of purpose. The real and substantial test then for determining whether general offences are connected together so as to form the same transaction depends upon whether they are so related to one another in point of purpose, or as cause and effect or as principal and subsidiary acts, as to constitute one continuous action. A mere interval of time between the commission of one offence and another does not itself necessarily import want of continuity though the length of the interval may be an important element in determining the question of connection between the two. For instance in Queen Empress v Yapan (16 B 414) proximity of time, combined with the closeness to intention and similarity of action and result was held to bring several offences as to several fraudulent transfers of property within the meaning of the words 'same transaction' in section 235 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The word transaction suggests not necessarily proximity of time so much as continuity of action and purpose that is to say it is not necessary that the act should have been committed, all on the same occasion but it is sufficient that though separated by a distinct interval of time they are closely connected by continuity of purpose or progressive action towards a single object. Emperor v Hanu Rao 2 N L R 117 = 4 Cr L J 420. The words "the same transaction" in s 239 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Code cannot embrace the examination of all the witnesses throughout a trial but could apply only to the examination of each witness as such separately. King Emperor v Shue So 5 L B R 231 = 4 Cr L J 489. Ordinarily theft and the disposal of the proceeds would be parts of the same transaction and as proximity of time between two acts does not necessarily constitute them parts of the same transaction an appreciable interval of time between two acts otherwise connected, does not prevent them from continuing to be parts of the same series of connected events and hence it is not necessary to show that the theft and disposal occurred within a few hours or even a few days of each other. Nga Nyo v King Emperor U B R (1907) Cr Pro Code 5 = 6 Cr L J 28. So if a series of acts are so connected together by proximity of time, community of criminal intent, continuity of action and purpose and such subsidiary acts as would make the accused perpetrator criminis or in any way after the act or by the relation of cause and effect as to constitute in the opinion of the Court one transaction then the accused may be charged with and tried of one trial for every offence committed in such series of acts. Crown v Ghulam 1 S L R 73, see also Woodcroft v Imp 18 S L R 199 = 27 Cr L J 357. Hinsam Bibi v Emperor 20 S L R 71 = 27 Cr L J 156. Emperor v Nga Lu, 19 Cr L J 34 (Bur), Sauuman v

Emp 19 A L J 392=22 Cr L J 611, Krishna Anjan v Emperor, 8 L W 225=1918 M W N 525 Gumant v Emperor, 13 N L R 35 In re Chona gudi Venkatadri, 33 M 502, Virupana v Emperor, 28 M L J 397, Ran Subhag v King Emperor, 19 C W N 972, In re Iochley 13 M 411, Emperor v Datto Hannant, 30 B 19, Tipamdu v King Emperor, 5 P L J 11, Son Dyal v Crown 1 L B R 361 Mga Tha v Emperor, 5 Bur L T 101=13 Cr L J 485, Kushai v Emperor 50 C 1001, Pahlad v Emperor 1 Lah 562=21 C L J 626, Gumant v Emperor 13 N L R 35 In re Gam Malhi 49 M 71=48 M L J 308=26 Cr L J 1513 Patil Paban v Emperor, 26 Cr L J 369 "According to its etymological and dictionary meaning the word transaction means 'carrying through' and suggests we think, not necessarily proximity in time—so much as continuity of action or purpose. The same metaphor implied by that word is continued in the illustrations where the phrase used is in the course of transaction" Emperor v Datto 30 B 19, see also Emperor v Ganesh Narain 14 Bom L R 922=13 Cr L J 533 Acts done in pursuance of a conspiracy must be deemed to be parts of the same transaction King Emperor v Maung Aung 1 Ring 604=2 Bur L J 224 The transaction of milking a series of false entries so as to attribute another cause for the death was in continuation of and pursuance to the same transaction of voluntarily causing grievous hurt with the view of extorting confession Emperor v Babunt 14 Bom L R 41=13 Ind Cr 825=13 Cr L J 137 Theft of a cart from one house and theft of two bullocks from another house in order to remove the cart are parts of the same transaction Emperor v Huri Raot, 2 N L R 117 Criminal breach of trust and falsification of account for the concealment of the same are parts of the same transaction Emperor v Josepham 19 C L J 987 So also causing hurts to two different persons in the course of a riot can be considered as parts of the same transaction Katuon v Emperor 39 A 623=15 A L J 544=19 Cr L J 788 Criminal breach of trust and giving false evidence to conceal the same are also parts of the same transaction Nga Pole v Emperor, U B R (1897=1901) 31 see also Emperor v Iban Krishna 40 C 318 (criminal misappropriation and falsification of accounts in order to screen the misappropriation), Dulas v Emperor, 27 C W N 626 Emperor v Babunt 14 Bom L R 41 Emperor v Srinawan 11 C W N 715, Emperor v Inam 40 B 97=17 Bom L R 881=16 Cr L J 761

Transaction—what facts form parts of A transaction consists both of the physical acts and the words accompanying such physical acts whether spoken by the person doing such acts, the person to whom they were done or any other person or persons. Such words are admissible in evidence as parts of transaction Thompson v Ticeanton, Skinner 402 Coffle Cas 65, Illustration (a) In Brown v Kinnara 6 List 193 counsel contended "Declarations by the wife upon her elopement from her husband accusing him of misconduct could not be given in evidence against him in an action against the adulterer. In answer Ellenborough L C J said "It is not so clear that her declarations made at the time would not be evidence under any circumstances. If she declared at the time that she fled from immediate terror of personal violence from the husband I should admit the evidence though not if it were a collateral declaration of some matter that happened at another time. A transaction may be a continuous one extending over a length of time Harrison v Haigh 9 Moore 217 vide also illustrations (b) (c) and (d) The case of R v Foulcs, Stephen 1 shows how the statement of a third party may be relevant as part of the transaction if he is actually present at the time. In that case the question was whether a man had absented himself from the realm "with the intent to hinder his creditors and so brought him self within the Bankruptcy Act. Letters written during his absence indicating such an intention were held admissible in proof thereof. In delivering his judgment Hest C J said "When these letters are coupled with the fact of his running away in a hurry would not the jury be warranted in finding that he went to avoid his creditors? If so there has been a clear act of bankruptcy. But it has been argued that the second and third letters having been written subsequently to the act of departing the realm were not admissible in evidence. I am clear that they were admissible. The going abroad was of 6 itself an equivocal act, and where an act is equivocal, we must get at the motive with which it was committed. In ninety nine cases out of a hundred the case only he got at by the declarations of the party himself. The declarations, in order to be admissible must be made, or the letters written, at the time of the act in question but it is sufficient if they are written at any time during the continuance of the act, the departing the realm is a continuing act, and the letters were written during its continuance. In the same case Parl J observed "I am satisfied that declarations made during departure and absence are admissible in evidence to show the motive of the departure. It is impossible to tie down at time the rule as to the declarations, we must judge from all the circumstances of the case we need not go the length of saying that a declaration made a month after the act would of itself be admissible, but if, as in the present case, there are connecting circumstances it may even at that time, form part of the res gestae." The declaration however must be connected with the state of the party's mind at the time and in the present instance I think the connection is pretty clear from the admission of the letters. So where the questions were whether a person who had remained abroad for some years had acquired a domicile in the country of his residence letters written by him during such residence showing his intention to remain there permanently, or otherwise would doubtless be admissible as parts of the transaction. Donnell v Geoghegan 9 Ch D 155. Acts declarations and circumstances which constitute, or accompany and explain the fact or transaction in issue are admissible for or against either parties as forming parts of res gestae. Phup F 16. But declaration and statements are admitted in evidence as parts of res gestae or transaction under two distinct principles. One of these principles establishes a real exception to the Hearsay Rule and sets certain limitations to the kinds of statement admissible under this Exception. The other principle does not establish an exception to the Hearsay rule, but defines those cases to which the rule is in its nature not applicable. Lide Wigmore § 1715. One depends for its admission on the principle of spontaneous declaration and the other is part of the res gestae on the principle of verbal act doctrine. But acts are not parts of the same transaction unless they were done substantially at the same time although they are similar in other respects. R v Bridge, 4 C & P 386. In that case the prisoner was charged with stealing pickled pork, a bowl some knives and a loaf of bread. He went to the prosecutor's shop, took the pork and ran away with it. In about two minutes he returned, replaced the pork in a bowl which contained the knives and took lot away. About half an hour later he returned and took the loaf. In delivering the judgment Littledale observed "The taking away of the loaf cannot be given in evidence upon this indictment. I think that the prisoner's taking the pork, and returning two minutes and then running off with the bowl, must be taken as one continuous transaction but I think that half an hour is too long a period to admit of this construction. The taking away of that loaf, therefore is a distinct offence." In R v Ellis 6 B & C 145 Collier 63 the prisoner was charged with stealing six shillings muled money, from a till evidence was allowed of the taking not only of the amount but also of other money taken at the same time. Lingle. I in delivering the judgment observed "I think that it was in the discretion of the Judge to confine the prosecutor to the proof of one felony, or to allow him to give evidence of other acts which were all parts of one entire transaction. Generally speaking it is not competent to a prosecutor to prove a man guilty of one felony by proving him guilty of another unconnected felony, but where several felonies are connected together, and form part of the transaction then the one is evidence to show the character of the other." See also R v Leach 4 F & F 76 R v Parth, L R 1 C C R Ronpall v Hou, 3 F & L 1 R v Long 6 C & P 179 R v Cobden 3 F & F 332 R v Prabhudas 1 B H Cr 90. When the offence under trial is filing a false complaint, which happened at the subsequent police investigation of the complaint forms part of the res gestae. G Venkata Subbiah v Emperor 48 M 610-21 L W 190-1925 M W N 68-86 Ind Crs 209-26 Cr I J 721-A I P 197. Md 579-48 M I J 195. In an abduction case where the abduction took place at night the search conducted on the next day cannot be treated as a part of the main transaction. Ex parte Hays, Imperial 91 Ind. Cts. 433=26 Cr. L. J. 1553=12 C. L. J. 111, see also Ex parte Hays, Imperial 13 C. L. J. 704, Public Supply, Emperor 7 L. J. 113=26 P. L. R. 671=A. I. R. 1925 La. 778.

Scope and limit of facts forming the res gestae. The act or transaction may be completed in a moment of time or it may be a continuing crime; it may extend through a period of days or weeks or even months. Sometimes the main transaction can only be established by proving a series of similar facts which may happen either before or after the nature of the case itself demands cumulative in time or before the similar facts have occurred in which connection in point of time or place or other particulars as virtually to form but one continuous transaction. Phy. E. 17 see also Griffin, Fines Dec. 1, 1890 C. A. cited in H. I. Iphigeneas, James 17 Cox 888. Ex p. Buraby 1901 2 K. L. J. 18. Clark v. L. 11 Q. B. D. 92 cited in Phy. E. 17. If in one of the public trusts there is an unexpected collision between two men, entire strangers to each other, then the res gestae of the collision is confined within the few moments it occupies. When again there is a social feud in which two religious factions as in the case of the Lord George Gordon disturbances or of the Philadelphia riots of 1844 are arrayed against each other for weeks and are so much absorbed in the collision as to be conscious of little else than all that such parties do or say under such circumstances is as much part of the res gestae as the blows given in homicides for which particular prosecutions may be brought. Wright Ex § 278, Lakehurst v. Herrick 19 Ohio St. 25, Lind v. Vorhauer, 101 Mo. App. 268 (two years). Smully v. Williams 87 Ga. 681.

In Benson v. Hugh 2 Bingham 101 Lord Hensleydale, said "It is impossible to tie down to time the rule as to the declarations." It can't be always borne in mind, however that it is the connection with or illustration of the main fact which constitutes the admissibility of this species of evidence. The point is also well illustrated by Mr. Starkie when he says "If for the sake of illustration, the question for what purpose a sum of money was paid by A to B were material to the case what A said to B on paying the money would be most important, it may be conclusive evidence. But if A and B were strangers to the cause and the fact of payment were not material to the issue then although A at the time of payment made a declaration as to the truth of a fact material to the case as that he had lost a wager betted on that fact, the declaration would neither be evidence in itself nor as explanatory of the act of A, which as being the act of a stranger was also inadmissible. In Wright v. Tatham, 7 A. & L. 313 Mr. Justice Colman observed "Where an act is evidence per se, a declaration accompanying that act may well be evidence, if it reflects light upon or qualifies the act. But I am not aware of any case where the act done is, in its own nature, irrelevant to the issue and where the declaration per se is inadmissible in which it has been held that the union of the two has rendered them admissible."

The expression res gestae as applied to a crime means the complete criminal transaction from its beginning or starting point in the act of the accused until the end is reached. What in any case constitutes the res gestae under which it is said that all facts which are part of the res gestae of a crime depends wholly on the character of the crime and the circumstances of the case. State v. Foley 113 La. 52=101 Am. St. 493. It frequently happens that, as evidence of circumstances must be resorted to for the purpose of proving the commission of the particular offence charged the proof of those circumstances involves the proof of other acts, either criminal or apparently innocent. In such cases it is proper that the chain of evidence should be unbroken. If one or more links of that chain consists of circumstances which tend to prove that the prisoner has been guilty of other crimes than that charged there is no reason why the Court should exclude those circumstances. They are so intimately connected and blended with main facts adduced in evidence that there is no reason why the criminality of such intimate and connected circumstance should exclude them more than other facts apparently innocent. Thus if a man be indicted for murder and there be proof that the instrument of death was a pistol, proof that that instrument belonged to another man, that it was taken from the house the night preceding the murder, that the prisoner was there on that night and that the pistol was seen in his possession on the day of the murder, just before the fatal act, is undoubtedly admissible, although it has the tendency to prove the prisoner guilty of a larceny. Such circumstances constitute a part of the transaction and whether they are perfectly innocent in themselves, or involve guilt, make no difference as to their bearing on the main question which they are adduced to prove." Waller's Case, 1 Leigh (1st) 557, Spruille v United States 141 Fed. 611. And it is a general rule that evidence of connected, precedent, or surrounding circumstances is proper to show the probability that the principal fact has happened in all cases where it may naturally be assumed that a connection exists between the main fact and the subordinate fact. Powers v People, 42 Ill. App. 427 (431), State v Ryder, 80 Vt. 422.

Written declarations as part of res gestae. In Testin v Arnold, 84 L. R. B. 2214 where the question was whether written admission of negligence by the driver after collision can be part of a res gestae, Bailhache J said: "There is some difficulty in deciding in a particular case whether a given statement is part of res gestae. This difficulty arises from the fact that the nature of res gestae varies greatly. Sometimes the res gestae are acts only, sometimes acts and words combined, sometimes words only, and sometimes a whole transaction which may include letters and memoranda. In this case the res gestae was a single act—namely, the collision with the motor car. In such a case words, even spoken words, do not become part of the res gestae, unless they were made at the time and are the natural consequence of the collision—words which spring out of the fact of collision, so to speak—inevitable and almost without the exercise of the will of the speaker, and are at any rate spontaneous. The words must of course be strictly germane to the collision. Spoken words are not relied on here, but if I have correctly described the characteristics which words must have in order to form part of the res gestae of a collision it follows that a written statement can never do so. It lacks all the characteristics except two—namely, that it was made at the time and germane to the collision. This would be true even if this particular memorandum had been written by the driver of the traction engine, it is a fortiori so when, as in this case, the driver of the motor car wrote the memorandum of admission of liability of the driver of the traction engine to sign, and the driver of the traction engine put his cross to it, and the driver's mate signed the driver's name. I hold that this memorandum so signed was no part of the res gestae of the collision."

Basis of the theory. The affairs of men consist of a complication of circumstances so intimately interwoven as to be hardly separable from each other. Each owes its birth to some preceding circumstance, and in its turn becomes the prolific parent of others, and each during its existence has its inseparable attribute and its kindred facts materially affecting its character and essential to be known in order to a right understanding of its nature. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 108. Wharton defines res gestae as "those circumstances which are the undesigned incidents of a particular litigated act and which are admissible when illustrative of such act. These incidents may be separated from the act by a lapse of time more or less appreciable. They may consist of speeches of any one concerned, whether participant or bystander. They may comprise things left undone as well as things done. Their sole distinguishing feature is that they should be necessary incidents of the litigated act, necessary in this sense, that they are part of the immediate preparations for or emanations of such act and are not produced by a calculated policy of the actors. In other words, they must stand in immediate causal relation to the act—a relation not broken by the interposition of voluntary wrangles seeking to manufacture evidence for itself. Incidents that are the immediately and unconsciously associated with an act, whether such incidents are doings or declarations become in this way evidence of the character of the act. See also State v Kome (N.J.) 72 Atl. 39. So long as these circumstances do not consist of declarations and statements that are introduced as a matter of course proved by either side without question, unless indeed they get too far away from the main fact, when under rules having no relation to the subject of hearsay they are excluded. It is when they comprise statements, exclamations, answers to questions, and other verbal utterances by the participants in the act or event, that they occupy the attention of the Court. If it had been possible to treat verbal utterances made under such conditions purely as acts, and not in any sense as evidence of the things stated (vide infra) the subject of res gestae would not have belonged under the head of exceptions to the Hearsay rule. But declarations of this sort were urged upon the Courts most strongly when they were wanted and needed as evidence of facts to which they referred, and the Courts received them as evidence, and thus created another exception to the rule against Hearsay. Insurance Co v Mosley, 8 Wall U S 397, Waldele v New York, 17 Am Rep 41. The ground of reliability upon which such declarations are received is their spontaneity. They are the extempore utterances of the mind under circumstances and at times when there has been no sufficient opportunity to plan false and misleading statements, they exhibit the mind's impression of immediate events, and are not narratives of past happenings, they are uttered while the mind is under the influence of the activity of the surroundings. McKelvey's Evidence pp 344, 345

Facts forming part of the same transaction—classification of Acts, declarations, and circumstances which constitute, or accompany and explain, the fact or transaction in issue, are admissible, for or against either party as forming parts of the res gestae. Phip Ev 3rd Ed 46

Constituent facts To prove the stealing of gas from the prosecutor's main on a certain day, by means of a pipe inserted in the main—the abstraction of gas intermittently for several years by the same method is admissible, as forming one continuous taking. R v Firth 38 L J M C 54. So, as to the continuous taking of coal from a mine for several years (R v Bleasdale 2 C & K. 765), or a continuous false representation R v Welman, 22 L J M C 118, Phip Ev 54. See also illustrations (c) and (d). Where the charge is that the accused is a common cheat, the facts that they falsely represented themselves to be persons of property to several persons on different occasions are admissible. R v Roberts, 1 Cump 399.

Accompanying facts Facts, although not facts in issue, may be part of it, in the sense that they accompany, and tend to explain the main fact. Phip Ev 47. In a criminal case this class includes other criminal acts which are an inseparable part of the whole deed. In a case of stealing bank notes from a letter, the stealing of others from another letter, and replacing them by the ones in issue, is admissible as a part of the transaction. R v Salisbury, 5 C & P 155. In the case of a burglary, evidence of three other burglaries by the defendants on the same night was admitted, partly because "so intermixed that it is impossible to separate them" and partly to explain the disposal of the property taken. R v Cobden 2 F & F 833, Wiley, 2 Lea 985. In the latter case Lord Ellenborough said "If several and distinct offences blend themselves with one another, the detail of the party's whole conduct must be pursued." See also R v Ellis, 6 B & C 148. In R v Hunt, 3 B & Ald 566, the question was whether a certain meeting was seditious. The following facts were held admissible as parts of the transaction: the fact that bodies of men, organised in the same manner, had drilled at different places several days before the meeting and afterwards came from different quarters to attend the meeting on their way acting riotously and using threatening language. Upon questions of bankruptcy, where the intentions of the alleged bankrupt are often material to be enquired into it is usual to give evidence of declarations, as furnishing an explanation of transactions in their nature equivocal. Thus it has been held, that a declaration accompanying a purchase of goods is admissible evidence to show whether a person sought is living by buying and selling. Gale v Halfing 3 Stark C 58. "In a case in which murder and robbery have been shown to form parts of one transaction it has been held that recent and unexplained possession of the stolen property while it would be presumptive evidence against a prisoner on a charge of robbery would similarly be evidence against him on a charge of murder." Queen Empress v Swami, 13 M 426 (432).

Declarations accompanying acts Declarations which accompany a fact in issue or relevant facts become admissible under this section, if they form part

6 of the same transaction Wright v Tatham 5 C & F 670, R v Bliss 5 C & F 550 Hyde v Palmer, 32 L J Q B 126, Gresham v Manning 1r R 1 Cl 125 "Where an act done is evidence per se a declaration accompanying that act may well be evidence if it reflects light upon or qualifies that act." Collman J in Wright v Tatham 5 C & F 607 = 7 A & A 361 In the same case at page 693 of 5 C & F Coleridge J observed "The act itself being admissible whatever accompanies it and serves to explain its character is relevant and admissible also So when the act of a party may be given in evidence, his declarations made at the time and calculated to elucidate and explain the character and quality of the act and so connected with it as to constitute one transaction, and so as to derive credit from the act itself, are admissible in evidence Such a declaration derives credit and importance as forming part of the transaction itself Lund v Tyneborough 9 Cn h 12 Statements made by members of an unlawful assembly of their determination to force their way through a police cordon is evidence of res gestae and is admissible to prove their intention Maug Tol v Emperor 3 Rug 372 = 90 Ind Cr 918 = A I R 1925 Rang 354

Conduct to be characterized by the words must be independently material in the case "Where an act done is evidence per se, a declaration accompanying the act may well be evidence, if it reflects light upon or qualifies the act But I am not aware of any case where the act done is in its own nature irrelevant to the issue and where the declaration per se is inadmissible in which it has been held that the union of the two has rendered them admissible" Per Collman J in Wright v Tatham 7 A & L 361 see also Patten v Ferguson 18 N H 57 Wright v Tatham 5 C & F 689 Punney v Jones, 64 Conn 545, R v Bliss 5 C & F 550, Hyde v Palmer, 32 L J Q B 126

Conduct must be equivocal The utterances are admitted merely to assist in completing or giving legal significance to the conduct Hence the conduct must be equivocal or incomplete as a legal act, before the utterances can be admissible Wigmore § 1774 R v Bliss 5 C & F 550, R v Hainwright 13 Cox 171 "Many acts are in themselves of an equivocal nature, and the effect of them depends upon the intention or disposition from which they proceed, which is in general best determined by the expression accompanying them. Wherever therefore, the demeanour of a person at a given time becomes the object of inquiry his expressions as constituting a part of that demeanour, and as indicating his present intent and disposition cannot properly be rejected in evidence as irrelevant The proposition that a declaration accompanied by an act is admissible is only correct where the expressions are demonstrative of the nature of the act itself Evan's Notes on Pothier, II, 242, Cooper v Salt, 63 Ala 80 Shuel v Vandercenter 4 Tr. 264 In Corn v Chance 174 Mass 243 Holmes C J said "It is not the law that any and all conversation which happened to be going on at the time of an act can be proved if the act can be proved" "If this limitation is not attended to the utterances come in with the practical effect of a hearsay assertion, and the present principle becomes merely a pretext for using hearsay Wigmore § 1774 So also in Rauson v Haigh, 2 Bing 99, where the question was whether a man had absented himself from the realm with the intent to hinder his creditors letters written by him during his absence were put in evidence Best C J in admitting the letters observed "The going abroad was itself in equivocal act, and where an act is equivocal we must get at the motive with which it was committed" But in England declarations accompanying acts are admissible even where the act in question is not equivocal but only to explain the act in question Wright v Tatham 7 A & E 361, Lend v Tyneborough 9 Cn h 42

Words must merely aid in completing the conduct It follows also, as a necessary deduction that the utterances must be such as serve the aforesaid purpose namely, give more definite significance to the equivocal or indefinite conduct, by adding a missing part They must be such as do merely this, and not more Wigmore § 1775 "The common phraseology" said the learned author however is here so loose and inclusive that utterances may be held admissible which do not merely complete and define the very act by serving

S 6 or something said while something was being done, but something said after something done. It was not as if, while lying in the room, and while the act was being done she had said something which was heard. When the witness was called. She was first asked as to the circumstances, and stated that the deceased came out of the house bleeding, very much at the throat, and seeming very much frightened and then said something and died in ten minutes. It was then proposed to prove what she said, but Coelburn C J said it was not admissible. Anything he said uttered by the deceased at the time the act was being done would be admissible, as for instance if she had been heard to say something. "Don't hurry. But here it was something, stated by her after it was all over whatever it was, and after the act was completed." The propriety of his decision was the subject of two pamphlets, one, by W Pitt Taylor, who demed the other by the Lord Chief Justice who maintained it. Steph Dig Fe p 5. This decision is thus explained by Prof Wigmore—Of this ruling it may be said (1) From the Verbal Act point of view, the declarations did not accompany the fatal deed, was not contemporaneous and therefore was rightly excluded, from the same point of view, moreover, a declaration by one person about the deed of another could not possibly be received, (2) as involving a question under the exceptions for Spontaneous Exclamations (vide infra), the ruling in Beddingfield's Case is plainly erroneous and would almost certainly not be followed in this country. The facts of the case, in respect to the controlling influence of the woman's situation and the recency of the shock, make it one of the strongest in judicial annals. The arguments on the ensuing controversy between Chief Justice Coelburn and Mr Taylor dealt indiscriminately with the Verbal Act precedents as well as with others more germane but without attempting to examine the merits of the arguments, it is sufficient to say that the general practice in England up to that time—the practice which did not lead to rulings published in law reports—seems to have been very liberal. In the Palmer poisoning trial (1856. Notable British Trials Ser.) some of the most damaging evidence, admitted without question by any one, is supportable only on the liberal principle of Spontaneous Declarations, for example, when the deceased was asked after recovering from one of his attacks of convulsion "What do you think was the cause of that, Mr Cool?" he replied, "the pull that Palmer gave me at half past ten o'clock." In England R v Beddingfield, is not considered as a precedent. Such evidence is clearly admissible in India under Section 6 illustration (a) (Vide Sarat Dhobai 10 C 302 Chandra Mahto v Emperor, 11 C W N 266) and under section 32, clause (a) as well as under clause (3) of section 21.

Application of Verbal Act doctrine in cases of sale. "The declarations of a party when they tend to explain the fact and are necessary for that purpose, might be given in evidence. As in the case of tender, the declaration of the party of the purpose for which the money is offered is a part of the res gestae and must be proved otherwise the transaction cannot be understood." Swifts Ex 130. So a declaration accompanying a delivery of money becomes admissible where it shows the nature of the transaction because it helps 'to ascertain with what motive an act was done' Cleuser v Samuel 15 N Br 58, Strange v Donohue, 4 Ind 328.

Possessor's declaration in cases of adverse possession. The declaration of persons in possession of personal property are often received as verbal acts characterizing and explaining the nature of such possession, that is as part of the res gestae. Possession unexplained, is prima facie evidence of ownership in the possessor. But such possession is entirely consistent with ownership in another and therefore the conduct and declarations of the possessor may be material to show the nature of his possession whether as owner part owner or agent. Butt Jones § 301. So also in cases of adverse possession by a person, all declarations by the occupant importing a claim of title in himself, are admissible as verbal parts of his act of occupation serving to give it an adverse colour. Wigmore § 176. In Mc Bride v Thompson 8 Ala 650 653 Collier C J said "It is not to be understood that such declarations are admissible to every conceivable extent. True the affirmation of the party in possession that he held it in his own right or under another is proper evidence is part of res gestae, which res gestae is his continuous possession. But his declarations beyond this are no part of the subject matter, or thing done and cannot be received as such. While it is allowable to prove statements of one in possession is explanatory thereof, it is not permissible to show everything that may have been said by him in respect to the title,—as, that it was acquired by him 'bona fide' and for a valuable consideration, was paid for by the money of a third person or his own etc. Thus, we have seen in-tend of being a part of the res gestae, would be something beyond and independent of it. But declarations to show the adverse character of the possession are quite as much in the nature of facts as in the nature of a medium of proof. Webb v Richardson 42 Vt 165 (172). It is the intent to possess, with which the acts are done that gives them their character. So declarations which are made at the time of the act done and which are calculated to unfold its nature and quality are admissible in evidence. Stephen v Mcclay 36 I A 661. "The limitation of this doctrine must, however, be observed. It assumes that adverse possession is in some way material under the issues of the case (forcible entry, pre-emptive title, or otherwise) and that the declarations were made when in possession, and that they were not offered except as colouring the occupation. Subject to these limitations, the use of such declarations for this purpose is never disputed." Higmore § 1778. Where the occupier is the lessee of the person claiming adversely, his declarations to the effect that he holds the land as a tenant of the person who holds the land in adverse possession are also admissible. Holloway v Rakes, cited in 2 T R 55. The reason for such admission is that the 'possession of the tenant was connected with that of the lord, which was adverse'. Doe v Williams, Cowp 21, see also Daries v Pierce, 2 T R 53, Peaceable v Watson, 4 Tunt 16, Doe v Green, Gow 228, Carne v Nicoll, 1 Bing N C 430.

Declarations affecting revocation of will "All acts by which a testator may physically destroy or mutilate a testamentary instrument are in their nature equivocal. They may be the result of accident, or, if intentional, of various intentions. It is therefore necessary in each case to study the act done by the light of the circumstances in which it occurred, and the declarations of the testator with which it may have been accompanied, for unless it be done animo revocandi it is no revocation." Per Wilde J in Pouell v Pouell L R 1 P & D 212. So declarations of the testator in such cases are evidence where they show the quo animo. Dan v Brown, 4 Cow 490.

Declaration of a testator Statements made by the testator at the registration of the will and in judicial proceedings relating to the properties comprised in the bequest are receivable in evidence under this section as parts of res gestae. Muthu Krishna v Ram Chandra, 47 Ind Cas 611 (611)—37 M L J 489.

Declarations of a bankrupt On this principle the declarations of bankrupts on going from and returning home have been received for the purpose of showing the motive and cause of absence. Although a considerable time had elapsed. Bateman v Bailey 5 Term Rep 512. In Rawson v Haigh, 2 Bing 99, the question was whether a man had absented himself from the realm "with the intent to hinder his creditors, and so brought himself within the Bankruptcy Act." Letters written during his absence, indicating such an intention, were held admissible in proof thereof. Best C J in delivering the judgment observed "When these letters are coupled with the fact of his running away in a hurry would not the jury be warranted in finding that he went to avoid his creditors? If so there has been a clear act of bankruptcy. But it has been urged, that the second and third letters, having been written subsequently to the act of departing from the realm were not admissible in evidence. I am clearly of opinion that they were admissible. The going abroad was itself an equivocal act and where an act is equivocal, we must get at the motive with which it was committed. In ninety nine cases out of a hundred, this can only be got at by the declarations of the party himself. The declarations in order to be admissible must be made or letters written at the time of the act in question, but it is sufficient if they are written at any time during the continuance of the act, the departing the S 6 reim is a continuing act and these letters were written during its continuance." Twenty two years before this case Lord Ellenborough L C 1 in Robt v Kemp 1 Esp 233 laid down the rule as follows "Where the declaration of the bankrupt is part of the res gesta though it may show the intention of the act and thereby constitute an act of bankruptcy it may be evidence." Similarly in Prilly v Gyle 9 Bng 349 Judal C J observed, "When a bankrupt has done an equivocal act his declarations accompanying that act are admissible to explain his intentions as where he has left his dwelling house, which he may have done either in furtherance of his business or to avoid payment of a debt." In Per v R Co 1 Q B 51 Dennan L C J observed "The actual intention were both necessary to be proved. The substantive act proved alunde is the departure from home that is equivocal the declarations made during the continuance of that act shows the intention with which it was done." See also Carters v Gregory 8 Pick 168. Where the question is whether the security in question was given by way of fraudulent preference the declarations of the bankrupt must be admitted not so much as declarations but as part of his conduct from which inference is to be drawn that the security was given without prudence. Per Bosanquet J in Ridley v Gyle 9 Bng 349.

Declarations as to Domicile If the questions were, whether a person who had remained abroad for some years had acquired a domicile in the country of his residence letters written by him during such residence, showing his intention to remain there permanently or otherwise would doubtless be admissible as part of the transaction. Douet v Geophegan, 9 Ch D 155, Corkle Cas 19. "That such declarations says Prof Wigmore in the ordinary case that is, when made not prior to removal, but during removal or settling cannot conceivably be governed by the Verbal Act doctrine, is more than ought to be asserted. But having regard to the element of intentions treated in the law of domicile it may better be regarded as a separate and independent element material for its own sake and not merely as appurtenant to an act, and therefore may be shown by declarations admissible under the exception for statement of a mental condition." Wigmore § 1784.

Knowledge, belief good faith etc. A person's knowledge of a given fact may be shown either by his own declarations, or those of others conveying notice or information to him provided that the existence of the fact be first proved alunde. Thomas v Connell 4 M & W 267, Ischer v Cocks M & M 373, Phip Et 53 see also Fabrigas v Mostyn, 20 How St. Tr 137. Such statements need not of course be made contemporaneously with the happening of the fact, nor even at the precise time when the existence of the knowledge is in issue, since previous knowledge may be evidence of subsequent knowledge though not vice versa. R v Gunnell, 16 Cox 154, R v Kaye, 16 Cox 922, 293 N. Phip Et 53.

Where the question is whether a party has acted prudently, wisely or in good faith the information on which he acted whether true or false is original and material evidence and not hearsay. Friend v Hamill, 34 Md 298.

Statements as regards state of health and bodily feelings In the case of Annaird, 6 East 188 the action was upon a policy of insurance on the life of the wife of the plaintiff. The only question to be decided in that case was whether the statement of the insured's good health given at the time of effecting the policy was false. The Court in that case admitted evidence of a friend to whom the deceased stated that she was in a bad state of health. Lord Ellenborough in delivering the judgment observed "The question being what was the state of her own health at a certain period, a witness has been received to relate that which has always been received from patients to explain her own account of the cause of her being found in bed at an unreasonable hour with the appearance of being ill. She was questioned as to her bodily infirmity. She said it was of some duration several days. What were the complaints what the symptoms what the conduct of the parties themselves at the time are always received in evidence upon such inquiries and must be resorted to from the very nature of the thing. The substance of the whole conversation was that the wife had been ill at least from the 9th of November when she was examined by the surgeon and certified to be in good health, down to the day when the conversation took place, and those appearances were exhibited to the witness, and in that view I think the evidence was unexceptionable" See also R v Nicholas, 2 C & K 246 R v Gloster, 16 Cox 46

Declaration by accused found with stolen goods On a charge of larceny, when the accused is found in possession of the stolen goods and this circumstance is offered against him the accused's use of his own declaration in exoneration may be treated from the point of view of several principles. Higmore § 1781. In R v Abraham 3 Cox Cr 430 which was a case of burglary, the defendant had said, before suspicion existed that he found them in a field. Alderson B said that if he had given such an account of his possession of the stolen property to his neighbours, before suspicion existed or search made he had not the slightest doubt of its admissibility. See also R v Crouhurst 1 C & K 370, R v Smith 2 C & K 207 R v Evans 2 Cox Cr 270, R v Wilson 2 F & F 183, R v Exall, 4 F & F 922 (929)

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

(a) In the matter of the Petition of Sarat Dhobni 10 C 302, the only evidence against a prisoner charged with having voluntarily caused grievous hurt was a statement by the person injured to a third person immediately after the commission of the offence. The prisoner did not when the statement was made, deny that she had done the act complained of. The only question was whether the evidence was relevant under s 6. In delivering the judgment, Judicial J said "What therefore we have really to consider is whether the evidence is admissible under the Indian Evidence Act and having given to the matter my most careful consideration I have come to the conclusion that it is admissible. It is clear from the additional evidence now submitted by the Sessions Judge that the statement made by the girl was made in the presence of the prisoner and almost immediately after the infliction of the injuries by the tongue. I think, therefore that it falls within the purview of s 6 [see illustration (a)] of the Evidence Act.

In R v Foster, 6 C & P 325 before three learned Judges—Parke and Patterson JJ and Gurney B—the prisoner was charged with man-slaughter in killing a certain person by driving a cabriolet over him. A witness was called as a witness and he said that he was driving his wagon and that he saw the cabriolet driven by it a very rapid rate but did not see the accident and then he went on to say that immediately after, on hearing the deceased groan, he went up to him and asked

Inadmissible

(a) In Cham Mahito and ors v The Emperor 11 C W N 266 a chowdhar deposited that one Gopal ran up to him and stated that he had seen the accused persons murder his mistress whom he had met by assignation and that he had run away from the place of occurrence to save his life. What interval of time passed between the murder and the alleged statement did not appear. In declining this evidence as inadmissible Hobhouse and Witter, JJ said "We are also of opinion that the statements of Gopal are not admissible against the accused. They are hearsay and proved only by those who heard them. They are not made in the presence of the accused. Hearsay evidence is ordinarily inadmissible and the exceptions are to be found in the Indian Evidence Act. Other exceptions could not and should not be added. The learned Sessions Judge has relied on section 6 of the Evidence Act and illustration (i) to it and also Sarat Dhobni's Case 10 C 302. The facts of the case of Sarat Dhobni are very clearly distinguishable. There the person who made the statement was dead and she was the victim. The statement in that case was closely bound up with the occurrence and on the facts proved the learned Judge held that it was also admissible under s 6. In order to make the statement of a bystander admissible and Gopal must be supposed to be a bystander, it must have been made as contemplated by section 6 and illustration (a) to it, at the time the transaction was taking place.

S 6

Admissible

him what was the matter. It was objected that what the deceased said in the absence of the prisoner is to what had caused the accident was not receivable in evidence, but the three learned Judges agreed that under the circumstances it ought to be received. See also Mason v Kinnand, 6 East 193.

In Thompson v Teraumon, Slinner 402, tried before Chief Justice Holt, sitting at Nisi prius it was held that what a woman said immediately on a hurt being received by her and before she had time to contrive anything for her own advantage might be given in evidence. This rule is there stated to rest on the absence of time or opportunity for concoction.

In Reg v Lunny 6 Cox C C 177, at a trial for murder, a girl heard a cry and then found the deceased weak and injured and he made a statement immediately on her coming up to him. Chief Justice Mohan admitted it as a part of the res gestae.

In Hutchins v Railroad Co, 128 Iowa, 279 the plaintiff fell from a street car, by reason of negligence in failure to let down the step. As she fell she exclaimed "yes let down the step after I fall." The declaration was admitted as part of res gestae.

In R v Northcott (1916) 1 K B 347, which was a case for indecent assault a statement made in answer to an imperative question was admitted or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction. If the transaction has terminated and the statement is made, the statement is irrelevant. The admissibility is dependent on continuity. The statement to be relevant must be made when the transaction is in progress. When the transaction is concluded, the statement of a bystander is clearly inadmissible under the section. In fact it would be dangerous to accept the statement of a bystander made after the conclusion of the transaction, when an interval has elapsed disconnecting the thread of the transaction. In the present case Gopal, if he made any statement, made it after the transaction was over. We do not exactly know what the interval between the murder of Lily and Gopal's statement to the Chowkidar was. Gopal was not then in such condition of mind as to exclude the supposition of his fabricating evidence or his being tutored. The evidence does not make out his state of mind to be such as the Sessions Judge described it to have been. He was perfectly in his senses at the Chowkidar's and Maniram. He talked quite sensibly and Maniram did not find any peculiarity in his mental or physical condition. We can not therefore hold that his statements are admissible." See also Joshi Sahai v Crown, 34 P R 1914 Cr = 27 Ind Cas 664 = 226 P L R 1915.

Inadmissible

Where one of the prosecution witnesses, stated that one of the accused went to him after the murder and admitted that he had killed the deceased, and was prepared to confess, and the witness further stated that he went to the shop at once and there heard of the bystanders talking that 4 persons had committed the murder, and this portion of the evidence was admitted by the Sessions Judge under s 6 illustration (a). On appeal the High Court held this evidence not to be admissible. Polhor Singh v Emperor, 7 Lah L J 436 = 26 Panj L R 674 = A I R 1915 Lah 578.

The statement of a person not examined as a witness through the mouth of a witness cannot be evidence as part of the Res gestae if the statement though made at the time of the occurrence was not in respect of the occurrence itself but with regard to an event which took place a year ago which was altogether a different action.

Admissible.

Inadmissible

S 6

Ahmaduddin v Emperor 12 C L J 701=A I R 1926 CIL 139=73 C 372=92 Ind C 112=27 Cr L J 266

In the case of Director of Public Prosecution v Christie (1914) A C 518=83 L J K B 1097 the respondent was charged with an indecent assault on a child of tender years. At the trial the child was called as a witness and gave evidence not on oath under the provisions of the English Children Act 1908 s 30. The mother of the child and a police constable were called to give evidence of statements made by the child very shortly after the commission of the offence identifying the prisoner as the person who had committed the assault and giving particulars of it. To this the accused replied, "I am innocent." In delivering the judgment Lord Atkin said "The boy's statement was so separated by time and circumstances that it was not, I think admissible as part of the res gestae" see also R v Thomson (1912) 3 K B 19, R v Osborne, 1905, 1 K B 551.

On an indictment for murder, it appearing that the deceased, with her throat cut through, came suddenly out of a room, in which she left the prisoner, who also had his throat cut and was speechless and that she said something immediately after coming out of the room, and a few minutes before she died—the question being whether it was murder or suicide. Held that the statement was not admissible as part of the res gestae the transaction being considered over. R v Bedingfield, 14 Cox 341 per Cockburn C J after consulting Manisty and Field JJ. See also R v Goddard 15 Cox 7. Where Haulins J rejected a somewhat similar statement made ten minutes after the injury and Gilbey v Great Western Ry 102 U T 202.

A is charged with wounding B with a stone. Testimony of B that immediately after he was struck a lady going past pointing to the prisoner's door, and though not in prisoner's hearing, "the person who threw the stone went in there" held inadmissible as hearsay. R v Gibson, 18 Q B D 537, see also Reg v Wainwright, 13 Cox C C 171, Reg v Pool, 13 Cox. C C 172n.

S 6

Admissible

(b) Statements made by members of an unlawful assembly of their determination to force their way through a police cordon is evidence of res gestae and is admissible to prove their intention Mungol v Emperor 3 Rang 352=90 Ind Cas 918=A I R 1925 Rang 54

Inadmissible

(b) On a charge of treasonable conspiracy, declarations made out of Court by the prisoner that "when he planned a certain convention, he had not intended to destroy the king and the government" are inadmissible R v Hardy 24 How St Trial 1094 The reason for rejection is thus stated by Eyre C J "Since, if it were otherwise, every man if he were in difficulty, or in view of one, might make declarations to suit his own case Phip Ev 3rd Ed 61

(c) Where a person was charged with having received illegal gratification under s 161 of the Penal Code on three specific occasions in a certain year, from a firm, held, evidence of similar but unconnected instances of receiving illegal gratification from the same firm in subsequent years is inadmissible under ss 5-13 of the Evidence Act Empress v Hyapoor, 6 C 655=8 C L R 197

Declarations under this section, whether an exception to the Hearsay Rule The theory of the Hearsay rule is that, when a human utterance is offered as evidence of the truth of the fact asserted in it, the credit of the speaker becomes the basis of our inference and therefore the assertion can be received only when made upon the stand, subject to the test of cross examination. If, therefore, an extrajudicial utterance is offered, not as an assertion to evidence the matter asserted but without reference to the truth of the matter asserted the Hearsay rule does not apply. The utterance is then merely not obnoxious to that rule. It may or may not be received, according as it has any relevancy in the case, but if it is not received this is in no way due to the Hearsay rule. For example in a prosecution against a defaulting embezzler Doe, it is desired to show that after leaving his employment he concealed himself and passed under a false name, here his statement 'My name is Roe' is not offered to evidence that his name was in truth Roe, on the contrary it will be shown that his name was Doe and the statement is not used as hearsay. Or on an issue of insanity it is offered to show that the party said "I am the Emperor of Africa" here the utterance is not offered as evidence that he was in truth the Emperor but on the contrary as circumstantially indicating his mental aberration. Again in an action upon a warranty of a horse it is offered to show that the defendant at the time of the bargain asserted that the horse was only four years old here the plaintiff will immediately proceed to prove that the horse is nevertheless twelve years old he has not offered the defendant's statement with any view to using as evidence of its truth, but with just the contrary purpose. So also in an issue of mitigation of damages in an action for battery the defendant offers to prove that the plaintiff just before the assault, provoked the defendant by a remark, that he was a liar here the defendant by no means desires the jury to take this utterance as evidence of the truth of the fact asserted he would be much disappointed if they should accept it in that a post, his purpose is merely by this utterance to evidence the anger which he naturally felt upon hearing it. The prohibition of the Hearsay rule then does not apply to all words or utterances merely as such. The Hearsay rule excludes extrajudicial utterances only when offered for a special purpose namely as a statement to evidence the truth of the matter asserted Hugmore § 176b Rule ab 5 of the Evidence Act

When a declaration accompanies an act or conduct it is admissible under this section if it explains the act or conduct Hyle v Palmer 20 L J Q B

126, Graham Hotel v. Manning I R 1 C L 125, Agassiz v. London Tram Co., 21 W R 199, Phip v. 3rd El 48. Such declarations attach to the act or conduct so as to have legal effect. The conduct or act standing alone has no definite significance or at best is equivocal, and its whole legal purport or tenor is to be ascertained precisely by considering the words accompanying it. These declarations are not assertions to evidence the truth of the matters asserted. So they do not fall within the rule of Hearsay evidence. These utterances are admitted in evidence not in violation of section 60 of the Evidence Act but as verbal part of the Act, or in the common phrase as a verbal act. Inde Wigmore § 1772. "Declarations of a party said Clifford J. in Insurance Co. v. Morley 8 Wall 411, 'to a transaction, though he was not under oath if they were made at the time any act was done which is material as evidence in any issue before the Court, and if they were made to explain the act or to unfold its nature and quality and were of a character to have that effect, are treated in the law of evidence, as verbal acts and as such are not hearsay, but may be introduced, with the principal act which they accompany and to which they relate, as original evidence because they are regarded as a part of the principal act and their introduction in evidence is deemed necessary to define that act and unfold its nature and quality.'

Verbal Act doctrine—Strict interpretation of—much valuable evidence is left out. From the illustrative cases given above it is clear that much valuable evidence cannot be admitted if the Verbal act doctrine be too strictly followed as in R. v. Bellingfield, 14 Cox 341. This case was the subject matter of much controversy between Cockburn C. J. who decided the case and Justice John Pitt Saylor, the well known author of Taylor on Evidence. The rule on this point is now obtained in England and is thus stated by Phipson in his Law of Evidence "Acts, declarations and incidents which constitute or accompany and explain the fact or transaction in issue are admissible for or against either party as forming parts of res gestae the main conditions being that the matters tendered should form the natural incidents of the act substantially contemporaneous with it and qualify, explain or complete it in some material respect." Phipson 44—46. Roscoe Cr. Ev 26.

But in admitting such evidence, both in England and in India confusion is made between declarations which are verbal acts and declarations which fall within the Hearsay rule and as such can not be admitted in evidence unless it is admissible under some other section. In India this confusion is mainly due to illustration (a) to this section. The illustration runs as thus "A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B or by the bystanders at the beating or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction, is a relevant fact." In Chain Mahto v. Emperor 11 C W N 266 at p. 270 the Court said "We are also of opinion that the statements of Gopal are not admissible against the accused. They are hearsay and proved only by those who heard them. They were not made in the presence of the accused. Hearsay evidence is ordinarily inadmissible and the exceptions are to be found in the Indian Evidence Act. Other exceptions cannot and should not be added." Then it adds at p. 271 "In order to make the statement of a bystander admissible and Gopal must be supposed to be a bystander it must have been made as contemplated by section 6 and illustration (a) to it, at the time the transaction was taking place or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction. If the transaction has terminated and then the statement is made the statement is irrelevant. It is submitted that the first part of their Lordships' judgment contradicts the latter part of the same judgment. In the first part it is distinctly stated that Gopal's statement violates the Rule against Hearsay and as such it should not be accepted. But in the latter part it is hinted that had the statement been made during the continuance of the transaction the statement would have been admissible under this section. So illustration (a) must be so interpreted as to admit declarations which do not violate the Hearsay rule. Therefore it is clear that under this section such declarations are admissible if they are not in violation of the Hearsay rule as laid down in s. 60. Under this section, declarations which are verbal acts and which explain or elucidate the conduct of a party the conduct being independently material to the issue and equivocal, are admissible in evidence if they accompany the conduct. Inde Wigmore § 1772.

S 6 Declarations falling under Verbal Act doctrine must not be confused with Spontaneous Exclamations. Certain kinds of statements are admissible, by universal concession but which do not fall within the Verbal Act doctrine. The typical case presented is a statement or exclamation, by a participant, immediately after an injury declaring the circumstances of the injury, or by a person present at an affray a riotous collision, or other exciting occasion, asserting the circumstances as observed by him. Now this kind of statement cannot ordinarily be accounted for as one to which the prohibition of the Hearsay rule is not applicable. The Hearsay rule as already noted forbids the use of an assertion, made out of Court, as testimony to the truth of the fact asserted. Whenever, therefore, an utterance is used as testimony that the fact asserted in it did occur as asserted, and on the credit of the speaker as a credible person it is being used testimonially, and is within the prohibition of the Hearsay rule. Now this testimonial use is precisely the use that is made of the present class of statements which are called "Spontaneous Exclamations in America" in default of a better name. Lanier v People 104 Ill 256, Michum v State, 11 Ga 621 Dismukes v State, 83 Va 259. These exclamations differ from declarations falling under the Verbal Act doctrine as part of the same transaction in the latter class there is by hypothesis a material equivocal act which needs to be coloured and completed in legal significance by the word of the actor accompanying it—for example, the occupation of land the handing over of money the tearing of a will. That fundamental requirement is lacking in this class of cases. Moreover they clearly do involve the testimonial use of the assertion to prove the truth of the fact asserted—for example when the injured person declares who assaulted him or whether the locomotive bell was rung, or whether the bystander at an affray exclaims that the defendant shot first. Higmore § 1746. Some of these declarations are admitted under the English law and under the Indian Evidence Act as falling within the term res gestae. Vide, Thompson v Trevelyan Skinner 402, see on Kinnaird 6 East 193. In the Petition of Sarat Dhobani, 10 C 302 Cham v Mahto v Emperor, 11 C W N 266. In the last mentioned case the facts of which are stated at p 89, the Court observed "In the present case Gopal, if he had made any statement made it after the transaction was over. We do not exactly know what the interplay between the murder of Lily and Gopal's statement to the Chowkidar was. Gopal was not then in such condition of mind as to exclude the supposition of his fabricating evidence or his being tutored. The evidence does not make out his state of mind to be such as the Sessions Judge decries it to have been. He was perfectly in his senses at the Chowkidar's and Monirud did not find any peculiarity in his mental or physical condition. We cannot therefore hold that his statements are admissible." From the above observations it is clear that the statement of Gopal which were testimonial assertions and as such falling under the Hearsay rule would have been admitted in evidence had the other requirements been fulfilled. But those requirements are only necessary to prove the truthfulness of the assertions made. These are hearsay evidence and according to section 69 of the Evidence Act they are inadmissible. Such declarations cannot be admitted as being part of the same transaction under section 6. Sections 6—11 of the Evidence Act only state what facts are logically relevant as cause and effect and when that relation has been established it is subject to Hearsay rule and other rules contained in the Act. So a very important class of evidence named as Spontaneous Exclamations by the American law is to be left out of consideration if we strictly construe the Indian Evidence Act. In the next few pages we shall show how important this class of evidence is and provision should be made in the Act for the inclusion of this class as an exception to the Hearsay rule. But so long as that is not done in our opinion this class of evidence is clearly inadmissible under the strictly construed or is being used in the same transaction. Similarly it has been held that section 11 is controlled by section 32 of the Act. Bela Jamm v Mohabir 31 A 311 39 A 121 51 A 11 Ind C 116, see also J. D. Sethna v Mir a. Mub 19 Bom 12 R. 1917 decided elaborately under section 11.

Spontaneous Exclamations are genuine exceptions to the Hearsay Rule.
Spontaneous Exclamations are admitted as direct exceptions to the Hearsay rule The general principle for admitting these statements is based on the experience that, under certain external circumstances of physical shock, a stress of nervous excitement may be produced which stills the reflective faculties and removes their control, so that the utterance which then occurs is a spontaneous and sincere response to the actual sensations and perceptions already produced by the external shock. Since this utterance is made under the immediate and uncontrolled domination of the senses, and during the brief period when considerations of self interest could not have been brought fully to bear by reasoned reflection, the utterance may be taken as particularly trustworthy (or, at least, as lacking the usual grounds of untrustworthiness) and thus as expressing the real tenor of the speaker's belief as to the facts just observed by him, and may therefore be received as testimony to those facts. Higmore § 1717 State v McLaglin, 138 La 958. In Thompson v Tielman, Skinner 402 which was an action for assault and battery upon the wife of the plaintiff Lord Holt J "allowed that what the wife said immediately upon the hurt received and before she had time to devise or contrive anything for her own advantage might be given in evidence. In Mason v Armand, 6 East 193, counsel for the plaintiff contended that "declarations by the wife upon her elopement from her husband, accusing him of misconduct, could not be given in evidence against him in an action against the adulterer." Lord Ellenborough LC said "It is not so clear that her declarations made at the time would not be evidence under any circumstances. If she declared at the time that she fled from immediate terror of personal violence from the husband I should admit the evidence, though not if it were a collateral declaration of some matter which happened at another time. In R v Foster 6 C & P 32, the statement made by the deceased as to the cause of his death was admitted. In that case Paine J observed "It was the best possible testimony that under the circumstances can be adduced to show what it was that had knocked the deceased down." See also Cham Mahto v Emperor, 11 C W N 266.

The reason for its admission is thus stated by Nisbet J in Melham v State 11 Ga. 621 "They derive their credibility not from their veracity, but from their relation to the transaction out of which they spring. Made at the same time with the main fact, evoked by it without premeditation, and for that reason explanatory of the mind and purpose of the actor as it is involved in that fact, they are presumed to be as veritable, as reliable, as the fact is itself and would derive no enhancement of their credibility from the oath of the declarant. (In this case) his coming to where the witness was seems to have been voluntary and the exclamation spontaneous. The short period of time that had intervened, and the agitated manner of the prisoner, forbid the idea of deliberate design. His distressed and agitated appearance when he reached the witness exhibits a state of mind incompatible with such a belief." So these statements should be believed as they were made without premeditation or artifice, and without a view to consequence. Hart v Powell 18 Ga. 639, see also Melham v State, 11 Ga. 621. When it is rightly guarded in its practical application there is no principle in the law of evidence more safe in its results. In the ordinary concerns of life no one would doubt the truth of these declaration, or hesitate to regard them, uncontradicted, as conclusive. Their probative force would not be questioned." Insurance Co v Mosley 8 Wall 397. Brownell v R Co, 47 Mo 246, Harriman v Stoe 57 Mo 93.

The reason for their reception is thus forcefully stated by Brown J in State v Hager, 61 Me 195. We think that the precise ground upon which their admission (evidence of outcries running in an infant) should be placed in a case like this is substantially the same as that upon which dying declarations are admissible. No one doubts that the exclamations of these two women embodied the truth as it appeared to each and that the cries of alarm and supplication uttered by any and all human beings under similar circumstances would express their perceptions of existing facts as truly as if elicited by the action of all the oaths known in Christendom. See also Disraeli v State, 83 Ala 259. Little Lock v Leverett 18 Ark 343, McLeod v Gunther 80 Ky 105. But before giving any weight to such statements made by a declarant, the Court must be satisfied that it was made at a time when it was forced out as the

S 6 utterances of a truth forced out against his will or without his will, and at a period of time so closely connected with the transaction that there has been no opportunity for subsequent reflection or determination as to what it might or might not be wise for him to say. U S v King, 31 Fed 314, Travelers' Ins v Sheppard 80 Gr 711

Reason for accepting such statements In order to admit evidence of such statements, death absence etc need not be shown. This kind of statement is not admitted as an exception to the Hearsay rule, on the ground of convenience of requiring the persons attendance upon the witness box. But it is admitted for its superior trustworthiness. Hence it is desirable that such unbiassed testimony should be admitted. "This extra judicial assertion being better than is likely to be obtained from the same person upon the stand & necessity or expediency for resorting to it." Wigmore § 1718. To preclude this proof would be to shut out the party's only defence. Lampkin J in Hart v Pouell, 18 Gr 694. Because it is impossible for a witness to convey such scenes to the mind and their effect and influence upon it" so this kind of evidence is more convincing than the testimony of the persons themselves sometime after the occurrence. Mobile & M R Co v Ashcraft, 48 Ala 31. "We merely say that, whatever force is given to dying declarations is the utterances of those who on account of their peculiar situation may be relied on to tell the exact truth as it appears to them must needs be accorded also to the exclamations of mental terror caused by a deadly assault. To reject the evidence afforded by the agonized entreaties of one standing face to face with death in the person of a murderer with an uplifted weapon when we would accept the account of the affair afterwards given by the enfeebled victim, with perceptions and recollections darkened and dimmed by the mists and shadows of approaching dissolution would be, we think, but a bad sample of the perfection of human reason." Per Barrow J in State v Wagner, 61 Me 193.

Requisites for admitting such evidence (1) Nature of the occasion—There must be some shock startling enough to produce this nervous excitement and render the utterance spontaneous and unreflecting. Such a limitation does not appear to be in terms expressly required in the judicial definitions, but it is a necessary implication from their language. Moreover in practically all of the instances—involving statements after corporal injury by violence—such conditions are in fact present, and this requirement is fulfilled. Wigmore § 1750, see also Thompson v Tietanum, Skm 402.

(2) Time of the utterance The utterance must have been before there has been time to contrive and misrepresent i.e. while the nervous excitement may be supposed still to dominate and the reflective powers to be yet in abeyance. It is to be observed that the statement need not be strictly contemporaneous with the exciting cause, they may be subsequent to it provided there has not been time for the exciting influence to lose its sway and to be dissipated. Wigmore § 1750. In Mitchum v State, 11 Gr 626 Asbet J said "Where the books say, when the Court has said that the declarations must be contemporaneous with the act [in question] which must depend upon the application of the principle upon which the rule is founded. If the declarations appear to spring out of the true action if they elucidate it if they are voluntary and spontaneous, and if they are made at a time so near to it as is reasonably to produce the idea of deliberate design then they are to be regarded as contemporaneous." "What the law altogether directs to is not after speech but after thought. That the declarations shall be or appear to be spontaneous is indispensable and it is for this reason alone that they are required to be speedy." Bleakley C J in Travelers' Ins Co v Sheppard, 80 Gr 751. So there is no margin in time somewhere between a few hours and a few days or a few weeks on one side of which declarations in favour of a party are admissible in evidence while on the other they are inadmissible. Unless such complaints form a part of the res gestae they are inadmissible, and if they are so far detached from the occurrence as to admit of the deliberate design and be the product of calculating policy on the part of the actors, then they cannot be regarded as a part of the res gestae. Kennedy v R Co 130 N Y 66. While it is said that the declarations must be contemporaneous with the main fact no rule can be formulated by which to determine how near, in point of time they must be. No two cases are exactly alike, and the determination of this question is always inseparable from the circumstances of the case it tries. The transaction in question may be such that the res gestae would extend over a day, or a week, or a month. Jacl v Mutual R F Life Assn 51 C C A 36. 'Were the statements' said Baker J in Solice v State, 21 Ariz 592, 'a part of the res gestae? We have examined a large number of authorities upon the abstract propositions involved in the rules on which testimony is received or not received as part of the res gestae. These authorities satisfy us that the close connection in time between the statement or declaration and the act of which it is said to be a part is an element for consideration, that being close in point of time is not, however, all the basis for receiving such evidence and that the ultimate test is spontaneity or instructiveness and logical relation to the main event, that the tendency of the modern cases is to be liberal in the reception of such testimony. In a collision case, evidence was admitted that, as the defendant steamer was backing clear of the plaintiff brig, the pilot of the steamer, who was on the bridge, stamped his foot and said 'The damned helm is still a-starboard.' The Schwalbe, Sw 1b 521. In R v Lundy, 6 Cox Cr 477, the deceased's statements on the irritability of help were admitted. In an abortion case the abortion took place on the 21st March. The woman's statement on March 28, that she had done it herself was excluded. Thompson's Case, (1912) 7 Cr App 276. The question was, whether A cut B's throat, or whether B cut it herself. A statement made by B when running out of the room in which her throat was cut immediately after it had been, was not allowed to be proved by Coelburn L U J in R v Beddingfield, 14 Cox Cr 341.

In Hutchins v Railroad Co, 128 Iowa, 279 the plaintiff fell from a street car, by reason of negligence in failure to let down a folding step. As she fell she exclaimed, "Yes, let down the step after I fall." The declaration was a typical instance of res gestae. It was clearly admissible, both as a part of the transaction and having been received, as evidence also that step was not let down until after the plaintiff fell. In this case the statement was spontaneous and coincident with the event. But declarations admissible under this exception are not always so near in point of time to the fact which is the subject of proof. In Rothroel v City Cedar Rapids 128 Iowa, 252 the declarations which referred to the manner and place in which plaintiff had sustained injuries, but were made on the arrival home, within half an hour after the occurrence, were held admissible, it appearing that she was still suffering from the injuries and had the marks upon her. But where declarations were made over a mile from the place of accident, and an hour afterwards and were not spontaneous, but elicited by questions it was held that they are not admissible. White v City of Monquetti, 140 Mich 310. In America it has been said that the modern tendency is to extend rather than to narrow this exception to the Hearsay rule and to consider the grounds which formerly excluded such declarations as affecting their weight. Jacl v Life Association, 113 Fed 49.

"Since the application of the principle thus depends entirely on the circumstances of each case it is therefore impossible to regard rulings upon this limitation as having in strictness the force of precedents. To argue from one case to another on this question of time to derive or contrive is to trifle with principle and cumber the records with unnecessary and unprofitable quibbles. Higmore § 1750. The Court must consider the circumstances of each case (Vicksburg R Co v O'Brien 119 U S 99) and in determining this it considers whether the statements are spontaneous whether there was an opportunity for fabrication or a likelihood of it, the lapse of time between the act and the declaration relating to it, the attendant excitement, the mental and physical condition of the declarant, and other circumstances important in determining whether the trustworthiness of the unsworn statements is such that they may safely go to the jury. Per Dabell J in Houch v Great Northern Railway Co, 133 Minn.

(3) subject of the utterance — The utterance must relate to the circumstances of the occurrence preceding it. This is perhaps a cautionary rather than a

S 6 logically necessary restriction. If, for example, after an assault, the injured person exclaims that in the previous week the attacking party had tried to shoot him, there is perhaps no less reason for trusting that part of his utterances than any other part. Nevertheless it is possible to argue that such utterances imply to some extent a process of reflection or deliberate reasoning, and practically there is not the same necessity for employing them. It seems clear on precedent, that utterances thus relating to some distinct prior circumstance would not be received. Wigmore § 1750, see Ahynuddin v Emperor, 92 Ind Cas 417 = 13 C 372.

Knowledge, Infancy, Infamy, etc. This evidence strictly speaking is a kind of testimonial evidence. So before admitting such evidence it should be shown that the declarant had an opportunity of personally observing the matter of which he speaks. Any one possessing such qualifications would be a competent speaker. In particular, a bystander's declarations would be admissible. By the general principle applicable to the exceptions to Hearsay Rule, the declarant must at least not lack the usual testimonial qualifications that would be required of him if testifying on the stand. Wigmore § 1751. But infancy is not such a disqualification (Soto v Ferr, 12 Ariz. 36, Beal Doyle v Carr, 85 Ark. 479), neither infamy by conviction of crime. Neely v State, 56 S. W. 627. The disqualification of insanity should probably be treated for the present purpose like that of infancy. Wilson State 19 Tex. Cr. 50, Wigmore § 1751.

Certain Spurious Limitations borrowed from the Verbal Act doctrine. Under certain conditions only verbal parts of acts are admissible in evidence. They are as follows: (1) There must be a main or principal act, relevant under the issue, the significance of which needs to be made definite, (2) The words must genuinely elucidate or give character to this act, (3) The words must be by the actor himself not, by another person, and (4) the words must be precisely contemporaneous with the act. Now all four of these limitations, though entirely peculiar to the Verbal Act doctrine, have been misapplied in some cases to the present exception for spontaneous exception. That it is a case of misapplication is clear for here the concern is with a hearsay or testimonial use of words, while there no such function is attributed to them. Wigmore § 1752. So in Gresham v Manning, 14 R. 1 C. L. 125 O'Brien J., said "The act which they (declarations) accompany should be one that would be evidence in the case without any such declarations. But see R v Edwards, 12 Cox Cr. 230. This form of expression is frequent enough. But such a limitation has no place in this Exception. What is required here is merely that there shall be some stirring occurrence calculated to produce nervous excitement and spontaneous utterance." Wigmore § 1753.

As regards the second limitation, ordinarily declarations which do not in some way or other elucidate or explain the occurrence are not given in evidence. So from this aspect the limitation becomes a real one. In Mason v Annand, 6 E.R. 193 in which declarations of wife upon elopement, charging the husband with misconduct causing it were admitted. Lord Ellenborough observed "I should not admit it, if it were a collateral declaration of some matter which happened at another time." So also in Lyass v Framway Co 21 W. R. 199 where after an accident the conductor mentioned that the driver has been off the line five or six times to day, Kelley C.B. observed "The conductor's remark had no relation to the accident in question, but referred to the conduct of the driver at another time or times."

As regards the third limitation of Verbal Act doctrine that the declaration must be that of the Actor himself it should be remembered that that limitation has no application in the present exception. A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B or by the bystanders at the beating or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction, is a relevant fact. Vide illustration (v). So also in Milne v Leisler, 7 H. N. 786 796 Pollock C.B. said "Courts so far as they can, are disposed to receive in evidence whatever can throw light on the matter in and advance the search after truth. No doubt for that reason, in the case of a crowd, when an accident occurs and the common person is in question it may be asked whether some one did not call out 'Shame!', for it is part of the res gestae. But in R v Gibson L R 18 Q B D 537 541, which was a case for assault, immediately after the stone was thrown, a lady going past, pointing to the prisoner's door and, 'the person who threw the stone went in there.' This evidence was excluded.

Under the general Verbal Act doctrine it is necessary that the actor's utterance accompany the act, and thus be precisely contemporaneous with it, otherwise it does not make a part of the act itself, but is merely an ordinary testimonial assertion of a past act. But under the present exception an utterance is, by hypothesis, offered as an assertion to evidence the fact asserted and the only condition is that it shall have been made spontaneously, i.e. is the natural effusion of a state of excitement. Now this state of excitement may well continue to exist after the exciting fact has ended. The declaration, therefore, may be admissible, even though subsequent to the occurrence provided it is near enough in time to allow the assumption that the exciting influence continued. It is therefore an error to apply to the present Exception the Verbal Act rule that the utterance must be precisely contemporaneous with the act or occurrence. Hyam v Director of Public Prosecutions [1975] A.C. 1353. The case of R v Bedingfield, 14 Cox C 341 fully reported at p 85 is an example of this. As an exception to Spontaneous Exclamation the evidence is clearly admissible and the ruling of Cockburn C J is plainly erroneous. The facts of the case, in respect to the controlling influence of the woman's situation and the recency of the shock, make it one of the strongest in judicial annals. Of course from the Verbal Act point of view, as the declaration did not accompany the fatal deed, was not contemporaneous, and therefore was rightly excluded. Vide Wigmore § 1756

Statement made to the police by one accused. One P came to a police station and handed in a written report in which there were allegations that certain persons had committed the offence of riot, one of them being a Zemindar named M. The report was read out to P and as soon as he heard it, he informed the police that M was not present at the riot and that he had made no charge against him. He stated that the report was written by one J subsequently M prosecuted J and P for an offence under section 211 of the Penal Code. Held that the statement made by P to the police was not admissible against J either as part of a confession or as part of the transaction under investigation under section 6 Jalpa v Emperor 30 Ind C 487 = 17 A.L.J. 760

7 Facts which are the occasion, cause or effect, immediate or otherwise, of relevant facts, or facts in occasion, cause or effect of facts in issue, or which constitute the state of things under which they happened, or which afforded an opportunity for their occurrence or transaction, are relevant

Illustrations

- (a) The question is, whether A robbed B
The facts that, shortly before the robbery, B went to a fair with money in his possession, and that he showed it or mentioned the fact that he had it, to third persons, are relevant
- (b) The question is, whether A murdered B
Marks on the ground, produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed, are relevant facts
- (c) The question is, whether A poisoned B
The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison and habits of B, known to A, which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison are relevant facts

Scope of the section Every fact is connected with numberless other facts by ties more or less close. It may often be difficult for a Judge to say whether a fact can or cannot be properly said to "form part of a transaction" within the meaning of section 6. Section 7 meets this difficulty by embracing a larger group of facts. Leaving the transaction itself, it provides for the admission of several classes of facts, which though not possibly forming part of the trans-

S 7 section are yet connected with it in particular modes, and so are relevant when the transaction itself is under enquiry. These modes of connection are (1) as being the occasion or cause of a fact, (2), as being its effect, (3) as giving opportunity for its occurrence, (4) as constituting the state of things under which it happened. They are in truth different aspects of causation, and the reason for the admission of facts of this nature is that, if you want to decide whether a thing occurred or not, almost the first natural step is to see whether there were facts at hand calculated to produce or afford opportunity for its occurrence or facts which its occurrence was calculated to produce. In order moreover properly to appreciate a fact it is necessary to know the state of things in which it occurred. For all these points the present section provides. Cunningham, p 91

Limit of the rule The rule therefore, that facts may be regarded as relevant which can be shown to stand either in the relation of cause or in relation of effect to the fact to which they are said to be relevant, may be accepted as true, subject to the caution that, when an inference is to be founded upon the existence of such a connection, every step by which the connection is made out must either be proved, or be so probable under the circumstances of the case that it may be presumed without proof. Stephen's Introduction p 70

Principle The principle contained in this section has a logical foundation (Vide Wigmore § 30-33). So 'evidence relating to collateral facts is only admissible when such facts will, if established, establish a reasonable presumption as to the matter in dispute' Per Lord Watson in Metropolitan Asylum v Hill, 47 L J 29. But the competency of a collateral fact to be used as basis of legitimate argument is not to be determined by the conclusiveness of the inferences, it may afford in reference to the litigated fact. It is enough if it may tend, even in a slight degree to elucidate the enquiry or to assist, though remotely to a determination probably founded on truth. Holmes v Goldsmith, 147 U S 150, 160

Occasion, Cause and Effect An event may be evidenced circumstantially by a cause or by an effect. This mode of inference is available in three forms, namely, prospectively, retrospectively, and concomitantly. For example, the sinking of a ship is evidenced prospectively by the presence of a storm in the vicinity, the occurrence of a fire is evidenced retrospectively by the blackened ruins left as its traces, the revolution of car wheels is evidenced concomitantly by the motion of the car, to the person riding in it. Wigmore § 436

Prior cause, as the basis of inference That a corporal injury will cause a permanent disability to work, that noxious fumes will cause the destruction of herbage—these are examples of this sort of inference. The evidential offer may be put in this way. The fact of injury is offered as evidence that at a future time there will ensue an inability to work, the fact of noxious fumes is offered as evidence that at a future time there will ensue no herbage. Such evidential offers would unquestionably be recognized as proper. Wigmore § 436

Subsequent Effect, as the basis of inference That the falling barometer indicates the existence of an atmospheric disturbance, that the derelict car indicates the prior occurrence of a collision or other destructive event,—these are instances of inferences from effect back to the existence of a cause. Such inferences, however rarely raise evidential questions in practice. Thus, in the illustration above cited, the destruction of the herbage is evidently relevant, without question as indicating the same destructive influence of atmosphere, soil, or the like, but in the further process of fixing on the fumes in question as the precise cause, either we proceed to offer that specific inference through an expert witness, who asserts as a matter of professional experience that the appearance of the herbage indicates specific fumes as the cause (in which case no question of circumstantial relevancy arises) or in attempting, otherwise to fix upon the fumes as one of the probable destructive influences, it must first be shown that they have this tendency to destroy herbage, so that in evidencing this tendency, the argument is as upon auxiliary inferences and has travelled into the scope of a new category of fact. Thus in general, the inference from effect to the existence or operation of a cause is usually so proper as to be unquestionable, or else leads to a new controversy is to whether the supposed cause has any causing tendency of the alleged sort, and this new controversy involves a different sort of inference—Wigmore § 436

Concomitant Events, as the basis of inference An event cannot be inferred from its concomitant event except on the assumption that they have a common cause, or unless the inference is really not one of concomitancy but of cause and effect. An example of the latter sort is the inference of fire from smoke, i.e., it is really the inference of fire as a cause from smoke as the effect. An example of the former sort is the inference of revolving wheels from the motion of the car, i.e., there is really, in inference, first from the motion to the motive power as a cause, and next, from the motive power to the revolution of the wheels as a common effect of the same cause. In some instances, however for practical purposes, this latter analysis may be neglected and the inference treated as a single one—Wigmore § 436

Real meaning of cause or effect It must be noted from the remarks stated above that, that which is the main or first apparent inference offered is upon analysis to be resolved into an inference of the present sort, i.e. in which the proposition to be evidenced is a tendency, capacity, or the like. In general the inference is from specific instances of observed effects—exhibitions or illustrations—to the supposed tendency, capacity or quality producing them. This inference from effects to capacity or tendency to produce those effects furnishes the general form to which all such processes are reducible. For example, the question at issue may be whether the vibrations of factory machinery have caused a conceded injury in an adjacent house. The main controversy is whether the former is the cause of the latter, but, in searching among the probable causes the argument is obviously confined to those things which have a tendency or capacity to produce such effects. Thus, while one of the ultimate issues for the Court still remains the question whether the factory caused the injury, yet the subsidiary proposition to which the evidence has to be directed is whether the factory has such a tendency or capacity. In short when it is desired to show broadly the occurrence of an event, or the cause of it, the process of thought usually resolves itself into two inferences,—first that the capacity or tendency of something to cause the event is evidence that the event did so result therefrom, and, secondly, that something else is evidence of such a capacity or tendency and it is the second of these inferences which in practice raises evidential questions—Wigmore § 441

Principle of probative value—General Rule There is presented as the factum probandum, a capacity or tendency in X to produce the specific effect B. This means that in the presence of a certain complex of circumstances the introduction of X will result in the occurrence of B, i.e. this alleged tendency or capacity in X is not an abstract and absolute one but a limited and specific one namely, a capacity, under the circumstances in which B occurred, to be followed by B. What X's capacity or tendency under other circumstances might be is immaterial, the single question is whether there was such a capacity or tendency under the circumstances in hand. In looking elsewhere, therefore to evidence this specific capacity or tendency by observing the same effect elsewhere the requirement is that the circumstances elsewhere are the same as in the case in hand. Thus, if elsewhere we found similar results, B', and B'', accompanying X, it cannot be inferred that they are the result of the alleged tendency of X, unless the other circumstances in those cases were similar to that in issue, because otherwise it cannot be known that some other circumstance, Y or Z was not the cause of B', or B''. In other words—unless the circumstances are the same the door is open for other hypotheses that might account for the effects B', and B'', as well as for B. Thus if the proposition is that X factory's vibrations have a tendency to injure an adjacent building B, the falling of timbers in other adjacent houses B', and B'' might not evidence such a tendency if B' were in old house and B'' were a wooden house while B was a new brick house, the case B' would at most indicate a tendency in X to injure an old house, not a new house B, and the case B'' would at most indicate a tendency in X to injure a wooden house, not a brick

S 7 house B The general logical requirement is then, that when a thing's capacity or tendency to produce an effect of a given sort is to be evidenced by instances of the same effect found attending the same thing elsewhere, these other instances have probative value—they are relevant—to show such a tendency or capacity only if the conditions or circumstances in the other instances are similar to those in the case in hand. But this similarity need not be precise in every detail. It need include only those circumstances or conditions which might conceivably have some influence in affecting the result in question. Wigmore § 41 So in evidencing a quality, tendency, capacity etc., by instances of its effects or exhibitions or operations on other occasions, the natural and logical limitation is that the evidential instances should have occurred under substantially the same circumstances or conditions as at the time in question because otherwise they might well be attributed to the influence of some other element introduced by the differing circumstances. Green Et § 14 (v)

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

In Hunt v Louell Gashlight Co, 8 All 169, 171, the question was whether the illness of the plaintiffs was caused by gas leaking from the defendant's pipes. In that case "the plaintiffs were permitted to offer evidence that A. H. and his family had been in perfect health upto the time when the gas began to escape into their house, and that, immediately or soon after every member of the family became seriously ill. The sickness of the persons is admissible merely for the purpose of showing the nature of the gas which came into the house, to the influence of which all the inmates were subjected alike. Evidence that inmates of another house were made sick in consequence of inhaling the gas has been held to be inadmissible. The evidence should be limited to the effect of the gas upon those who have in common and under similar circumstances inhaled it." Per Chapman J

In Baxter v Doe, 112 Miss 558, 566 to show that the plaintiff's illness on board the defendant's vessel was due to the defendant's failure to supply anti-scorbutic food and medicine the fact was offered of a similar sickness of others of the crew, on board the ship about the same time. In admitting the evidence Gardner J said "It is difficult to find cases where all the conditions and circumstances affecting all the crew were similar. As suggested by the plaintiffs in their argument, the crew lived together in the same quarters, on the same vessel, for the same length of time, worked in the same employment, were subjected to the same climatic influences, had little deprivation and manner of life partook of the same

Inadmissible

In Emerson v Louell Gashlight Co 3 All 410, 417, the question was whether the illness of the plaintiffs was caused by gas leaking from the defendant's pipes. Evidence was offered by the plaintiff that whenever the gas which escaped from the fracture in the defendant's pipe entered any dwelling house in the neighbourhood of the plaintiff's sickness followed. Merrill J observed "The evidence is properly excluded. The attending circumstances may be so different that the occurrence of sickness in one house would have no tendency to show the cause of illness in the occupants of another."

AdmissibleInadmissible

S

food at substantially the same time, and of the crew of twelve, eight were affected at about the same time with about the same symptoms of disease. This evidence tended directly to prove that the provisions served to the crew were unsuitable and insufficient, and the sickness was occasioned by want of anti-scorbutics."

Distinction between possibility, capacity, tendency, and cause, as the object of Evidence, evidencing a possibility. The notion of causation is by no means easy to analyse correctly, but it is enough to point out here that certain superficially different terms represent essentially the same evidential process. When it is asked, for example, whether certain factory vapours were the cause of a destruction of herbage, the notion of 'cause' simple as it seems, becomes upon analysis somewhat complex and at the same time indefinite. Stated in its broadest form, the notion of cause and effect is merely that of invariable sequence. It is only rarely, however, if at all that such an abstract assertion can be made in universal terms that will stand examination. Thus, that a bullet shot from a pistol into the heart "causes"—i.e. will invariably be followed by—death, is a seemingly impregnable assertion, and yet not only may it not be true of bullets of every size, but it may not be true, even with ordinarily large bullets, in instances recorded here and there, and, in the future, surgical skill may show that the instances of non sequence of death might be made even more numerous. The assertion may then be amended by adding limiting conditions, so as to say that, provided this and that and the other be so, a bullet through the heart causes death. In short, instead of an absolute certainty or invariability of sequence, the assertion will be only of a very high probability of sequence. In most instances no one thinks of making an assertion in absolute form, and it is easy to see that in an assertion of causation means usually only an assertion of high probability or strong tendency. Thus, the planting of seed in good soil at the right time of the year will probably result in a harvest in due season, but the result is not invariably certain, because no rain may fall or the land may be built upon or other influences may intervene. Though we should feel justified in speaking of the seed as the cause of the harvest, yet it would not be intended to assert anything more than that the seed has a tendency to produce the harvest. Coming now to an example of still weaker probability, suppose it to be asserted that gun powder may spontaneously i.e. without human meddling—explode, this is not saying that it will probably so explode but, merely that under a rare combination of circumstances it will do so i.e. it has a capacity to do so. Capacity, then, is a quality representing the same process of thought as tendency, i.e. it represents the possibility of a result as compared with the probability of a result, and above them both is a notion of a still higher degree, rarely realised in experience,—that of absolute certainty of result. All these are in the same category, the difference is that in the highest degree we think of the sequence as occurring under any and every combination of other circumstances, but in the middle degrees under the ordinary combinations only, and in the lowest degrees under rare combinations only. The notion of causation is perhaps most commonly associated with the middle and highest degrees only, i.e. one would naturally enough say, 'A bullet through the heart will cause death' and 'Sowing seed will cause a harvest', while in the lowest degree one would either not speak at all of cause or would qualify the statement, for example, by saying 'Gun powder may cause spontaneous explosion'. The essential thing to note is that all these terms express only varying degrees of certainty or probability or possibility, and that they all belong to the same logical category of thought. Wigmore § 416, see also Sudguel on Fallacies 81, 285, Field's Evidence Notes under Section 7

When relevant facts are excluded. Facts forming part of the same transaction are admissible under section 6. Now the question is what facts, not part of the same transaction are admissible in evidence. Such facts are either

S 7 similar or dissimilar. When the facts are dissimilar they are clearly inadmissible. R v Whitehead, 3 C & K 202. But similar facts also are not always admissible in evidence. The fact may be generally relevant, yet in a particular instance obvious to some rule of "Auxiliary Policy" as Prof Wigmore termed it. In such a case such facts may be used on such occasion, where the latter rule does not apply. But where the fact is itself irrelevant, but not obnoxious to the rule of Auxiliary Policy, it cannot be used at all. For the present purpose two such rules are to be considered, namely, (1) the reason of unfair surprise and (2) the reason of confusion of issues. Wigmore § 413, Greenleaf E. 14v, Phillips E. 126. 14 Am Law Rev 350, 358. So facts of this class though often not destitute of moral weight are rejected as legal evidence on grounds of convenience since they tend to embarrass the enquiry with collateral issues, prejudice the parties with the jury, and encourage attack without notice. Phillips E. 126. The difficulty for the opponent of anticipating the particular instances that may be alleged, the length of time that may be spent on these minor evidential matters, and the possible confusion of issues in the mind of the jury, may outweigh the slight probative value of the evidence. Greenleaf E. § 14v. In Metropolitan Asylum District v Hill 4 L. T. R. N. S. 29, speaking for the rejection of evidence of the effects of other hospitals in spreading contagion offered to show the noxious quality of the one in question Lord O'Hagan said "Without proof as to the state and management of other hospitals, so as to establish a substantial similarity, any inference drawn from a comparison of their operation with that of the Hospital might have been quite fallacious and deceptive. But even without regard to this, it would have involved the jury in a multitude of collateral inquiries, calculated to confuse and embarrass them, and it might have been endlessly prolonged by an indefinite multiplication of objects of comparison. To keep such investigations within reasonable limit, and secure promptitude, precision, and satisfaction in the demonstration of justice, it seems to me that the Court should be very jealous of the admission of such proof." The production of various instances to evidence a tendency, capacity, or quality may also cause unfair surprise to the opposite party, who may be unprepared to meet such evidence. In such cases the Court in its discretion may reject such evidence. In Insurance Co., v. Tobin, 32 Oh St 90, Ashburner J in excluding such evidence observed "This class of testimony was incompetent because calculated to surprise and take undue advantage of defendant at the trial. Ordinarily he could not be prepared to meet and contest the merits of each particular case of loss from unknown cause introduced. To deprive him of this privilege would be the denial of the legal right and to admit them would overwhelm the case with collateral issues of fact distract judicial investigation, leading to no valuable legal result. The most rational and practical solution of the difficulty would be to leave it largely to the trial Court to draw the line of exclusion whenever the above objections in fact present themselves." Darling v Westmoreland 53 H. N. 401 408, Greenleaf E. § 14v, Wigmore § 444.

Classification of such facts. The arrangement of the various precedents is a matter of much difficulty but having regard to the kind of fact offered in evidence and the helpfulness of the analogies it may be best to consider them according as the evidential fact is (1) a material effect, (e.g. marks on a board from a pistol-shot, injuries to a house by smoke, fire set by a locomotive park, work done by machinery etc), (2) corporal effects (e.g. wounds produced by gun-shots, illness produced by a poisonous substance, injury caused by a defect in a highway etc), and (3) psychological or moral effects, i.e. effects on human conduct (e.g. efforts to escape danger, time required for work, cautions taken out of a dangerous place, etc.) Greenleaf E. § 14i, Wigmore § 450.

Material effects. Under this head may be noted the use of similar instances as evidence of the character of a place, building, factory, etc., alleged to be a nuisance in particular a railroad, of the injurious effects of water by flowing etc, of the injurious qualities of gases on trees, paint, etc., of the tendency of the machine to operate defectively or otherwise as shown by the other instances of the action of the same machine or of a similar machine, and of sundry other things. Greenleaf E. § 14i.

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

In Tenant v Hamilton, 5 Cl & F 122, the question was whether A's land was injured by noxious discharge from B works. Lord Cottonham admitted evidence on both sides as to the condition of land similarly circumstanced to those of the party complaining "for ascertaining what the effect was of the smoke and vapour emitted by this manufactory." See also R v Neville, 1 P. & N P C 91, R v Farrer, 8 L & B 180 486 488.

In Border v Sailard, 2 Ch D 692, which was an action to restrain a nuisance, Jessel M R admitted "a practical experiment performed by Mr Pinnon who actually only put in the stable a piece of wood with a horse's shoe attached, and when that was struck upon the ground he heard it on the second floor front (of the next house), showing that it is distinctly heard."

In Metropolitan Asylum District v Hill, 47 L T R N S 29 H L, the question was whether a small pox hospital managed by a certain corporation, had communicated disease to residents in the neighbourhood. Lord Selborne L C admitted evidence of "any similar or other facts from which the effect, or absence of effect, of other hospitals, and particularly of those at H and S, on the surrounding neighbourhoods, could either positively, or approximately be ascertained," accord. Lord Watson, contra Lord O'Hagan. In the above case Lord Selborne observed "Evidence relating to collateral fact is only admissible, when such facts will, if established, establish reasonable presumption as to the matter in dispute, and when such evidence is reasonably conclusive."

In Hoodley v Seauel & S Co, 71 Conn 640=42 Atl 997 the question was whether a factory caused nuisance. In that case effect of defendant's business upon other persons situated substantially in the same position as the plaintiff was admitted.

In Cooper v Randall, 59 Ill. 320 a nuisance case, Walker J admitting evidence that the defendant's mill threw dust, smutt, etc., on other houses observed "It tended to show that the mill was capable of inflicting the injury complained of by the appellant. If the deposit was general in the immediate

Inadmissible

The question being whether an obstruction to a harbour was caused by the erection of a sea wall in its vicinity, evidence that similar obstructions occurred at some other harbours on the same coast which were in the vicinity of the sea wall was held inadmissible, as an attempt item lite resolvere. Phy El 133 But in Fell v Chadd, 3 Doug 157, Lord Mansfield, C J admitted evidence of the state of other harbours along the same coast where no embankment existed, to show that no such change had occurred as at the harbour in question, where an embankment existed.

In Attorney General v Nottingham Corporation, (1904) 1 Ch 673, where the question also was whether small pox hospital was a nuisance, experience of other similar hospitals is to the risk of infection, was admitted by consent following Hill v Metropolitan Asylum (Supra). But Farwell J, in writing the opinion observed "As I understand that this case is likely to go to the House of Lords, I desire to add an observation as to the evidence in the hope of obtaining some direction from a superior tribunal. Both parties concurred in asking to accept evidence in chief of what had happened with other hospitals, and I acceded to the request in deference to the opinion expressed in Hill v Metropolitan Asylum District, and also because the same evidence of the same cases (with the same result) appears to have been admitted in the other reported cases relating to small pox hospitals. The result is that the case has taken a week to try and I venture to suggest that the admission of such evidence in chief is wrong in principle, as raising a number of side-issues on which it is impossible for the Court to adjudicate without injury to absent parties e.g. how can I rely on the case without injustice to them?"

In Hughes v General Electric L & P Co, 107 Ky 485 which was also a case of nuisance of smoke etc., effects of smoke in other dwellings were excluded.

In Lucile v Mfg Co, 9 All. Mass 181, which was a case of destroying meadow crops by poisoning of a stream by copper acids, the evidence of similar effects produced upon other neighbourhood and large quantities were deposited on other buildings similarly situated, it would be a just inference that the same was true of appellant's house." See also Bradley v R Co, 111 Ia 562=82 N W 996

S. 7.

Admissible

In Doybe v R Co, 128 N Y 488, the question was whether damage was caused to plaintiff's building by the operation of an elevated railroad. Evidence of the effect upon premises similarly situated and not too distant was received. The Court in receiving the evidence observed: "The Court may undoubtedly in such cases, in the exercise of its discretion, limit the number of witnesses to be called, and may confine the examination of the witnesses to premises in the vicinity giving a reasonable range."

The tendency or quality of tools, weapons, vehicles and, and other materials, can be proved by their effects upon similar substances under similar conditions. R Heseltine, 12 Cox Cr C 404.

The question being whether A's premises were ignited by sparks escaping from a railway engine,—proof (1) that the same engine, and other engines of similar construction, belonging to the same company, have previously caused fires along the same line is admissible. Aldridge v G H Ry, 3 M & Gr 522, Piggot v E C Ry, 3 C B 229, Philp Et 133. In Piggot v E C Ry, Co 3 C B 229 Maule J in admitting the evidence observed:

"The evidence objected to was that other engines used on the defendant's line of the same description as that which was said to have caused the injury here, had on various other occasions been seen to throw particles of ignited matter to a distance from the line as great or greater than the spot in question. The matter in issue was whether or not the plaintiff's property had been destroyed by fire proceeding from the defendant's engine and involved in that issue, was the question whether or not the fire could have been so caused. The evidence was offered for the purpose of showing that it could and for that purpose it was clearly material and admissible."

Inadmissible

meadows along the river, was excluded for reasons of confusion of issues and of the slight probative value. So also where the question was whether the removal of certain stones from a river had caused the litter to wash away the plaintiff's land, evidence that the removal of stones from another part of the river had the same effect was rejected as tending to mislead the jury, no satisfactory proof being given that the conditions of the two occurrences were the same. Haules v Charlemtol, 110 Mass 110 Comm v Piper, 120 Ma 115 cited in Philp Et 3d Ed 133.

In Clair v Water Power Company, 52 Me 75, which is an action for damage caused to plaintiff's mills, for diverting a stream by the defendant company, evidence of injuries to other mill owners was rejected on the facts, because "there were no elements of comparison offered which could afford any safe or reliable data for the judgment of the jury."

Instances of corporeal effects as evidence Under this head may be noted the use of other instances (often those obtained by experiment) of the tendency of a gun shot or pistol shot with reference to the kind of wound made, of the nature of a drug, gas, food, or other substance with reference to its corporeal effects and symptoms, and, in particular, of the intoxicating nature of liquor. The use that has come most into controversy is that of other injuries at a highway track, or machine, as evidence of its dangerous character. There seems here to be no impropriety in the nature of an inference, just as the character of a white powder with reference to producing illness may be evidenced by its effects on those taking it, so the tendency of a machine or a place in the highway, with reference to producing injury to those who use it or pass over it may be judged of by its effects in given instances, provided only the conditions are substantially similar to those in the case at issue. Nevertheless, the doctrines of unfair surprise and confusion of issues as explained above have been thought to have an especial bearing here. The other instances of the injuries thus offered in evidence may concern defects in highway or defects in railroad tracks, machines, premises, and the like. Greenl. Ev § 141

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

In Spencer Couper's Trial, 13 How St Tr 1162, which was a case for murder, the body of the deceased was found in the river, the question was whether she had committed suicide or had been killed and thrown into the water. The prosecution advanced the proposition that the absence of water in the stomach showed that the person was dead before entering the water. The defence was allowed to prove by experiments, made by doctors upon dogs to show that a drowning person does not necessarily take water into the stomach.

In R v Webb, 1 Moo & Rob, 405, 412, which was a case of man slaughter by administering noxious pills, to disprove the noxious quality, the fact was admitted of the cure of various diseases by them. See also R v Salmon before Patteson J Pelham's Chronicles of Crime Ed 1891, Vol II, 417 cited in Wigmore § 457 foot note.

In Holes v Keer, (1908) 2 K B 601 which was an action against a barber for negligent use of razor, etc by which he had cut the plaintiff and caused the plaintiff to have barber's itch about October 1907. It was proved that the plaintiff never went to any other barber's shop. The fact that two other persons had acquired the itch at the defendant's shop, was held admissible as showing the unclean condition of the razors, etc.

In Croft v R Co L R 1 C P 300 which was an action for injury on a defective staircase evidence from defendant was admitted without question that about 43,000 persons had

Inadmissible

In State v Fletcher 24 Or 295 298, experiments as to the force of a bullet, with cartridges and pistol found on defendant, were excluded because conditions were not shown similar.

In Schlaff v R Co 100 Ala 377, 378, former injuries of other persons at a bridge, were excluded.

In Birmingham v Starr, 112 Ala 98, the evidence of similar falls at the same place about the same time e g a month before or after, was admitted but evidence of falls at other times or at times unspecified was excluded.

S 7

Admissible

passed over it without injury during the previous year, in which alone it had been used

In District of Columbia v Ames, 107 U S 519, 521, which was an action for damage caused by a fall on a defective side walk, evidence was admitted to show that other persons had fallen at the same place

Effects on Human conduct—Instances of mental and moral effects, as evidence. The tendency or nature of a material object may often be ascertainable by its psychological or moral effects, and it seems proper to place here a number of sorts of evidence in which it is perhaps not usual to perceive such a process of inference. Nevertheless, this inquiry seems at once to embrace the various kinds and also to supply the reasons upon which their admission depends. It may be thought that the Hearsay rule is violated by using as evidence the conduct of persons not before the Court, but that rule excludes only the assertions of such persons taken as evidence of the truth of the fact asserted and though the line between conduct and assertions is not always easy to draw, the distinction is a real one and leaves the Hearsay rule not applicable to the former. The simplest instance is the use of other instances of fright by horses at a particular object—a whistle a pile of stone a flag, a rail road car, etc.—as evidence of its tendency to cause fright in horses. Closely analogous to this is the use, on an issue whether a person's fright and jumping from a train, etc., was natural, of the alarmed conduct of other persons in the same situation. On the same general principle—the use of mental impressions as indicating the nature of a material object—the impressions of other persons (usually obtained by experiment) as to whether a thing could be seen, heard, or identified under given circumstances of time place and other surroundings have usually been received. It seems to be upon the same principle that, upon an issue of care, reasonableness, necessity, or the like, the conduct of other persons as involved in their practice or custom under the same condition, is to be received as evidential. This sort of evidence is constantly resorted to in every day life and it is of usefulness and propriety in litigation. The chief limitation is that we should treat the conduct of others merely as some evidence, and should not erect it into an absolute legal standard or test of liability or excuse. Green v R 141

Admissible

In Brown v R Co 22 Q B D 391, the question was whether a heap of refuse and earth in a highway, has the dangerous tendency to frighten horses. To prove its tendency to frighten horses, the fact was received of the shying of various other horses than the plaintiff's in passing the heap.

The question being whether A's dog killed certain sheep belonging to B, the fact that the same dog had been seen to kill one of B's sheep on a mountain on a Saturday morning and that other sheep of B's were found dead on the same mountain in the evening was held admissible. Leurs v Jones 49 J P 198=1 T L R 153. Whart I § 1297, Phipson Ev p 132

State of things under which they happened. Often the physical conditions under which the main fact happened or any other matter intimately connected therewith must be placed before the jury in order to make the incident intelligible to them. Under such circumstances such facts may be relevant. Vide R v Bond (1906) 2 K B 309, Phip Ev 6th Ed 57

Inadmissible

In Whillie v Chehalis Co, L & T Co 50 Wash 324, one instance of another horse being frightened at fire alarm, was excluded.

In Bloor v Town of Delafield 6 Wis 223, the evidence that numerous other horses had been driven past without fright was excluded.

The question being whether A's dog had a propensity to bite strangers,—evidence that (1) it barked at strangers (Sanders v Waugh C A Times, April 10 1897), or (2) had a propensity to bite animals (Osborne v Chocquet, 1896, 2 Q B 109), is irrelevant, Phip Ev 3rd 132

Opportunity Proof of opportunity possessed by the accused to commit the crime may rise in inference that he is the criminal Lauson Pre Et p 587 When an act is done, and a particular person is charged with having done it, it is obvious that his physical presence within a proper range of time and place, forms one step on the way to the belief that he did it. It is true that another person may have done it, and thus is fit to become a subject for further investigation. It might be asked whether mere possibility involved in opportunity is not too slender, whether something more than mere opportunity—for example, exclusive opportunity—should not first be shown. The answer to this is that, by the very showing of an opportunity, countless hypotheses are negatived and the person charged, who might otherwise have been one of the innumerable other persons at the time, is shown to have been one of the limited number who are in a position to do this particular act. In short, opportunity alone and not exclusive opportunity, is a sufficient showing for admissibility Wigmore § 131. A is indicted for poisoning B. The fact that A lives in the same house with B, and had opportunities for tampering with his food and drink is relevant. Burr Jones Et 306. T is indicted for entering U's room in the night and stealing his money. The fact that T is a lodger in the same house is relevant in showing an opportunity. Ibid 307.

In Reg v Graham, Curle's Summer Assizes, 1845 cited in Will Cir Lo p 356 Baron Rolfe said "Had the prisoner the opportunity of administering the poison?—that is one thing. Had he any motive to do so?—that is another. There is also another question which is most important, it is whether the person who had the opportunity of administering poison, had poison to administer. If he had not the poison, the having the opportunity becomes unimportant." So without opportunity of committing the imputed act, neither existence of motives, nor the manifestation of criminal intention by threats or otherwise, followed even by preparations for its commission, can be of any weight. Will Cir Lo p 82. The opportunity is in fact the "state of things" under which an occurrence took place. Without an opportunity no deed can be perpetuated. Hence opportunity must be established beyond a reasonable doubt. Donough Cir Ev 10.

Explaining away, equal opportunity for others If a person is shown to have been in a building, at the time when a murder was committed he immediately becomes a person suspected of committing the crime, he may have done the deed. He may diminish the probative significance of this fact by showing that there was at that time at least ten other persons in the same building. In doing so he is pointed out the possibility of ten other hypotheses, equally possible with that charged against him. Such is the principle of explaining away opportunity. Wigmore § 132. When it is proved that another person had a better opportunity than even the accused, the presumption is further weakened. Lauson's Pre Et 587.

Exclusive opportunity Since the showing of opportunity leaves open all the hypotheses of other persons' equal opportunity, it is proper for the proponent of the evidence to strengthen it by cutting off, so far as possible, these hypotheses, by showing that the person charged was one of the few only, or the sole person, having the opportunity. In other words while the proponent need not, he may always show exclusive opportunity. Wigmore § 131. Exclusive opportunity proves conclusively that the deed was committed by the person having such an opportunity. People v Van Horn, 119 Cal 323-51 Pac 338, Miller v People, 39 Ill 166. But it is not always safe to convict a person solely relying on exclusive opportunity of committing the crime in question. The statement will be fully illustrated by the following two cases: (1) A female servant was charged with having murdered her mistress. No persons were in the house but the deceased and the prisoner, and the doors and windows were closed and secured as usual. The prisoner was condemned and executed, chiefly on the presumption that no one else could have had access to the house, but it afterwards appeared, by the confession of the real murderer, that they had gained admittance into the house, which is situated in a narrow street, by means of a board thrust across the street from an upper window of an opposite house to an

S 7 upper window of that in which the deceased lived, and that having committed the murder, they retreated the same way, leaving no traces behind them. Starke Et Alth Ey 865 cited in Best § 133

(2) One Sunday morning when the whole of a household except T, a female servant, was absent at Church, the house was robbed and a small cabinet containing jewels and gold coin to a very large amount taken and carried away. T maintained that no one had entered or gone out of the house during the time of the family's absence. T was convicted of the robbery. Many years after as T, having served out her sentence, was going through the market, a butcher tapped her on the shoulder and said in a half whisper and ironical tone of voice "Ah! What a creature is a naked woman!" T, remembering that she had made that remark to herself on the morning of the robbery, the butcher was arrested. He confessed that his master served the house with meat, and having forgotten to take some minced veal home on Saturday evening as he should have done, he carried it in a large basket on Sunday morning. The family had gone to Church, T was upstairs and setting the meat in the usual place he pretended to go directly out and to shut the door after him, instead of which he shut himself in and putting off his shoes crept softly up to the garret waiting for T to come up to her room. T presently came up to change her clothes, and unconscious that any human being was near her, being entirely undressed and contemplating her naked figure uttered the exclamation above, which being plainly overheard by the butcher he immediately went through the house and took what he wanted, escaping by the back door before T was through her toilet. Taanjes Case Phil, Cur Et, XXVIII cited in Lawson's Pre Ev, p 588

Alibi The theory of an alibi is that the fact of presence elsewhere is essentially inconsistent with the presence at the place and time alleged, and therefore with personal participation in the act. Wigmore § 136

Illustrations Illustration (a) is an instance of facts relevant as giving occasion or opportunity (b) of facts constituting an effect, (c) of facts constituting the state of things under which an alleged fact happened. Cunningham Ev

8 Any fact is relevant which shows or constitutes a

Motive preparation motive or preparation for any fact in issue and previous or subsequent conduct or relevant fact

The conduct of any party, or of any agent to any party, to any suit or proceeding, in reference to such suit or proceeding, or in reference to any fact in issue therein or relevant thereto, and the conduct of any person an offence against whom is the subject of any proceeding, is relevant, if such conduct influences or is influenced by any fact in issue or relevant fact, and whether it was previous or subsequent thereto

Explanation 1—The word "conduct" in this section does not include statements, unless those statements accompany and explain acts other than statements, but this explanation is not to affect the relevancy of statements under any other section of the Act

Explanation 2—When the conduct of any person is relevant, any statement made to him or in his presence and hearing, which affects such conduct, is relevant

Illustrations

(a) A is tried for the murder of B

The facts that A murdered C, that B knew that A had murdered C and that B had tried to extort money from A by threatening to make his knowledge public, are relevant.

(b) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money. B denies the making of the bond.

The fact that, at the time when the bond was alleged to be made, B required money for a particular purpose, is relevant.

(c) A is tried for the murder of B by poison.

The fact that, before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B, is relevant.

(d) The question is whether a certain document is the will of A.

The facts, that not long before the date of the alleged will A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged will relate, that he consulted valuers in reference to making the will, and that he caused drafts of other wills to be prepared, of which he did not approve, are relevant.

(e) A is accused of a crime.

The facts that, either before or at the time of, or after the alleged crime A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself, or that he destroyed or concealed evidence, or prevented the presence or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned persons to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant.

(f) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence—"the police are coming to look for the man who robbed B," and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant.

(g) The question is whether A owes B rupees 10,000.

The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing—"I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10,000 rupees," and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts.

(h) The question is, whether A committed a crime.

The fact that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal, and the contents of the letter, are relevant.

(i) A is accused of a crime.

The facts that, after the commission of the alleged crime, he absconded, or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property required by the crime or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant.

(j) The question is whether A was ravished.

The facts that, shortly after the alleged rape, she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant.

The fact that, without making a complaint, she said that she had been ravished is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1), or as corroborative evidence under section 157.

(k) The question is, whether A was robbed.

The fact that, soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant.

The fact that he said he had been robbed without making any complaint, is not relevant, as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1), or

as corroborative evidence under section 157.

Motive—meaning of. Motive is that which moves a man to do a particular act. Ganga v. Rex, 62 Ind. C.S. 345. When we infer an act from a motive, there are two distinct evidential steps. We may argue, first, that since a particular emotion or passion is likely to lead to the doing of the appropriate act—for example, desire for money to theft or robbery, or angry hostility to an act of violence—the presence of such emotion in the person in question is likely to lead to the deed in question. In this step of the argument we assume the emotion as a fact, proved some how or other. Just as a specific sort of disposition of habit, of plan, is likely to lead to the appropriate act, so a specific sort of emotion or passion has a similar evidential bearing. The basis of this

S 8 inference is the living, impelling, active emotion, seeking for an outlet in action. But motive in the sense of motion requires to be proved. It is generally proved by two sorts of circumstantial evidence namely (1) conduct of the person, and (2) by events about that person which would excite that emotion. Conduct is the effect and expression of the inward emotion. The outward fact which happens about him, shows probability of the existence of such emotion. This outward fact is sometimes termed as motive. But strictly speaking that which has value to show the doing or not doing of the act is the inward emotion, passion, feeling, of the appropriate sort. Vide Wigmore § 117. So motive is that which is in a man's mind and which moves him to act and whether the belief which produces that state of mind is true or false the motive remains the same and the truth or the falsity of the belief is not really in question. Ganga v Emperor, 67 Ind Crs 545=22 Cl L J 529.

In Mrs Maybair's Case, (Notable Trial Series) where she was charged with causing death of her husband Stephen J in this charge, is reported to have expressed the view that her "adulterous intrigue with another man" would supply the strongest motive for getting rid of her husband. If we analyse the statement it comes to this. Her adulterous intrigue excited in her a living, impelling or an active murderous impulse or emotion which sought for an outlet by getting rid of her husband. So the intrigue is not the direct cause of the homicide, but it gave move to that impulse or emotion which impelled her to cause the murder. So the existence of motive in the ordinary sense, to commit a crime does not always end in crime. They may be" says Wills "outweighed by other and conflicting motives or by the moral sense. We can estimate, by a knowledge of the existence and operation of motives in the average man, what is probable in the mental economy of an average man, but such a course of induction is a rough and ready process and liable to error in its application. Men are not all of average hue or constitution and it does not follow that because there is something shown which would lead to crime in one man, or in many men, that it would necessarily lead to crime in the case under consideration. Many a murder has been committed for the sake of a very few pounds, and yet there are hosts of people to whom millions would not offer the slightest inducement to anything of the kind, and we must be careful not to forget that when we have found a motive which might lead to crime it by no means follows that we have found one which did lead to us well as towards the crime." Wills Cr Ev pp 56, 58.

Motive is relevant. In Palmer's Case 1856, Wills 394, Lord Campbell C J said "It is of great importance to see whether there was a motive for committing such a crime, or whether there was not," Lord Thurstone C J also took the same view in Bennett's Case reported in Times (1901) Feb 23, Wills 467. In Kennedy v People 39 N Y 245, 251 Woodruff J said "It is always a just argument on behalf of the accused that there is no apparent motive to the perpetration of the crime. Men do not act wholly without motive. On the other hand, proof of motive tends in some degree to render the act so far probable as to weaken presumptions of innocence and corroborate evidence of guilt." If it is clear and certain that a crime has been committed, it is not an essential part of the Public Prosecutor's case to prove that there was a motive for the crime. If he can prove the case without any motive, he is entitled to a verdict. But when the evidence is circumstantial only, and the guilt of the prisoner is only inferential and is not proved as a matter of fact by the evidence of witnesses who saw the crime then the question of motive becomes of vital importance to the prosecution. If motive is displaced, or even made reasonable, doubtful it is enormously in favour of the prisoner. Reg v Monson, (Not Trial) cited in Donough Cr Ev 17. Similarly in People v Green 1 Park C C 2, the jury was told "Where a murder is charged and the evidence is wholly circumstantial then it is peculiarly proper to look at the motive. And in all cases you will naturally seek for the motive. And where the proof is circumstantial, and there is no doubt about the circumstances, then it becomes most important to examine into the motive. If, however, the evidence of murder be direct and positive, then the guilt is established without looking further. And in all these cases a question as to the adequacy of motive does not always arise. It is claimed generally that the motive was inadequate, that it is not sufficient to induce the commission of murder. But all this must depend on the peculiar circumstances of the case, and the peculiar character of the accused. There is no motive which, to the mind of an honest man, can be adequate to the commission of a crime, and just in proportion as the mind is debased and immoral, to that extent the motive may be less which induces the criminal act. Hence, there can be no one rule for all cases, as regards adequacy of motive, it must depend on the moral character of the person accused in each case. The worse it is the less the motive which will tempt to the commission of crime."

Whether motive is essential "It is sometimes popularly supposed" says Prof Wigmore "that in order to establish a charge of crime the prosecution must show a possible motive. But this notion is without foundation. Wigmore § 118. So "a motive for the killing is sometimes an important, if not an essential point on a trial, for murder. Where the killing is undisputed, the question of motive becomes less important. For the moving cause is often not very apparent, in very many cases of homicide there is no motive discernible except what arises at or near the time of the act." Laley v People 1 Park C C 530. In Powder v U S, 151 U S 396, 413, Harlan J observed, "The law does not require impossibilities. The law recognizes that the cause of the killing is sometimes so hidden in the mind and breast of the party who killed that it cannot be fathomed, and so it does not require impossibilities, it does not require the jury to find it. Yet if they do find it, it simply becomes an item of evidence in the case, which is only evidentiary in itself,—that is, it is only an item of evidence going to show whether a particular party may have committed an act, and sometimes going to show the characteristics of that act. It is not indispensable to conviction that the particular motive for taking the life of a human being shall be established by proof to the satisfaction of the jury. The absence of evidence suggesting a motive for the commission of the crime charged is a circumstance in favour of the accused to be given such weight as the jury deems proper, but proof of motive is never indispensable to conviction." See also State v Rathbun, 74 Conn 524. As regards absence of proof of adequate motive Lord Justice Clerk made the following observations in Pritchard's Case (Not Tr.), Donough Cir Ev 19. "The existence of any adequate motive for the perpetration of a great crime is a thing impossible, there is no adequate or sufficient motive for a great crime. Still, there may be what is called an intelligible motive—the existence of some evil passion, or some immediate and strong excitement, which in a moment of half frenzy drives a man to the commission of murder. There are very evident and intelligible incentives to crime. But when we find that in the opinion of the prisoner's counsel there is no motive for the perpetration of this crime, it means no more than that the motive has not been discovered. If the crime has been committed there must have been a motive or incentive, and yet we may never discover what it was. The motives of human action, as we know from history and experience, are often incalculable."

Absence of proof of motive, when material. "Motive to commit crime if shown, may in many cases be sufficient alone, almost to induce a belief of guilt. Upon the other hand where no motive for the commission of a crime can be shown it is almost impossible to convince the mind of the guilt. Men do not ordinarily commit grave crimes unless there is in their minds a motive strong enough to overcome the natural repugnance against crime and the fear of punishment which usually follows detection. This view of this question is so universally recognized as being true that it has become incorporated into the law, and in almost all cases where the guilt of a defendant depends upon the facts and circumstances in proof in the case the Court instructs the jury to consider the motive or lack of motive which the proof shows may or may not exist in the mind of a defendant on trial charged with a crime." Per Dale C J in Son v Terr, 5 Okl 526. So in cases depending upon circumstantial evidence, motive is sometimes of vital importance. People v Robinson 1 Park C C 649. "Absence of proof of motive becomes almost essential while the positive evidence fails to prove the prisoner's guilt." Queen v Soroh, 5 W R Cr 28 (31). See also Queen v Empire 5 W R Cr 563, Queen v Babar 11, 15 W R Cr 46 (47), Queen v Sheikh Mustaffa, 1 W R Cr 19, Fatema v Emperor,

S 8. 25 Ind C 525, Jawan v Emperor, 25 Ind C 631 Moyla v Emperor, 1913 M W N 115 Durgan v Reg 31 C 686 In People v Kelsner, 3 Wheel. Cr C 10, where Kelsner was charged with poisoning his wife, the Court said "The motive which induces the commission of the highest offences, and especially of the crime of murder, is always required to be a certainty." In People v Hendrickson, 1 Phil C C 115, where the accused was similarly charged the Court observed "The defendant was charged with the murder of his wife. The marital relation existing between them furnished a strong presumption in favour of his innocence. In the absence of proof to the contrary, it was to be presumed that he loved her and would protect her. It was important, therefore, for the prosecution, if it could, to repel this presumption by proof that the defendant had disregarded the claims of conjugal duty. For this purpose evidence tending, however slightly, to show in mitigation of affliction—anything from which a jury might infer a desire to be free from the burden of one who was no longer the object of regard, was competent. So any conduct or declaration evincing unkindness or disrespect, though less decisive in their character as evidence, were admissible as tending to show the state of the defendant's feelings towards his wife."

When there is clear evidence that a person has committed an offence, it is unnecessary to prove motive. Mohana v Emperor 86 Ind C 406 <sup>see also</sup> Hasrat v Emperor, 32 C W N 315. Proof of motive or previous ill will is not necessary to sustain a conviction for murder in a case where a person is coolly and barbarously put to death. Queen v Jarshand, 7 W R Cr 60. The mere circumstance of a net being apparently motiveless is not a ground from which the existence of a powerful and irresistible influence of homicidal tendency can be safely inferred. Sobha v Emperor, 40 P R 1900 Cr-145 P L R 1905=2 Cr L J 714. It is not always possible or necessary for the prosecution to prove the motive of the accused in committing the crime and the absence of any proof of motive is not in itself sufficient to justify the rejection of evidence which, otherwise is reliable. Crown v Baloch Khan, 4 S L R 38=7 Ind C 38=11 Cr L J 498 <sup>see also</sup> Crown v Mahomed Khan, 91 P R 1866 Cr, Abdul Hossain v Emperor, 9 N L R 184=22 Ind C 177=15 Cr L J 83 Emperor v Balaramdas, 49 C 358. So where no motive for the commission of a crime is shown, the presumption of the innocence of the suspected person is strengthened. But the commission of the crime being proved, and also facts pointing to the prisoner as the perpetrator, evidence that a motive existed, is relevant, and is a circumstance in the chain of evidence from which guilt may be inferred. Lauzon's Presumptive Evidence p 204. But motive alone cannot supply the want of reliable evidence. Rannan v Emperor 94 Ind C 901.

Adequacy of motive. In Reg v Palmer, Wills Cr Ev 63, Coelle Cas 68 Lord Chief Justice Campbell observed "With respect to the alleged motive, it is of great importance to see whether there was a motive for committing such a crime or whether there was not, and whether there was an improbability of it having been committed so strong as not to be overpowered by positive evidence. But if there be any motive which can be assigned I am bound to tell you that the adequacy of that motive is of little importance. We know, from experience of criminal Courts, that atrocious crimes of this sort have been committed from very slight motives—not merely from malice and revenge but to gain a small pecuniary advantage, and to drive off for a time pressing difficulties."

Circumstances which tend to excite motive. In Johnson v State, 17 Ala 627 Parsons J said "With regard to the grounds from which a motive may be inferred, we may remark that the law has never limited them and never can limit them in number or kind." So considerable latitude is allowed on the question of motive. Hendrickson v People 10 N Y 13 (31). Motive is generally to be inferred from facts and circumstances. Hence a party is entitled to prove any facts or circumstances which tend even in the slightest degree to show motive. No fact or circumstance can therefore be properly excluded unless the Court is satisfied to a moral certainty that no rational presumption can be drawn from it. Lyon v Hancock 35 Cal (Am) 376. There is but one limitation that can be thought of as necessary and universal, namely, the circumstance said to have excited the emotion must be shown to have probably become known to the person, because otherwise it would not have affected his emotions. Wigmore § 399. In Son v Teri, 5 Oll. 526, Dale C J said "A motive cannot operate to influence until the facts which create the motive exist. The facts upon which a motive is based cannot operate upon the mind until they are known by the party against whom the motive is assigned. If one person should contemplate and undertake a great wrong against another,—such a wrong as would induce in the mind of the person against whom it was directed a motive to kill,—and yet such contemplated wrong was unknown to the party, it cannot be justly said that a motive to kill could exist, because the party wronged had no knowledge of the facts which would be necessary to create the motive." But the evidence as to the motives which led a prisoner to commit a crime, must be of the strictest kind. Queen v Zahur 10 W R C 11

A motive is generally proved by showing the desire of gain, the gratification of passion, or the preservation of reputation, accomplished or attempted or able to be accomplished by the perpetration of the crime charged. Lawson's Presumptive Ev p 377. But strictly speaking the circumstances that may serve as motives for other deeds are innumerable. In many cases several passions may lead to a desire to kill. Vide Ms Mayhew's Case, Notable Trial Series, where adulterous intrigue with another man was held to be a sufficient motive by Stephen J for getting rid of her husband. So also in Pritchard's Case (Not Tr) the crown suggested that the prisoner's motive for poisoning his wife was to make way for a second marriage. See also Reg v Stauntons (1876) Notable Trials. Crippen's Case, (Not Tr). So a man who courts his neighbour's wife has a motive for desiring the death of his neighbour. State v Reed, 53 Kan 767. Sometimes murder is committed in order to prevent the discovery of a former crime, or of evading an arrest or a prosecution for it. R v Clews 1 C & P 222, State v Kent, 67 N W 1052. See also illustration (1). C is indicted for the murder of H. The fact that C had previously employed H to murder one P shows a motive for the crime, and is relevant. R v Clews, 4 C & P 221. R is a clergy man, who, while in another and former parish had seduced a girl and got her with child. One day this girl appears at R's house, demands money, and threatens to expose him. R takes her to his room and cuts her throat with a razor. Reimbaner's Case, 3 Leg Obs 242, See also R v Richardson, Burr Cir Ev 243.

"In several ways the pecuniary circumstances, of one or another person or trying, may tend to show the excitement of a motive in some person. It will be convenient to distinguish the situation according as the evidence deals with (1) the pecuniary condition of A as exciting a motive in B, (2) the pecuniary condition of A as exciting a motive in himself, (3) the pecuniary value of a thing as exciting a motive to contract with a person, (4) pecuniary conditions in sundry respects." Wigmore § 392. An old lady possessed of some money goes to board with B who keeps a boarding house. B kills her, B's motive being to possess herself of the goods of the old lady, she having no friends to claim them. R v Burdell, Best on Presumptions, sect on 196. In Danellous Case, Wills Cir Ev 380, the motive was that the accused's wife would acquire a large estate on the death of his brother in law before attaining majority. See also Patche's Case Wills Cir Ev 442. Poverty often supplies motive to commit a crime. In Man Singh's Case cited in Donough Cir Ev p 20, the Court observed. "The motive for the crime is not far to seek. The appellant was in very poor circumstances. But the practical result of such a doctrine would be to put a poor person under so much unfair suspicion and at such a relative disadvantage as that for reasons of fairness this argument has seldom been countenanced as evidence of the graver crimes, particularly of violence. The reason is admirably stated by Digelow C J in Com v Jeffries, 7 All 548 559 266. "It is doubtless true that in a large class of cases the poverty or pecuniary embarrassment of a party accused of crime cannot be shown as substantive evidence of his guilt. The reason for the exclusion of such evidence is that in those cases there is no certain or known connection between the facts offered to be proved and the conclusion which is sought to be established by it. It does not follow,

S 8 because a man is destitute, that he will steal, or that when embarrassed with debt and incapable of meeting his engagements he will commit forgery. Evidence of the pecuniary condition of the accused in such a case (as this) is not offered to show that he was not under a peculiar temptation to commit the offence or was more likely to cheat or defraud because he was in embarrassed circumstances but for the purpose of showing the natural and necessary consequences of his act which the law presumes he intended. If at the time of the transaction he was deeply insolvent, and was cognizant of his condition the necessary consequence of his act was to deprive the vendor of his property without recompense or the chance of payment and leads to the just and almost unavoidable inference that it was done with an intent to defraud. Wigmore § 392, but see Tanell's Trial, Woodall's Celebrated Trials I, 188. On the other hand the fact that a person was in possession of money tends to negative his desire to obtain money by crime or borrowing. So in R v Grant, 4 F & F 322 where the indictment was for burning the defendant's own house in order to obtain the insurance evidence of defendant's easy circumstances was admitted. In that case Pollock C B, said "Surely it was material to show that her circumstances were such as not to raise any temptation to the act." So "where the motive is a pecuniary one, the wealth of the offender is no unimportant consideration." Peel C J in R v Hedger cited in Woodoffe 8th, Ed p 11.

Conduct proves motive. Motive in the sense of emotion is often proved by conduct of a person. In Com v Webster, 5 Cush 295 (316) Shaw C J said "The ordinary feelings passions and propensities under which parties act, are facts known by observation and experience and they are so uniform in their operation that a conclusion may be safely drawn that if a party acts in a particular manner, he does so under the influence of a particular motive."

Feelings at other times. Where an emotion of hostility is to be proved the existence of the same emotion at another time is clearly admissible. R v Law, 19 Man 259, R v Sunfield, 15 Ouf L R 252. So previous threats, previous alterations prior combats, or previous litigations between parties are admitted to show motive. Gray v State 63 Ala 66. Hudson v State, 60 Ala 331. Commander v State, 60 Ala 1. In Com v Taughan 9 Cush 594, in order to show motive for burning a barn the fact was received that the same person had before begun a criminal prosecution against the owner. So also evidence of threats within a period not too remote is admissible. Raulins v State 40 Fla 121. But the limit of time must depend largely on the circumstances of each case. Wigmore § 396.

Preparation. Preparations on the part of the accused to accomplish the crime charged or to prevent its discovery or to aid his escape, or to avert suspicion from himself are likewise relevant on the question of his guilt. Lauzon's Presumptive Evidence p 590. For preparation is a part of a design or system vide notes under s 15 under the head "Theory of evidencing Design or System."

Preparation to accomplish the crime charged or other act. Evidence tending to show that the accused made preparation to commit the crime is always admissible. Underhill Cr Fr § 370. But preparation only evidences a design or plan. The presence of a design or a plan to do or not to do a given act has probative value to show that the act in fact was done or not done. A plan is not always carried out, but it is more or less likely to be carried out. The existence of the plan is always used in daily life as the basis of an inference to the act planned. There is no question about the relevancy in general of such evidence. Wigmore § 102.

In State v Adams, 20 Kan 320 which was a case for burglary, the four accused held a meeting to arrange for the crime. A bar of iron and a pair of pincers were done necessary, and the accused brought the facts were admitted of the accused having taken a carpenter's brace from a store and hid it in a third person's room and the defendant never used it. Beebe J observed "Would not the act be one tending to show preparation— a preparation made frankly by the unexpected act of another? Could it not be shown that the one charged with him made immediately prior thereto was providing himself with several weapons, though one only was used? If one S weapon he stole, and another he borrowed and one (his own) he put in order, would proof as to the first be incompetent while evidence as to the others was admissible? If no act or conduct of the accused could be shown unless the motive therefor or the connection between it and the crime were made indisputably clear, the range of inquiry would be limited and narrow. It is enough that the act has an apparent or probable connection with the crime, and then the motive of the accused and the weight of it as testimony are to be considered by the jury." So the acquisition or possession of instruments, tools, or other means of doing the act, is admissible as a significant circumstance. The possession signifies a probable design to use, the instruments need not be such as are entirely appropriate, nor such as are actually put to use. Wigmore § 235

The fact of possession of a number of false coins wrapped in separate papers etc., was admitted to show a plan to utter them. R v James, 7 Cox Cr 73. A is accused of the murder of B by poison. C of the murder of D by shooting, E of committing a burglary, F of arson. G of counterfeiting. The fact that A had previously purchased some poison, that C had bought, borrowed or stolen a gun or pistol that E had procured in the, a pick lock, or a dial lantern, that F had procured a quantity of turpentine, that G had made an instrument to manufacture coin are relevant and raise in inference of fact of guilt in each case. Lawson Pre Ec § 106 see also R v Hill 20 How St Tr 1317. People v Penicelly Burr Ex 347. K is accused of the murder of A by stabbing him. The fact that K had previously taken a sword to a cutter, telling him that he wanted it ground "as sharp as a carving knife" as he wished to use it as a carving knife, is relevant. R v Corder Phil R 221. F is accused of the murder of W by shooting him with a pistol. The fact that F a few days prior, had procured a pistol and had spent sometime practising at a mark is relevant. R v Barbot 18 How St Tr 1261. S was indicted for murdering R by shooting. The fact that a day or two previous S had borrowed a gun from a friend, stating that he wanted it to kill deer with, is relevant. Strangeways Case, 5 Leg Obs 91

Preparation to prevent discovery of crime. An innkeeper and his wife are accused of a murder of a guest. It is shown that on the night the murder was committed they sent the maid servant out of the house and when she returned made her sleep in another part of the building. This is relevant. Drayne's Case 5 Leg Obs 123, Ferris's Case, 19 How St Tr 904

Preparation to aid his escape. A was charged with the murder of T. The fact that the day before the murder A had drawn a quantity of money from a bank in which he had it on deposit, is relevant as raising in inference that he was preparing to escape, if necessary, from the country. Adam's Case, 11 Leg Obs 415

Preparation to avert suspicion from himself. B and P lived in the same house and the former, while sitting one evening in his parlour was shot by a pistol in an unseen hand. A few evenings before and while B was away from home a loaded gun or pistol had been dis-charged into the room in which the family when at home, usually sat and passed their evenings. This shot, P claimed at the time, had been fired at him, but it turned out to have been fired by him. This fact is relevant. Patch's Case, London 1806 cited in Lawson Pre Tr p 591. A is accused of the murder of B. It is proved that A some time previous had spread a rumour that on account of ill health B would not be likely to live very long. Best Tr § 455. In Blandy's Trial 18 How St Tr 1122, 1132, the accused had frequently told the servants that her father the deceased with whose murder she was charged, would not live long, basing the prophecy on the sight of his apparition and other things. Bathurst arguing for the prosecution said "Mark how the destruction of this poor man is ushered into the world. Apparitions, noise, voices, music reported to be heard from time to time in the deceased's house even his days are numbered out, and his own child hints the price of his life but till the following month of October. What could be the meaning of this but to prepare the world for a death that was pre-determined?"

S 8 Antecedent conduct Under this head come motives to commit the offence and opportunities of committing it, preparations for the commission of and previous attempts to commit it, declarations of intention, and threats to commit it. Best § 462 Illustrations (d) and (e) are instances of antecedent conduct. 'In trials for murder, enmity against the dead man and previous conduct are accepted as evidence. Per Lord Allmon in Director of Public Prosecutions v Ball, 80 L J K B 691 at p 692 = (1911) 1 C 47

Previous attempts to commit it Previous attempts to commit an offence are closely allied to preparations for the commission of it, and only differ in being carried one step further and nearer to the criminal act of which, however like the former, they fall short. Best § 455, 3 Benth Jud Ec 69 So a former attempt by the accused to perpetrate the same crime in the same or in a different manner, is relevant on the question of his guilt of the latter crime. Lawson v Peck 1559 A is indicted for poisoning his wife by giving her Lindum. The fact that A had on a former occasion given her Lindum, which made her sick is relevant. Johnson v State, 17 Ala 622 In that case the Court observed: "If his former attempt to poison his wife had been proved by a witness on the trial, the question of the admissibility of the evidence would have been different. It might then have been very material to inquire whether he gave her the poison for which he is indicted innocently or criminally. It is very usual for the head of a family to administer medicine in the domestic circle but, in doing so, if he should poison the patient, his intention would be very material. In such cases it would deserve consideration if a former attempt to poison the patient might not be proved, although of itself a distinct felony, for the purpose of showing his guilty knowledge in the last instance." A is charged with setting fire to his house in order to obtain the insurance money. The fact that A had previously set fire to his house or that fire had previously occurred there is relevant. Reg v Gray 4 F & F 1102 Z is charged with poisoning A her husband. The fact that Z had previously put poison in the food of the family is relevant. R v Geurny 15 L J (M C) 215. In Abdens Case 5 Treg Obs 59, See also R v Donnell 2 C & K 308 Q v V is indicted for shooting at P with intent to kill him. Proof that V at a previous time, had shot at P is relevant. R v Vole, R & R & D is charged with having wilfully set fire to a hay stack. The fact that on a previous day the stack was seen to be on fire, and D to be near it, is relevant. R v Dorgell 2 C & K 306

Declaration of intention, threats, etc A threat to do a criminal or tortious act is in general admissible. Vide Lail Ferrer's Trial, 19 How St Tr 919. But that it is receivable under the Hearsay exception or is in admission and the declaration thus evidenced is relevant. In Standsfield's Trial, 11 How St Tr 1371 1373 1377 1380 which was a case of parricide it was proved that the accused who had been disinherited by his father, did declare his intention, and vow it several times that he would cut his throat and did swear, if he had a sword he would run it through him and the like. Mc Hone argument for defendant [the circumstances] are but very remote and uncertain. As to the expression of the defender is alleged to have threatened his father's death, it is the opinion of all lawyers who have written upon the subject that it is but very remote preparation. The King's Bench reply: "And where is it answered to this question [the circumstances] that the son, that a son would cut a father's throat, but a remote circumstance it is replied that the law and lawyers do not regard remote preparation of dammum sequentum is a more pregnant quality [the circumstances] of that party's crime, especially where the threats were to cut a father's throat which of itself is so horrid and unnatural a villainy that it is not to be doubted he who does it, would want an occasion to do it, if he knew he had that though the best clear presumption yet possible it is full probable for though the son had both vowed and resolved, yet it is not needful that he might have been prevented. Put the presumption at least that he had intended to do it, and that of a sudden injury afterwards happens this furnishes a strong presumption that he who threatened was the perpetrator or in the act." Seymour's Trial

A son is accused of murdering his father. He has been heard to declare that "he hated his father these six or seven years." This is relevant R v Standfield 11 How St Tr 1397. A woman and her paramour were accused of murdering her husband. She had been heard to say of her husband that "she lived a most unhappy life with him, and she wished him dead, or if that could not be she wished herself dead." This is relevant R v Ogilvie, 19 How St Tr. H is accused of murdering J. The fact that before the murder H was heard to say of J "He deserves to have his throat cut," is relevant R v Harrison, 12 How St Tr 841. J is indicted for the murder of W. The fact that J sometime previous said that he intended to "lay for W if he froze next Saturday night" is relevant Jim v State, Humph 146, Republican v Rob, 4 Dall 145. H is charged with the murder of M. He has been heard to say of M "If he don't do as he has agreed J will kill him." This is relevant People v Hou 2 Wheel Cr Crs 412. A woman was charged with the murder of her husband, she had previously expressed her hatred of him and said "If she had a dose she would give it to him." This is relevant R v Ogilvie, 19 How St Tr 1273. S was found dead in a well. It is proved that sometime previous F had said that he would put S "in the well for two coppers." This is relevant on the trial of F for the murder of S. Ms Spooner's Case, 2 Chund Cr Tr 14. R is indicted for murder of S. Before the murder R was heard to say of S "I will kick hell out of her. I will break her damned neck." This is relevant State v Reed 62 M C 130. In this last mentioned case the Court observed "Threats are significant. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Threats unexecuted amount to nothing, but when the thing threatened is done, and is done as it was threatened, then the fact of the threat becomes an article of circumstantial evidence tending to incriminate the person threatening." "I will break her damned neck." The dislocated neck of the victim of wrath and violence, her beaten and bruised body, show that what was threatened was done. The question is, was it done by the prisoner who was thus threatened, or by someone else from whose lips no threats proceeded." The reason why evidence of threat is admissible is thus stated by Grover J in Stokes v People, 53 N Y 175 "Threats to commit the crime for which a person is upon trial, are constantly received as evidence against him, as circumstance proper to be considered in determining the question whether he has in fact committed the crime, for the reason that the threats indicate an intention to do it, and the existence of this intention creates a probability that he has in fact committed it." So threat may not be proof conclusive but it may be evidence competent to be considered with other facts in determining the question of guilt. Worth v R Co 51 Fed 173. In R v Hagan, 12 Cox Cr 357 which was a case for murder of a child brought up in the family of the accused, the following statement of the accused about a fortnight before, "the child is no good, he is eating the other children's food" was admitted.

Time of threats In Redd v State 68 Ala 492 (496) Brickell C J said "The length of time elapsing between the making of the threat and the criminal act when the crime is to be proved only by circumstantial evidence, is of importance in determining the weight to be accorded to it. If a long period intervenes, during which there were opportunities of doing the threatened injury, and there was no attempt to do it, and no repetition of the threat it would be a slight circumstance in connecting the accused with the injury, and there would be more reason for regarding it as having been a mere careless, thoughtless utterance or idle bravado, or ebullition of temporary passion. The length of time would impair its probative force, but would not render its inadmissible. So the probative force of the threat would be increased if it was frequently repeated during the whole time intervening and the same cause for ill will and hate continued to exist, then it could be imputed to a malignant spirit and a purpose that may have been vacillating but at last became fixed and settled. See also Vigmore § 108.

Plans and Intentions as to wills, contracts, Deeds Where the issue is whether a will was executed, or whether a will was revoked or whether a will was made in a certain tenor or provision (is where an alteration is its issue),

S. 8. the plan or design or prior intention of the testator is relevant to show the doing or not doing of this alleged act, as any other act. The argument is "because he planned to make a will, or planned to revoke a will, or planned to will property to A therefore he probably carried out his plan. The relevancy of such a plan is well established. Wigmore § 112, see also illustration (d). In Doe v Palmer 16 Q B D 747, Lord Campbell said "Whether if in a will which is not in the handwriting of the testator an alteration appears, evidence might be received of previous declarations by him that he intended to dispose of the property in the manner in which it is disposed of by the will in its altered form. If the draft of the will could be produced, corresponding with the will in its altered form, would it not be admissible evidence, and might not the jury infer from it that before the will was executed the draft and the will had been compared and the mistake rectified? Would not written or verbal instructions from the testator to his solicitor to draw the will in the altered form be equally admissible? In what respect do such verbal instructions differ, for this purpose, from a contemporaneous declaration by the testator to another person that he had determined in his will to dispose of his property in the manner carried into effect by the will as altered? It would not be creditable to the law if such evidence were to be excluded, as a legal inference might be fairly drawn from it respecting priority of two events, that is to say, the making of the alteration and the execution of the will, and I am not aware of any principle, rule of law, decided case or dictum against the admissibility of such evidence. They demonstrate that the alteration is not an after thought." In Sugden v G Leonard L R 1 P D 154, Mellish L J said "The declarations of the testator as to what he intended to put in his will, made either contemporaneously with or prior to the execution of his will, are obviously evidence which corroborate the other testimony as to what is contained in the will, because it is more probable that the testator has than that he has not made a particular devise or a particular bequest when he has told a person previously that he intended to make it in as much as it shows that he had in its mind to make such a will at the time he made that declaration. See also Keen v Keen L R 3 P & D 107, Dench v Dench, L R 2 P D 60 (64), Gould v Lales, L R 6 P D 1.

Contemporaneous Conduct This would include the pleadings of parties their behaviour as such, and their demeanour as witness. Donough Cr R p 32.

Falsehood, fraud, fabrication and suppression of evidence, etc. It has always been understood—the inference, indeed is one of the simplest in human experience—that a party's falsehood or other fraud in the perpetration and prevention of his cause, his fabrication or suppression of evidence by bribery or spoliation and all similar conduct, is receivable against him as an indication of his consciousness that his case is a weak or unfounded one and from that consciousness may be inferred the fact itself of the cause's lack of truth and merit. Wigmore § 278 vide illustration (e) R v Patch, Wills Cir L v 142 L v Palmer Cockle Cas L v 8. In the last case Lord Campbell C J in his charge to the jury said "Then gentlemen it is impossible that you should not pay attention to the conduct of the prisoner at the bar and there are some instances of his conduct which you will say whether they belong to what might be expected from an innocent or a guilty man. He was eager to have the body fastened down in the coffin. Then with regard to the betting book, there is certainly evidence from which you may infer that he did get possession of the betting book that he abstracted it and concealed it. Then gentlemen you must not forget his conduct in trying to bribe the post boy to overturn the carriage in which the prisoner was being conveyed, to be analysed in London, and from which evil might be obtained of his guilt. Again you find him tampering with the postmaster and procuring from the postmaster the opening of a letter from D Taylor who had been examining the contents of a jar, to Mr Gardner the attorney employed on the part of Mr Stevens. And then, gentlemen you have tampering with the coroner and trying to induce him to procure a verdict from the coroner's jury which would amount to an acquittal. So a party who gives or produces false evidence may by so doing give rise to a general presumption against the truth of the case. Gurish Chandler v Isaac Chandler, 3 B. L. L.

A C J 311, see also Step Dy Et 1st 7 illus (c), Annesley v Earl of S. Inglesca, 17 How St Tr 1217

In Moriarty v R Co, L R 5 Q B 319, Cockburn C J said "The conduct of a party to the cause may be of the highest importance in determining whether the cause of action in which he is plaintiff, or the ground of defence if he is defendant, is honest and just,—just as it is evidence against a prisoner that he has said one thing at one time and another at another as showing that recourse to falsehoods leads fairly to an inference of guilt. Anything from which such an inference can be drawn is cogent and important evidence with a view to the issue. So, if you can show that a plaintiff has been suborning false testimony and has endeavoured to have recourse to perjury it is strong evidence that he knew perfectly well his cause was an unrighteous one. I do not say that it is conclusive, I fully agree that it should be put to the jury with the intimation that it does not always follow, because a man, not sure he shall be able to succeed by righteous means has recourse to means of a different character that that which he desires, namely, the gaining of the victory is not his due or that he has not good ground for believing that justice entitles him to it. But it is always evidence." In R v Castro (Ichborne Case), Cockburn C J in his charge to the jury said "These falsehoods [of the defendant] however must not operate unduly to the prejudice of the defendant beyond this that falsehood is a badge of fraud, and a case which is sought to be supported by means of deception may 'prima facie', until the contrary be shown, be taken to be a bad and dishonest case and further the recourse to fraud and falsehood necessarily engenders distrust." Similarly Phillimore J in R v Watt 20 Cox Cr 852 said "The principle is in fact well established. It is this that the conduct in the litigation of a party to it if it is such as to lead to the reasonable inference that he disbelieves his own case, may be proved and used as evidence against him."

So also fabrication or manufacture of evidence, by forgery bribery subornation or the like raises a presumption of falsity of the case. Annesley v Inglesca, 17 How St Tr 1217. Voules v Young 13 Ves Jr 110, Eare of Stafford's Trial, 7 How St Tr 1461, R v Watt, 20 Cox Cr 852, Lacey v Hill, L R 1 Ch D 537, 543. In the last mentioned case Jessel M R said "No man makes fictitious entries and commits forgeries except to conceal that which he knows ought to be concealed for his own credit, and therefore no one can doubt for a moment that Sir R Harrey was perfectly well aware that he was committing these frauds."

In criminal cases also destruction, concealment or fabrication of evidence raises a presumption against the accused. Lord Melville's Trial, 29 How St Tr 1191. A is accused of the murder by B by poison. The fact that A had the body of B interred with great haste is relevant on the question of A's guilt. R v Donnell Will's Cir 1 v 188. A is accused of shooting B with a pistol. A pistol is found beside B in such a position that it would appear that it is a case of suicide. But it is proved that it is A's pistol and that A placed it there. This raises a presumption of A's guilt. R v Green, 7 How St Tr 179.

Fraud by agents. Where the fraudulent act—bribery, intimidation, spoliation, or the like—has been personally committed by an agent or other third person, and not by the party-opponent himself, it is obvious that the act must be brought home to the party's connivance or sanction express or implied in order to use it as indicating any conscious malice on his part of a weak cause. In thus connecting it with the party, it is to be noted on the one hand that no mere technical theory of agency will suffice to charge him, for it is not a question of legal liability, but of actual moral connivance. On the other hand no less should mere technical deficiencies of proof be allowed to exonerate him due regard to the common probabilities of experience should be paid. For example, if a witness has been suborned by B a clerk in the defendant's bank, it is idle to argue that such a clerk has no implied authority to tamper with witnesses and therefore that some conversation or letter of the defendant expressly authorising B's errand must be proved. Why should B meddle in such fashion except upon some hint or order from the defendant?—Phillimore § 280. In The Queen v Cusack, 2 B & B 302. Abbott, C J in answering the question whether the offer of a bribe to a person not called as a witness, by one employed as an agent to S. 8. procure evidence, is admissible, and "This is a lawful employment necessary in many cases" and, being a lawful employment, it is to be presumed until the contrary be shown, that the employer means and intends that his agent shall execute it by lawful means. The prosecutor may up to the very moment when the proof is offered, be wholly ignorant of the wicked act of his agent, it is no less consistent that having been informed of it, he may have rejected it with indignation and have repudiated the proffered testimony and withholden the witness from the Court and if he be absent from the trial, which frequently happens, it may be impossible to prove his ignorance in the one case or the propriety of his conduct in the other. [Nevertheless] I am by no means prepared to say that in no case and under no circumstances appearing at a trial it might not be fit and proper for a Judge to allow proof of this nature to be submitted."

Subsequent conduct. Subsequent conduct of a party or his agent is relevant. To this class belong sudden change of life or circumstances, silence when accused false or evasive statements made by the accused, suppression or elowment of evidence, forgery of exculpatory evidence, evasion of justice by flight or otherwise tampering with officers of justice, and fear, indicated either by passive deportment or a desire for secrecy. Best Ev § 452, Vide illustrations (e) and (i)

Demeanour when charged, of accused. One of the common and established uses of the mode of reasoning here involved is the inference from guilty conduct to the commission of the guilty deed. No one doubts that the state of mind which we call guilty consciousness is perhaps the strongest evidence that the person is the guilty doer, nothing but an hallucination or a most extraordinary mistake will otherwise explain its presence. Wigmore § 273. So 'any indications of a consciousness of guilt by a person suspected of or charged with crime, or who may after such indications be suspected or charged, are admissible evidence against him. The number of such indications it is impossible to limit, nor can their nature or character be defined. Presumptions or inferences may be and often are founded on circumstances which, of themselves independent of the accusation, would not be ground of crimination.' Mc Adory v State 62 Ala. 154, 159. In Johnson v State, 17 Ala 618, 624, Parsons J said "We can not say that facts such as silence which indicated unusual seriousness at such a moment are inadmissible as evidence tending in some degree to show the prisoner's guilty knowledge of the condition of his wife, or to show his crime itself. Doubtless such a circumstance by itself should weigh but little and it should be received with great caution but we cannot say that it was wholly inadmissible. A flight is universally admitted as evidence of fear, and fear as evidence of a known cause of dread or apprehension, we arrive thus at the inference of crime. But it is sufficient perhaps for all practical purposes to regard a flight as immediate evidence of crime, because it betrays conscious guilt. In this instance, then we take the flight a thing of itself harmless and innocent as evidence of conscious guilt a necessary consequence of the crime itself, and the conscious guilt of which the flight was evidence, is proof, in its turn of the crime. In this instance therefore, it is certain that the law admits evidence of the party's conduct merely to prove his conscious guilt, which is proof of crime. Now this conscious guilt is merely internal but the law allows that proof of it which consists of outward signs. Is a flight the only outward evidence of conscious guilt? So far from it any indications of it, arising from the conduct, demeanour, or expressions of the party, are legal evidence against him. The law can never limit the number or kind of such indications.' In Moore v State 2 Oh St 592, Cullitell J said 'From our knowledge of the human mind and its workings, we expect with almost positive certainty, that when it is the rule of the repository of so dreadful a secret it will affect the conduct and sayings of the person hence the mind naturally looks to these with the most anxious scrutiny and would require for its satisfaction if such a thing were possible a complete transcript of the person's conduct and sayings. Sometimes a person is detected as the author of the crime by showing an unusual anxiety to discover the perpetrator at other times the discovery is led by the person showing two much indifference. In some instances the observation that the person appears to know too much about the transaction leads to the discovery, at other times the inquiry is started by his appearing to know too little. These are generally acts that in themselves show no disposition to do mischief but it is because they are unnatural, because they tend to the conclusion that they are produced by a mind conscious of guilt, that they are provable against the accused. They are in themselves nothing except as showing the state of the mind of the party."

So the conduct or demeanour of a person charged or on admission being made to the charge is frequently given in evidence against him. R v Smithers 5 C & P 332, R v Bartlett, 7 C. & P 532. R v Mollay 13 Q B D 13=15 Cox Cr C 176. So evidence of a defendant on a former occasion is admissible to prove guilty knowledge. R v Tattershall, 2 Lanch 981. Boscoe Cr Fr 57.

Demeanour during trial. The demeanour of an accused person in Court during trial is too elusive to be justifiably considered as any indication whatever of his guilty consciousness. Purdy v People 110 Ill 50. But the accused's demeanour is admissible when on the witness stand and during the trial. Rider v People, 110 Ill 11.

Flight, etc. Flight from justice and its analogous conduct, have always been deemed indicative of a consciousness of guilt. R v Sarah Roy 5 W L Cr 28. R v Gubordhan, 9 A 528 (58). Gangaram v Emperor, 62 Ind Cr 545. The wicked flee even when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a lion. Wigmore § 276. In primitive times the accused who fled whether innocent or guilty suffered forfeiture and exclusion. "For although he be found not guilty, yet he shall forfeit his goods by the flying quia factum facinus qui judicium fugit, and the law will not admit any proof against this presumption. It is to-day universally conceded that the fact of an accused's flight, escape from custody, resistance to arrest, concealment, assumption of a false name and related conduct, are admissible as evidence of consciousness of guilt, and thus of guilt itself. Wigmore § 276. In Crossfield's Case, 26 How St. Tr 216, Fyre L C J said: "The prosecution say—and they say truly—if they make out that the conduct of the prisoner has been that he has either originally withdrawn himself from justice or that he has taken pains to secrete himself from justice after he has been apprehended that there are circumstances which do it least infer a consciousness of a very great guilt, and if there be no other reason assigned for the conduct of the party, very much corroborating and supporting the charge." So a flight is universally admitted as evidence of the guilt of the accused though not conclusive. Johnson v State, 17 Ala 618 (624). But when it is shown that the accused may have run away to avoid the consequence of being charged with an offence different from that for which he was being tried no effect should be given to his running away. hal hal v Queen Empress, 2 C W N 81. In R v Donmall, S R Rep (1817) p 175, Ibbot J said: "A person however conscious of innocence, might not have courage to stand a trial, but might, although innocent, think it necessary to consult his safety by flight." But see the case of Deacon Brodie, Not. Tr, R v Griffen, Donough Cir Ev p 40.

In R v Hazey, 2 C & P 458 which was a case of trespass, running away from the premises when detected was admitted as evidence of not being thereby permissive. The reason of this presumption is thus stated by Parler J in Start v U S 164 U S 627, "The law says that a man is to be judged by his consciousness of the right or wrong of what he does to some extent. If he flees from justice because of that act, if he goes to a distant country, and is living under an assumed name because of that act, the law says that is not in harmony with what innocent men do, and jurors have a right to consider it as evidence of guilt, because he is an eye witness to the occurrence, he knows how it did transpire, he is presumed to have a consciousness of that act. It is a principle of human nature—and every man is conscious of it, I apprehend—that, if he does an act which he is conscious is wrong his conduct will be along a certain line. He will pursue a certain course not in harmony with the conduct of a man who is conscious that he has done an act which is innocent, right, and proper. The truth is—and it is 'an old scriptural adage—that S 8 the wicked flee when no man pursueth, but the righteous are as bold as a lion. Men who are conscious of right have nothing to fear. They do not hesitate to confront the jury of their country, because that jury will protect them."

Explanation of flight, etc. When a flight has been proved as furnishing evidence of guilt it is competent for the accused to prove other causes which may have influenced him to fly, and leave the jury to decide whether his flight was caused by a consciousness of guilt and apprehension of conviction or by such other causes as he may prove to have existed. Kennedy v Com, 14 Bush 346, Rakkal v Queen Empress, 3 C W N 81. Evidence of fact that he had been advised to leave, to avoid vengeance by the deceased's friends is allowed. Bradburn v U S, 3 Ind I 604. Post cards mailed by the accused shortly after his departure were admitted to indicate non concernment of his whereabouts, and thus to rebut the inference of guilt of a murder from his flight. Gosforth v State, 183 Ala 66.

Complained by prosecutor. The prisoner was indicted for theft and dishonestly receiving stolen property. The prosecutor, while travelling by train to Calcutta, discovered that his courier bag, containing his watch, chain, and a sum of money had been stolen. He reported his loss to a railway police inspector at the first station at which the train stopped after he became aware of the theft, the prisoner not then being present. Evidence of this report is held admissible under s 8, illustration (k). Queen v Macdonald, 10 B L R App 2.

Silence. Silence on the part of the accused when charged with an offence is relevant to show his guilt, unless the charges are made in the course of a judicial interrogation. Lawson Pre Ev 628. "What is said to man before his trial" and Lord Senterden in Fairlie v Denton, 3 C & P 103, "he is in some degree called on to contradict, if he does not acquiesce in it." This rule is founded upon the maxim, qui tacet consentire videtur (silence gives consent.) But this inference of consent may safely be made only when no other explanation is equally consistent with silence. Wignore § 1071. A is accused of administering poison to his wife with the intention of killing her. A witness testifies that the wife had declared that A had attempted to poison her, in his presence, and that A was standing near by but made no response. This is relevant. Com v Galahan, 9 Allen, 271. S is indicted for the murder of T. Certain observations were made by his wife in the presence of others on the subject of crime to which S made no direct reply. These statements are relevant against S. R v Smith, 5 C & P 332, see also R v Mallory 15 Cox 456 (458). The conduct, demeanour and expression of the accused at or about the time of the commission of the crime with which he is charged, are competent evidence against him. Blount v State 49 Ala 381. But "there must be some limitation placed upon the doctrine that silence when a charge is made amounts to evidence of admission of the truth of the charge. The limitation is, I think, this. Silence is not evidence of admission unless there are circumstances which render it more reasonably probable that a man would answer the charge made against him than that he would not." Bouen L J in Hedmann v Walpole, 2 Q. B 534, 539.

Conduct as evidence of consciousness of innocence. The lack of guilty consciousness may be useful to show innocence of a crime. This lack of guilty consciousness—in other words, this consciousness of innocence—seems not to have been doubted by Courts as having in itself evidential value. But, a maning it to be relevant, a difficulty arises in the proof of it as a proposition—the difficulty that the conduct offered to evidence it is so likely to be feigned and artificial. Wignore § 174. rule also Griens Trial, 7 How St. Tr 159 (204). Barnard's Trial, 19 How St 833.

Failure to prosecute. In general a delay in instituting a prosecution is some indication of a consciousness of the weakness of one's cause. The failure to complain speedily of a rape is universally conceded to be a damaging circumstance against the woman making the charge. Wignore § 284.

Failure to produce evidence. The non production of evidence that would usually have been produced by an honest and therefore fearless claimant permits the inference that its tenor is unfavourable to the party's cause. Wingmore § 285, see also Cunning's Trial, 19 How St Trial 312, Rouan's Trial 22 How St Trial, 1140, Bond's Trial 37 How St Trial 605, Boyce v Chapman, 2 Beug N C 222, Tracy Peerage Case 10 Cl & F 150, 180 189, Vaughton v R. Co 12 Cox Cr 580 588, R v Labouchere 14 Cox Cr 419 (432) In Blatch v Archer, Cowp 66, Lord Mansfield G J said "It is certainly a maxim that all evidence is to be weighed according to the proof which it was in the power of one side to have produced and in the power of the other to have contradicted." Similarly in R v Burdett, 4 B & Ald 122, Best J said "If the opposite party has in its power to rebut it by evidence, and yet offers none, then we have something like an admission that the presumption is just."

The law does not impose impossibilities on parties, it expects that a man who has the means of knowing who may be witnesses shall call them.

Party's failing to testify A party's failing to appear when he had a strong motive to appear would be evidence against him. Brown v Stool, 77 P 171. So refusal to testify himself or to call available witnesses in his own behalf warrants inference unfavourable to the respondent. Att Gen v Pelletier, 131 NE 406. In Taylor v Williams, 2 B & Ad 845 (856) which was a case for malicious prosecution, and where the prosecutor failed to testify at the prosecution, it was held not mapt under the very peculiar circumstances of this case to raise an inference that his motive was a consciousness that he had no probable cause for instituting the prosecution.

Destruction or non production of documents etc In Anon 1 Ld Raym 731, Holt C J said "If a man destroys a thing that is designed to be evidence against himself, a small matter will supply it" and so a copy sworn was admitted to prove a note of defendant torn by him. See also R v Arundel Hob 109, Word v Apprice, 6 Mod 264, Samson v Rumsey, 2 Vern 561, Young v Holmes 1 Str 70, Armory v Delamirie, 1 Str 505. In Cooler v Hellier 1 Ves Str 234, Hardwicke L C said "If deeds or writings are destroyed by a party who would take benefits thereof, a Court of equity in odium spoliationis will go further than the Court of law." See also R v Smith, 3 Burr 1475. So where a document is not produced after proper notice, a strong presumption is raised against the party. Roe v Harrey 4 Burr 284, see also Clunes v Peggy 94, 1 Camp 8, James v Bion 2 Sim & St. 600, 606. But in Barker v Ray 2 Russ 63, 73, Lord Eldon, L C said "To say that if you once prove spoliation, you will take it for granted that the contents of thing spoliated are what they have been alleged to be may be in great many instances going a great length. 'So suppression of a deed affecting title is always to be taken most strongly against the persons keeping it back.' Att Gen v Dean 21 Beav 679, Sutton v Debonport 27 L J C P 51, Gray v Haug 20 Beav 219, Curlews v Corfield, 1 Q B 814. This rule is based upon the maxim omnia praesumuntur contra spoliatorem (All things are presumed against a spoliator).

Conduct of the accused in attempting to stifle or thwart investigation The fact that the accused has attempted to stifle or thwart the investigation of the crime is relevant to show the guilt of the accused. S is suspected of having poisoned T. It appears that S has tried in every way to prevent the body of T from being exhumed and examined. This raises an inference of S's guilt. R v Stansfield, 11 How St Tr 1402. S disappeared while living in R's house. R being suspected of murdering him, and it being proposed to take up the basement floor, objected strongly arguing that if the floor was taken up the house would fall down. The officers of the law persisted and the body of S was found underneath the floor. A strong inference of R's guilt arose. State v Robinson, Burr Ev 462. C being suspected of the murder of D, it is sought to compare her feet with certain foot-prints. C resists and has to be compelled by force to put her feet in tracks. This raises a presumption of guilt in C. State v Cicely, 13 S & M 205.

Fear exhibited by the accused. The fact of fear exhibited by the accused raises an inference against the accused. A being accused of the murder of B

S 8 shows great repugnance to looking at the dead body of B. This is relevant R v Stewart, 19 How St Tr 156, R v Onslow, 19 How St Tr 128. T comes into a town with a horse and immediately employs an auctioneer to sell it. While the sale is going on T is observed to look excited and apprehensive, and on receiving the purchase money leaves the place at once, and on subsequently meeting the auctioneer endeavours to avoid him. The conduct of T raises a presumption of his guilt. Tynes v State, 5 Humph 383.

Possession by the accused of the fruits of crime Where the evidence against the accused is circumstantial in its character, the possession by the accused of the fruits of the crime is relevant as a circumstance in the chain of evidence from which guilt may be inferred. Wilson v US, 162 US 613. M is indicted for the murder of a woman. When arrested, property belonging to the woman, such as dresses and jewellery, is found in his possession. This raises an inference of guilt. State v Jittam 3 N.C. 109, lia v Queen, 11 C 190. But a reasonable explanation by the accused of his possession overthrows the presumption, and casts the burden on the prosecution provided the explanation is not inconsistent with the identity of the property. R v Crouchurst, 1 C & K. 370, R v Smith 2 C & K 206, Queen v Evans, 2 Cox C C 270.

Sudden change in the circumstances of the accused. Proof of a sudden change having taken place in the life and circumstances of the accused subsequent to the crime is relevant. Welsh v State, 12 South Rep 275. A rich man is found murdered and robbed. B a poor relative, immediately afterwards commences to live and spend money like a rich man. This may raise an inference of B's guilt. Best Ev § 459. "Such evidence may be competent. Its effect may be very slight, and in many cases, furnish not the least ground for charging a party. The possession of a large sum of money, with strong accompanying circumstances of guilt of an independent character accompanied with evidence of entire destitution of money before the time of the leaving may probably be submitted to the jury." Com v Montgomery, 11 Mete 334.

Inconsistent and contradictory accounts of circumstances of the crime. The fact that the accused has given false, inconsistent or contradictory accounts of the circumstances of the crime or of his relation to the act, is relevant. Law Pre Ev 612. D was suspected of having poisoned E. It appears that he had stated to F that E had died of a cold induced by wet feet, to S that he had ruptured a blood vessel and to H and J that he had died from the effects of a cerebral complaint. This raises an inference that D was guilty. R v Donellan, Phil Tr 126.

Conduct regarding a document The nature of a document can be ascertained not only by the terms of the document but also to a certain extent from the circumstances existing at the time of its execution as well as by the conduct of the parties since its execution. Robert Watson v Mohesh Naram 24 W R 17 P C, see also Nidhu v Nistaram 13 B L R 416, Radha v Gurdhari, 20 W R 243. According to English law where the instrument is an old one, and its meaning is doubtful the acts of the author, which are only modes of expressing intention more weighty than words, may be given in evidence in aid of its construction. Tyn § 1204, see also Att Gen v Brasenose College, 2 C & Fin 295, Att Gen v Drummond 1 Durn & W 153. In the last mentioned case Lord Chancellor Sugden said "Tell me, what you have done under the deed, and I will tell you what that deed means." So in order to ascertain the sum of an old charity grant, the evidence of the early and contemporaneous applications of the funds of the charity itself by the original trustees under the deed, is certainly admissible. Shore v Wilson, 9 C & Fin 603, Att Gen v Sidney Sussex Coll 38 L J Ch 637, Att Gen v Mayor of Bristol 10 C & Z W 121. Where the question is whether one of a large number of leases granted by a landlord at about the same time, under similar circumstances and on similar terms was intended to be perpetual or facts relating to acts and conduct of parties indicative of such intent are relevant facts only if they relate to a fairly large number of leases and not otherwise. Narsingh Doyal v Ram Narayan 30 C 883. The conduct of the parties after the transaction of sale is important in order to ascertain whether the parties intended ownership to pass independently of payment of consideration. Bhagan v Allah Ditta 9 Ind C 547=27 P J R 1911, see also Ghannya Singh v Nihal Singh, 7 P R 1897 Rev, Ramchand v Harnani, 68 P R 1900 Rev. In case of ambiguous grant subsequent conduct is admissible to interpret the grant. In re Purmanandas 7 B 109, see also Cheetun Lal v Chutlerdhar, 19 W R 432. Conduct of parties and surrounding circumstances are relevant in order to ascertain whether a deed which appears on the face of it to be a deed of an absolute sale is not in fact a deed of mortgage or condition of sale. Hem hunder v Kallychurn, 9 C 528. Kashi Nath v Chandi Charan 5 W R 63 (F B), Balsu v Gobinda 4 B 594. Lincoln v Wright, 4 De G & J 16, Kashi Nath v Harihar, 9 C 898. Where the meaning of a document regarding certain transactions is not clear the conduct of the parties is admissible in evidence to show in what light they themselves regarded the transactions. Badri v Surlappal, A I R 1928 All 31=25 A L J 849.

Explanation 1 Explanation 1 points out that mere statements as distinguished from acts do not constitute conduct. Conduct may be equivocal or insensible without statements explanatory or elucidatory of it. Statements accompanying acts are in fact part of the res gestae just as much as the acts themselves. They are often absolutely necessary to show the animus of the actor. They have been styled verbal acts. Bateman v Bailey 5 Term R 512, Hyde v Palmer 3 B & C 657, Benson v Cartwright, 5 B & C 1. The admissibility of a statement depends not merely on its accompanying an act, but on the light it throws upon an act which is itself relevant. Wright v Fitham, 7 A & L 313, Norton p 106, R v Bliss 7 A & E 550. This explanation points to a case in which a person whose conduct is in dispute mixes up together actions and statements and in such a case those actions and statements may be proved as a whole. For instance a person is seen running down a street in a wounded condition, and calling out the name of his assailant, and the circumstances under which the injuries were inflicted. Here what the injured person says and what he does may be taken together and proved as a whole. But the case would be very different if some passers-by stopped him and suggested some name or asked some questions regarding the transaction. If a person were found making such statements without any questions first being asked then his statements might be regarded as a part of his conduct. But where the statement is made merely in response to some question or suggestion, it shows a state of things introduced, not by the fact in issue but by interposition of something else." Per Petheram C J in Queen Empress v Abdulka 7 A. 385, 395, 396. The Indian Evidence Act intends "to make those statements admissible and those only which are essential complements of acts done or refused to be done so that the act itself or the omission to the act acquires a special significance as a ground for inference with respect to the act as in the case under trial." Pre West J in Empress v Rama Baiappa, 3 B 12 (17), see also Reg v Jora Hassi, 11 B II C 212. A statement made by the deceased immediately after the robbery regarding the robbery and also regarding the assault committed in the course of the robbery was admissible, though the person who made it cannot be called to depose to it on oath. Lalji v Emperor A I R 1923 Pat 162-106 Ind C 14 698=6 P 717. Here the words are considered as acts. The question is not open to the objection of hearsay. It is not hearsay. Shilling v Ins Co I F & T 116, 120. So where an act done is evidence per se, a declaration accompanying that act may well be evidence if it reflects light upon or qualifies that act. Wright v Fitham, 7 A & L 313. The words must strictly accompany the physical act, and be uttered at the time the material act is done. Powell F 68. "It is not, however, every declaration that accompanies and purports to explain a fact that will be received—e.g. a declaration that is equivocal (Hy v Bliss 5 C & P 550) R v Hamwright 13 Cox 171) or is obviously concocted to serve a purpose. (Thompson v Tietaniam, Skm 402 R v Abrahams, 2 C & K 570) Phup Ie 13. This section so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct" must be read in connection with sections 25 and 26, and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by those sections. Queen Empress v Ana, 11 B 260 (F B). A statement made by a person is to

S 8 the circumstances under which he executes a document a considerable time after the execution cannot be admitted to prove the facts stated by him Narasamma v Billa Kesa, 25 M L J 637

Complaint Illustrations (j) and (k) make statements of a person against whom an offence has been committed, relevant. But a mere statement is not relevant. Statement in the shape of complaint is only relevant. These illustrations are examples of conduct of a party alleging that an offence has been committed against him or her, and of his or her statements, accompanying such conduct. Norton Et 107. A distinction is to be marked here between a bare statement of fact of rape and robbery, and a complaint. The latter evidences conduct, the former has no such tendency. There may be sometimes a difficulty in discriminating between a statement and a complaint. It is conceivable that the essential difference between the two is that the latter is made with a view to redress or punishment, and must be made to some one in authority—the police, for instance, or a parent, or some other person to whom the complainant is justly entitled to look for assistance and protection. The distinction is of importance, because while a complaint is always relevant, a statement not amounting to a complaint will only be relevant under the particular circumstances e.g., if it amounts to a dying declaration, or can be used as a corroborative evidence. Norton Et 114

Complaint in cases of rape, criminal assault, etc Illustration (j) is an example of admissibility of complaint in a case of rape as evidence of conduct. The rule is a striking exception to the general principle that statements made behind the back of a party are inadmissible in evidence against him. Powell Et 77. The origin of the rule is doubtful. It is either derived from the ancient law that a ravished woman should raise a "hue and cry" as soon as she could after the offence was committed or else from the ancient practice, before the law of evidence was settled, by which all prosecutors were allowed to give details of complaints in regard to any offence. Ibid. When a woman charges a man with a rape, and testifies to the details and the accused denies the act itself its very commission thus coming into issue, the circumstance that at the time of the alleged rape the woman said nothing about it to any body constitutes in effect a self contradiction or inconsistent statement. It was entirely natural, after becoming the victim of an assault against her will that she should have spoken out. That she did not, that he went about as if nothing had happened was in effect an assertion that nothing violent has been done. Thus, the failure of the woman, at the time of an alleged rape to make any complaint could be offered in evidence as a virtual self-contradiction discrediting her present testimony. As a peculiarity therefore of this kind of evidence, it is only just that the prosecution should be allowed to fasten this natural assumption by showing that the woman was not silent i.e., that complaint was in fact made. This apparently irregular process of negating evidence not yet formally introduced by the opponent is regular enough in reality because the impression upon the tribunal would otherwise be there as if the opponent had really offered evidence of the woman's silence. Hignote § 1135, see also State v DeWolf 8 Conn 99, Baccio v People, 41 N Y 263, State v Neal Utah 151. So in cases of rape indecent assault and similar offences upon females (but not in civil cases) the fact that the prosecutrix made a complaint shortly after the outrage, of the matters charged against the prisoner, together with the particulars of the complaint, are admissible as evidence in chief for the prosecution not to prove the truth of the matters stated, but as evidence of the consistency of the conduct of the prosecutrix with the story told by her in the witness box and as being inconsistent with her consent to that of which she complains. H v Lillyman, (1896) 2 Q B 165. R v Osborne, (1903) 1 K B 571, Koscoe Cr Et 37, Phip Et 99, Beaty v Cullingworth, (1896) 60 J P 777. R v Lovell, 129 L T 638. If the raped girl went to her relatives straight after the occurrence and complained on her own initiative, there is no doubt that her conduct would have a direct bearing upon and connection with the occurrence itself. Emperor v Phagana A I R 1926 Pat 38=89 Ind L C is 1013 see also Soosalal v Emperor, 82 Ind C is 142.

Whether details of complaints are admissible Originally the details of a woman's statement could not be received R v Clark, 2 Strk. 242, R v Walker, 2 Moo & Rob 212, R v Megson, 9 C & P 420, R v Alexander, 2 Craw & D 126, R v Osborne 1 Cer & M 622, R v Nicholas, 2 C & K 246, R v Eyre, 2 F & F 579, R v Wood 14 Cox 46 In R v Walker (supra) which was decided in 1839, Parke B. excluded the statement, but said "The sense of the thing certainly is that the jury should in the first instance know the nature of the complaint made by the prosecutrix, and all that she then said. But for reasons which I can never understand, the usage has obtained that the prosecutrix's counsel should only enquire generally whether a complaint was made by the prosecution of the prisoner's conduct towards her, leaving the prisoner's counsel to bring before the jury the particulars of that complaint by cross examination." See also Step Dig. Ev Note V, Reg v Eyre 2 F & F 579 Reg v Wood, 14 Cox 46 A series of rulings beginning with R v Lallyman, (1896) 2 Q B 167, repudiated the original practice and declared the whole statement admissible In that case at p 177 Haulins J observed "After a very careful consideration we have arrived at the conclusion that we are not bound by any authority to support the existing usage of limiting evidence to the fact of complaint which was made, and that reason and good sense are against our doing so The evidence is admissible only upon the ground that it was a complaint of that which is charged against the prisoner, and can be legitimately used only for the purpose of enabling the jury to judge for themselves whether the conduct of the woman was consistent with her testimony on oath given in the witness box negating, her consent, and affirming that the acts complained of were against her will and in accordance with the conduct they would expect in a truthful woman under the circumstances detailed by her The jury, and they only, are the persons to be satisfied whether the woman's conduct was so consistent or not Without proof of her condition, demeanour, and verbal expressions, all of which are of vital importance in the consideration of that question, how is it possible for them satisfactorily to determine it? Is it to be left to the witness to whom the statement is made to determine and report to the jury whether what the woman said amounted to a real complaint? Are the jury bound to accept the witness's interpretation of her words as binding upon them without having the whole statement before them, and without having the power to require it to be disclosed to them, even though they may feel it essential to enable them to form a reliable opinion? To limit the evidence of the complaint to such questions and answers is to ask the jury to draw important inferences from imperfect materials, perfect materials being at hand and in the cognizance of the witness in the box In our opinion, nothing ought unnecessarily to be left to speculation or surmise In the result, our judgment is that the whole statement of a woman containing her alleged complaint should, so far as it relates to the charge against the accused, be submitted to the jury as a part of the case for the prosecution" See also R v Kiddle, 19 Cox Cr 77, R v Merry, 19 Cox Cr 412 R v Osborne (1905) 1 K B 551, Chesney v Acus Holme, (1908) P 301, Hedge's Case, 3 Cr App 262 Graham's Case, 4 Cr App 219, Christie's Case, 10 Cr App 141—1914 A C 15, R v Norcott, (1916) 1 K B 347 It appears from illustrations (j) and (l) that the Indian Legislature has given effect to the sound reasoning expressed by Parke J in R v Walker, 2 M & R 212 and Bramwell J in Reg v Wood, 11 Cox 46 So under this section the particulars of a complaint are also admissible in evidence Stoke v Anglo Indian Code, 558 see also Soosatal v Emperor, 82 Ind Cas 112, Emperor v Phaguna, 82 Ind Cas 1013=1926 P 78

Time for making the complaint. The rule is that the complaint should be made at the earliest reasonable opportunity But what is the earliest and reasonable opportunity of complaint depends on the circumstance of each case R v Lee 7 Cr App 31 In Chesney v Acus Holme (1908) P 301, which was a case of immoral acts by a clergyman with a boy the boy's statement to his mother on the same evening was admitted, but not his statement on the next evening In Graham's Case 4 Cr App 218, complaint a month after was received In Christie's Case 10 Cr App 141=(1914) A C 45 which was a case for indecent assault upon a little boy, the boy's identification of the accused within a few

S 8 minutes was held inadmissible, on the ground that 'complaint is only admissible to negative assent'. In the case of the rape of an innocent girl of tender age the evidence of the ravished girl is of great value and where she makes a statement by way of disclosure immediately after the occasion, it is a strong piece of evidence corroborating her credibility and proving the consistence of her conduct and also negating consent on her part. Soosalal Bama v Emperor, 87 Ind. Cas. 142.

Complaint in answer to question. The complaint must be volunteered and not in answer to questions. R v Merry, 19 Cox C C 442. In King v Osborne, (1905) 1 K B 551, the prisoner was indicted for an indecent assault on a girl under the age of thirteen years, whose consent to the act was therefore immaterial. At the trial evidence was admitted of the answer given by the girl to a question put by another child, in the absence of the prisoner, as to why the girl had not waited for the other child at the prisoner's house. Held, that the girl's reply was a complaint of the prisoner's conduct to her. In that case Ridley J in reading the judgment of the Court consisting of five Judges observed "As to the first point, the case of Reg v Merry (supra) was quoted. In that case a question had been put to a girl of nine years old by her mother in a case of indecent assault, and the learned Judge ruled that as the proposed evidence was a statement made in answer to a question, it was a conversation and not a complaint, and he declined to allow it to be given in evidence. It does not appear, however, from the report what the question was that was put to the girl. It appears to us that the mere fact that the statement is made in answer to a question in such cases is not of itself sufficient to make it inadmissible as a complaint. Questions of a suggestive or leading character will indeed have the effect, and will render it inadmissible but a question such as this, put by the mother or other person 'what is the matter?' or 'why are you crying?' will do so. These are natural questions which a person in charge will be likely to put, on the other hand, if she were asked, 'Did so and so' (naming the prisoner) 'assault you? Did he do this and that to you?' then the result would be different, and the statement ought to be rejected. In each case the decision on the character of the question put, as well as other circumstances such as the relationship of the questioner to the complainant must be left to the discretion of the presiding Judge. If the circumstances indicate that but for the questioning there probably would have been no voluntary complaint, the answer is inadmissible. If the question merely anticipates a statement which the complainant was about to make it is not rendered inadmissible by the fact that the questioner happened to speak first'. See also Soosalal v Emperor 82 Ind. Cas. 142. Pressure by a proper person (e.g. a mother) to state the cause of visible mental disturbance does not invalidate the answer. R v Norcott 12 Cr. A. R. 166.

Complaints in other cases. The rule as to admissibility of such evidence is equally applicable to cases where the offence charged is with intent per on. R v Camilleri (1922) 2 K. B. 122=911 J. K. B. 671=16 Cr. A. R. 162=46 J. P. 135. In admitting this kind of evidence Lord Henart C J in that case observed. It is quite true if one looks at the historical origin of the present law that there are reasons why complaints of this character might well be thought inadmissible only when made by female. But in view of the decision in Lillyman's Case (R v Lillyman [1896] 2 Q. B. 167, where no doubt the question of consent was material and in the case of Rees v Osborne [(1904) 1 K B 551] where no question of consent arose it does not appear to the Court that, at the present day, the question of admissibility of such evidence can depend on those historical grounds upon which in the first instance such evidence in the case of complaints by females may have been admitted. In certain other cases such as Beatty v Cullingworth (60 J. P. 710) observations were made which appear to limit the admissibility of such complaints to cases of sexual offences upon women and girls but when one looks at the facts of those cases, it is apparent that the antithesis which the Judge had in mind was not an antithesis between cases in which a complaint of this nature was made by a female and cases where a complaint of this nature was made by a male person but the antithesis is between what may be broadly described as sexual offences on the one hand and non sexual offences on the other" But section 8 of the Evidence Act is very wide, and a complaint of any offence is admissible. Vide illustration (k)

In R v Foster, 6 C & P 325, which was a case of man slaughter Pole J allowed the statement of the deceased made to a prisoner by immediately after the accident, to be given in evidence, saying that it was the best possible testimony that, in the circumstances, could be adduced to show what it was that had knocked the deceased down" Roscoe C J 25. But in that case the evidence was not admitted to show the conduct of the prosecutor but apparently as part of res gestae. Strictly speaking this testimonial evidence was admitted as an exception to Hearsay rule as spontaneous declaration for which no provision has been made in the Act, but the admission of which is inherent as part of res gestae under section 6, illustration (a)

Explanation 2 Under this explanation another class of statements i.e. statements which affect the conduct of a person, whose conduct is relevant under this section, is admissible. Illustrations (f), (g) and (h) are examples of such statements. The conduct of A in illustrations (f), (g) and (h) show nothing unless the statements are put before the tribunal. Here the statements made in the presence of the party are admissible as the ground work of their conduct. Here the conduct of A is equivocal and statements are admissible to explain that conduct as part of the res gestae under the rule of the Verbal Act doctrine explained in s 6. In this explanation statement includes document addressed to a party. Vide illustration (h), Reg v Thompson (1910) 1 K B 640. But before a bare statement made by another person in an accused's presence and prejudicial to him is allowed to be used as evidence against him, there must be something in the shape of action, conduct or words, which in the opinion of the Judge, would justify the jury in drawing in inference that the accused substantially admitted the story told against him" Per Halsbury J in R v Smith 18 Cox 72. Moreover to make the statement admissible against a person, the evidence must 'be adduced which would justify the jury in finding that the prisoner having heard the statement and having opportunity of explaining or denying it, and the occasion being one upon which he might reasonably be expected to make observation, explanation or denial, by his silence his conduct or demeanour, or by the character of any observations or explanations he thought fit to make substantially admitted the truth of the whole or portion of it" Ibid. But in Reg v Thompson, (1910) 1 K B 640=79 L J K. B 321 at p 322 Lord Alverstone C J said. But if the case of Reg v Smith, is supposed to lay down the rule that such a statement is never admissible unless the prisoner has admitted that the statement is true it goes too far. I adhere to the opinion I expressed in Reg v Bromhead 71 J P 103 that the question of the admissibility cannot be determined solely by the consideration whether the prisoner has admitted the truth of the statement. The Court refuses to adopt the principle laid down in Reg v Smith that such a statement is not admissible unless the prisoner agrees with it because that would exclude the most ordinary case where the prisoner says nothing" In Reg v Smith Smith only said of the adverse statement, 'This is not true,' and the Judge excluded it when tendered. In Reg v Thompson also Thompson strenuously denied the co-defendant's allegation, but Lord Alverstone C J admitted the evidence against Thompson.

In Reg v Norton, (1910) 2 K B 496=79 L J K B 756, Norton was indicted for carnally knowing Majority Pruman, a girl under the age of thirteen years. The evidence was to the effect that on being asked by the accused who had done it, she said "you", and on being asked by another person she said Stevie Norton and pointed to the accused. The accused said No Madge you are mistaken, and she then said you have done it, Stephen Norton and pointed to him again. The accused then lifted his arms and said. If I have done it I hope the Lord will strike me dead. Now the question is whether the statement is admissible in evidence. In delivering the judgment of the Court consisting of Lord Alverstone C J, Pielford J and Lord Coleridge J, Pielford J observed "As a general rule, statements as to the facts of a case under investigation are not evidence unless made by witnesses in the ordinary way but to this rule there are exceptions. One is that statements made in the presence of a prisoner

S 8. upon an occasion on which he might reasonably be expected to make some observation, explanation or denial, are admissible under certain circumstances. We think it is not strictly accurate and may be misleading, to say that they are admissible in evidence against the prisoner, as such an expression may seem to imply that they are evidence of the facts stated in them, and must be considered upon the footing of other evidence. Such statements are, however, never evidence of the facts stated in them, they are admissible only as introductory to or explanatory of the answer given to them by the person in whose presence they are made. Such answer may of course be given either by words or by conduct—for example by remaining silent on an occasion which demanded an answer. If the answer given amounts to an admission of the statements, or some part of them, they or that part become relevant as showing what facts are admitted, if the answer be not such an admission the statements are irrelevant to the matter under consideration and should be disregarded. This seems to us to be correctly and shortly stated in Vol I of Taylor on Evidence (10th Ed) s 814 at p 574. The statements only become evidence when by such acceptance he makes his own statements. We think that the contents of such statement should not be given in evidence unless the Judge is satisfied that there is evidence fit to be submitted to the jury that the prisoner by his answer to them whether given by words or conduct acknowledges the truth of all or part of them. If there be no such evidence the contents of such statements should be excluded. It is perhaps too wide to say that in no case can the statements be given in evidence when they are denied by the prisoner, as it is possible that a denial may be given under such circumstances and in such a manner as to constitute evidence from which an acknowledgment may be inferred but as above stated we think they should be rejected unless there is some evidence of an acknowledgment of their truth.

The question was again considered by the House of Lords in R v Christie (1914) A C 545 = 83 L J K B 1097. In that case the accused was charged with an indecent assault on a child of tender years. Very shortly after the commission of the offence the child touched the prisoner and said "That is the man". To this the accused replied "I am innocent." The question was whether the statement made in the presence of the accused is admissible. Lord Allmon in giving his judgment observed: "As to the second ground, the rule of law undoubtedly is that a statement made in the presence of the accused person, even upon an occasion which should be expected reasonably to call for some explanation or denial from him is not evidence against him of the facts stated save so far as to make it in effect his own. If he accepts the statement in part only then to that extent alone it becomes his statement. He may accept the statement by word or conduct, action or demeanour, and it is the function of the jury which tries the case to determine whether his words, action, conduct, or demeanour at the time when a statement is made amounts to an acceptance of it in whole or in part. It by no means follows I think, that a mere denial by the accused of the facts mentioned in the statement necessarily renders the statement inadmissible because he may deny the statement in such a manner and under such circumstances as may lead a jury to disbelieve him, and constitute evidence from which an acknowledgment may be inferred by them." In the same case Lord Houlton said: "If the prisoner admits the charge the evidence is obviously relevant. If he denies it, it may or may not be relevant. For instance if he is charged with a violent assault and denies that he committed it that fact might be distinctly relevant if at the trial his defence was that he did it, but that it was in self defence. The evidential value of the occurrence depends entirely on the behaviour of the prisoner for the fact that some one makes a statement to him subsequently to the commission of the crime cannot in itself have any value as evidence for or against him. The only evidence for or against him is his behaviour in response to the charge, but I can see no justification for laying down as a rule of law that any particular form of response, whether of a positive or negative character is such that it cannot in some circumstances have an evidential value. I am therefore of opinion that there is no rule of law that evidence cannot be given of the accused being charged with the offence and of his behaviour on hearing such charge where that behaviour amounts to a denial of his guilt." In the same case Lord Reading also observed "In general, such evidence can have little value in its direct bearing on the case unless the accused, upon hearing the statement, by conduct and demeanour or by the answer made by him, or in certain circumstances by the refraining from an answer, acknowledged the truth of the statement either in whole or in part, or did or said something from which the jury could infer such an acknowledgment, for if he acknowledged its truth, he accepted it as his own statement of the facts. If the accused denied the truth of the statement when it was made, and there was nothing in his conduct and demeanour from which the jury notwithstanding his denial could infer that he acknowledged its truth in the whole or in part, the practice of the Judges has been to exclude it altogether." In this case the statement of the boy was held admissible. See also R v Hiley, 6 Cr A R 200=27 T L R 441, R v Wilson, 6 Cr A R 207, h v Adams 17 Cr A R 77, R v Strand, 7 Cr A R 38.

Which affects such conduct The statements whether oral or written must be shown "to affect the conduct" of the person to whom they are made, and therefore, mere statement to persons, which cannot be shown to be in any way connected with or to bear upon his conduct, would be inadmissible. Can Li 97 In R v Bexley, 70 J P 263, the prisoner was charged with murder of her child. She made a statement as to its death to her husband who repeated it to the police. In her presence, she made no reply, but burst into tears. This statement was held admissible as it explained her subsequent conduct. So when a statement is made by a person in the presence of accused and the accused upon hearing the statement, by conduct and demeanour, or by the answer made by him, or in certain circumstances, by the refraining from an answer, acknowledges the truth of the statement, it is evidence against him. R v Christie (1914) A C 545, see also Child v Grace 2 C & P 193, R v John 7 C & P 324 Jones v Morrel 1 C & K 266, R v Welsh, 3 F & F 275, Prue v Baria, 6 W R (Eng.) 40 h 1 Malloy, 15 Cox 458, R v Cox, 1 F & F 90 Hayslep v Gymer, 1 A & E 165.

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

In cases where a guilty knowledge or intention or design is of the essence of the offence, proof may be given that the defendant did other acts similar to those which form the basis of the charge. Halsbury Vol IX p 380, see also R v Heeson, 14 Cox Cr 40, R v Steiens 16 Cox Cr 387, R v Flanagan 1 Cox Cr 40, R v Debendia 36 C 573, Motive of a crime, while it is always satisfactory circumstance of corroboration when there is convincing evidence to prove guilt of an accused person, can never supply the want of reliable evidence direct or circumstantial of the commission of the crime with which he is charged. Ramm v Emperor 7 Lih 84=A I R 1926 I ib 88 Under section 8 of the Evidence Act statements accompanying conduct and explaining such conduct are relevant. Pularam v Ajma, 45 Ind Cr 904.

The first information report against the accused is admissible under s 8 of the Evidence Act as part of the informant's conduct. A muddin v

Inadmissible

It is not competent to the prosecution to adduce evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment for the purpose of leading to the conclusion that the accused is a person likely from his criminal conduct or character to have committed the offence for which he is being tried on the other hand the mere fact that the evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible if it is relevant to the issue. Emperor v Stewart, 97 Ind Cr 1011=A I R 1927 Sind 28, Valm v All Gen. (1894) A C 57, see also Gulul v Emperor, 29 C W N 483.

It is a matter of common knowledge that brokers sometimes for the purpose of gain do resort to the nefarious system of entering into a transaction unauthorisedly in the expectation of its subsequent ratification, but it is a far cry that because an agent had been shown to be guilty of shady practice once, his evidence is to the circum-

S. 8

Admissible

Emperor, 44 C L J 253=A I R 1927 Cil 17 see also Soosa Lal Benia v Emperor, 82 Ind C 18 142

Where a woman who had been raped, on being questioned by a relative of her husband told him that the accused had raped her and asked him to report the matter to her father-in-law and subsequently made the same statement to her father-in-law. Held that the statements were inadmissible under s 6 but admissible as a complaint under s 5 of the Evidence Act. Raman v Emperor 4 L J L J 491

The fact that the complainant at first said that a certain person was the real culprit is relevant under section 8, of the Evidence Act. Abdul Ghafur v The Crown 25 P W R Cr 1910=6 Ind Cas 957=11 Cr L J 425

A prisoner was indicted for theft and dishonestly receiving stolen property. The prosecutor while travelling by train to Calcutta discovered the loss of the property and stated his loss to a Railway Police Inspector at the first station at which the train stopped after he became aware of the theft, the prisoner not being then present. This statement was tendered in evidence, and admitted under s 8 ill (k) of the Evidence Act. Queen v Macdonald 10 B L R App 2

The fact that the accused pointed out the place where the weapon (with which the murder was committed) was found as being the place at which it was concealed and the fact that shortly after the crime he was in a very agitated state and made a statement which led to his being asked to show the spot where the weapon used in the commission of the murder was concealed are evidence of conduct under s 8 of the Evidence Act which renders highly probable the oral evidence in the case and indicates that the accused was the murderer. In re Semalal Gowudan 86 Ind C 18 664=26 Cr L J 840 see also Emperor v Nga Tung Bi 35 Ind C 18 962=U B R (1916) Vol II 114=17 Cr L J 402 stances under which the contract in suit was entered into should be entirely discarded. Physically Abled v Mrs James, 1924 S 105=80 Ind. C 18 969

Inadmissible

Where certain persons are charged with murder it is not open to the prosecution to adduce evidence to show that on two previous occasions the accused under trial had committed murder themselves but had falsely charged and got convicted some other persons as murderers. Such evidence is irrelevant because the fact that the previous murders had been committed by the accused does not constitute under section 8 of the Evidence Act, a motive or preparation for the subsequent murder. Gangaram v Emperor, 67 Ind C 18 545=22 Cr L J 529, see also Emperor v Gangaram, 22 Bom. L R 1274

If a raped girl goes to her relatives straight after the occurrence and complains on her own initiative, her conduct would have a direct bearing upon and connection with the occurrence itself, but if she only answers questions, her statement would be hearsay. Emperor v Phaguna Bhawan, 89 Ind C 18 1049=26 Cr L J 1045 See also Nga Som v Emperor, 43 Ind C 18 443=19 Cr L J 155

The accused was convicted of theft on the evidence of an accomplice which was treated as corroborated in material particulars by the depositions of a Police officer and the complainant to the effect that the accused pointed out the house which he had entered on the night of the offence and the various places in the house connected with the offence. Held that the evidence could not be treated as evidence of conduct apart from the accomplice's statements under s 8 of the Act. Emperor v Hua Guber 21 Bom L R 724=22 Ind. C 18 601=20 Cr L J 681

Where the evidence is against a person charged with an offence under section 117 I P C it is open to doubt his conduct sometime after the occurrence cannot be taken to be such evidence of conduct under s 8 of the Evidence Act as can be used against him in the case. Enayet Karim v Emperor, 51 Ind C 18 775=21 Cr L J 167

A statement made by a person as to the circumstances under which he executes a document is considerable time after the execution, cannot be admitted to prove the facts stated by him Narasamma v Billa Kesu, 21 M L J 637

Admissible

Inadmissible

S 9

An informant's statement to the Police that he had purchased opium from the accused is inadmissible, unless it is made in the presence of the accused Ali Shein v Emperor, 12 C L J 129 = 12 Ind C 18 87

A certain witness stated that he had seen three women who were sleeping in the same bari as the complainant and his wife that night searching something at dusk. Held that the alleged search that evening cannot be treated as evidence as s 6 of the Evidence Act cannot make it admissible and section 5 is of no help (to the appellants) inasmuch as the women were neither parties to the case nor agents to any party Luzu muddin v King Emperor, 42 C L J 111 = 90 Ind C 18 433

9 Facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue or

Facts necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts relevant fact, or which support or rebut an inference suggested by a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which establish the identity of any thing or person whose identity is relevant, or fix the time or place at which any fact in issue or relevant fact happened, or which show the relation of parties by whom any such fact was transacted, are relevant in so far as they are necessary for that purpose

Illustrations

(a) The question is, whether a given document is the will of A. The state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged will may be relevant facts.

(b) A sues B for a libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A. B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true.

The position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published may be relevant facts as introductory to the facts in issue.

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are irrelevant, though the fact that there was a dispute may be relevant if it affected the relations between A and B.

(c) A is accused of a crime.

The fact that, soon after the commission of the crime, A absconded from his house, is relevant under section 5 as conduct subsequent to and affected by facts in issue.

The fact that at the time when he left home he had sudden and urgent business at the place to which he went, is relevant to explain the fact that he left home suddenly.

The details of the business on which he left are not relevant, except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden and urgent.

(d) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A. C, on leaving A's service, says to A—"I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer." This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct, which is relevant as a fact in issue.

S 9

(e) A, accused of theft, is seen to give the stolen property to B, who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says he delivers it—A says you are to hide it. B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction.

(f) A is tried for a riot and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob. The cries of the mob are relevant as explanatory of the nature of the transaction.

Introductory facts.—It would be practically impossible in the conduct of an action, to plumb direct in medias res, and Judge and jury alike seek for some introductory evidence just as one hearing only the main incident of a story desires to know the circumstances leading up to it and the results that flow from it. Those circumstances in relation to an action or suit may not per se be relevant, but in connection with the main issues to be put before the tribunal, they are treated as the introduction to the main matters or by way of inducement to it. They take the place of the preamble to a statute, which, while it has no power in itself combined with the enacting clauses becomes the Statute. The variety of these introductory or preliminary proofs is great in number as the variety of causes of action prevents any attempt at classification but the rule as to their relevancy is abundantly established. Gird v Lomax 86 All 132. One illustration will suffice to convey the meaning. An action was commenced by one Hunt, executor of the will of Sharp against defendant Sugney to compel him to convey certain lands alleged to have been held in trust for plaintiff's testator and setting out the facts relied on. Mrs Sharp the widow intervened, claiming that defendant held the land in trust for her, and claiming the rents and profits setting out that defendant who was her deceased husband's law clerk, had bought the land referred to at a foreclosure sale with her money and for her. Upon direct examination Mrs Sharp was asked "During the year 1881, from December 1st down to and including the month of October, 1882, was Mr Sugney the defendant in this action your agent in collecting rents for you?" Objection was made that it was immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent, and not pertinent to any of the issues. The objection was overruled, upon the ground that it was introductory. The specifications did not show that any motion was afterward made to strike out while the record showed that defendant's accounts were put in evidence, but not only that her, amounts of rents were collected by the defendant for her thus tending to show that she had moneys of her own, but also showing among other things that in his accounts to her of rents collected he charged her for the notary's fees for acknowledging the assignment of the Ring mortgage to him. If and for recording it for paying the taxes on the mortgage and for all the expenses of foreclosure of that mortgage including a witness fee to him and the expenses of the survey of this evidence the preliminary question leading to its introduction was held entirely proper. Hunt v Sugney 1 Pac 84. Bristol Wf Co v Palmer, 82 Vt 138. Burr Jones 1 Vt 28. Facts which are introductory and explanatory are always relevant. Queen v Lushington 9 B L R 4 (1854) 17 W R Cr 15.

S 9 alleged cause Wignore § 119 Evidence of other offences committed by the prisoner is sometimes admitted, when they corroborate the testimony of a witness in some material particular. Thus on an information for a libel where the printer swore that he had received the manuscript from the defendant to produce it, other libels written by him concerning the same subject were received by Lord Kenyon as evidence to corroborate the statement of the printer. R v Pearce Per R 75 So where the prisoner was charged with robbing the prosecutor of a coat by threatening to accuse him of a mutual crime, evidence of a similar but intellectual attempt on the following evening when the prisoner brought the duplicate pawn ticket for the coat, and which ticket was found on his person at the time of his apprehension was held admissible, as confirmatory of the truth of the prosecutor's evidence respecting what occurred on the former day. R v Fyerton R & R 375 cited by Holroyd J in R v Ellis, 6 B & C 143. So on a charge of highway robbery the prosecutor was allowed to rebut alibi, by proving that, shortly before the attack made upon him, and near the spot, the prisoner had robbed another person (R v Briggs, 2 M & Rob 199), and even had no such defence been set up similar evidence would, it seems, have been admissible in showing at least that the prisoner was in the neighbourhood at the time when the crime was committed. R v Poomey 7 C & P 517, R v Furesy 6 C & P 81. In civil cases too evidence of collateral facts is sometimes received for the purpose of confirming the testimony of witnesses. Fide Lleuellyn v Wincelworth 13 M & W 598. Hollingham v Head 27 L J Ch 211, Morris v Bethel 1 Lw Re C P 765—Taylor § 335 336. Sections 9 and 11 read with section 21 of the Evidence Act imply justify a Court in admitting into evidence all previous statements made by an accused which have a bearing upon the question of his guilt and whether the previous statements made to a Police officer, or to a judicial officer or to a third party is immaterial if the statement is relevant to the fact in issue namely the accused's guilt. Madan v Emperor 78 Ind Cas 963=4 P L F 891. The absence of an entry in a book of account has no doubt been regarded as a relevant fact, not under section 34, but under sections 9 and 11 of the Indian Evidence Act, to prove that an alleged payment was not made. Gangaram v Lachram, 19 C W N 612=28 Ind. Cas 705, Tara Kumar v Kumar Arun Chandra 74 Ind Cas 383=36 C L J 389, Imrit v Sibdhar, 15 C L J 7=17 C W N 108. Sagarmal v Manray 4 C W N 221, Ali Nasir v Usani 25 A 90. In Emperor v Gonesh Damodar 34 B 394 the accused published a book containing eighteen poems of which four were subject matter of charge. The general trend of the poems charged, as well as the remaining ones in the book evinced a spirit of blood thirstiness and murderous-energeness directed against the Government. Held that the Court was entitled to look into the poems other than those forming the subject matter of the charge for the purpose of finding out the intention of the writer and the design of the publication. In order to rely on the evidence of persons who identified the accused in jail but failed to do so in Court the fact of the jail identification must be stated in the witness's evidence. An identification in jail is in evidence a statement by the witness. "I saw this man who is before me taking part in the dacoity. That statement can be used to corroborate this evidence given in Court if the witness says in his evidence, "A number of persons was shown to me at the jail and from among them I pointed out those persons whom I had seen taking part in the offence. It is permissible under s 9 to call in independent evidence such as that of the Magistrate who conducted the identification to prove the identity of the persons whom the witness picked out at the jail, even though the witness himself may not correctly remember who they were. Chudhan v King Emperor A I R 1926 Oudh 36=90 Ind Cas 444=25 O C 258. Abdul v Emperor 47 A 39.

Basis for admission of explanatory facts The peculiar danger, of inducive proof is that there may be other explanations than the desired one for the fact taken as the basis of proof. Sidguel Fallacies 270. But in the study of Logic we are concerned with discovering the defects of a mode of Proof, while in the Law of Evidence we are concerned merely with the propriety of admitting the fact at all with its quality as a possible Inference, not as absolute Proof. If, then, the potential defect of inductive Proof is that the fact offered, as the basis of the conclusion may be open to one or more other explanations or conclusions, the test or requirement for mere Admissibility (is distinguished from Proof) must be something far short of this in strictness. The failure to exclude a single other rational hypothesis would be from the stand point of Proof a fatal defect, and yet, if only that single other hypothesis were open, there might still be an extremely high degree of probability for the conclusion under the Law of Evidence Wigmore § 32. Thus throughout the whole realm of evidential circumstantial and testimonial, the theory of the inductive argument, is practically applied from the stand point of Admissibility, is that the evidentiary fact will be considered when, and only when, the desired conclusion based upon it is a mere probable or natural or at least a probable or natural hypothesis and when the other hypotheses or explanations of the fact, if any, be either less probable or natural, or at least not exceedingly more probable or natural Ibid

General principle of Identity Evidence Identity may be thought of as a quality of a person or thing,—the quality of sameness with another person or thing. The essential assumption is that two persons or things are first thought of as existing, and that then the one is alleged because of common features to be the same as the other. The process of inference thus has two necessary elements (1) it is a concomitant one in its logical scheme and (2) it operates by comparing common marks found to exist in the two supposed separate objects of thought, with reference to the possibility of their being the same. It follows that its force depends on the necessity of the association between the mark and a single object. Where a certain circumstance, feature or mark, may commonly be found associated with a large number of objects, the presence of that feature or mark in two supposed objects a little indication of their identity, because, on the general principle of relevancy the other conceivable hypotheses are so numerous, i.e. the objects that possess that mark are numerous and therefore two of them possessing it may well be different. But where the objects possessing the mark are only one or a few and the mark is found in two supposed instances the chances of the two being different are nil or are comparatively small. Hence, in the process of identification of two supposed objects by a common mark, the force of the inference depends on the degree of necessity of association of that mark with a single object. For simplicity's sake, the evidentiary circumstance may thus be spoken of as a mark. But in practice it rarely occurs that the evidentiary mark is a simple circumstance. The evidencing feature is usually a group of circumstances which as a whole constitute a feature capable of being associated with a single object. Rarely can one circumstance alone be so inherently peculiar to a single object. It is by adding circumstances to a circumstance that we obtain a composite feature or mark which as a whole cannot be supposed to be associated with more than a single object. Wigmore § 411. "You compare in your mind," said Parke B in Fryer v Getherole, 13 Jur 512 "the man you have seen with the man you see at the trial." But "evidence as to identity based on personal impression, however bona fide is perhaps of all classes of evidence the least to be relied on and therefore, unless supported by other facts an unsafe basis for the verdict of the jury." Video Oscar Slater's Case, Not Trial Ser

Test of Admissibility The only matter that is here of concern is the admissibility of circumstantial evidence of identification, and it will easily be seen that very few questions can arise from this point of view. So far as there can be any general principle of Admissibility it is perhaps to be stated as follows: A mark common to two supposed objects is receivable to show them to be identical whenever the mark does not in human experience occur with so many objects that the chances of the two supposed objects are too small to be appreciable. But it must be understood that this test applies to the total combination of circumstances offered as a mark and not to any one circumstance alone, with others to make it up. Wigmore § 412

Circumstances which identify a person Identity of a person can be sustained by the following circumstances—

- (1) Corporal marks [Id v Castro, (Trichborne Case)] charge of Cadman

S 9 alleged cause. Ignore § 119. Evidence of other offences committed by the prisoner is sometimes admitted, when they corroborate the testimony of a witness in some material particular. Thus on an information for a libel, where the printer swore that he had received the manuscript from the defendant to produce it, other libels written by him concerning the same subject were received by Lord Kenyon, is evidence to corroborate the statement of the printer. R v Pearce, 11 R 75. So where the prisoner was charged with robbing the prosecutor of a coat by threatening to accuse him of an unnatural crime, evidence of a similar but immoral attempt on the following evening, when the prisoner brought the duplicate pawn ticket for the coat, and which ticket was found on his person at the time of his apprehension was held admissible, as confirmatory of the truth of the prosecutor's evidence respecting what occurred on the former day. R v Egerton R & R 375 cited by Holroyd J in R v Ellis, 6 B & C 142. So on a charge of highway robbery, the prosecutor was allowed to rebut alibi, by proving that, shortly before the attack made upon him, and near the spot, the prisoner had robbed another person (R v Briggs, 2 M & Rob 199), and even had no such defence been set up, similar evidence would, it seems, have been admissible as showing at least that the prisoner was in the neighbourhood at the time when the crime was committed. R v Poomey 7 C & P 517, R v Furesy 6 C & P 91. In civil cases too evidence of collateral facts is sometimes received for the purpose of confirming the testimony of witness. Fide Llewellyn v Wundworth 13 M & W 99. Hollingham v Head 27 L J Ch 241, Morris v Bethel 1 Law Re C P 765—Taylor § 335 336. Section 9 and 11 read with section 21 of the Evidence Act imply justify a Court in admitting into evidence all previous statements made by an accused which have a bearing upon the question of his guilt and whether the previous statement made to a Police officer or to a judicial officer, or to a third party is immaterial if the statement is relevant to the fact in issue, namely the accused's guilt. Madan v Emperor 73 Ind Crs 963=4 P L F 881. The absence of an entry in a book of account has no doubt been regarded as a relevant fact, not under section 34 but under sections 9 and 11 of the Indian Evidence Act, to prove that an alleged payment was not made. Gangaram v Lacharam, 19 C W N 612=28 Ind Crs 705. Tara Kumar v Kumar Arun Chandra 74 Ind Crs 383=36 C L J 889, Imrit v Sibdhan 15 C L J 7=17 C W N 108. Sagarmal v Manay 4 C W N 200. Ali Nasir v Mani, 25 A 90. In Emperor v Gonesh Damodar, 34 B 394 the accused published a book containing eighteen poems of which four were subject matter of charge. The general trend of the poems charged, as well as the remaining ones in the book evinced a spirit of blood thirstiness and murderous engerness directed against the Government. Held that the Court was entitled to look into the poems other than those forming the subject matter of the charge for the purpose of finding out the intention of the writer and the design of the publication. In order to rely on the evidence of persons who identified the accused in jail but failed to do so in Court, the fact of the jail identification must be stated in the witness's evidence. An identification in jail is in essence a statement by the witness. 'I saw this man who is before me taking part in the dacoity?' This statement can be used to corroborate this evidence given in Court if the witness says in his evidence "A number of persons was shown to me at the jail and from among them I pointed out those persons whom I had seen taking part in the offence. It is permissible under s 9 to call in independent evidence such as that of the Magistrate who conducted the identification to prove the identity of the persons whom the witness picked out at the jail even though the witness himself may not correctly remember who they were. Chullan v King Emperor A I R 1926 Oudh 36=90 Ind Crs 444=28 O C 258. Abdul v Emperor 47 A 39.

Basis for admission of explanatory facts The peculiar danger, of inductive proof is that there may be other explanations than the desired one for the fact taken as the basis of proof. Sidgual Fallacies, 270. But in the study of Logic we are concerned with discovering the defects of a mode of Proof, while in the Law of Evidence we are concerned merely with the propriety of admitting the fact at all with its quality as a possible Inference not as absolute Proof. If, then, the potential defect of inductive Proof is that the fact offered, as the basis of the conclusion may be open to one or more other explanations or conclusions, the test or requirement for mere Admissibility (is distinguished from Proof) must be something far short of this in strictness. The failure to exclude a single other rational hypothesis would be from the stand point of Proof a fatal defect, and yet, if only that single other hypothesis were open there might still be an extremely high degree of probability for the conclusion under the Law of Evidence. Wigmore § 32. Thus throughout the whole realm of evidence circumstantial and testimonial, the theory of the inductive argument, is practically applied from the stand point of Admissibility is that the evidentiary fact will be considered when, and only when, the desired conclusion based upon it is a mere probable or natural, or at least a probable or natural hypothesis and when the other hypotheses or explanations of the fact, if any be either, less probable or natural, or at least not exceedingly more probable or natural. Ibid

General principle of Identity-Evidence Identity may be thought of as a quality of a person or thing,—the quality of sameness with another person or thing. The essential assumption is that two persons or things are first thought of as existing, and that then the one is identified because of common features to be the same as the other. The process of inference thus has two necessary elements (1) it is a concomitant one in its logical scheme and (2) it operates by comparing common marks, found to exist in the two supposed separate objects of thought, with reference to the possibility of their being the same. It follows that its force depends on the necessity of the association between the mark and a single object. Where a certain circumstance feature or mark, may commonly be found associated with a large number of objects the presence of that feature or mark in two supposed objects is little indication of their identity, because, on the general principle of relevancy the other conceivable hypotheses are so numerous, so the objects that possess that mark are numerous and therefore two of them possessing it may well be different. But where the objects possessing the mark are only one or a few and the mark is found in two supposed instances, the chances of the two being different are nil or are comparatively small. Hence, in the process of identification of two supposed objects by a common mark, the force of the inference depends on the degree of necessity of association of that mark with a single object. For simplicity's sake, the evidential circumstance may thus be spoken of as "a mark." But in practice it rarely occurs that the evidential mark is a single circumstance. The evidencing feature is usually a group of circumstances, which as a whole constitute a feature capable of being associated with a single object. Rarely can one circumstance alone be so inherently peculiar to a single object. It is by adding circumstance to circumstance that we obtain a composite feature or mark which as a whole cannot be supposed to be associated with more than a single object. Wigmore § 411 "You compare in your mind," said Parle B in Fryer v Gathercole, 13 Jur 512, "the man you have seen with the man you see at the trial." But "evidence is to identity based on personal impression, however bona fide is perhaps of all classes of evidence the least to be relied on and therefore, unless supported by other facts an unsafe basis for the verdict of the jury." Vide Oscar Slater's Case, Not Trial Ser.

Test of Admissibility The only matter that is here of concern is the admissibility of circumstantial evidence of identification, and it will easily be seen that very few questions can arise from this point of view. So far as there can be any general principle of Admissibility, it is perhaps to be stated as follows: A mark common to two supposed objects is receivable to show them to be identical whenever the mark does not in human experience occur with so many objects that the chances of the two supposed objects are too small to be appreciable. But it must be understood that this test applies to the total combination of circumstances offered as a mark, and not to any one circumstance going with others to make it up. Wigmore § 412.

Circumstances which identify a person Identity of a person can be ascertained by the following circumstances—

- (1) Corporal marks [R v Castro, (Trichborne Case)] charge of Coelburn

S 9 C I II 1 ff 307 ff, 1 I, 670 ff, 718 ff, Comm v Stuartant, 117 Ma 131, (139), R v Broome, Danough, 81, R v Crippen, Wills 490, R v Hainwright, Not Tr

(2) Voice (Patton v State 117 Ga. 230, Brown v Com, 187 Ky 829)

(3) Mental peculiarities (Webster's Trial, Bemis' Rep 89), where knowledge of anatomy is shown in the mode of dissecting the body of the deceased, was admitted to identify the accused & medical professor)

(4) Clothing Story v State, 99 Ind 413, R v Nash, Wills 349, R v Kallas, Lyon p 58, Mahabalya Lyon 58, Reg v Sudarum, Lyon 58

(5) Weapons Deans' Case 32 Gratt Mass 912, 923 In this case the murder was committed with a gun It was proved that upon the examination of a large number of guns within a radius of eight miles of the scene of the murder none were found of the same bore or which would carry precisely the same ball as that found in the deceased's body

(6) Residence, and other circumstances of family history Lord Pearce Case L R 10 App Cas 763 775

(7) Specimens of spelling, is indicating a person's authorship of a written Hale's Trial 17 How St Cr 173, Norman v Horrell, 4 Ves 770 In Brooks v Tichborne 5 Exch 929 Park B and "It was hardly disputed that if a habit of the plaintiff so to spell the word was proved, it was some evidence against the plaintiff to show that he wrote the libel Indeed we think that proposition cannot be disputed the value of such evidence depending on the degree of peculiarity in the mode of spelling and the number of occasions in which the plaintiff used it" See also Cresswell v Jackson 4 F & F 1 (5) Wigmore Et § 413

(8) Voice R v Keating, 2 Cr A R 61 (1909)
So whenever the identity of a person is in question all facts which establish the identity of that person are relevant R v Crippen, 1910 Times, October 1910, see also R v Dall (1911) A C 47 R v Clewes, 4 C & P 221 Evidence of other offences committed by the prisoner is sometimes admitted, with a view to establish identity Taylor § 335 At a trial for offences under ss 302, 303 B and 380 I P C the Judge admitted evidence of theft committed some two years subsequently in somewhat similar circumstances, as showing identity, design and motive and illegal association and that a system had been pursued by the accused Held, that having regard to the dates of the incidents alleged in the subsequent case the evidence was not admissible either under s 9 or section 11 or 14 or 15 of the Evidence Act Empcor v Panchu Das, 58 Ind Cas 927= 21 C W N 501=31 C L J 402=47 C 671

Circumstances identifying a person—criminality of Act immaterial In R v Fursey 6 C & P 83 the kind of wound given to a third person by the accused was admitted to identify the weapon See also R v Rooney, 7 C & P 517 which was a case of robbery of W, who was riding with U, evidence of the finding of U's watch on the accused was admitted as identifying him as one of the taking put "it makes no difference that Mr U's Watch is the subject of the next indictment" So the general principle that where a circumstance is relevant for some purpose the incidental revelation, in offering it, of other criminal conduct by an accused does not stand in the way of receiving the evidence Wigmore § 116

Identity of name Identity of name raises a presumption of identity of person where there is similarity of residence or trade or circumstance or where the name is an unusual one but after where the name is a common one and there are several persons known of the same name and of the same place Tolson Pre Tr 307 "A concordance in name alone is always some evidence of identity and it is not correct to say with the books that it is proof of the facts in relation to the persons named their identity must be shown, implying that the agreement of name goes for nothing, where it is always of considerable help towards that conclusion" Groves v Groves 9 L J R N 111 Taylor's Trustees 21 L J R N 579 The Hudson's Trusts L R 11 F 305 Milner's Estate 1 R 11 L 215 Morden v Taylor 15 L J Ch 763 Dart v Hampton 18 Ch D 213, Le Hocking (1893) 2 Ch 367, Le Hocking (1901) 1 Ch 770

The question is whether one Samuel Fry of Plymouth Rock has written certain letters—he being the defendant in the case. A witness testifies that he knows the handwriting of a Samuel Fry of Plymouth Rock, the only person of that name in the place. The presumption is that he is the defendant in Harrington v. Fry, 1 Ry & M 90. Sines for medicines and attendance furnished by him is a licensed apothecary. Under the law he cannot recover unless he is licensed. He produces a licence to a person of his name and proves that he practised as an apothecary. The presumption is that he is the person licensed in Simpson v. Dismore, 9 M & W 17. In that case Parker B. said: We find him, acting as an apothecary, prescribing and dispensing medicines to his patients, and then producing a certificate or licence for that purpose in his name from the body empowered by law to grant it. That is quite sufficient evidence of identity. Similarly in Smith v. Henderson, 9 M & W 518, in action brought against a pilot named Wm. Henderson for negligently navigating a vessel. A pilot named Hender-on was in Court and answered this description. The presumption was that he was the defendant. There the Court observed: The action was brought against William Henderson, a pilot, and a person in Court answers to the name of Hender-on, and is proved to be a pilot and to have been the pilot on board the vessel in question. This is evidence for which the jury might assume him to be the defendant. But then the counsel objects that the statement is not made under oath. As to that there are many things which are incapable of strict legal proof. A man's name is a mere matter of reputation, and if proved in Scotch law the status of a man is matter of reputation, and if proved evidence of the relationship of one man to another or other matters of that nature were always required, no fact of that kind could ever be proved in practice. Here there was evidence of the identity of the defendant although it was not proved directly that the name of the party who answered in Court was William. There was evidence that he was a pilot, that he was the pilot on board the vessel, and he answered to the name of Hender-on. I think that is sufficient. In an action against Charles Lyon for goods sold to his intestate, and a plene administravit the plaintiff in order to show facts offered a copy of a bill and answer by one Charles Lyon to a bill filed in Chancery against him in the character of an administrator. The presumption is that they are the same persons and evidence is admitted. Hennell v. Lyon 1 B & Ald 182. In that case Bayley J. observed: There is nothing to show two administrations and it is rather extraordinary to suppose that two persons of the same name should sustain the same character. It is not to be presumed that there are two persons but the identity is rather to be presumed, unless the plaintiff could have shown the contrary.

An action is brought on a bill of exchange directed to, "Charles Banner Crauford, Last India House and accepted 'C. B. Crauford.' A witness proves that the signature was that of a gentleman of that name formerly a clerk in the East India House, but he does not know whether that W. Crauford is the defendant here. The presumption is that the two are the same. Green Shields v. Crauford, 9 M & W 311. Lord Binger said: "I am of opinion that the evidence was quite sufficient. Here the bill is drawn upon by Charles Banner Crauford, and addressed to him at the India House. The evidence is that there is a person of the name of Charles Banner Crauford, that he once belonged to the India House, and the acceptance is in his hand writing. That is surely sufficient evidence of identity. In an action brought on one William Evans for goods sold and delivered it appears that five years before a person of that name had been a customer of plaintiff and had written a letter acknowledging the receipt of the goods. The witness who proves this does not know whether the defendant who answered to the same name is the same person. The presumption is that he is. Snell v. Evans, 4 Q B 626. In the course of argument, Dennin C. J. asked: "Does the name go for nothing at all in my case? Suppose the name of the defendant had been William Launel Gulliver Evans and a mile had been proved to a party so named. An action is brought against Henry Thomas Ryda is acceptor of a bill of exchange. The cashier of the bank testifies that a person of that name had kept cash at the bank when the bill was made payable and that the acceptance is in his hand writing. He cannot identify him with S 9 the defendant of the same name. This is sufficient prima facie case. Roden v Ryde, 4 Q B 626. In this case Lord Denham said: "In cases where a particular circumstance tends to raise a question as to the party being the same, even identity or a name is some thing from which an inference may be drawn. If the name were only John Smith, which is of very frequent concurrence, there might not be much ground for drawing the conclusion. But Henry Thomas Rydes are not so numerous and from that and the circumstances generally, there is every reason to believe that the acceptor and the defendant are identical." Lord Lydhurst asks (in Whitelock v Musgrove, 3 Lys 513) "why the onus of proving a negature in these cases should be thrown upon the defendant," the answer is because the proof is so easy. He might come into Court and have the witness asked whether he was the man."

A note signed "Hugh Jones" is sued upon. It appears that there are several "Hugh Jones" at the place where the note was signed, and there is no evidence to show that the "Hugh Jones" who is sued is the "Hugh Jones" who signed the note. The plaintiff is non-suited. Jones v Jones, 9 M & W 7.

Identity from family name and initial. The fact that family name and initials are the same raises no presumption that the parties are the same. Ambs v R Co 44 Minn 266. London v Walpole 1 Ind 321, Bennet v Lubhart, 97 Mich 499. Burford v McClure, 53 Pa St 431, Law Pre Ev 314.

Two persons of same name but of different position. Where two persons of the same name occupy different positions or relations the presumption is that they are different persons. Law Pre Ev 315, Nicholas v Lansdale, 111 Ill Crs 21. Ellisworth v Moore, 5 Iowa 486. Coxens v Gillispie, 4 Mo 82.

Identity of things. The identity of things may be presumed from circumstances. Morris v Landaur 48 Iowa 234. Byrd v Fleming, 4 Bible 140. Beatty v Michon 9 H & Ann 102, Lawson Pre Ev 320. A certain case is proved to have been on a certain day removed from a justice's Court to supreme Court. A subsequent order of the Supreme Court dismissing from its docket a cause having the same title is introduced. The presumption is that it is the same cause. Howard v Rockwell, 1 Dong (Mich) 315. A contract to convey "a house on Church Street" is dated at Boston. The presumption is that the house is situated in Boston. Mead v Parler 115 Mass 413. An action is brought on a note made by B to C. The action is barred by limitation, but C relies on a new promise. The promise is made in a letter in which B acknowledges and undertakes to pay "his debt." The presumption is that this refers to the debt sued on. Colas v Kelsey, 2 Tex 541. The presumption is that an engine bearing the initials of a certain railroad company belongs to and is operated by, such company. Ryan v R Co 60 Ill App 612, Lawson Pre Ev 320 321.

Identity of a person by voice or appearance. A witness may testify to a person's identity from his voice alone. Hulet's Trial 5 How St Tr 119, Harrison's Trial 12 How St Tr 816. The Threshers' Trial 30 How St Tr 197. Pictors Trial 30 How St Tr 245. R v Castro Tichborne Case, see also Isnad v Emperor, 30 C W N 166, Mahm v Emperor, A I R 1925 Lah 13, Layan v Emperor 86 Ind Crs 817.

So also a person's identity can be testified from observing his stature, complexion, clothing or other marks or from the sight of the person's photograph, and a witness may also testify to a person's age or intoxication merely from his appearance. Chattels may be identified by their appearance and other qualities. Wigmore § 660.

Identity of person by photograph. The photograph was admissible said Hills J in J v Tolson 4 F & F 103, because it is only a visible representation of the image or impression made upon the minds of the witness by the sight of the person or the object it represents and therefore is in reality only another species of the evidence which persons give of identity when they speak from memory. The identity of a person may be under certain circumstances proved by a person's photograph. Frith v Frith L R P D (1900) p 71. In the above case, which was a case for divorce, Goulet Barnes J observed "I cannot rest upon a photograph alone, and this is a very small one."

I am continually asked to do this, but it should be known that it is not the practice of the Court, except under very special circumstances to act upon a photograph alone. It is high time that this should be understood. As regards identification by photograph, vide Emperor v Panchu Das 24 C W N 501 (F B) at p 521. In cases of identification by photographs it is not right for a police officer to show to persons who are to be called as identifying witnesses, photographs of those whom they are asked to identify. R v Dwyer (1924) W N 319. Ex Leigson, (1921) W N 319. A prosecutor identified a photograph as that of a prisoner whom the police subsequently arrested. After arrest the prisoner was picked out by the prosecutor from a number of men in a room. Held, that there was no ground for complaint against the method of identification. R v Melaney 157 L J 1 Jo 16 see also Bundesst v Emperor, A I R. 1927 A 163, Protap v Emperor, 92 Ind Cas 167.

Identity evidence and Opinion Rule The fact that a person is of opinion that a fact in issue, or relevant to the issue does or does not exist is not relevant to the existence of such fact and the opinion of such person is not admissible in evidence to prove such fact. This is the general rule of law, and is founded on the principle that the triers of matters in dispute—the Judge or jury, is the one who may be called upon to form their conclusions from the facts before them, and not upon the opinions which may be entertained on the subject by the multitude. Therefore, facts and not opinions, are listened to by judicial tribunals. Lauson, Expert and Opinion Ld 1. This Opinion rule has been used as bludgeon against every conceivable sort of testimony, even against such simple statements as estimates of distance, time, size, identity, and the like. Fortunately, however, such attempts have been usually unsuccessful in that class of cases. Wigmore § 1927. In R v Castro (1874) Tichborne Case, II 121 Coelbun C J excluded whether the defendant was Tichborne so far as the witness proposed, not merely to speak of the apparent similitude of appearance with the person he knew but of the general fact of individual identity on the whole of the case. In Whitaker v Franklin, 46 N H 21, Belious J in admitting opinion evidence as regards identity observed. The opinions admitted were formed from minute peculiarities of form, shape, colour, sound, etc, that can not be described in human language, so as to convey my accurate impression of the object and therefore, unless opinions are received there must be a failure of evidence. When facts and peculiarities upon which the opinion is formed can be stated and described they must be and it is then for the jury and not the witness to form an opinion. The reasons for its admission is thus also stated in Cooper v State, 23 Tex 331. 'I may feel a strong conviction, not however, amounting to certainty, that a man who stands before me in the Court room to day is the same man whom I knew ten years ago in a distant part of the world. I cannot explain to others the grounds of my strong belief, yet this belief amounts to a species of knowledge. If called as a witness I may press my opinion that the man before me is the same man whom I knew in another place. My opinion is entitled to some weight because it is the statement of a fact about which, to be sure I can not speak with absolute certainty, but yet with so much certainty as to satisfy the minds of others that the thing stated is a fact. The statement is also true when identification is made from voice. Vide Com v Williams 105 Miss 63, Com v Cunningham 104 Miss 545, Price v State, 34 S W R 622 Tex. In Hardy v Merrill, 56 N H 241, Foster C J observed. All concede the admissibility of the opinions of non professional men upon a great variety of unscientific questions arising every day and in every judicial inquiry. There are questions of identity, hand writing, quantity, value, weight, measure, time, distance, velocity, form, size, age, strength, heat, cold, sickness and health questions also concerning various mental and moral aspects of humanity, such as disposition and temper, anger, fear, excitement, intoxication, veracity, general character and particular phases of character, and other conditions and things, both moral and physical, too numerous to mention.

Cases of identification in other cases Two persons A and B were tried on 21st July, 1919 in the High Court Sessions for murdering one D, a woman of the S 9 town, on the 10th December 1914, of conspiring to rob her, of theft of property from her house and for abetment of the offences of murder and theft, under 302/114, 120 B 380/114 I P C. Accused A was arrested on 11th March 1918. B was arrested on 29th December 1918. At the trial the prosecution introduced evidence (1) of association of the two accused, (2) of their association with other women of the town in connection with the charge of theft which they made against them and (3) generally of a series of incidents from 1914 to 1918 that they used to go about together under different names, A as B with him as his Durwan and introducing himself as a Babu to rich persons of the town and this being followed by their subsequent disappearance. discovery of loss of money and ornaments. Held that the evidence was admissible. Emperor v. Pandit Das, 24 C W N 501 (F B) = 17 C 671 = 3 L J 402 (F B) Chaudhuri dissenting. The appellant was indicted for gross indecency with boys. His Defence was that he was not the man and gave evidence of an alibi. The prosecution proved that when he was arrested certain photographs and powder puffs were found upon him and in his rooms. Held the evidence was admissible as it tended to show that the appellant had abnormal propensities of the kind in question and therefore that it was some evidence of identity. Thompson v R (1915) A C 221 = 87 L J K B 478 = 118 L 418. So photographs could properly be put in evidence as being things usually found in possession of persons addicted to the offence of gross indecency with male persons and as such it is some evidence of identity. R v. Turner, (1922) K B 553. Identification evidence per se is not unsafe basis for conviction. Where therefore the accused are very clearly identified by persons who were undoubtedly present on the spot and picked out of a crowd in circumstances precluding all reasonable probability of fraud or error, conviction based on such evidence is maintainable. Mathura v. Emperor 2 Luck 444 = 101 Ind C 4 = A I R 1927 Oudh 196, (Lal Singh v. Dindyalal 81 Ind C 919 dissent from). The evidence which goes to prove that a person has identified another person as having taken part in a particular offence either in judicial identification proceedings or elsewhere is admissible though the value of such evidence is weakened perceptibly as a general rule by failure to identify subsequently in Court. Parbhu v. Emperor, 104 Ind C 526 = 28 Cr L J 850, see also Rampersad v. Emperor 1 Luck C 339 = A I R 1927 Oudh 369. There is no section in the Evidence Act which renders identification proceedings in jail lock up evidence at all and a conviction based mostly on that evidence is illegal. Bundesht v. Emperor, 7 L R 170 C 1 = 6 Cr R 361. As regards other cases, see Mathura v. Emperor A I R 1925 Lah 307. Lajam v. Emperor, 86 Ind C 817. Lal Singh v. Emperor, 5 L 398. Hahab v. Emperor 17 A 39.

Verification of time and place. Under this section facts which are necessary to fix the time and place of occurrence are admissible. The time and place of the crime should be stated with certainty in the indictment, though it is not necessary to prove them precisely as stated, unless they are necessary ingredients in the crime. Underhill Cr. Ev. 56. When, however, time and place are material, the details of time and place must be proved previously as alleged. But the question of place and time, becomes of utmost importance in a case of alibi. "To render an alibi satisfactory, the evidence must cover the whole of the time of the transaction in question." Bar v. People 30 Colo 522. In R v. Richard son Wills p. 46. William Richardson was charged with the murder of a young woman. On being asked where he was the day the deceased was murdered, he replied seemingly without embarrassment, that he had been all day employed at his master's work, a statement which his master and fellow servant, who were present, confirmed. Subsequently it was proved that he was absent from his work about half an hour (the time being distinctly ascertained) in the forenoon of that day. It was also proved by a young girl, that she saw a person exactly like him in dress and appearance running, hastily towards the cottage where the deceased lived and that murder was committed about the time when Richardson was absent from his work. So in this case it was very material to fix the time of the crime. See also h. v. Thornton Wills, 293 Empress v. Sudhakar Bhattacharya 1908. Ind. Jurisprudence. Where the defence rests on alibi the accused must show that he was present at some other place before the time of the alleged crime for such a length of time that it was impossible for him to have been at the place where the crime was committed either before or after the time he was at such other place. Mays v State, 72 Neb 723=101 N W 979. So the question of time is material in the case of an execution of a document when both persons die from a common accident, etc. Similarly the place of occurrence is very material in many cases.

This section makes admissible all facts which fix the time and place. Often time is proved by opinion evidence. In State v Bablum 36 Kan 10, Johnston J said "Facts which are made up of a great variety of circumstances and a combination of appearances which from the infirmity of language cannot properly be described [are admissible] in this category may be placed matters involving magnitude or quantity, portions of time, space, motion, gravitation, value, and such as relate to the condition or appearance of persons or things."

"Amongst the numerous physical and mechanical circumstances which occasionally lead to the detection of forgery and find a discrepancy between date of a writing and the anno domini water mark in the fabric of the paper is one of the most striking. In an old case a criminal design was detected by the circumstance that a letter, purporting to come from Venice, was written upon paper made in England." Hills Cir Et 212. In the case of the death of a person, by violent means it often becomes necessary to ascertain the time of his death. In such a case in the absence of any direct evidence, the time of death is ascertained by post mortem examination. Time of death is generally ascertained by digestion, by putrefaction, by rigor mortis and by temperature of the body.

Lyon's Med Juris

In the case of Impress v Sudhabele Bhattacharji, Reported in Lyon's Medical Juris at p 151, the hour of the death of the deceased became very important. The facts of the case were as follows. Deceased had taken a meal of chupatties, curry and rice a little before returning to rest at 10 p.m. with her husband (the prisoner). She was not again seen alive, prisoner left the house at 1 p.m. deceased was found dead with her throat cut before he returned. The question to be determined was—did death occur during the period 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. during which the prisoner was in her room or did it occur after his leaving the house? After examining the contents of the stomach the medical expert gave the opinion that in all probability the death occurred before the prisoner left the house. So in such a case in order to ascertain the time of death, evidence is admissible to show what food she took, when she took the food, condition of her health, her age etc. vide Lyon's Med Juris p 151.

Admissibility of other evidence in question of identity. One of the questions in issue in a suit is to pedigree of a certain family being whether one Gauri Shaulai was son of Balwant Singh or one Moajjan Singh belonging to a totally different family from that of Balwant Singh. An attested copy of a rublar in some proceeding long anterior to the suit was tendered in evidence in which rublar Gauri Sanlar was described as the son of Balwant Singh. Held that the rublar was admissible in evidence under this section. Radhan Singh v Kaurji Dulhit 18 A 98, see also Collector Goralhpur v Palal dhari 12 A (F B), pp 12, 27. In a case of burglary the thief had gained admittance to the house by means of a pen knife which was broken in the attempt, and part left at the window frame, the broken knife was found in the pocket of the prisoner, and perfectly corresponded with the fragment. In another case identification was established by the correspondence of the wadding of fire arms with a part of a torn letter found in the prisoner's possession and in a case on the Northern circuit where a man had been shot by a ball, the wadding of the pistol, which stuck in the wound, was found to be part of a ballad which corresponded with another part found in the pocket of the prisoner. Hills Cir Et 3rd Ed 96, 6th Ed 209. Judgment in a previous case is evidence under this section bearing upon the question of identity of the tenure. Per Vitter J in Swender Nath v Brojo Nath, 13 C 352 at p 356 see also Gajju Lal v Fatch Lal 6 C 171.

Question of paternity. In Douglas Peckage Case 2 Hurr Collect. Ind 402 Lord Mansfield C J observed "I have always considered likeness as an argument of a child's being the son of a parent and the rather as the distinction between individuals in the human species is more discernible than in other animals."

- S 9 A man may survey ten thousand people before he sees two faces perfectly alike, and in an army of an hundred thousand men every one may be known from another. If there should be a likeness of features there may be a discrimination of voice, a difference in the gesture, the smile, and various other things whereas a family likeness generally runs through all these. For in everything there is a resemblance as of features, size, stature and action." See also Piercy's Case, 1 P How St Tr 1199, Amesley v Anglesca, 17 How St Tr 1139, Day v Day quoted in Hubbock's Succession 384, Andrius v Isley, 8 C & P 7, Morris v Davis, 3 C & P 214 = 5 Cl & I 1836, Bagot v Bagot, (1878) 1 L R 1 R 308, Burnaby v Bailie 42 Ch D 282 (290)

Thumb Impression A comparison of thumb impression of the person, who presented the document before the Registrar with that of another person is admissible under this section if the similarity of those impressions can establish the identity of that person with the second person or under clause (2) of section 11 of the Act, if then the dissimilarity makes such identification improbable. In order to come under this section such comparison must be made by the Court itself. Per Banerjee J in Queen Empress v Faku Sheikh, 1 C W N 33. The opinion of an expert as to the similarity of such impression is now admissible under s 4 of the Act. Often a criminal is detected from finger prints. From the finding of the trace or mark it is inferred that some person bearing that trace or mark was present at the time or place of doing the act charged, and from the peculiarity of the trace or mark it is inferred that the accused was identical with that person. Now the question is do human finger prints present a combination having the highest degree of certainty? Science answers that they do. In brief, the accepted conclusion, after widest observation is that several fixed and typical varieties of skin marks on finger tips are clearly distinguishable, and that by the mathematical theory of probabilities the chance of two individuals bearing the same combination of such marks is so small as to be negligible, and that experience has confirmed this theory. Hence identity of a combination of such fixed and typical marks is the strongest evidence of identity of a person. Courts have therefore properly held such evidence admissible. Castleton's Case 3 Cr App 74, 119 more § 114.

In the case of finger prints the inference from identical marks is extraordinarily strong. But in the case of foot marks this inference is a peculiarly weak. This is because the features usually taken as the basis of inference—i.e. depth, colour, etc.—may not be distinctive and fixed in type for every individual, but may apply, even in combination to many individuals. Hence their probative significance is apt to be small. This ordinarily should not negative admissibility, it merely affects weight. Wymore § 115.

Illustration (a) This illustration is an example of introductory fact. This may also serve to illustrate section 7, as being an instance of fact 'which may constitute the state of things' under which a fact happened. It is to be observed says Mr Norton 'that the factum and not the construction of the will is here the matter in issue'. Nort Ex 116. In cases of construction of a will the state of the testator's property and of his family at the date of the alleged will are relevant facts. Vide section 10 of the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), see also Rabutti Dassi v Shub Chunder 6 M I A 1 (17), Hiscocks v Hiscocks, 3 M & W 363, Strenger v Gardiner, 27 Bea 38, Shore v Wilson, 9 Cl & F 556 and other cases cited in Basu's Succession Act under section 75. So where the factum of the will—in issue—such evidence is ordinarily admissible as introductory facts. Where the question is whether a will is forged or not, these facts may rebut an inference suggested by a fact in issue. Ide Nort 117.

Illustration (b) This is also an example of introductory facts. The position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published may also be relevant in order to prove or disprove malice. If the occasion is privileged the plaintiff must prove malice in fact, the burden of proving this is on him. Clark v Votequeux 3 Q B D 237, Jenoure v Delmege (1891) 14 P Cas 73, Loyal Aquarium & Soc v Parlmanson (1892) 1 Q B 413. Malice is proved when it is shown that the plaintiff and defendant previously quarrelled.

S 10

Admissible

forged and negotiation attempted in Bombay. A second telegram was received from Nayasaland in reply to inquiries made by Bombay Police. The accused cashed a draft at the French Bank, Bombay and presented another at the Eastern Bank, Bombay. The clerk informed his superiors and as a result the accused was arrested. It was held that the telegrams purporting to be sent by the Nayasaland Police were relevant to explain the conduct of the clerk of the Eastern Bank and of the Bombay Police and were therefore admissible in evidence under this section. Empior v Abdul Gani 91 Ind C 18 690=27 Bom L R 1373=49 B 878=A I R 1926 Bom 71.

Evidence that there is no entry in jama uasil bahi papers is not admissible under s 34 of the Evidence Act but may be admissible under ss 9 and 11 of the act. Deolia v Haje, 11 N L J 21=A I R 1928 Nag 153.

Inadmissible

10 Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or

Things said or done by more persons have conspired together to conspire or interference to commit an offence or in actionable wrong, to common design anything said, done or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.

Illustration

Reasonable ground exist for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen.

The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writings advocating the object in view, A, D, and F transmitted from Delhi to G at Calcutta the money which C had collected at Calcutta, and the contents of a letter written by H giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant both to prove the existence of the conspiracy and to prove A's complicity in it although he may have been ignorant of all of them and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it.

Conspiracy A conspiracy may be described in general terms as a combination of two or more persons by some concerted action to accomplish some criminal or unlawful purpose, or to accomplish some purpose not in itself criminal or unlawful, by criminal or unlawful means. Greenleaf L. 1 of Ill § 89 see also Drae v Stewart 40 U S App 173, U v Benson 14 Fed 219 State v Clark 91 Illust 536 Pettibone v U S, 148 U S 197. Similarly in O Connell v R 11 Cl & F 155 Trindal v J observed. The crime of larger quantities with a view to harm may be fatal as a poison. Many illustrations of these views might be suggested but I need them not if I have made myself understood. "Per Lord Brampton in Quinn v Leatham, (1901) A C at pp 529, 530, see also Mogul Case, (1892) A C 25, Rex v Jouenymen Tailors 8 Mod 11, Rex v Eccles 1 Lea L C 274. In Rex v Eccles Lord Mansfield said: "The offence does not consist in doing those acts, for they may be perfectly indifferent but in conspiring with a view to effect the intended mischief by any means. The illegal combination is the gist of the offence." See also per Glose J in R v Maubey 6 T R 619, R v Vincent, 9 C & P 91. So the gist of the offence of conspiracy is an agreement between the accused persons. Emperor v Osman Sardar 39 C L J 264, see also Amrita Lal v Emperor, 42 C 957 = 19 C W N 676. "It is indisputable that a person may be guilty of criminal conspiracy, even though the illegal act which he has agreed to do or caused to be done has not been done." Ibid

S 10

So conspiracy differs from other charges in this respect, that in other charges the intention to do a criminal act is not a crime of itself, until something is done amounting to the doing or attempting to do some act to carry out that intention, conspiracy on the other hand consists simply in the agreement of confederacy to do some act no matter whether it is done or not. Per Chesby B in R v Hibert 13 Cox 82, R v Most, 7 Q B D 244, Kail Munda v King Emperor, 28 C 797. But a conspiracy to do certain acts gives right of action only where acts agreed to be done, and in fact done would have been without preconcert, have involved a civil injury to the plaintiff. Huttlery v Simmons, 1 Q B 151, Kearney v Lloyd, 26 L R Ir 268, Salamon v Warner 65 L T 132, Templeton v Laurie, 25 B 230.

Combination to commit crime A combination to commit any substantive crime is an indictable offence. Roscoe Cr Ev 526. Husband and wife who are considered as one person are incapable of conspiring together. 1 Russ. Cr 11th. But they can severally or jointly conspire with other persons. R v Whitham 6 Cox 38. It is immaterial whether the principal offence is a felony, or misdemeanor or whether it is an offence at common law or by statute. 1 Russ. Cr 170, 1 right on Conspiracy, 80. R v Best, 2 Ld Rayn 1167. A combination to cause public mischief is punishable. R v Baitford (1905) 2 K B 730 (11), J v Boulton 12 Cox 87. Criminal conspiracy consists in the agreement of two or more persons to commit an offence punishable by law. It is undoubtedly true the law does not take notice of the intention or the state of the mind of the offender and there must be some overt act to give expression to that intention. Arnold v King Emperor 31 C W N 239.

Combination to Commit Torts A combination to commit a civil injury is an indictable conspiracy in many though it is impossible to say precisely in what cases. Kenny says any tort that is malicious thus excluding for in torts committed bona fide by persons eager to assert their supposed right of way. Roscoe Cr Ev 526. In many cases in agreement to do a certain thing, has been considered as the subject of an indictment for conspiracy at common law though the same act, if done separately by each individual without any agreement amongst themselves, would not have been criminal or even actionable. 1 Russ. Cr 171, R v Maubey 6 T R 619, J v Jouenymen Tailor 8 Mod 11, R v Boulton 17 Q B 771, R v Parnell 11 Cox 30. This is well illustrated by promulgated and systematic innuendoes at the elections which have certainly a right to express by appeals or by insinuations which naturally present themselves at the moment and nobody has ever hindered or would ever question the exercise of that right. But if any of men were to go to the theatre with the settled intention of his making or even of diminishing a piece then can be no doubt that such a deliberate and preconcerted scheme would amount to a conspiracy and that the persons concerned in it might be brought to punishment. Per Mansfield C J in R v London & C Comp 23 C 100, also Gregory v Duke of Brunswick 6 M & G 1, J v Leigh 1 C & K 289, Wright on Conspiracy 37. The law on the subject is thus summarized by Leven L J in Mogul Steamship Co v Mc Gregor 1 Q B D 265. "Of the general proposition that certain kinds of combinacriminal in any one individual may become criminal if done by combination among several, there can be no doubt. The distinction is based on sound reason for a combination may make oppressive or dangerous that which if it proceeded only from a single person would be otherwise, and the very fact of the combination may show that the object is simply to do harm and not to exercise one's just rights." This case was approved by the House of Lords on appeal vide (1892) A. C. 25, see also Allen v Flood (1898) A. C. 1 Quinn v Leatham (1901) A. C. 195, S. Wales Miners' Federation v Glamorgan (1905) A. C. 239, 252. But in the application of this undoubted principle it is necessary to be very careful not to press the doctrine of individual conspiracy beyond that which is necessary for the protection of individuals or of the public. Mogul Steamship v McGregor 23 Q. B. D. 598 Tablan v National Amalgamated Labourers, (1903) 2 K. B. 600. So a combination to violate without just cause private rights contractual or other, in which the public has a sufficient interest is a criminal conspiracy if the violation of the private right is actionable as a wrong. Mogul Steamship v McGregor (1892) A. C. 25 (18), see also R v Warburton, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 276. A conspiracy to commit fraud is indictable though the fraud is not in itself indictable. R v Warburton 11 Cox C. C. 54. If several defendants in trespass be proved to be co-trespassers by other competent evidence the declarations of one as to the motives and circumstances of the trespass will be evidence against all who are proved to have combined together for the common object. Per Lord Ellenborough in R v Hardwell 11 East 355, Pouell Et 74 see also Pilot v Crae, 52 J. P. 311.

Combination to do outrageous acts Combinations to do acts which the Courts regard as outrageous on morality and decency, or as dangerous to the public peace or injurious to the public interest, called generally acts involving public mischief have in many cases been held to be conspiracies. Roscoe Cr 526.

Agree to commit breach of contract Agreement to commit a breach of contract in circumstances that are peculiarly injurious to the public is conspiracy. Fertie v L. Clive & Burr 2473, see also Roscoe Cr 527.

Proof of conspiracy Direct evidence is not essential to prove the conspiracy. It need not be shown that the parties actually came together and agreed in express terms to enter in and pursue a common design. Underhill Cr 41. In many cases the existence of conspiracy is a matter of inference deduced from criminal or unlawful acts done in pursuance of a common criminal purpose. R v Briscoe & East, 164 (171), Mileahy v R, L. R. 3 H. L. 306 (317). The existence of the assents of minds which is involved in a conspiracy may be and from the secrecy of the crime, usually must be, inferred by the jury from proof of facts and circumstances which, taken together apparently indicate that they are merely parts of some complete whole. R v Parsons 1 W. Bl. 392 Emperor v Annappa 9 Bom. L. R. 347 Kripian Chand v Emperor 92 Ind. Cr. 119. Although the common design is the root of the charge, it is not necessary to prove that the defendants came together and actually agreed in express terms to have the common design and to pursue it by common means and so to carry it into execution, for in many cases of the most clearly established conspiracies there are no means of proving any such thing. R v Murphy 8 C. & P. 297 R v Parnell 14 Cox 605 1 Russ. Cr. 191. When two persons pursue by their acts the same object often by the same means one pursuing one part of an act, and the other another part of the same act so as to complete it with a view to the attainment of the common object they were pursuing, the jury are free to infer that they have been engaged in a conspiracy to effect that object. R v Murphy 8 C. & P. 297 1 Russ. Cr. 191. The unlawful conspiracy is to be inferred from the conduct of the parties. R v Duffield, 5 Cox 104; R v Cox 1 Str. 144.

When the proof of a conspiracy depends upon proof of the parties to the accused in an overt act which itself amounts to an offence, the proper way is to put the accused on their trial for that offence. However, the accused may legally be charged merely with the offence of criminal conspiracy and a conviction of an accused with any of the conspirators is not enough.

S. 10 convict him of being a member of the conspiracy. Kahdas v Emperor 39 C L J 151 = 83 Ind Cas 513 Where the accused is charged with an offence of conspiracy and acts of cheating in pursuance of conspiracy, the charge is not bad and it is open to the prosecution to prove such acts in order that from these the existence of the conspiracy may be proved. Abdur v King Emperor, 35 C L J 279, Subramania v Emperor, 25 M 61 distinguished.

Scope of the section. The operation of this section is strictly conditioned upon there being reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence. Per Jenkins C J in Barindra v Emperor, 37 C 167 at p 504. So it is only reasonable, as a general rule, that some prima facie and satisfactory evidence should, in the first instance, be given of the common purpose, before evidence of the acts in it by a multitude of persons, who but for such common purpose would be absolute strangers, should be received. Nort E v 120. In R v Mc Kenna, 1r Crc Rep 461, Pennfather C J said. It is necessary to prove the evidence of a conspiracy, and to connect the prisoner with it in the first instance where you seek to give in evidence against him the declaration of a co-conspirator, and having done so, you are then at liberty to give in evidence against the prisoner acts done by any of the parties, whom you have connected with the conspiracy, but when a party's own declarations are to be given in evidence such preliminary proof is not requisite, and you may, as in any other offence, prove the whole case against him by his own admissions. So if a prima facie evidence of a conspiracy is given and accepted, the evidence of statements made by any one of the conspirators in furtherance of the common object is admissible against all. Rex v Blac 6 Q B D 126, Rex v Baskerville, (1916) 2 K B 658 = 86 L J K B 28. The Indian Evidence Act did not mean to depart from the law as expounded in those cases. Lalaram Gangannull, In re, 81 Ind Cas 817 = 25 Cr L J 1041 = 20 L W 202. But a conspiracy within the terms of section 10 of the Act contemplates something more than the joint action of two or more persons to commit an offence. If that were not so, this section would be applicable to any offence committed by two or more persons jointly with deliberation and this would import into a trial a mass of hearsay evidence which the accused persons would find it impossible to meet. Agencia bala v The Empress 4 C W N 528. For the application of this section there must be reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence, and that being shown anything said, done or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention may be proved both for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as also for showing that any such person was party to it. Kahl v King Emperor 28 C 797 see also Shahabur Ma v Emperor, 18 C L J 590. But statements made by an alleged conspirator to a third party suggesting that there had been a conspiracy between the plaintiff and others in connection with the forgery of an alleged will are not relevant when such statements are used to prove (a) the existence of a conspiracy as to which there is no issue or (b) that the plaintiff was a party to it. Kadambam Dass v Kumudam, 30 C 983, see also Priya v Emperor 15 C L J 517. Where an agreement exists between two parties in pursuance of which speeches are delivered by them such speeches are admissible to prove the object of the agreement. Chidambaram v Emperor, 32 M 3.

It is a rule of substantive law and not a rule of Evidence. The rule underlying this section is a rule of substantive law and not a rule of evidence. The following extracts from the writings of Professor James Bradley Thayer from American Law Review XV 80, is very instructive on the point. The term res gesta is freely used in another class of cases where the specific question is whether a party to the suit shall be affected with responsibility for the declaration of another, not merely whether it may be used as evidence against him but whether it shall be so used as having been brought home to him and whether he shall be chargeable with it as if it were his own. When the enquiry is whether the utterance of an agent, or a co-conspirator is receivable against a party and it is said, in the case of the agent, that it must have been made in and about the business on which the agent was employed and while actually engaged in that business, and of a co-conspirator, that he must have made his declaration while engaged in the common enterprise and regarding that,—in such cases it is common to express this idea by saying that the declarations must be made as a part of the res gesta, and if it is not so made it is deemed to be res inter alios gesta. Now it is obvious, on a little reflection, that to settle this question adversely to the admissibility of that which is offered in evidence, is really to settle a question in the law of agency or in the law regarding conspiracy,—a question in substantive law. Observe then that the rule which says that a man shall be chargeable with the acts and declarations of his agent or fellow-conspirator is not a rule of evidence, and when in stating and applying this rule it is said that the agent's declaration must have been made in or about his principal's business while actually engaged in it, and as part of the res gesta, or again, when it is said of a conspirator's declaration, that it must have been made while he was actually engaged in the common enterprise, about the affairs of it, and as a part of the res gesta, the Latin phrase adds nothing, it is used as a complete expression for the business, as regards which the law for certain purposes identifies the two conspirators or the principal and agent. In such cases, evidently, the declaration may be about a past fact as well as a present one, so long as it comes up to the above named requirements.

Principle The principle on which the acts and declarations of other conspirators, and acts done at different times, are admitted in evidence against the persons prosecuted, is that, by the act of conspiring together, the conspirators have jointly assumed to themselves, as a body the attitude of individuality so far as regards the prosecution of the common design thus rendering whatever is done or said by any one in furtherance of that design a part of the res gesta and therefore the act of all. It is the same principle of identity with each other in that governs in regard to the acts and admissions of agents when offered in evidence against their principals, and of partners, as against the partnership. And here, also, as in those cases, the evidence of what was said and done by the other conspirators must be limited to their acts and declarations made and done while the conspiracy was pending and in furtherance of the design, what was said or done by them before or afterward not being within the principle of admissibility. Greenleaf Et Vol III § 94 Secrecy is a necessity of conspiracy and revelations of what passes among conspirators can hardly, by any possibility, be obtained without assistance of some of the conspirators themselves, or of persons who have placed themselves in the position of or in a position not readily distinguishable from that of conspirators. Saya Ky v Queen Empress, U B R. (1892-1896) Vol. I, 148

Difference between English and Indian Law This section renders admissible in cases of conspiracy much evidence which is not ordinarily admissible under the English Law. The provisions of the section are wider than those of the English Law. Ramprosad v Emperor, A I R 1927 Oudh 369 (378) According to English law everyone who agrees with others to effect a common illegal purpose is generally considered in law as a party to every act, which either had before been done, or may afterwards be done by the confederates in furtherance of the common design. Per Coleridge J in R v Murphy 8 C & P 311 So also it does not matter whether the acts were done or the declarations made, in the presence or in the absence of the accused but everything said or done, by any one of the conspirators or accomplices in furtherance of the common object, is evidence against each and all the parties concerned whether they were present or absent, and whether or not they were individually aware of what was taking place. R v Brandreth, 32 How St Tr 857, R v Geo Gordon 21 How St Tr 25 As the English law on the subject was supposed to be based on this res gesta doctrine a distinction was made between declarations, which were either made by themselves purporting to advance the objects of criminal enterprise, or which accompany and explain those acts and those statements, whether written or oral, which although made during the continuance of the plot, are in fact a mere narrative of the measures that have already been taken. The latter statement accordingly is inadmissible. So a letter, written by a conspirator to a private friend unconnected with the plot, which gave an account of previous Indian Evidence Act but he did not say what portions of the evidence of B afforded a reasonable ground for believing that the prisoner and R had conspired to murder J. The appellate Court consisting of Hudford O J C and Spaulding J C said, The Sessions Judge refers to the provisions of section 10 of the Evidence Act. The Sessions Judge does not state the portions of the evidence of Buaya which afforded a reasonable ground for believing that the prisoner and Lamrai conspired to murder Jangh. The matter is of more importance than the Sessions Judge seems to have attached to it as will presently be shown. Turning again to section 10 Indian Evidence Act it is clear from its provisions that there must be reasonable ground for believing that the prisoner conspired with Lamrai to poison Jangh before anything said or done by Lamrai is a relevant fact as against the prisoner and that unless such reasonable ground exists things said and done by Lamrai when the prisoner was not present are not relevant facts as against the prisoner, as the prisoner was not present when they were told unless there was, apart from Lamrai's statements, reasonable ground for believing that the prisoner had conspired with her to poison Jangh. This is why it was a matter of importance that the Sessions Judge should have referred to the parts of Buaya's evidence on which he relied as affording a reasonable ground for such belief. The question whether the statements said to have been made by Lamrai to Buaya are relevant facts against the prisoner under Section 10 does not arise, for as already stated we are not disposed to find that the statements were made but the question will be noticed again further on in this Judgment. See also Kanu Bap v Emperor, 11 Cr L J 586 = 21 Ind C 378 = 18 C L J 590.

Communications between conspirators This section is intended to make evidence communications between different conspirators while the conspiracy is going on with reference to the carrying out of the conspiracy. It is not intended to make evidence the confession of a co-accused and put it on the same footing as a communication passing between conspirators, or between conspirators and other persons with reference to the conspiracy. Emperor v Iban, 8 Ind C 770 = 15 C W N 25 = 11 Cr L J 710 = 38 C 169. The provisions of this section are wider than those of the English law according to which the act or declaration must have been done or said not only with reference to the common intention but also in pursuance of the same. Menden v King Emperor, 5 Oudh C 321 (326). As soon as it is proved that the prisoner was privy to the general conspiracy, everything done by each of his fellow conspirators must be imputed to him as a part of the conspiracy if it was done to carry out their general purpose. Per Eyre J in R v Hardy 24 How St Tr 451. The dry book kept by one of the conspirators is evidence of something done in the course of the transaction. (Per Lord Dunsan C J in R v Blale 6 Q B 137) and as such it is receivable in evidence as a step in the proof of the conspiracy. Ibid per Patterson J. In the same case Coleridge J said at p 140 "As to the counterfoil, it is quite clear that no declaration of Eyre can be received in evidence against Blale which was made in Blale's absence and did not relate to the furtherance of the object. What then was the statement? It was made by Eyre after the common object was effected." In Hardy's Case 24 How St Tr 451, evidence was tendered by the prosecution of a letter written by one of the conspirators, Thelwall, not then on trial, to his wife, who was not a party to the conspiracy, in which he simply detailed the part he had taken in the crime. Eyre C J refused to admit the evidence, and summed the whole matter up thus "I doubt whether we ought to consider the private letter as anything more than Mr Thelwall's declarations, and Mr Thelwall's declarations ought not to be evidence of anything which though remotely connected with this plot yet does not amount to any transaction done in the course of the plot for the furtherance of the plot, but is a new recital of his part of confession of his of some part that he had taken. It appears to me that it is not like the evidence which we before admitted of a fact done by Mr Thelwall in carrying the papers and delivering them to the printer which is a part of the transaction itself." See also Parill 76. But it appears that such a letter is admissible under this section.

Order of Proof It has already been stated that this section comes into application where there is a reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons

S 10 have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong. Jude v. King Emperor, 28 C 797. So first of all evidence of reasonable ground for believing in the existence of a conspiracy should be given. Menda v. King Emperor 5 Oudh C 13 321. The English law is also the same. In R. v. O'Connell 5 State Tr N S 710, Pennefather C J said: "When evidence is once given to the jury of a conspiracy against A, B, and C, whatever is done by A, B, or C, in furtherance of the common criminal object is evidence against A, B, and C, though no direct proof be given that A, B, or C knew of it or actually participated in it. If the conspiracy be proved to have existed, or rather if evidence be given to the jury of its existence, the acts of one in furtherance of the common design are the acts of all, and whatever one does in the furtherance of common design, he does as the agent of the co-conspirators," see also R. v. Hardy 21 How St Tr 151. R. v. Stone, 21 How St Tr 1. R. v. Watson 32 How St Tr 50 359 539. R. v. Brandeith, 21 How St Tr 766, 852, R. v. Hunt 3 B & Ald 5 66. So the existence of the conspiracy must be proved before giving evidence of the acts of the alleged conspirator, and isolated acts may be proved as steps by which the conspiracy itself may be established. Kendall v. Elliot 1 Ex 78. In R. v. Duffield 5 Cox 404, Ede, J directed the jury that it does not happen once in a thousand times when the offence of conspiracy is tried that anybody comes before the jury to say that he was present at the time when the parties did conspire together and when they agreed to carry out their unlawful purposes that species of evidence is hardly ever to be adduced before a jury but the unlawful conspiracy is to be inferred from the conduct of the parties and if several men are seen taking several steps, all tending towards one obvious purpose, and they are seen through a continued portion of time taking steps that lead to one end, it is for the jury to say whether those persons had not combined together to bring about that end, which their conduct appears so obviously adapted to effectuate. 1 Russ Cr 192. So the fact of conspiracy must be established before the act of one can be made the act of all. But the conspiracy may be proved by direct or indirect evidence. R. v. Blake 6 Q B 126, In re Lilavani, 81 Ind C 817. R. v. Basleville, (1916) 2 K B 658, R. v. McEenna Jr Cu Rep 461, Nort 120, 1 East P C 96, 2 Stark L 326, 1 Phall Er 477, Queen Caroline's Case 2 B & B 302, R. v. Jacobs, 1 Cox 17, R. v. Duffield, 5 Cox 401, R. v. Gurney, 11 Cox 414.

The rule is applied by East as follows: "In this (high treason), as in case founded in conspiracy, the conspiracy or agreement among several to act in concert together for a particular end must be established by proof before any evidence can be given of the acts of any person not in the presence of the prisoner. And this must generally speaking be done by evidence of the party's own act, and cannot be collected from the acts of others, independent of his own, as by express evidence of the fact of a previous conspiracy together, or of a concurrent knowledge and approbation of each other's acts." But it may also be done by "evidence of the acts of the prisoner and of any other with whom he is attempted to be so connected, concurring together at the same time and to the same purpose or particular object." East P C 96. But it is observed by Starkie that "although in general the act or declaration of one man is not evidence against another who is charged as a fellow conspirator, until such a privity and community of design has been established between them as afford a reasonable presumption that the act or declaration of one is the declaration of the other and although such a connection must be established before the act, etc. of one can properly be used as evidence to show designs of another, yet in some peculiar instances where it would be difficult to establish the defendant's privity without first proving the existence of the conspiracy, a deviation has been made from this rule, and evidence of acts and conduct of others has been admitted to prove the existence of a conspiracy previous to the proof of the defendant's privity." 2 Stark Ev 326.

In Hardy's Trial 24 How St Tr 473, Eyre C J said: "It is perfectly clear that in the case of a conspiracy, the general evidence of the thing conspired is received, and then the party is to be affected for his part in it." To this remark Starkie adds "Although the Courts in cases of conspiracy have, out of convenience and on account of the difficulty in otherwise proving the guilt of the parties, admitted the acts and declarations of strangers in order to establish the fact of a conspiracy it is to be remembered that it is in inversion of the usual order for the sake of convenience, and such evidence is, in the result, material so far only as the assent of the accused to what has been done by others is proved. Hoar v. The King, 10 Q. B. 111, pp. 333, 334, Per Buller J in Hardy's Case, 24 How. St. Tr. 151. So it is clear that the general principle affecting the order of evidence leaves it ultimately to be controlled by the trial Court's discretion. In the present application the rule of conditional relevancy naturally applies to statements of A being receivable against B on the hypothesis that A and B have conspired, and the evidence of conspiracy must ordinarily be furnished before offering the statements of A, in a given case, the trial Court's discretion may be exercised. Wignore § 1079, see also the Queen's Case 2 B. & B. 303, h. v. Frost 4 St. Tr. N. S. 85, 229, 244, R. v. Cuffery State Tr. N. S. 467. In many cases evidence has been first given of general conspiracy before any of the particular parts which the accused parties have taken. Widdowson, Case 7 St. Tr. 1218, Lord Russell's Case, 18 St. Tr. 140, h. v. Hanmer 100, Case 7 St. Tr. 1218, Lord Russell's Case, 18 St. Tr. 140, h. v. Frost 9 C. & P. 129, h. v. Deasy, 15 Cox C. C. 334. In the Queen's Case 2 B. & B. 303 (310) 1bb. It is to be observed that in such cases, the general nature of the whole evidence intended to be adduced is previously opened to the Court, whereby the Judge is enabled to form an opinion as to the probability of affecting the individual defendants by particular proof applicable to them, and connecting them with the general evidence of the alleged conspiracy, and if upon such opening it should appear manifest that no particular proof sufficient to affect the defendants is intended to be adduced, it would become the duty of the Judge to stop the case in limine, and not to allow the general evidence to be received which, even if attended with no other bad effect, such as exciting an irreconcilable prejudice, would certainly be a useless waste of time.

The admissibility of the act or declaration of a co-conspirator is, in the case of a party defendant before the Court, does not depend on whether such co-conspirator is indicted or not or tried or not with the defendant. 2 Starkie 17 329. See also R. v. Duguid, 94 L. J. 887. In the case of a conspiracy to carry on the business of common cheats proof at different times of similar acts is admissible as cumulative instances not necessary to prove the offence. h. v. Roberts, 1 Cump. 399.

Anything said or done etc. The provisions of this section are wider than the English Law, according to which the act or declaration must have been done or said not only with reference to the common intention but also in pursuance of the same. Mandari v. King Emperor 5 Oadh. Cas. 321. In England originally such evidence was admissible on the principle of res gestae. Inde Phil. Fr. 9th Ed. Vol. I 199. It follows that any writings or verbal expressions being acts in their direct or accompnying, and explaining other acts, and therefore part of the res gestae, and which were brought home to one conspirator are evidence against the other conspirators, provided it sufficiently appears that they were in the furtherance of a common design. Phil. Fr. 9th Ed. Vol. I 200. See also Hardy's Case, 24 How. St. Tr. 701. What the effect of such evidence will be must depend on a variety of circumstances, as whether the prisoner was attending to the conversation, whether he approved or disapproved. Per Tyrer C. J. in Inde see also Stone's Case 6 L. R. 527, Rex v. Salter, 11 p. 125. So also confessions in furtherance of a conspiracy are receivable in evidence (Lord Hale's Case 9 St. Tr. 478), as if letters or drafts of answers to letters and other papers found in the possession of co-conspirators, and which the jury may not improbably conclude were written in prosecution of a common purpose to which the prisoner was a S 10 partly Horne Toole's Case, 25 St 1r 220. For the same reason declarations or writings explanatory of the nature of a common object, in which the prisoner is engaged together with others are receivable in evidence, provided they accompany acts done in the prosecution of such an object arising naturally out of the act and not being in the nature of a subsequent statement or confession of them. Upon this principle (namely that the evidence offered is part of the transaction) in the prosecution of Dumaine for high treason the expressions of the mob in the Sacheverell riots that they determined to pull down the meeting house were admitted in evidence. 15 Howell's St 1r 552. The same kind of evidence was received in Lord George Gordon's Case 21 How St 1r 512. On the same principle the hissings of a mob their declarations upon banners have been held to be admissible as original evidence. Rex v Hunt, 3 B & A 566, Reelford v Bailey 3 Stark C 76. So according to this theory where words or writings are not acts in themselves but part of the res gestae, but a mere relation of some part of the transaction or as to the share which other persons have had in the execution of a common design the evidence is not in its nature original. It depends on the credit of the narrator who is not before the Court, and therefore it cannot be received. Phil Li Vol I 20. In Watson's Case, 32 How St 1r 348, some papers containing a variety of plans and lists of names which had been found in the house of a co-conspirator and which had a reference to the design of the conspiracy and in furtherance of the alleged plot, were held to be admissible evidence against the prisoner. Originally such evidence was admitted in cases of conspiracies in criminal cases. On the same principle such evidence is also admissible in cases of conspiracies to do civil injuries. Rex v Hardwell 11 East 58; Poultney v Hodgetts 2 C & P 432, North v Miles 1 Compb 389, Bousher v Cally 1 Compb 391. In Rex v Hardwell, Lord Ellenborough said: "Although an admission by one of several defendants in the press will not establish others to be co-trespassers, yet if that is proved by other competent evidence the declaration of one as to the motives and circumstances of the trespass will be evidence against all who are proved to have combined together for the common object." See also Hought v Court 2 C & P 232.

"It seems to make no difference as to the admissibility of the act or declaration of a fellow conspirator against a defendant whether the former be indicted or not, or tried or not with the latter, for the making one a co-defendant does not make his acts or declarations evidence against another, any more than they were before, the principle upon which they are admissible at all, that the act or declaration of one is that of both united in common design a principle which is wholly unaffected by the consideration of their being jointly indicted." 2 Stark Et 329 3rd Ed. But where the conspiracy was charged with "divers other persons" Watson J made an order for the names to be given forthwith. R v Perrin 72 J P 144.

A letter written by a person who is a stranger to the transaction is not admissible. King Emperor v Keshab 25 Bom L R 248.

Illustration In Balmul and v Emperor 28 Ind Cr 738=17 P R 1910 Cr =16 Cr L J Johnstone J observed: "I am however inclined to agree with Mr Beechey as to point (2) in support of which he quoted Barindra Kumar Ghosh v Emperor 7 Ind Cr 359=14 C W N 1114=11 Cr L J 453=37 C 467. They say that the words and to prove A's complicity in it come into the illustration are not quite in accordance with common sense or with the section. I read it. I am unable to see how what B did in Europe and C in Calcutta and so forth can per se possibly touch the 'question of A's complicity. A's complicity can from the nature of things only be shown by A's acts, or A being otherwise shown to be a member of the conspiracy by acts of B and C and so forth implicating him. Other acts of B, C and the rest seem to me capable as regards A only of adding proof of the existence and nature of conspiracy. At the risk of being tedious I must give an illustration to explain my view. In the case given in the illustration if B in ordering arms in Europe tells the manufacturer to send the bill to A or to consign the arms to him this if A is otherwise prima facie shown to be a member of the conspiracy, would be relevant both as to the nature of the conspiracy and as to A's complicity. But if B does not mention A and A's name in no way comes into the business of ordering arms in Europe, how can it be said that B's ordering of arms there can produce in the mind of the Judge any added conviction that A was a member of the conspiracy? Of course, in framing a law the Legislature can lay it down that any given thing is 'relevant' for the purpose of proving such and such, but I think I am justified in rejecting the idea that the Legislature intended, by a provision of the law of evidence, to create a burden useless and merely nominal relevancy. Anyhow, one sees after an analysis of this kind, that the question is not very important, it seems not to matter much whether a thing is technically 'relevant' or not, if it is a matter of fact from the nature of things, it can not of its own force help towards the conviction of A." From the illustration it appears that the rule underlying this section holds, although the acts and declarations were done in the absence of the party against whom they are offered, or without his knowledge, or even before he joined the combination (see also R v Handforth, 32 How St Tr 57; Ex v Murphy 8 C & P 311, R v Dwyer 24 Ir L T R 111 Phipps 73) or even after he left the conspiracy. But on principle acts or declarations after a conspirator left the conspiracy should not be admitted against him to show his complicity in it. Persons who are guilty of illegally conspiring together or of committing jointly any criminal offence are deemed to be mutual agents or confederates for the purpose only of the execution of the joint purpose. Accordingly any act done by one of them in the execution of common purpose is deemed the act of the others (see also Hills 167, see also R v Caton, 12 Cox 624 R v Blale 6 Q B 126, R v Murphy, 8 C & P 297. So when a co-conspirator leaves a conspiracy, the mutual agency terminates so far as he is concerned and as such acts and declarations of other conspirators should not be admissible against him. In England also a conversation held by D and E, two members of the conspiracy on their return from a meeting of the conspirators and about an hour after the meeting, was held inadmissible against A and B, two other members of the conspiracy. R v O'Connell, 1 Cox 403, see also R v O'Donnell 7 St Tr N S 600, R v Hitchenhead, 1 Dowl & Ry 61. Neither the admission of such evidence is justified by res gestae principle, as the transaction came to an end so far as the particular conspirator is concerned, when he left the conspiracy. In R v Worl, 33 L J 615, A was charged with the murder of B as a result of an abortion which A and B conspired to procure on July 22. Evidence of the doctor that B called on him in June and asked for a remedy for her condition was held admissible against A as the act was in furtherance of the common purpose. But a diary kept by B, incriminating A, and a letter intended for but not sent to him, both written after the abortion were rejected as not in furtherance of the common purpose. Statement of a co-accused after arrest is not admissible against other co-accused, Sital v Emperor, 46 C 700=30 C L J 20. The acts and declarations of other conspirators before any particular defendant joined the association are only receivable to prove the character of the conspiracy and not his participation therein. Phipson 73 see also R v Dwyer, 24 Ir L T R 111, O'Keefe v Walsh, (1903) 21 R 681 (702).

Conspiracy—Acquittal of some Where more than two persons are charged with a conspiracy, it does not follow that all the conspirators must be convicted. If one is acquitted Brindley v Emperor, 14 C W N 114, 37 C 467, see also King v Plumer, (1902) 2 K B 339. Where two persons are charged in a conspiracy both of them must either be acquitted or convicted. Queen v [unintelligible], 12 Q B D 211. Where conspiracy alleged in the charge is one in which only three persons are said to have been participants and two of them were acquitted, the other is entitled to an acquittal as a matter of course. Profulla v King Emperor, 30 C W N 94=91 Ind Cts 813, R v Manning, 12 Q B D 211.

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

A and B are indicted in Middlesex for a conspiracy to destroy property. After proof of acts done in Middlesex by both the conspirators, acts done by

Inadmissible

A and B are indicted in England for a conspiracy to commit a felony. The only evidence of the conspiracy consists of acts done by A in Scotland either of them in Surrey in execution of the conspiracy is admissible against each R v Gardon, 21 How St 11 535, R v Boues, 11 East 171, R v Quinn, 33 Ir L R 151, Phup Ev 81

S 11

The accused who was a warden in the jail was being tried under s 222, Penal Code in respect of intention ally aiding the prisoners under sentence of death in attempting to escape from confinement in jail. He procured saw blades and loosened the rivets of the grates. Previously he was seen by some witnesses who were warders conversing and carrying on negotiations with certain fellow prisoners of the convicts. A constable who was called in as witness and had escorted the convicts while under trial deposed that after the death sentence was pronounced and the convicts were brought out one of the convicts called out to his fellowman and told him to give the accused Rs 100. The request was repeated twice. Held that the evidence of the constable was admissible under the circumstances under section 10 Maula Laksh v Emperor, A I R 1929 Lah 631 and letters written by him to B in England inducing B to commit the crime, but which letters B did not answer or assent to. The acts and letters are not admissible against either A or B. R v Banton, 12 Cox 87, Phup Ev 81

When facts not otherwise relevant become relevant

11 Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant—

- (1) if they are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact,
- (2) if by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable

Illustrations

(a) The question is whether A committed a crime at Calcutta on a certain day

The fact that on that day A was at Lahore is relevant

The fact that near the time when the crime was committed a distance from the place where it was committed, which would render it improbable though not impossible that he committed it is relevant

(b) The question is whether A committed a crime

The circumstances are such that the crime must have been committed either by A B C or D. Every fact which shows that the crime could have been committed by no one else and that it was not committed by either B C or D is relevant

Scope of the section. This section is no doubt expressed in terms so extensive that any fact which can, by a chain of reasoning be brought into connection with another, so as to have a bearing upon a point in issue, may possibly be held to be relevant within its meaning. But the connection of human affairs are so infinitely various and so far reaching that thus to take the section in its wide admissible sense would be to complicate every trial with and of collateral inquiries limited only by the patience and the means of the parties. One of the objects of the law of evidence is to restrict the investigations made by courts within the bounds prescribed by general convenience, and this object would be completely frustrated by the admission on all occasions of every circumstance on either side having some remote and conjectural probative force, the precise amount of which might itself be ascertainable only by a long trial and a determination of fresh collateral issues growing up in endless succession, as the inquiry proceeded. That such an extensive meaning was not in the mind of the Legislature, seems to be shown by several indications in the Act itself. The illustrations to s 11 do not go beyond familiar cases in the English Law of Evidence. Per West J in Reg v Prabhudas 11 B H C R 490, see also Ambica v Kumud, A I R 1928 Cal 893=110 Ind Cr 521. So it is clear that all evidence which would be admissible by the English law would be properly admitted under the Indian Evidence Act. Queen v Vapuram, 16 B 411 (430). The application of this section is one of considerable importance in the law of Evidence and has given rise to much conflict of judicial authority. Ranchoddas v Bapu 10 B 439 (441) see also Emperor v Alloomiya Husan, 28 B 129=5 Bom L R 807. In order to make a collateral fact admissible as relevant under this section the requirements of the law are (1) that the collateral fact must itself be established by reasonable conclusive evidence and (2) that it must when established afford a reasonable presumption or inference as to the matter in dispute. Per Chandrasekar, J in Khair v Rukha Sultan, 6 Bom L R 983 (986) (affirmed in 29 B 468=7 Bom L R 443) see also Hill v Uchopolitan Asylum District, 47 L J 29. In Bela Ram v Mahabir Singh 34 A 341 at p 344 Jb Justice Banerjee observed. I agree with the learned Chief Justice that the statements relied on cannot be admitted in evidence. They are the statements of persons who are dead. Statements of such persons can only be admitted under sections 32 and 33 of the Evidence Act. It is conceded that the statements in question do not come within the purview of those sections and are, therefore, not admissible under those sections, but it is contended that they are admissible under section 11 as being facts which make the existence or non-existence of a fact in issue highly probable. The making of such a statement is, no doubt, a fact which would make the fact in issue highly probable and, as such might be admissible in evidence, but it must be proved before it can be admitted. The terms of section 11 are, it is true wide, but they must be read subject to the other sections of the Act and therefore the fact relied on must be proved in accordance with the provisions of the Act. If that fact is a statement made by a person who is not called or cannot be called, the statement cannot be admitted unless it comes within the purview of subsequent sections of the Act, for example, sections 32 and 33. That such was the intention of the Legislature is manifest from the elaborate provisions of the Act as to relevancy of evidence. Surely it cannot be said that the statement of a person who said to another person that he had seen a murder committed can be admitted unless the person who made the statement is called. As I have pointed out above a statement made by a person who is not produced as a witness is only admissible in the exceptional cases provided by the Evidence Act and in no other cases. See also Munna v Kameshwar, 1929 Oudh 113. It is this was also the intention of the Legislature would appear from the following extracts of Stephen's Introduction to Evidence 1st, 160 where he stated that they all may possibly be used that the effect of the second paragraph of section 11 would be to admit proof of such facts as these (namely statements as to facts by persons not called as witnesses transactions similar to but unconnected with the facts in issue, opinions formed by persons as to the facts in issue or relevant facts). It may, for instance, be said A (not called as a witness) was heard to declare that he had seen B commit a crime. This makes it highly probable that B did commit that crime. Therefore A's statement is a relevant fact under section 11. This was not the intention of the section as is shown by the elaborate provisions contained in the following part of the Chapter II (sections 32-39) as to particular classes of statements which are regarded as relevant facts either because the circumstances under which they are made invest them with importance or because no better evidence can be got. The S 11 sort of facts which the section was intended to include are facts which either exclude or imply more or less distinctly the existence of the facts sought to be proved. Some degree of latitude was designedly left in the wording of the section (in compliance with a suggestion from the Madras Government) on account of the variety of matters to which it might apply. The meaning of the section would have been more fully expressed if words to the following effect had been added to it — 'No statement shall be regarded as rendering the matter stated highly probable within the meaning of this section unless it is declared to be a relevant fact under some other section of this Act'.

This section is not always controlled by Section 32. As a general rule s 11 of the Evidence Act is controlled by s 32 of the Act where the evidence consists of statements of persons who are dead or who cannot be found, but this rule is subject to certain exceptions. R D Sethna v Mulla Mahomed Shuray, 9 Bom L R 1017. Ambura v Kumud, A I R 1928 Cys 893 = 110 Ind C.L. 521. In that former case Beaman J in delivering the judgment says 'The question being whether a will was made in or about (say) 1880 or whether it was forged for the first time in (say) 1900, a letter which is formally proved to have been written by a person who died in (say) 1885 containing a mention of the will is tendered. It is objected to as being the statement of a person who is dead or cannot be found etc. and not fulfilling the conditions of s 32. It is supported on the ground that it is itself a relevant fact under s 11. While I adhere to the correctness of the opinion I expressed when the point was first argued, that as a general rule s 11 is controlled by s 32 where the evidence consists of statements of persons who are dead or cannot be found, further consideration suggests exceptions. The case law on the subject is so confused that it is difficult to extract from it any consistent principle much less any simple test for ascertaining what are and what are not exceptions. There is a test a simple and a sufficient test, which reasonably applied yields consistent and intelligible results. Section 32 imposes restrictions upon admissibility of statements made by persons who cannot be brought before the Court to give their own evidence. The object of those restrictions and the reason for them are plain. The basic principle of legal evidence being that the Court must always have the best, it follows that where persons can be they must be brought before the Court to tell what they know at first hand. Then veracity can then be tested by the art of cross-examination. Where however witnesses cannot be brought before the Court, their previous statements are at best indirect evidence of a kind that a Court would not, except under necessity, receive at all. The conditions which when compelled by necessity to take this evidence or none are imposed upon its admissibility plainly aim at affording some guarantee of its truth. As there is to be no chance of a true man by cross-examination his statement will not be admitted unless it has been made under conditions which looking to the ordinary course of human affairs raise pretty strong presumptions that it was a true statement. Thus the whole scope and object of section 32 centre upon securing the highest degree of truth possible in the circumstances for the statement. And it follows that where the person tendering such a statement is indifferent as to its truth or falsehood there is nothing to bring that section into play. Briefly the test whether the statement of a person who is dead or who cannot be found is relevant under section 11 and admissible under that section (presuming of course that it is in other respects within the intention of the section) although it would not be admissible under s 32 is this. It is admissible under s 11 when it is altogether immaterial whether what the dead man said was true or false but highly material that he did say it. In these circumstances no amount of cross-examination could alter the fact if it be a fact that he did say the thing and if nothing more is needed to bring the thing in under s 11 then the case is outside s 32. In such a case as this for example suppose that the person who died in 1885 can be proved to have said any time before he died 'A was mad when he made his will that is material to show that there was a will of some sort before 1900. And it makes not the slightest difference whether the statement that A was mad when he made it, is true or false. The evidence would have the same and no more or less value under s 11 if the person had said A was not mad when he made his will where the fact that is relevant under s 11 is not what he said but close to predicate about a thing, but that he mentioned it at all whether what he predicted of it were true or false, then and then only it is a relevant idea 32"

Facts not otherwise relevant. As regards this (2) of the section Mr Stephen in his introduction said "The meaning of this section would have been more fully expressed if words to the following effect had been added to it: 'No statement shall be regarded as rendering the matter stated highly probable within the meaning of this section unless it is declared to be relevant under some other section of this Act.' To this Mr Field says: 'The section can hardly be limited, as has been suggested to those facts which are relevant under some other provisions of the Act, for this would render the section meaningless.' The reasons why statements as to facts made by persons not called in witness are excluded, except in certain specified cases (see section 173) are various. In the first place it is a matter of common experience that statements in common conversation are made so lightly, and are liable to be misunderstood or misrepresented that they cannot be depended upon for any important purpose unless they are made under special circumstances. All the statements are relevant under this section if they render the matter stated highly probable within the meaning of this section and if they are not relevant under ss. 173 or under there may be statements which may not be relevant under ss. 173 or under other sections, still their probative force is much put and as such they should be admitted. Vide the judgment of Bevan J in 9 Bom. L. R. 1017 cited supra.

Facts inconsistent with any facts in issue. The usual theory of essential inconsistency is that a certain fact cannot co-exist with the doing of the act in question and therefore that if that fact is true of a person of whom the act is alleged, it is impossible that he should have done the act. The inconsistency, to be conclusive in proof must be essential, i.e. absolute and universal, but since, in offering evidence, we are not required to furnish demonstration but only fair ground for inference, the fact offered need not have this essential or absolute inconsistency, but merely a probable or premissible inconsistency, and its evidentiary strength will increase with its approach to absolute inconsistency. There are five common cases of this form of the argument (though more are conceivable) (1) the absence of the person charged in another place (Alibi) (2) the absence of a husband (non access)—a variety of the preceding, (3) the survival of an alleged deceased person after the supposed time of death, (4) the doing of a crime by a third person and (5) the self-indiction of the harm alleged. Wigney § 135.

Alibi. Theory of an alibi is that the fact of presence elsewhere is essentially inconsistent with the presence at the place and time alleged, and therefore with personal participation in the act. Thus, the evidentiary fact is a new affirmative proposition, considered as a factum probandum though its logical operation is a negative one. Wigney § 136, see illustration (i). The proof of an opponent is not properly the proof of a negative, but the proof of the same proposition totally inconsistent with what is affirmed. If the defendant be charged with a trespass, and if the fact be proved he can only prove a proposition inconsistent with the charge and that he was in another place at the time when the fact is supposed to be done or the like. Gilbert Ec 115. "If it (alibi) appears to be founded in truth, it is the best negative evidence that can be offered. It is really positive evidence which in the nature of things necessarily implies a negative. When a defence rests on proof of an alibi, it must cover the time when the offence is shown to have been committed, so as to preclude the possibility of the prisoner's presence at the place of the murder for if it be possible that he could have been at both places, the proof of the alibi is useless. Per Wigney J in Bruceland v Com, 71 P. 463, 469. Such expressions, however, seen in truth to refer only to the weight of the alibi argument, by pointing out that it falls short of complete proof except on these conditions. If they were intended to mean anything more, they are clearly unsound and would exclude nine alibi arguments out of ten. Even as affecting the weight of the argument (with which we have in this place no concern), such statements seem erroneous, for an alibi

S 11. may not involve absolute impossibility, but only high improbability, and yet be convincing. Wigmore § 136

Non access of husband to show illegitimacy Since legitimacy of off implies a begetting by the husband, it would be relevant, in disproving legitimacy, to use his absence from wife at the probable time of begetting as showing the impossibility of the act of begetting. Wigmore § 137. Isabury Percege Case, App p 1 etc, The Merchants Rep of Gudur Percege, 135, 189, 1 Sm & St 13, Morris v Davies, 3 C & P 215, 217, Gordon v Gordon, Prob 141

Survival of the alleged deceased Where the corpus delicti is disputed, and for example, in a charge of homicide the alleged deceased is claimed by the defendant not to have been killed the argument is obviously available that he is still alive after the time of the supposed death, for this would be absolutely inconsistent with his death as supposed. Wigmore § 136

Commission of crime by a third person If X is charged with homicide, committed by himself alone, and it is shown in his proof that Y did the killing X is clearly exonerated for the fact that Y has done it is inconsistent with and exclusive of X's guilt. Wigmore § 139. In State v May, 4 Dev 328, Gaston, J observed. The criminal act imputed to the prisoner might as well be committed by many as by one. Both [W M and the defendant] must be guilty or both might be innocent, and a common guilt or a common innocence was as presumable as the guilt of one only. But proof that certain acts constituting a part of the criminal transaction itself were done by W M might have been of high importance to the prisoner by removing so much of the inference of guilt as would be raised were those acts brought home to him. Proof that the killing was by any one other than the prisoner perhaps might compel the inference (of guilt),—not because the guilt of one shows the innocence of the other, but because proof that specific acts were done by one weakens or removes the presumption that the same acts were done by another.

Self infliction of harm If the deceased, with whose death the defendant is charged committed suicide, obviously the defendant could not have killed the deceased. There ought to be no doubt about the admissibility of plans or desires to commit suicide even where no other evidence of its particulars or probability or feasibility is offered. Its improbability or non feasibility should be matter for rebuttal and should not exclude the evidence of its probability. That the evidence may be manufactured is no reason for its exclusion, for it may also not be manufactured, and if not, it is most cogent. The distance of time ought not to exclude the evidence of plans. Wigmore § 143. In Com v Prefethen, 157 Mas. 180 Field C J said: "If it could be shown that during the week before her death she had actually attempted to drown her self, and had been prevented from doing so it seems manifest that this act according to the general experience of mankind would have some tendency to show that she might have made a second attempt." In Spencer Couper's Trial 13 How St Tr 1166, where the issue was whether the deceased had committed suicide or was killed, evidence was received of her being melancholy and depressed "he said her disposition was in her mind and the sooner it did kill her the better, he neglected himself in doing those things that were necessary for her health in hope it would carry her off and often wished herself dead."

Highly probable The words "highly probable" point out that the connection between the facts in issue and the collateral facts sought to be proved must be so much as to render the co-existence of the two highly probable. Per Water J in Empress v M J Vayapoory 6 C 555 at p 662. In Gout of Bombay v Menaugh, 10 Bom L R 907 at p 914 Batchelor J, observed. In s 11 of the Evidence Act provision is made for the admission of facts not otherwise relevant when they make the existence or non existence of my fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable and the adverb was not introduced into the section without good reason. In Sahib Dyal Singh v Harn Bibi 13 M L T 282=15 Ind C S 997 at p 1001 Talabji J said "It has recently been pointed out by the Bombay High Court in Gowdany v Government of Marich, Menchari, 10 Bom L R 907, that the words highly probable are of great importance in considering this section. It is clear that in regard to the section the admissibility of the particular piece of evidence that is offered, is closely connected with and in fact depends upon the weight to be attached to that piece of evidence if it is taken into consideration. In other words, this section makes only those facts admissible which are such that they are admitted in evidence, will be of great weight in bringing the Court to a conclusion one way or the other as regards the existence or non-existence of the facts in question. I agree with the learned Chief Justice that if these letters were admitted in evidence they would not be of much assistance to us in coming to the conclusion one way or the other on the fact in question. That being so, it seems to me that under section 11 of the Evidence Act that cannot be shown while it still is so there must always be room for the exercise of discretion when the relevancy of testimony rests upon its effect towards making the affirmation or negation of a proposition highly probable. Hayes v. Irish Dist. N.B. H.C.R. 10. The following extract from professor Hayes's article in Harvard Law Review p. 113 is very instructive. In stating thus our two fundamental conceptions we must not fall into the error of supposing that relevancy, logical connection, real or supposed is the only test of admissibility for we should drop out of sight the chief part of the law of evidence. When we have said (1) that without any exception nothing which is not supposed to be logically relevant is admissible and (2) that subject to many exceptions and qualifications whatever is logically relevant is admissible it is obvious that in reality there are tests of admissibility other than logical relevancy. Some things are rejected as being of too slight a significance or as having too conjectural and remote a connection others as being dangerous and likely to be misused or over-limited by a jury, others as being impolitic or unbecoming for the State, others on the bare ground of precedent. [The law] assuming, as it does, that in general what is evidential is receivable, is occupied in pointing out what part of this matter is excluded. It denies to this excluded part, not the name of evidence but the name of admissible evidence. Admissibility is determined, first, by relevancy—in plain logic and not of law,—secondly but only indirectly by the law of evidence which in strictness only declares whether matter which is logically probable is excluded.

It is here that Mr. Justice Stephen's treatment of the law of evidence is perplexing, indeed it comes to have the aspect of a tour de force. How are we to know what those things are (that are logically probable)? Not by any rule of the law. The law furnishes no test of relevancy. For this it tacitly refers to logic assuming that the principles of reasoning are known to its Judges and ministers just as a vast multitude of other things are assumed as already sufficiently known. Admissibility is determined first by relevancy,—in plain logic and not of law." But the statement is not accurately true. So long as Courts continue to declare in judicial rulings what their notions of logic are just so long will there be rules of law which must be observed. Hyman v. State v. Lapage 57 N. H. 288. Cutting v. J. thus differentiates the rules of logic and the rules of law. "Although undoubtedly the relevancy of testimony is originally a matter of logic and common sense, still there are many instances in which the evidence of particular facts is bearing upon particular issues has been so often the subject of discussion in Courts of law, and so often relied upon, that the united logic of great many Judges and lawyers may be said to furnish a syllogism of the sense common to a great many individuals, and therefore the relevancy of the evidence of what may be properly called common sense, and thus to require the authority of law. It is for this reason that the subject of the relevancy of testimony has become to so great an extent, matter of precedent and authority that we may with entire propriety speak of its legal relevancy."

Admissibility on the other hand, falls short of Proof or Demonstration. The distinction is due to the circumstance that each evidential fact is offered separately, and the quality of complete demonstration could therefore never be expected of it. Since the production of evidence takes time and since one piece of evidence must precede another, the rule of admissibility if there be any at all can have nothing to do with the inquiry whether certain evidence effects complete proof. Hyman v. State § 12.

S 11

Degree of probative value required. The general and broad requirement for Relevancy is that the claimed conclusion from the offered fact must be a probable or more probable hypothesis with reference to the probability of other hypotheses. Higmore § 18. So 'it is competent to a jury to find matters of fact without direct or positive testimony of those facts and upon circumstantial evidence only although the inference or conclusion to be drawn from the circumstances proved be not absolutely certain or necessary, that it is sufficient if the circumstantial evidence be such as may afford a fair and reasonable presumption of the facts to be tried and if the evidence has that tendency it ought to be received and left to the consideration of the jury, to whom alone belongs to determine upon the proper force and effect of the circumstances proved and whether they are sufficiently satisfactory and convincing to warrant them in finding the fact in issue. Gibson v Hunter 2 H M 298. The proper test for the admissibility of evidence ought to be we think, whether it has a tendency to affect belief in the mind of a reasonably cautious person who should receive and weigh it with judicial fairness. Stewart v People 23 Mich 75.

Illustration (b) Where the fault lies between A and C and there is no reason for believing that C has any concern with the commission of the crime while the motive and other surrounding circumstances are too incriminating against A the irresistible inference is that A has committed the crime. Mehm v Cio 8 P W R 1907 Cr = 5 Cr L J 142.

Venereal Disease to show adultery. The existence of venereal disease in a husband is some evidence of an act of adultery on his part. Whether the disease is sufficient evidence of adultery may depend upon circumstances. Poplin v Poplin, 11 Hog Fed 765 767.

Pecuniary Capacity. A party's pecuniary capacity to pay a debt or to lend money is relevant to the probability of his paying or lending. To how his pecuniary condition as to his capacity his conduct in borrowing and not paying thus becomes relevant. Higmore § 221, see also Douling v Douling, 10 Ir C L L 224.

Report to the Police. In cases where forcible re-entry by the landlord or his up by the licensee, the fact that a report complaining of the use of force or intimidation was made to the police soon after the occurrence, is a relevant fact under this section and is admissible in evidence. Habibullah v Baljit Bhai, 30 Ind Crs 292=2 O L J 299.

Documents between strangers. A document between strangers to the suit in which mention is made of one of the parties to the suit or their predecessors in interest as holding the land as belonging to the executors of the document is not admissible. Abdul Gani v Faquir A I R 1929 Lah 18=5 111 Ind Crs 361, Muhammad Yusuf v Chupar, A I R 1927 Lah 448=5 Lah 651. So recitals in documents regarding boundaries executed by third parties in favour of the plaintiff are not admissible in evidence if the executant is not dead and does not come to corroborate them. Ghulam v Katim, A I R 1928 Lah 429 see also Lajpat Rai v Faw Ahmed, A I R 1927 Lah 448=5 Lah 276=9 L L J 180=100 Ind Cas 348. Sheikh Ketabuddin v Asfar Chandra, 44 C L J 582=A I R 1927 Cal 230, Chooney Lal v Nilmadhab, 86 Ind Crs 734=41 C L J 374. Promotha Nath v Krishna Chandra 54 Ind Crs 420=28 C W N 1092. In Promotha Nath v Krishna Chandra Greaves J said "We agree with the decision in Saraj Kumar v Laxmi 25 C W N 1022=35 C L J 19 where it was decided that a document of this nature was not admissible in evidence under the provisions of either section 11 or section 13 of the Indian Evidence Act. The authorities, some of which are conflicting are discussed at p 22 of that judgment. Mr Justice Wookherjee who in the case of Bertusar Doyal v Harbans Sahay 6 C L J 609 had apparently held that a document of this nature was admissible in evidence under sections 11 and 13 of the Indian Evidence Act altered his view in the decision in Abdulla v Kuny Behari 16 C W N 252=14 C L J 467, where he held that a document of this nature was not admissible in evidence under the provision of sections 11 and 13 of the Indian Evidence Act, thus differing from the view which he had previously expressed. Both the cases in Saraj Kumar v Laxmi

Ali and Abululla v Kunj Behari, must be taken to overrule the decision in Duarla Nath v Midunda Lal 5 C L J 55, where it was held that a document of this nature was admissible under the provisions of sections 11 and 13 of the Indian Evidence Act. See also Farand v Zafar, 16 Ind Cns 119, Abdul Ali v Sayed Riyam, 19 C W N 468, Cherag Ali v Moham Baridhan, 19 Ind Cns 615, Sirat Chandra v Saala Bala 105 Ind Cns 61 Aumud Kumari v Dilsook, 45 C L J 138=101 Ind Cns 512. A lessor's statement in the pattah previously granted would not be said to be a fact within the meaning of section 11 and that section could not be invoked for admitting the statement. Radha v Sarbeswar, 29 C W N 469=86 Ind Cns 674.

Where certain lands are entered in the record of rights as chankadiri chakran lands, so far as a stranger is concerned the only way in which those papers can be treated as evidence would be under this section. Rahimuddin v Umesh Chandra, A. I. R. 1926 Cal 115=87 Ind. Cns 694.

A document relating to land on the boundaries of the land in dispute is not admissible in evidence for the purpose of determining whether a certain party was or was not in possession of the land in dispute at the date of the execution of the document. Abdul Karim v Chhale Ahmed 91 Ind Cns 688=A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 479, see also Radha Kissen v Surbeswar, 86 Ind Cns 674=29 C W N 469.

The plaintiff brought a suit against his son for recovery of possession of a land which stood in the name of the latter alleging that the same was acquired benami by him. The defendant alleged that the land was purchased for him by his paternal grandfather. The plaintiff answered that his father had died before the property was acquired, and he produced a mortgage bond executed by him long before the date of the purchase in which he described his father as dead. Held that the statement made by the plaintiff in the mortgage bond to which the defendant was not a party might be admissible in evidence as against the latter either under section 21 clause (3) read with section 11 clause (2) of the Evidence Act, or under section 32 clause (5), or under section 159 of the Act. Sayeruddin v Samruddin, 72 Ind Cns 985=A. I. R. 1923 Cal 378.

Documents containing recitals that a particular plot of land belongs to a particular will be admissible in evidence either under section 11 (b) or section 13 of the Evidence Act, although they are not between parties to the suit. Farand v Zafar Ali 46 Ind Cns 119=132 P. W. R. 1918. This case was decided relying on Duarla Nath Bahadur v Midunda Lal, 5 C L J 55 in which also reliance was placed in Vijthalinga v Venkata Gnata, 16 M. 194 and Dattari Mohanti v Jugabundhoo 23 W. R. 293. But the case of Duarla Nath v Midunda Lal, 5 C L J 55 was overruled by Sury Kumar v Umud Ali, 25 C W N 1022=35 C L J 19.

Recital in old documents. In the case of a house said to have been built over half a century ago direct evidence as to who constructed it may not be easily available and old documents mentioning by whom it was built are admissible in evidence. Laghunath v Bindeshwar, 82 Ind Cns 582=A. I. R. 1921 All. 526.

Admission. Where the defendants nos 2 and 4 sold a jote to defendant No. 1, which they obtained under a partition and subsequently colluded with the plaintiff and denied the said partition as well as the sale the statements previously made by him, which went to show that there had been a partition and they had entered into their attitude, could be proved against him, and the statements were admissible evidence under sections 21 (3) and 11 (2) of the Evidence Act. Bibi Gyaussa v Messamat Mobard, 2 C W N 91=25 C. 210, see also Aaro I majal v Aarhan, 16 B. 125.

Statements made by testatrix to prove the will. In Nana v Shanler, 3 Bom. L. R. 465 which was a probate case, a witness who attended on the testatrix during her last illness, was asked to depose to a statement made to the witness by the testatrix as to the disposition of her ornaments by will. The District Judge disallowed the question. On appeal to the High Court, in delivering the judgment of the Court Jenlams C. J. observed "For the appellant it is urged that it would be admissible under section 11 of the Evidence Act."

S. 11 The defendant on the other hand refers to Allinson v Morris, L R 1897 P D 40 as a conclusive authority against its admissibility, for it was there held that statements made by a testator are not admissible to prove the execution by him of a will. This case, however, and the others on which it proceeds, are based on the fact that the English Wills Act prescribes a particular form of proof, while to the Will in this case no such rule applies (the testator being an inhabitant of Poona). Allinson v Morris, therefore, throws no light on the point, we have to decide and it must be determined by other principles. Now this Will would only operate on that, which, in its absence, would devolve on Gangu's representatives, and a statement by her suggesting any inference as to the execution of a will would be an admission relevant against her representatives and would therefore be admissible as evidence.

History of a family Where the history and status of a particular family, which is one of a group is in question, evidence may be adduced to elucidate the history and status of connected families in the same group, and such evidence is admissible under this section. Sarada v Uma Kanta, 77 Ind Cas 450 = 37 C L J 433 = 50 C 370.

Absence of entry The fact that no entry of the alleged payment was to be found in the defendant's books is relevant under this section. Kasam v Firm of Haji Jamal 76 Ind Cas 327 = A I R 1924 Nag 22, see also Sagar mull v Mamaj, 4 C W N 200, Imrit v Sridhar, 15 C L J 7 = 17 C W N 103, Ali Nasir v Mam, 25 A 90, but see Queen Empress v Grees Chandra 10 C 1024. In the matter of Jaggun Lal 7 C L R 356, Ramprosad Singh v Lalpati Kuar, 3 O C 231 (247) = 7 C W N 162. So it is clear that on this point there is some divergence of judicial opinion. It was pointed out in Imam bandi v Mutsaddi, 45 C 878 = 28 C L J 409 = 23 C W N 50 P C, and Imrit v Sridhar, ubi supra, the cases of Queen Empress, v Grees Chunder Banerjee, ubi supra and In the matter of J Jaggun Lal, ubi supra assume that though entries in a book of account are relevant to the extent provided by section 35 of the Indian Evidence Act, such a book is not by itself relevant to raise an inference from the absence of any entry. The same view is supported by the observations of Lord Dairey and Lord Robertson in Ram Pershad Singh v Lalpati Kuar, 30 C 231 at 247 = 30 I A 1 = 7 C W N 162 = 5 Bom L R 103 P C. In Sugarmull v Munraj, ubi supra, it was ruled however, that the cases just mentioned did not decide that the fact of absence of an entry is no evidence at all under any section of the Indian Evidence Act and that evidence that there is no entry in the account-books, though not admissible under section 34 may be admissible under sections 9 and 11. The question arose again before a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Sadhu Sahu v Raja Ram, 4 C W N 200 and the Judges were divided in opinion. The point may now be taken to have been set at rest by the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Imambandi v Mutsaddi, ubi supra where the fact of absence of entry was held relevant its effect to be determined in the light of the general evidence in the case. This fits in with the opinion expressed by Turner L J in Wyse v Lhoobou Monce, 10 M I A 165 at 174. In that case reliance was placed on the fact that a disputed Taluk was not mentioned in the Decennial or Quinquennial Settlement as such the relevancy of the circumstances was not questioned, but the Judicial Committee observed that even assuming the statements to be accurate in the absence of particulars of the settlements the fact did not seem to afford any strong inference against the existence of the Taluk, see also Nath Roy v Horonauth W R (1861) 233. In Uma Kumar Ghosh v Kuma Arun Chandra, 36 C L J 389 = A I R 1923 C 261, Ganga Ram v Lachu Ram, 28 Ind Cas 705 = 19 C W N 611.

Highly probable—Cases Accused were charged with having obtained money from complainants by falsely representing that they were servants of one Akbar Begum a wealthy lady of Rampur who was anxious to lend money on easy terms held, that the evidence that it or about the very same time when the accused were alleged to have made such a representation to the complainants they had been making precisely the same representation to a third person, was admissible under section 11 and 14 of the Evidence Act to corroborate the story of the prosecution.

and to prove the intention of the accused Emperor v Yalub, 39 Ind Crs 673 = S 15 A L J 241 = 39 A 273 = 18 Cr L J 529

Where in a case of a disputed deed of adoption the defendant alleged that the deceased executant had become shortly after the execution of the deed aware of its existence, purport and effect, and after having become so aware had taken steps to cancel it or to nullify its effect the conduct of the executant from the moment that he became admittedly aware of the existence purport and effect of the deed is not merely a relevant fact, but a very important fact in the case, and the evidence offered by the defendant as to statements made by the executant in the interval of the execution of the deed and his death expressing the view taken by him of the deed after he had known of its existence, or the action which he had conceived himself to have taken regarding it, cannot be excluded as irrelevant, but is admissible under the head of admissions under ss 18 19 and 21 or section 11 of the Act. Mir Sayed v Tanjaba Begam, 26 Ind Crs 547 = 1 O L J 591

Self-serving statements are admissible where they make relevant fact highly probable or improbable or where they are res gestae Harihar Prosad v Kesho Prosad, A I R 1925 Pat 68 = 92 Ind Crs 934

A cablegram purporting to be from one, in Calcutta, was sent to P in London. On the receipt of the cablegram and expressly referring to it P posted a reply to B in Calcutta. Held that P's reply to B would be a relevant fact under section 11 and cogent evidence to show that B was the sender of the cablegram. C H Booth v Emperor, 22 Ind Crs 179 = 18 C L J 367 = 18 C W N 386 = 15 Cr L J 33, see also R v Derrington, 2 C & P 418

An admission made by one of the defendants in a previous suit (to which he was himself a party) as to the common character of a portion of a lano, may be used in evidence against other defendants even though they may not be parties to that previous suit. A statement to the same effect made by one of the defendants in a deed put in by him to prove his title to his own house is admissible in evidence to establish the common character of the entire lano as alleged by the plaintiff under section 11 of the Evidence Act. Facts are relevant which make the existence of a fact in issue highly probable, therefore, the fact of common ownership in other parts of the lano should be treated as relevant to the issue as to the common character of the entire lano. Naro Vinayal v Narhari, 16 B 125

Where in a suit for rent under a lease of land, alleged to be purchased from and leased to the defendant again, the defendant totally denied the sale and lease, if the defendant proved that he did not sell the land, the fact that he did not sell it would be inconsistent with the fact of the lease, and hence relevant under 11 (1). Ang Hla Pru v San Pau 3 L B R 90

Frequent transfers of the interest in a tank without any change in the terms of the holding, or in the amount of rent paid extending over a period of more than 60 years, were held to prove that the tenure was permanent and transferable, the fact of the transfer being inconsistent with the interest being terminable at will. Aulla Krishna v Nistarani 13 B L R 116 = 21 W R 316

On the question whether certain leases were perpetual, it was held that the fact that the intention imputed by the acts and conduct of the parties was to make certain other leases granted at about the same time under similar circumstances perpetual, would make it highly probable that the same was the intention with regard to the leases in dispute and that the facts relating to these leases would be relevant under clause (2) of this section. Narsing Dayal v Ram Narayan 30 C 887

In a charge of forgery evidence of possession by the accused of other documents suspected or even proved to be forged is admissible under this section. Dej v Prabhudas, 11 B H C 90

The statement of a witness for the defence that a witness for the prosecution was at a particular place at a particular time, and consequently could not then have been at another place, where the latter states he was and saw the accused persons is properly admissible in evidence, even though the witness for the prosecution may not himself have been cross-examined on the point. Pej v Sakharani, 11 B H C 166

S 11

In a trial for an offence under s 1 (a) of the Prevention of Gambling Act 1897, the evidence that he was previously convicted of similar offence cannot be let in either under s 54 or s 11 of the Evidence Act Emperor v Moonnaya, 28 B 129

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

Where a person is charged with an offence of conspiracy to give false evidence in a case the previous activities of the accused against the complainants are admissible under this section Hatin Gyaw v Emperor 6 Rung 6=109 Ind C 491=A I R Rung 118

Where the accused had during a period of extremely strained communal feeling enunciated that it was the Hindus inherent right to pass with music before all mosques at all time of the day and night and it appeared that he had organized a movement with this object and the statements of the accused while in conversation with the District Magistrate and Superintendent of Police showed that accused had no idea of obeying preventive orders the statements made to the Magistrate and Police Superintendent were admissible in evidence under s 11 of the Evidence Act Satindra Nath Sen v Emperor 32 C W N 477=47 C L J 444=111 Ind C 396

Judgments inter partes are relevant as authoritative statements of facts as found by the Court Gopal Rao v Sitaram A I R 1927 Nag 19

The author of a book was proceeded against by the Government for exciting class hatred and the books themselves were forfeited. The author applied to the High Court under section 99 of the Criminal Procedure Code to set aside that order. It was dismissed. The judgment was held admissible in a prosecution against the same person under s 153 A of the Penal Code Kali v Emperor 25 A L J 846=A I R 1927 All 654=28 Cr L J 785

Batuara papers are admissible in evidence against strangers if they can be under s 11 of the Evidence Act Rahimuddin v Umesh 87 Ind C 694

Ex parte decrees for rent obtained by a landlord against the heirs of a tenant and satisfied by the latter, are evidence of the existence of the tenancy at the date of those decrees Indul v Kamala A I R 1923 Cal 270

Evidence adduced to prove the custom prevailing in connected families may be admissible to prove the custom in the

Inadmissible

Recitals in documents regarding boundaries executed by third parties in favour of the plaintiffs are not admissible in evidence if the executant is not dead and does not come to corroborate them Ghulam v Ahm, 10 Lah L J 370=109 Ind C 723=A I R 1928 Lah 428, Imbica v Kumud, 110 Ind C 521=A I R 1928 Cal 893, Laypat v Kaur, 8 Lah 651=103 Ind C 889=A I R 1927 Lah 418, Kumud v Dilsook, 101 Ind C 542=45 C L J 138, Sheikh Katabuddin v Nafar, 44 C L J 57=A I R 1927 Cal 230=99 Ind C 90, Pramatha v Krishna 29 C W N 1097, Abdul v Jonabali A I R 1923 Cal 299, Trimbal v Ganesh A I R 1923 Nag 23 Suroj Kumar v Umesh 4th, 23 C W N 1022=63 Ind C 954

In a suit for rent a statement contained in an order for delivery of possession as to the rent payable is not admissible in evidence Chandra v Sheikh 87 Ind C 512

When the charges against the accused are of dracody and rioting, evidence that on the day after the occurrence, the accused who was a Mussalman wanted another a Hindu to embrace Islam, and threatened to beat him if he did not, is wholly irrelevant to either of the charges and should not be admitted, notwithstanding that the riots in which the accused was involved were due to Hindu Muslim dissension Dargahi v Emperor 52 C 499=88 Ind C 733

Prior deposition of a third party is inadmissible to contradict the evidence or impeach the credit of a witness in a case Pobba v Bobba 78 Ind C 176=A I R 1924 Mad 537

Where a document has been admitted in evidence as evidence of a transaction the parties are often apt to refer to the recitals therein as relevant evidence. But the recitals are not evidence especially if they are used as assertions by a person who is alive and who might have been brought before the Court as a witness Ashar v Kader, A I R 1923 C L J 290

The accused was charged with having caused grievous hurt to one of his only in question in Suadai v. Na 30 C 370 = 37 C L J 233

Admissible

Where the question was whether proceedings in lunacy held under Act XXIV of 1858 are admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit to show that the defendant was a lunatic at a particular time it was held that the orders and reports made under the Act by the Judge before whom the lunacy proceedings were held, were admissible in evidence. Srimati Padmalati v. Jonomati, 21 C W N 378 = 78 Ind C 366

A full horoscope prepared from a short one is admissible in evidence so far as the date of the birth and the parentage is concerned. Hurbahadur v. Chand Raj, 21 O C 298 = 18 Ind C 100

An entry made in a register of in-door patients in a hospital is admissible in evidence to prove that the person mentioned in the entry was in the hospital on a certain date. Imolal v. Emperor, 56 P L R 1918 = 13 P W R Cr 1918 = 13 Ind C 429

The judgment and the proceedings in a civil suit against a villain, out of which a charge of professional misconduct is framed against him, are admissible in evidence in an enquiry into the latter charge under s 11 of the Evidence Act, but the decision of Civil Court is not conclusive proof against him in such enquiry. Muni Reddi v. Venkata Rou, 23 M L J 447 = 13 Cr L J 800 = 17 Ind C 541 = 37 M 238

The absence of an entry of payment in an account book is a relevant fact under sections 9 and 11 of the Evidence Act. Ganqaram v. Lachiram, 19 C W N 611 = 24 Ind Cas 705

Where the case was that a forcible entry was made on behalf of a lessor upon a particular occasion, then the fact that a report to the police complaining of the use of force or intimidation was made soon after the occurrence was a relevant fact under s 11 of the Evidence Act and admissible in evidence. Habib Ullah v. Baljit Bal Singh, 30 Ind C 292

On a charge against the accused of cheating by falsely representing that they were the servants of a wealthy lady and were entrusted to act on her behalf in the arrangements for loans, to be made with the complainants out of the money she possessed and thereby obtaining money from them on or wives and killed another. The wounded woman on the day of occurrence on her arrival in hospital made a statement to a Magistrate to the effect that it was the accused who had attacked her self and her co-wife. Held, that the contents of the statement are not admissible under s 11. Emperor v. Abdul, 23 C W N 933

Inadmissible

A statement by a person who is dead in a petition for guardianship, that a certain person was born at a certain time, is not admissible in evidence under s 32 of the Evidence Act. Such a statement alone is not admissible under s 11 of the said Act. Ram Krishna Sadhu Khan v. Moundia Mohan, 20 C L J 302 = 27 Ind C 30

A witness's statement as to what a deceased person had said to him regarding the ownership of the property alleged to be stolen is not admissible in evidence under s 11 or under s 32 of the Evidence Act. In re Doraisami Ayyar, 16 Cr L J 640 = 30 Ind C 464

Where the suit was for ejectment, the fact that the proprietor of a neighbouring piece of land in describing the boundaries of his parcel, stated that the land of the predecessor of the defendant was situated on that boundary is not relevant under section 11. Abdullah v. Kuy Behary, 14 C L J 167

§ 12

Admissible

Inadmissible

pretext or another in connection with this affair held that evidence of instances of similar but unconnected transactions with other persons, during the period covered by the evidence of the complainants is admissible under s 11 in order to corroborate the prosecution evidence in support of the putative offence charged. Emperor v Lalub Ali, 15 A L J 241 = 39 A 273

Where the question was whether a channel was in old one or recently constructed and what was the custom as to the flow of water a prior decision on these questions, though it is no evidence of the custom as against one who was not a party to it, is yet prima facie evidence of the fact of the existence of the channel at the date of the litigation. Karupam v Merangi, 5 M 253

Where in a suit for rent of land from defendant plaintiff alleged that he bought the land from the defendant and thereafter leased it to him year by year and the defendant totally denied the sale and the lease, evidence may be given of the fact of the sale also. Kaung Hla v San Paw 3 L B R 90,

In suits for damages, facts tending to enable Court to determine amount, are relevant

12 In suits in which damages are claimed, any fact which will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages which ought to be awarded, is relevant

Scope of the section In a case for damage no denial or defence shall be necessary as to damages claimed or their amount, but they shall be deemed to be put in issue in all cases unless expressly admitted—vide Roscor's Asi Prus Fi 286 So in a suit in which damages are claimed, the amount of damages is always a fact in issue Any fact which enables the Court to determine the amount of damages is thus clearly admissible The substantive law states the fact which would enable the Court to determine the amount of damages

Damage—definition of Damages may be defined as the pecuniary compensation which the law awards to a person for the injury he has sustained by reason of the act or default of another whether such act or default is a breach of contract or tort or, to put more shortly, damages are the recompense given by process of law to a person for the wrong that another has done him Halsbury, Vol 10 p 302

Amount of damages how ascertained Theoretically speaking the great underlying principle by which the Courts are guided in awarding damage is restitutio in integrum Per Bowen J in The Argentum, 13 P D 191 at p 200, 201 By this is meant that the law will endeavour so far as money can do it, to place the injured person in the same situation as if the contract has been performed (Robinson v Harman 1 Exch 850, Bain v Fothergill L R 7 H L 100 Gray v Iouler L R 8 Exch 249 Fionce v Gondet L R 6 Q B 199) or in the position he occupied before the occurrence of the tort (Philips v London and South Western Rail Co (1879) 5 Q B D 78 Livingston v Bauyards Coal Co 5 App Cas 25 The Medana, (1900) A C 113) which adversely affects him Halsbury Vol 1 p 303 In cases of exemplary damages the principle of restitutio in integrum has no application Exemplary damages are generally awarded to punish the defendant for his wrongful act Finlay v Chumney 2 Q. B. D. 495 (504) So far as breaches of contract are concerned, an exemplary damage is only awarded in the case of breach of promise of marriage Smith v Woodfine, 1 C. B. N. S. 660, Berry v Da Costa, L. R. 1 C. P. 331 Such damages are generally awarded in an action for tort, as for instance assault, trespass, negligence, nuisance, libel, slander, seduction, malicious prosecution, and false imprisonment Halsbury Vol 10, p 307

Measure of damages in cases of breach of contract Upon a breach of contract such damages are to be awarded as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties when they made the contracts as the probable result of the breach of it Hadley v Barendale, 9 Exch. 341 But where the contracting parties arrange beforehand among themselves at what sum the amount of damages for breach of contract shall be estimated, it is the duty of the Courts to enforce the provisions of the contract, as it transgresses no rule of law Palm v The Secretary of State, 2 Agra 194 Ordinarily the plaintiff cannot recover as damages anything beyond what he has actually sustained Madhab v Lukhu, 9 W. R. 212 So the extent of damages must be proved before a Court can give a decree for damages Kisto Mohun v Juggurnath 11 W. R. 236 The measure of damages in a suit for breach of contract is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the date of breach Cohen v Cassim Nana, 1 C. 264 Mohamed v Khoo sui, 1 L. B. R. 146, Bisdeo v John Smidt, 22 A. 55 F. B., Ramalingam v Messrs Golul Das, 97 Ind. C. 871-51 M. L. J. 243 Keshav Lal v Deuan Chand, 27 C. W. N. 974-47 B. 563 P. C. The leading case on this point is that of Hadley v Barendale 9 Ex. 341, where Alderson B. said "Where two parties have made a contract, which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive in respect of such breach of contract should be either such as may fairly and reasonably be considered arising naturally, i. e. according to the usual course of things from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it" On this case section 73 of the Contract Act is based

Damages in cases of torts In cases of torts "one who commits a wrongful act is responsible for the ordinary consequences which are likely to occur but generally speaking he is not liable for damage which is not the natural or ordinary consequence, unless it is shown that he knows or has reasonable means of knowing that the consequences not usually resulting from the act are, by reason of some existing cause likely to intervene so as to cause damage" Sharp v Powell, (1872) L. R. 7 C. P. 253

Aggravation and mitigation In actions of contracts as a rule the motives or conduct of the defendants are not to be taken into account in assessing damages nor are damages to be awarded in respect of disappointment, wounded feelings, injury to reputation or inconvenience Halsbury Vol 10 p 323 In Hamlin v Great Northern Railway, 1 H. & N. 408 the Court observed Generally speaking the rule is this, in the case of a wrong the damages are entirely left to the jury, and they are at liberty to take into consideration the injury to the party's feelings and the pain he has experienced, as, for instance, the extent of violation in an action of assault, and many topics and many elements of damage find place in an action for tort or wrong of any kind, which could find no place whatever in an ordinary action of contract, See also William v Cartier, 1 C. B. 841, Pearce v Ippon, 2 Stark 317 But even in cases of torts no exact money value can be fixed for pain and suffering of the plaintiff In the Mahana, (1900) A. C. 113 Lord Halsbury L. C. at p. 116 said The whole region of inquiry into damages is one of extreme difficulty You very often cannot even lay down any principle upon which you can give damages nevertheless it is committed to the jury or those who stand in the place of the jury to consider what compensation shall be given in money for what is a wrongful act. Take the most familiar or ordinary case how is anybody to measure pain and suffering in money's worth? No body can suggest that you can by any arithmetic calculation establish what is the exact

S 12 amount of money which would represent such a thing as the pain and suffering which a person has undergone by reason of an accident nevertheless the law recognises that as a topic upon which damages can be given."

Evidence in mitigation of damages may be given by the defendant. Thompson v Place 1 Mood & R 210. Denev v Darnall, 3 Camp 451. But in giving such evidence the defendant should not be allowed to prove collateral matters. Simpson v Thompson, 3 App Cas 279, Yates v Whyte, 4 Bing N C 272, Jessen v East and West India Dock Co (1875) L R 10 C P 300. Creely v Curr, 7 C & P 64.

Breach of contract—Mitigation of Damages The respondent contracted for supply to them by the appellants of a large quantity of steel cartridge clips, the respondent to supply the steel. They broke their contract to supply the steel and to take delivery of the clips. The appellants in an action for damages claimed the difference between the contract price and the cost of manufacture. At the trial the respondent's counsel sought to cross examine a member of the appellants' firm with a view to the mitigation of damages by showing that the appellants' mills had been fully employed on other equally profitable work and that the appellants could not have undertaken this other work if they had been occupied with their contract with the respondents. Bailhache, J stopped this evidence in limine as being inadmissible and irrelevant and gave judgment for the full amount claimed. The Court of Appeal held that the cross examination should not have been stopped and ordered a new trial of the issue as to damages. Hill (Johns) v Shovel (Edum) 87 L J K B 1106—1918 W N 261. In that case Viscount Haldane observed "If in the course of business the loss had been diminished by taking on new contracts, credit must be given for this diminution. Further investigation was necessary in view of the possibility that the appellants could have used machinery other than their own in effecting the manufacture of the clips and so carried out all their contract. A litigant ought never to be refused a reasonable chance of stating facts, which were on the face of them possibly relevant merely because a Judge thought that he would probably fail in establishing his case."

Libel and slander—Evidence of character The evidence of character is generally inadmissible with regard to the cause of action or defence as the case may be. But although in civil action evidence of character is not admissible to sustain the cause of action or defeat a recovery, there is a class of actions in which, from the nature of the issue, evidence of character is relevant as to the measure of damages. Perhaps this is most frequently illustrated in actions for slander and libel. Lord Ellenborough long since tersely stated the doctrine which still prevails. Certainly a person of disparaged fame is not entitled to the same measure of damages with one whose character is unblemished and it is competent to show that by evidence—v Moor, 1 M & S 284. In Liduart v Kansas City Times Co 32 Fed-813—a leading American case, Breuer J puts it a little better. After stating the effect of a libellous statement on a man honest and of good repute he proceeds "Now if it so happens that my life has been dishonest and impure and you charge me with that and prove that that is the fact, then I am entitled to nothing for you have simply made public the actual truth. So, on the other hand, if, whatever may have been my actual life, the community here believes that I am dishonest that I am impure then your statement to that effect makes very little impression upon my reputation, the people already believe it already think that it is so, and so I have not suffered, my reputation has not been damaged by your statement. Now go a little further, suppose it be true that I am known in the community and justly so, as a common drunkard, a bar room loiterer, one that every man despises as he meets, and one of you should circulate and publish a statement against me that I had told a lie or that I had stolen money. That may not have been my reputation before. People may simply have looked upon me as a mere wreck, a dissipated and worthless man and may not have looked upon me as one who was a liar or a thief. Of course in a certain sense by the publication of a statement you have injured my reputation you have gotten people to believe I am worse than they thought I was before but on the other hand, if I had such a reputation, how naturally you would say "Well, it does not hurt much" People thought of me about as badly before as they do after the statement, my character and reputation in the community is not worth much, you cannot hurt that which is already injured" And inasmuch as the action for libel or slander is brought for the injury to the reputation the less valuable that reputation is the less proportionate damage is suffered" In the last mentioned case the learned Judge thus applies his reasoning. He says 'Now that thought comes right into his case. The defendant says that the plaintiff's character is bad, that her reputation in the community was not that of a pure, truthful, honest, upright woman, and though this specific charge may not be technically true, yet she was not hurt much, because it only added to a bad reputation that she had already. Now in respect to her reputation, you have the testimony of their witnesses as to what it was in that community, you have also the testimony of one witness in which he says that he saw this plaintiff and her brother having improper intercourse. If it be true that she did have that incestuous intercourse with her brother, then, although it may not be true that she was pregnant as a result of that intercourse, your common sense tells you her reputation was not badly injured. She has suffered very little by this additional charge.' So that with a view to mitigate the damages the defendant may show that the plaintiff, although injured by the libel or slander was injured by reason of his previous character to an extent for which a small sum by way of damages will compensate. Burr Jones § 149, for further elucidation vide section 55 and notes thereunder

Conduct of the defendant In an action for libel the plaintiff may show that the libel was scattered broadcast when the defendant was under no duty and had no right to publish it except to a limited number of persons. De Cresigny v Wellsley, 3 Bing 402, Stool v de v. Hansard, 9 A & E 149, Gathercole v Mall, 13 L J Ex 179. So also in a libel case the defendant's conduct at the time of the suit, may aggravate the amount of the damage. In Simpson v Robinson 12 Q B 511 at pp 513-514, Lord Denman C J said "The defendant's conduct in putting a justification on the record which he does not attempt to prove and will not abandon may be taken into consideration as proving malice and aggravating the injury" So in actions for libel the jury, in assessing damages are entitled to look at the whole conduct of the defendant from the time the libel was published down to the time they give their verdict. They may consider what misconduct has been before action, after action, and in Court during the trial. Per Lord Esher, W R in Praed Graham 24 Q B D p 75. So also in cases of seduction the conduct of the defendant in effecting the ruin of the plaintiff's daughter by fraud and under cover of a promise of marriage may be taken into consideration. Halsbury Vol 10, p 325. So also where a trespass to land or the seizure of goods is accompanied by insulting or oppressive conduct, damages of large amount may be awarded although actual injury is trifling. Merest v Harrey, 5 Trut 412. Massey v Sladen, L R 4 Exch 13. Moore v Shelley, 8 App Cas 287, 291 P C. The defendant's conduct may also be proved in mitigation of damages. Mountford v Gibson, 4 East 411, Cook v Hostle, 8 C & P 568.

Proof of financial standing of defendant It comes rather as a shock to the lay mind that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor although in the administration of justice, the process of the dealing out is for the better of the community. The logic of the position is unassailable and may be easily analysed. We have seen that in exceptional cases character becomes relevant in civil actions and that generally when admitted, such evidence is received to affect the measure of damages. This stage marks one law for the man of good repute and another for him who is said to live evilly. Under ordinary circumstances the financial situation and standing of the parties are wholly irrelevant. The amount of damages depends upon the terms of the contract or in action of tort upon other circumstances wholly independent of the wealth or poverty of the parties but it is well settled that there is a class of cases in which the wealth of the defendant becomes a material fact, and which may be proved on the question of the amount of damages. For example in those cases where exemplary or punitive damages are allowed, this testimony

S. 13 becomes relevant on the ground that a verdict, which might sufficiently punish one of limited means, would seem insignificant to a defendant having a large fortune. Evidence of the wealth or standing of the defendant is sometimes relevant for the purpose of determining compensatory damages. This is for the reason that the financial standing of the defendant is one of the elements contributing to his influence in his social environment, and there are injuries which are aggravated or increased by the fact that the persons responsible for them are persons of rank or influence. Burr Jones Ev § 159. So far as the cause of action rests upon an injury to the character or an insult to the person, compensatory damages may be increased by proof of the wealth of the defendant. This is upon the ground that wealth is an element which goes to make up his rank and influence in society, and thereby renders the injury or insult resulting from the wrongful acts the greater. Johnson v Smith, 64 Mc 573 (553). Evidence of the pecuniary circumstances of the defendant is admissible in two classes of cases: (1) where the case is one in which exemplary damages may be awarded, (2) where the case is of such a nature that the wealth of the defendant increases the wrong inflicted. And a third class might perhaps be made in actions for breach of promise of marriage where the wealth of the defendant is admissible to show the extent of the plaintiff's loss, though this class may properly fall under the second of the above classes. Exemplary damages are given as a punishment where loss is committed with fraud, actual malice or deliberate violence or oppression, or where the defendant acts wilfully or with such gross negligence as to indicate a wanton disregard of the rights of others, and in such cases the colouring facts are always relevant. Burr Jones Ev § 159.

Defendant's fortune. In an action for breach of promise of marriage, plaintiff may give evidence of the defendant's fortune, for it obviously tends to prove the loss sustained by the plaintiff; but not in an action for adultery (James v Buddington, 6 C & P 589), nor for seduction (Hodgson v Taylor L R 9 Q B 79), nor for malicious prosecution for it is nothing to the purpose "that damages are taken from a deep pocket." Short v Story, Winsor Sun, Roscoe N P Ev 86.

Time and place. In an action for assault and battery the circumstances of the time and place, when and where the insult was given require different damages, thus it is a greater insult to be beaten upon the Royal Exchange than in a private room. Per Bathurst J in Tullidge v Wade 3 Wils 19, Brace Girdle v Oxford, 2 M & S 77. Merest v Harvey, 5 Taunt 442.

Proof of financial standing of plaintiff—American Rule.—In actions in which compensatory damages are allowed the financial standing of the plaintiff is irrelevant. For example, evidence cannot be received in an action for negligence against a railroad company that the plaintiff is of limited means, and that since the injury he has not been able to support his family. The evidence should be confined to the plaintiff and his capacity for business and to the nature of his injuries and the probability of recovery. The damages in such cases are not at all dependent upon his condition as to wealth or poverty. But in those actions where exemplary damages are awarded proof is allowed not only of the condition in life and of the circumstances of the defendant, but also of those of the plaintiff. In an action for assault and battery, the pecuniary circumstances of the plaintiff and the defendant, and condition of his family may be given in evidence to increase the damages, especially where the case is one of exemplary damages. And this evidence is also admissible on the ground that the poverty of the plaintiff makes the injury inflicted by the tort the greater. The consequences of a personal injury would be more disastrous to a person destitute of pecuniary resources and dependent wholly upon his manual exertions for the support of himself and family, than to an individual differently situated in life. So evidence of the circumstances and financial standing and rank in life of the plaintiff has been allowed in actions of libel and slander although the authorities are not all in accord. Burr Jones Ev 161.

Facts relevant when right or custom is in question

13 Where the question is as to the existence of my right or custom, the following facts are relevant —

- (a) any transaction by which the right or custom in question was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence,
- (b) particular instances in which the right or custom was claimed, recognised or exercised, or in which its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from

Illustration

The question is whether A has a right to a fishery. A deed conferring the fishery on A's ancestors, a mortgage of the fishery by A's father, a subsequent grant of the fishery by A's father, irreconcilable with the mortgage, particular instances in which A's father exercised the right or in which the exercise of the right was stopped by A's neighbours, are relevant facts.

Principle and Scope. The general rule is that a party may prove all facts that are relevant to the facts in issue and no others. Wright v Doe, 7 A & E 313 (384). "The general rule is well illustrated" says William Wills 'by cases of possession, and especially by the possession of real rights, whether incorporeal, as an ancient water course or a right of common, or corporeal, as a field, or a road strip. In such cases every act of enjoyment or possession is a relevant fact, since the right claimed is constituted by an indefinite number of acts of user exercised animo domini. But inasmuch as such acts are more or less discontinuous in their character—and in the case of ancient rights the evidence of them is by lapse of time rendered even more so—the question for the jury is whether the act proved are so numerous and so connected that the right of possession may be inferred from them. If they are so frequent and of such a character as to indicate that the exercise of one continuous open claim at all times when it would be natural for the person claiming it to exercise it the jury will ordinarily infer the general right inasmuch as the mere discontinuity of evidence is not in itself any ground of suspicion. The acts of enjoyment from which ownership of real property may be inferred are very various, as for instance, the cutting of timber (Stanley v White 11 E.R. 332) the repairing of fences or banks (Jones v Williams, 2 M & W 326) the perambulation of boundaries of a manor or parish (Hecks v Sparle 1 M & S 679 Woolway v Rouse A & E 114), the taking of wreck on the fore shore (lit Gen v Emerson 1891, A C 619), and the granting to others of licenses (Rogers v Allen, 1 Camp 309) or licenses under which possession is taken and held (Brislow v Cornuean 3 App Cas 611) also the receipt of rents from tenants of the property (Malcolmson v O'Dea, 10 H L 593), for all these acts are fractions of that sum total of enjoyment which characterises dominium, and are proved by acts of ownership. Collector of Rajsahy v Doorga, 2 W R. 212.

A custom may also be evidenced by distinct and repeated acts, the conditions being that they should be sufficiently numerous, and should have occurred under fairly similar circumstances. In the field of contracts the principle is applicable to proof of an agency by other acts of authorization to the agent about the same matter (Gibson v Hunter 2 H Bl 283, Larler v Gimell, 3 L R 61) to proof of a contract by other similar contracts with the same person (Bourne v Gathaff, 11 Cl & F 14) and even in some instances to proof of a contract by other similar contracts with other persons (Carter v Frye, 10 F.R. 95, Spencer v Wilnot 7 East 108, Hollingham v Head, 1 C B 283, Smith v Wilkins 6 C & P 181, Woodward v Buchanan L R 2 Q B 250, Buden v Kesterberg 2 M & W 61). As applied in proving prescriptive possession the principle sanctions the use of other acts of possession on premises so connected—the parts of the same manor estate or the like—that acts done upon the one would be done only as a part of a system or habit of doing upon the rest. (Stanley v White 11 L.R. 332, Burns v Munson, 1 M & S 85, Doe v Kemp, 7 Bing 333, Jones v William, 2 M & W 326.

S 13 Doe v Roberst, 13 M & W 520, Bristow v Cormican, L R 3 App Cas 641, Neill v Devonshire L R 8 App Cas 135 166) So also a custom in one place or one trade may be evidence of a custom in another place provided the place or the trades are such that a uniformity of practice may be assumed (Noble v Kennouay, 2 Dougl 510, Milward v Hibbert 3 Q B 120, 139, Falkner v Earle 3 B & S 360, Place v Allcock 4 F & F 1074, Fleet v Morton, L R 7 Q B 126, M Fadden v Mendoel, 1 Ir C L 215) In the application of this principle in England to customs of descent, to this, and the like it has been regarded as admitting in evidence the custom in the same manor (Doe v Sisson, 12 East 62), or in the same township or other entity (Blundell v Howard, 1 M & S 292, Jaurson v Dayson 9 M & W 540), and even in other manors where the conditions on the matter in question were presumably the same (Moulton v Dallison, Cro Cir 484, Champion v Allinson, 3 Keb 90, Somerset v France, 1 Str 654, Tumcar v Hutchins, 2 Cowp 867, Beche v Parler, 5 T R 26 31, R v Ellis 1 M & S 652, Roue v Brenton, 8 B & C 737, Anglesey v Hatherton, 10 M & W 215, Greenl Fv § 14

Public or general rights or customs can also be proved by reputation or opinion of persons who are dead Higham v Rudgiah, 10 List 105 170 clause (4) But the most cogent evidence of custom is not that which is afforded by the expression of opinion as to the existence, but by the enumeration of instances in which the alleged custom has been acted upon, and by the proof afforded by judicial or revenue records or private accounts and receipts that the custom has been enforced' Per Turner J in Lachman Bai v Mahar Khan, 1 A 440 (441) So customs should be supported by actual examples of the usage asserted Gopalayan v Raghupatnayyan, 7 M H C R 200, see also Bhaquan Das v Hajmal 10 B H C R 261 Ownership may be proved by proof of possession, and that can be shown only by acts of enjoyment of the land itself' Per Parle B in Jones v Williams, 2 M & W 326 In a suit where the question is whether a particular land is manu or jote, an elarnama executed by a third person in favour of the plaintiff's ancestor and decribing the land as manu is relevant under section 13 of the Evidence Act In delivering the judgment in that case Coutts J said Now in the present case the question is of the existence of a right and the elarnama comes both within clauses (a) and (b) it is both a transaction in which the right was claimed and an instance in which the right was exercised If authority that such a document is relevant were needed there are the cases of Jones v Williams, 2 M & W 326 Ingham v (Lord) Hatherton 10 M & W 215 Darlow v Judge, 23 W R 291 (Eng) and Tytilingua v Tentatachala 16 M 194 We have however been referred by the learned Vakil for the appellant to the case of Abdul Ali v Syed Hasan 11 19 C W N 468 I confess that this decision appears to lend support to the contention of the learned Vakil of the appellant, but if it lays down the proposition that in such a case as the one before us a transaction by which a right is claimed or asserted or a particular instance in which the right is exercised is not evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act, I must respectfully differ from this view Sabran Sheikh v Oloy Mahto 70 Ind Cas 18=1 Pat 370= A I R (1922) 14 18=3 P I J 792=1923 Pat 125 Possession must be considered in every case with reference to the peculiar circumstances The character and value of the property the suitable and natural mode of using it the course of conduct which the proprietor might reasonably be expected to follow with a due regard to his own interests—all these things are daily varying, as they must needs vary under conditions, and to be taken into account in determining the sufficiency of proof Per Lord O'Hagan in Lord Threlkeld v Lord Foxart, 1 App Cas 273 (288) and with approval by Lord Mervyn in Johnston v O'Neill (1911) A C 121 and by Lord Shaw in Kirby v Cockle (1912) A C 799=81 L J P C 222 So title to real or personal property may be inferred from acts of ownership done by the party for or in whom they are entered as possessor in respect of rents and profit or the discharge of burdens and repairs of the property Planting or sowing seeds is a declaration of right to the soil (St Leger v Turner 21 L J 10) and a perambulation by the lord's vassal of the land, as an agent for or ignorant of it (Woodley v Turner 1 L J 141

114) Similarly user of an easement is evidence of title thereto, the character of the user determining the event of the right. (Coaling v Haggison, 4 M & W 245, Guyall v Steptey Council, (1906) 1 K. B. 468) Such facts are receivable not as admissions, but as original evidence, and in rebuttal proof is admissible of their non-existence, or that they were disputed, or done in the absence of person interested in disputing them, or in some cases of acts of ownership done by strangers not claiming through the alleged owner. Philp Et al 91 Under the head of hearsay are usually classed those cases in which expired leases, grants, or other documents of a similar kind actively asserting a right on the part of the maker have been admitted as evidence of that right in favour of persons claiming under him, they are in fact, acts of ownership and as such evidence of property. Thus, old leases of fishing places by the lord of an adjacent manor are evidence of a right to the bed of the river in favour of those who claim under him. Neill v Duke of Devonshire, 8 App Cas 135 Where the question was, whether certain lands within a manor were subject to a right of common counter part of old leases, produced from among the monuments of the lord of the manor from which it might be inferred that the land was demised by the lord free from such charge, were allowed to be evidence for the plaintiff claiming under him though possession under the lease was not shown. Clarkson v Woodhouse 3 Dug 189 Birstow v Cornman 3 App Cas 641 And such counterparts are evidence of claim, though only executed by the lessee. Doe v Pulman 3 Q. B. D 622, Magdalen v Knotts 8 Ch D 709 C 1, Roseco Et al 15th Ex p 53

Clause (a) Where the question was whether the defendants have a niskar brahmattar right in a certain piece of land a lobala, which purported to show that the father of the defendant, sold a portion of that land as his Niskar brahmattar land was produced. In declaring the lobala not admissible under section 13 cl. (a) Mr Justice Matherjee said: "That the deed is evidence of transaction cannot be disputed, the very illustration to the section shows that it is. The deed therefore is evidence of a transaction which may come in under clause (a) of section 13 if the requirements of that clause are satisfied. The question being whether the defendants have a niskar brahmattar right, a deed confirming the niskar brahmattar right on the defendant's produce or would be admissible as a transaction by which the right was created but not a sale deed executed by the defendants in respect of that right. The word, 'claimed', need not be construed, as the word implies demand which involves the presence of the party to whom such demand is made and who may have an opportunity either to comply with it or refuse it. There is no question of modification, 'recognition' or 'denial' in such a case as that of a deed of sale. The sale of a right is not inconsistent with the existence of the right but is on the other hand inconsistent with its non-existence. The deed, however, is a transaction in which the right is asserted, for the sale involves an assertion of the existence of the right. As pointed out by Geidt J in the case of Bansi Singh v Mar Lahr 11 C. W. N. 703 the word 'by' and not 'in' appears in the clause and that 'by' should be read on the basis of the word 'by' in this clause is also the view expressed by Seshagiri Iyer J in the case of Suyathi v Fola (1911) M. W. N. 779. The question therefore arises whether the assertion of the niskar brahmattar right in the deed is an assertion of that right by the transaction constituted by the deed, or in other words, was this right asserted by the husband or defendant as between the vendors and the vendee in respect of this deed. I am of opinion that it is not. The transaction is one by which the vendor asserted his competency to transfer the property, that is to say, that he had such interest in the property as would enable him to sell it, but that is all and by this transaction the other incidents of the right are not asserted. The deed therefore does not come within clause (a). Brojendra Kishore v Mohan Chudha, 99 Ind Cas 153-31 C. W. N. 32 at p. 33. In the same case Mr Justice Crampton J said: "Now the transaction was the sale of the property. Can it be said that the deed or right was asserted or claimed by this sale? I think not. All that could be said to be asserted by the sale was that the vendor had some saleable interest in the property, not what the nature of that saleable interest was. The niskar right of the vendor was no doubt asserted in the document by which the sale was effected but not by the transaction or sale. Clause (a) does not I think help the respondent."

Clause (b) Where the question was whether the defendants have a nisai or brahmattar right in a certain piece of land a lobala, which purported to show that the father of the defendants sold a portion of that land as his nisai or brahmattar land, was produced. In declining the evidence not admissible under s 13(b) Mr Justice Matherjee said 'To turn now to clause (b) The wording of this clause is different from that of clause (a) in several respects. It speaks in the first place of particular instances, showing that evidence to be admissible must relate to such instances' as distinguished from 'transactions'. An instance of the creation or modification of a right or custom would be inconceivable apart from the transaction by which it was created or modified and so the words 'created' or 'modified' are omitted in clause (b). There may be a transaction by which there has been the recognition of a right or custom, there may also be particular instances of its recognition, and so recognised appears in both the clauses. Instead of the words 'by which the right or custom is asserted or denied or which was inconsistent with its existence' we have the words in which the right or custom was exercised or in which the exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from'. It is clear that in clause (b) instances of assertions or denials of right or custom do not come in, but only instances of its exercise or instances when its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from. Can any conceivable ground be suggested why if a mere assertion or denial in respect of a right or custom was to be evidence, no evidence of particular instances of such assertion or denial could be given and yet evidence would be admissible in respect of 'transactions' in which there has been such assertion or denial? I feel to say my I am therefore of opinion that a transaction or instance in which there is mere assertion or denial of a right or custom does not come within section 13 but only such a transaction is admissible by which the right or custom is asserted or denied. It has been urged that the illustration militates against this view but I do not see that it does. The illustration speaks of a case where the question is whether A has a right to a fishery. In such a case a deed confirming the fishery on A's ancestors should be admissible by which a right to the fishery was created, so a mortgage by which a right to the fishery would be extinguished or a subequent grant of the fishery by A's neighbour would be admissible. All the evidence in which the exercise of the right is concerned comes under clause (b) and the rule is as stated.

are admissible has been clearly explained by Parke B in Jones v Williams 2 M. & W 326. The ground on which such acts are admissible is not the acquiescence of any party. They are admissible of themselves proprio vigore, for they tend to prove that he who does them is the owner of the soil, though if they are done in the absence of all persons interested to dispute them, they are of less weight. Recitals in a deed are not transactions but instances of assertions or denials of the existence of the right. They come neither under clause (a) nor under clause (b). They are statements which unless they are relevant under some other provisions of the law e.g., as admissions or statements of deceased persons etc. are not admissible in evidence." Brojendra Kishore v Mohun Chandra, 31 C W N 32 (38, 39).

The word "claim" denotes a demand or assertion in relation to a thing or attribute as against or from some person or persons showing the existence of a right to it in the claimant. A bare statement may or may not be a claim according to the attending circumstances in which it is made. It may amount to a claim or be a mere statement of claim though in some circumstances a statement may amount to a claim. A statement in the pattah that the land to the west of the land demised under that pattah belongs to the executant of the pattah is not a claim but a mere recital. Radhav Sarbeswar, 229 C W N 469=86 Ind Cas 647 (17 C W N 1016 and 31 C 380 Foll).

Opinions of living persons as to the usage of a family will be admissible though grounded on statements made by deceased persons. Statements made by deceased persons as to the usage after the controversy has arisen are inadmissible in evidence. Statements made by persons are not instances within the meaning of section 13, clause (b) of the Evidence Act but the whole litigation ending with a judgment may be an instance. Sri Protap Chandra v Sri Raja Jagadish, 82 Ind Cas 886=40 C L J 331. An admission may be proved on behalf of the person making it under section 21, clause (3) of the Evidence Act if it is relevant otherwise than as admission. In the case of a house said to have been built over half a century ago, direct evidence as to who constructed it may not be easily available, and old documents mentioning by whom it was built may be admissible in evidence under section 11, clause (2) and section 13 clause (b) of the Indian Evidence Act for what they are worth. Raghunath v Bundeswar, 82 Ind. Cas 582=1924 All. 526.

Right, meaning of.—In Gyup Lal v Fattch Lal, 6 C 171 (F B), at page 186, Garth C J said. It may be difficult, perhaps, to define precisely the scope of the word 'right' but I think it was here intended to include those parties only of an incorporeal nature, which in legal phraseology are generally called 'rights' more especially, as it is used in conjunction with the word 'custom'. It is certainly used in that sense in subsequent parts of the Act (see s 19 and sub-section 4 of s 32) which deal with matters of public or general rights or customs and in s 13 the word is probably intended to include both public or private rights of that nature. The 'right of fishery' mentioned in the illustration is a right which may be either public or private. That the expression is used in this limited sense is shown also as it seems to me, by the words with which it is associated. The right mentioned in the section is one which can be 'created or exercised' which expressions are perfectly appropriate when speaking of an incorporeal right, but would be wholly inapplicable to the word 'right' when used in its more extended sense. It would be quite correct to speak of the creation or the exercise of a right of way or of a franchise, but no lawyer would think of giving that a right to a chattel or to damages had been 'created or exercised'. In the same case Jackson J said. "It seems to me is clear as anything, can be that the right here spoken of is something quite distinct from ownership. What is referred to in the section cited is evidently a right which attaches either to some property or to status in short incorporeal right, which though transmissible are not tangible or objects of the bodily senses. To this interpretation the object, the particular facts selected, and the illustrations to the section all seem to me to conduce." But in the same case Millet J in dissenting from the Full Bench gave a very wide interpretation to the word right. At page 190 he said. "Then it has been said that, in s. 13 of the Evidence Act, if S 13 Legislature intended to refer to incorporeal rights only, because in other parts of the Act, for example in ss 32 and 48, where the same words occur in conjunction with the word 'custom' it has been used in that sense. In the first place, it is by no means clear that ss 32 and 48 deal only with incorporeal rights. It is not impossible to conceive of a corporeal right being of a public or general nature. It is true that, in the generality of cases, such rights are incorporeal but it is by no means confined to that class only. But the contention that the section in question refers only to incorporeal rights, whether of a public or private nature, does not seem to me to be warranted by any general principle. It is difficult to suggest a reason which would justify the existence of a distinction between the rules applicable to the proof of corporeal and incorporeal rights respectively, whether of a public or of a private nature." In Teppu Khan v Rayon Mohun, 2 C W N 501 (F B) in referring the case to the Full Bench Banerjee J observed "It has been said that the right spoken of in this section is an incorporeal right. I do not think that there is any sufficient reason for putting this limitation on the meaning of the term as used in the section." On the other hand the view taken by Garth C J and Jackson in Gujpal v Fattah Lal was approved of in Kalidhan v Shiba Nath 8 C 483 (505) F B. In Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari, 19 A 1 (F B) the Full Bench dissented from the view taken by the majority of the Full Bench in Gujpal v Fattah Lal, as regards the interpretation of the word 'right'. At page 13 Edge C J observed "I think however as did Sir Charles Sargeant, C J and Mr Justice Nanabhai Haridas in Ranchhodas v Bapu, 10 B 439 that the majority of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Gujpal v Fattah Lal put too narrow a construction on the word 'right' in s 13, and that 'right' there includes not only incorporeal rights but a right of owner ship." This view was also accepted by Ranade J in Lalsmun v Amrit, 24 B 391 (591) see also Rama Suami v Appaun, 12 M 14, Venkata Sami v Venkataraddi 15 M 12, Vytuhinga v Venkatacha, 16 M 194, Stephen Dig Ed Article 5. The illustration to this section shows that the right mentioned in it is not a public right only, the right there mentioned being a private one viz "A's right to a share in Surya v Bishambhar 23 W R 311".

Custom. A custom is a particular rule which had existed either actually or pre-emptively from time immemorial and has obtained the force of law in a particular locality, although contrary to and not inconsistent with the general common law of the realm. Lockwood v Hood 6 Q B 50, Halsbury Vol X p 218. A custom must be confined to a definite limited locality. It may impart a general right in a district. Miller v Taylor, 4 Burr 2303. A custom cannot extend to the whole realm nor can it embrace every member of the public, for in either case, it would then amount to the common law of the land. Halsbury Vol X p 219. In Earl Coventry v Willes 12 W R 127 Eng. Cockburn C J said "There cannot be a custom as of right in all the Queen's subjects generally inasmuch as the rights possessed by the Queen's subjects generally are part of the general law of the land, and not the custom of a particular place." See also Gifford v Yarborough 5 Bing 163. R v Bolatt, (1875) L R 10 Q B 169. So a custom is a rule which in a particular family or a particular district has from long usage, obtained the force of law. Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 26 W R 55 P 6. s 1 A 259, see also Fields's Ed 6th Ed p 495. According to the view of customary law taken by Mr Justin (Justin Vol I, 148, Vol II 229) a custom can never be considered binding until it has become a law by some act, legislative or judicial of some sovereign power. I imagine pointing to the Madras High Court judgment of the Madras High Court (Nora Sammal v Balaru Chariu 1 Mad H C 421). But such a view cannot now be sustained. It is open to the obvious objection that, in the absence of legislation, no custom could ever be judicially recognized for the first time. A decision in its favour would be that it was already binding. The sounder view appears to be that law and custom act and react upon each other. A belief in the propriety, or the imperative nature of a particular course of conduct, produces a uniformity of behaviour following it and a uniformity of behaviour in following a particular course of conduct produces a belief that it is in operation or proper, to do so. When, either cause, or from both causes, a uniform and persistent usage has moulded itself, and regulated the dealings of a particular class of the community, it becomes a custom, which is a part of their personal law. Such a custom deserves to be recognized and enforced by the Courts, unless it is injurious to the public interests, or is in conflict with any express law of the ruling power. Khoyah's Case, Perry O C 110, Houard v Pestonj Perry O C 535, Tara Chand v Reeb Ram, 3 M. H. C 56, Bhan Nanaji v Sundra bai, 11 B. H. C 249, Mathura v Esu 4 B 545, Mayne's Hindu Law, 6th Ed 56. So local customary law has its source in those immemorial customs which prevail in particular parts of a country and have there the force of law in derogation of the general law of the land. Salmond's Jurisprudence, p 96. An immemorial custom does upon occasion give rise to rights as well as to law. In respect of the former operation, it is peculiarly distinguished as prescription, which as a source of law retains the generic title of custom. Ibid p 169.

Customs, legal and conventional. All customs which have the force of law are of two kinds which are essentially distinct in their mode of operation. The first kind consists of custom which is operative per se as a binding rule of law, independently of any agreement on the part of those subject to it. The second kind consists of custom which operates only indirectly, through the medium of agreements whereby it is accepted and adopted in individual instances as conventional law between the parties. These two kinds of customs may be conveniently distinguished as legal and conventional. A legal custom is one whose legal authority is absolute—one which in itself and proprio vigore possesses the force of law. A conventional custom is one whose authority is conditional on its acceptance and in corporation in agreements between the parties to be bound by it. In the language of English Law the term custom is more commonly confined to legal custom exclusively, while conventional custom is distinguished as usage. The distinction so drawn, however, between the terms customs and usage, which in popular speech are synonymous, is by no means universally observed even by lawyers. In any talk of custom, therefore, it is always carefully to be noticed whether the matter referred to is legal custom or conventional custom—custom stricto sensu or usage. Legal custom itself is of two kinds, being either local custom prevalent or having the force of law in a particular locality only, or the general custom of the realm, in force as law throughout all over the country—Salmond's Jurisprudence, p 211. The word custom in this section includes private or local custom. Collector of Goralhpur v Paladhari, 12A. 1 (16).

Conventional custom or usage. A usage or a conventional custom is, as has been indicated, an established practice which is legally binding not because of any legal authority independently possessed by it but because it has been expressly or impliedly incorporated in a contract between the parties concerned. Salmond's Jurisprudence p 211. Usage may be broadly defined as a particular course of dealing or line of conduct which has acquired such notoriety, that where persons enter into contractual relationships, in matters respecting the particular branch of business life where the usage is alleged to exist, those persons must be taken to have intended to follow that course of dealing or line of conduct, unless they have expressly or impliedly stipulated to the contrary, that is to say that a rule of conduct amounting to a usage, if so generally known in the particular department of business life in which the case occurs, that unless expressly or impliedly excluded it must be considered as forming part of the contract. Moult v Haliday, (1893) 1 Q. B. 125, Halbury v Vol X p 249. A usage may exist in any trade, occupation, profession or branch of commercial or mercantile life, and between parties bearing certain contractual or even domestic relationship to one another, either generally throughout the kingdom or in a sphere extending beyond the limits of the realm, or within some local area, however small. A usage differs from an immemorial custom in this respect, for the latter must be local. A usage may exist in respect of a very limited class, and may be confined to a very limited area. Halbury Vol X p 250. Law so derived from the conventional customs of merchants is known as the law merchant. "When a general usage has been judicially ascertained and established, it becomes a part of the law merchant, which Courts of law are bound to know and recognize." Per Lord Campbell in Brindley v Brindley.

S 13. F 787 (805) In the first stage, the existence of the usage is a question of fact to be determined by evidence in the particular case in which it arises. The second stage of development is relevant when the Courts take judicial notice of the custom in question, so that it no longer requires to be specially pleaded or proved in the particular case. It has already been sufficiently proved in previous cases, and has received the authority of the precedents established by those earlier cases. Salmond's Jurisprudence p 213

Distinction between custom and usage Immemorial local customs are clearly distinguishable from particular trade or local usages, although in practice they are frequently confused with them. They lack three of the distinguishing features of custom properly so called. First, they need not have existed from time immemorial. Vide Dalglish v. Gulsasser, 23 C 427, Sariatullah v. Pran, 26 C 184. In the second place, they need not necessarily be confined to a limited locality. In the third place, usages, however extensive if contrary to positive law will not be sanctioned by the Courts, while customs may be inconsistent with the general law of the realm. Halsbury vol X p 221. In Goodwin v. Roberts (1870) L R 10 Exch 337, Cockburn C J at p 357 said "We must by no means be understood as saying that mercantile usage, however extensive, should be allowed to prevail if contrary to positive law. To give effect to a usage which involves a defiance or disregard of the law would be obviously contrary to a fundamental principle." "A business usage need not be strictly uniform." Jaggomohun v. Manih Chand, 7 M I A 263, 282. A firm was let under a written agreement, reserving to the landlord "all mines and minerals, sand, quarries of stone, brick, earth, and gravel pits." A local custom (which, it was suggested had grown up within the last thirty or forty years) allowed tenants of such farms, let with similar reservation, to take away the flints that were turned up in the ordinary course of good husbandry, and to sell them for their own benefit. Held that the custom was reasonable and valid. Tucker v. Linger, 53 L-J-Ch 541—8 App. Cas. 608.

Custom—meaning of, under this section In Collector of Goralhpur v. Palak dhan, 12 A 1 (16) F B Edge C J said "It might possibly be suggested that a custom, to come within section 13, must be a public custom and not a quasi-public custom such as the custom of an estate or, to take an example from England, the custom of a particular minor. If such a suggestion were well founded then, according to the principles of construction, a right to be within s 13 must be a public right which was not the opinion of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Gygy Lal v. Fateh Lal 6 C 171. Although I always have a feeling of diffidence in referring to judgments delivered by me or to which I was a party as authorities, still I may say that my brother Tyrrel and I have in s 13 (b) in our minds held in Gun Dayal Mal v. J Landu Mal, 4 W N (1888) 242, that evidence could be given of instances in which a purely local custom was recognised in suits not inter partes. If we there correctly interpreted the law, I cannot see why a different rule should be applied when an incorporeal right or a right of ownership is in question. If the Legislature intended that there should be any such distinction I would have expected such distinction to have been made patent in section 13. Section 48 which deals with general custom or right is applicable in deciding on the evidence of usage. Dalglish v. Gulsasser Hassan, 23 C 427, Sariatullah v. Pran Nath, 26 C 185. According to Sir John Woodroffe the word custom as used in this section is not, however limited to ancient custom but includes all customs and usages. Woodroffe Es 8th Ed 168. "The word 'usage' would include what the people are now or recently were in the habit of doing in a particular place. It may be that this particular habit is only of a very recent origin or it may be one which has existed for a long time. If it be one regularly and ordinarily practised by the inhabitants of the place where the tenure exists—that would be 'usage' within the meaning of the section." Dalglish v. Gulsasser 23 C 427 (429). Sariatullah v. Pran Nath, 26 C 185. In the Indian Evidence Act we find mention of three kinds of customs: (1) private, (2) general (vide s 48) and (3) public (Vide s 32 clause 4).

Private Custom—usage of a single family In Ray Kishen v. Parry 1 C 186=19 W R 8 P C, their Lordships of the Privy Council said "That Lordships cannot find any principle or authority, for holding that in point of law a manner of de-cent of an ordinary estate, depending solely on family usage, may not be di-continued, so as to let in the ordinary law of succession. Such family usages are in their nature different from a territorial custom, which is the lex loci binding all persons within the local limits in which it prevails. It is of the essence of family usages that they should be certain, invariable, and continuous, and well established discontinuance must be held to destroy them. From the above judgment it is clear that a family custom is also recognised in India. See also Basant Rao v. Montappa, 1 B H C App 42, Tirachand v. Reeb Ram, 3 M H C 58, Madharao v. Ballurishna, 4 B H C A C J 113, Neelkrishna v. Deerehunder, 12 M I A 523, Gunesb v. Mohespur, 6 M I A 164, Durga v. Raghu, 18 C W N 55. Family custom although foreign to the spirit of English law is recognised in India. Amrit v. Gauri, 6 B L R 238.

Family custom—how proved. If a party rely upon the especial custom of a family, such custom must be proved to be ancient and continuous. Rama Lalshmi v. Sua Natha, 14 M I A 570=17 W R 552. Custom must be certain invariable and ancient. Maung Tha v. Main, U B R (1892—1896) Vol II 327. The series of acts by which a custom is to be established must be plural, uniform and constant. Superumddhuaga v. Garwad 15 A 147=17 I A 233. Evidence of acts of a single family repugnant or antagonistic to the general law will not establish a valid custom or usage enforceable in a Court of Justice. Madharao v. Ballurishna 4 B H C A C 113. A custom is a rule which in a particular family, has from long usage obtained the force of law which must be ancient, certain and reasonable and being in derogation of the general rule of law, must be construed strictly. Hurr Proshad v. Sheodjal, 3 I A 259 (285), Hira v. Burn, 17 W R 316, Debendra v. Pitamber, 98 Ind Cas 43. Such a custom, must be proved to be ancient and invariable. Hazari v. Jani, 3 Ind Cas 6. Basara v. Linga, 19 B 428. In the case of a family of comparatively modern origin, evidence of conduct extending over a short period is wholly inadequate to prove a special custom. Rajya Lakshmi v. Surya Narayan, 3 M L J 100. A family custom ought to be alleged and proved with distinctness and certainty. Serumah v. Palathan, 15 W R 47 P C. It is an acknowledged principle that to give validity to a custom, it must be certain, reasonable in itself, commencing from time immemorial and continued without interruption. Tyson v. Smith, 9 Ad & El 406, Faydinada v. Appu, 9 M 44. A solitary instance is not by itself sufficient to establish a custom. Sarabjit v. Indrajit 27 A 203. In Chandika v. Muna, 24 A. 273=29 I A 70, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee declined to find in favour of an alleged custom upon evidence which consisted of four modern instances. See also Gopal v. Hunmunt, 3 B 273, Durga Charn v. Raghu Nath, 18 C W N 55 (58). A family custom must be established by clear and unambiguous evidence. Abdul v. Sona, 45 C 450=27 C L J 240, see also Lal Gayendra v. Lal Mathura, 20 C W N 876, Nogendra v. Raghu, W R (1864) 20.

General Custom. The word general custom is used in section 48 of the Evidence Act. The term "general custom" in that section probably includes 'public custom.' Whitely Stokes, Vol II p 884. According to English law the term includes the custom of banker's lien and other customs of the law merchant. Brandao v. Barnett, 3 C B 519 530 cited with approval in London Chartered Bank of Australia v. Mait, 4 A C 413 422. This term also includes the customs of gravel kind and borough-english. Clement v. Seadamore 1703 2 Ld Raym 1021-1026) i. e. such as have an extended local application. Wills Ev 2nd Ed 20. According to Mr Justice Woodroffe the expression "general custom" is defined to include customs common to any considerable class of persons and includes (a) local custom, (b) caste or class custom and (c) trade custom or usage. Woodroffe's Evidence 8th Ed p 169. If we are to take the analogy from 'public rights' and "general rights" we must say that general customs are those in which some class of the community has a common interest, as for example, the one which are based on the customs of manors (Doe v. Sisson 12 Evt 62 Cresce v. Barrett 1 C M & R. 919) parishes (Berry v. Banner, Pea 156, Lians v. Merthyr Tydfil 1 M D C 1899 1 Ch. 241), or cities (Lay born v. Crisp, 4 M & W 320), or which

S 13 are connected with the boundaries of counties (Jones v Rees, 10 A & E 151), hamlets (Thomas v Jenkins 6 A & E 525) and manors or the ancient divisions of manors (Barnes v Mason 1 M & S 77) Wills 1st Ed 222 Public customs are those in which all the subjects of the king are interested Ibid

Local custom Requisites of A local custom is that which is effective as a source of law and legal right directly and per se and not merely indirectly through the medium of agreement in the manner already explained In order that a local custom may be valid and operative as a source of law, it must conform to certain requirements laid down by law Local customs are binding on all persons in the local area Jay v Lomney, 1 C 186, Satyanarain v Satya, 19 Ind C 18 525-28 C W N 351, Heera Nath v Barm, 17 W R 316, Marquis of Anglesey v Hutherton 12 L J 15 67 By Ben Reg IV of 1827, s. 76 the custom of a country has precedence of the law of the defendant, and as such by the custom of the Breach District, the mortgagor of wife land is permitted though contrary to Mohammedan law Abas Ali v Gulam Mahammad 1 B H C 15 36 As to prescription in village communities, vide Kunwar Digambar v Kunwar Ahmad 19 C W N 393, Mulhab v Tomi, 7 W R 210 Local custom or usage is termed desachur Field F 7th Ed 763

Caste or class custom Cutch Memons by virtue of custom can dispose of whole of their property by will Advocate General v Jimbhai, 41 B 181 As regards the succession amongst the Muhammadans (Khojas), vide Khojas and Memons (Case Perry Or C 110, Harim v Pradhan 2 B & C R 216 (279) In re Haji Ismail 6 B 152, Ishubai v Haji 9 B 115 As regards tribal custom, vide 16 B 170 (176) and 24 P L R 1903 As regards customs of religious institutions, vide, 11 A 209, 1 M 235 (P C) = 4 I A, 76

Requisites of valid custom Under the English law a valid custom must fulfil the following conditions —

- (a) It must be ancient; i.e., it must be in existence beyond the memory of man or it must go back as far as the reign of Richard I (Lenkward v Cooper, 7 C & P 119)
- (b) It must be reasonable
- (c) It must be certain
- (d) It must have been continued
- (e) Perceivable (Lala v Hina 2 A 19)
- (f) Compulsory
- (g) Not immoral or unnecessary

Antiquity In the words of Littleton "No custom is to be allowed, but such custom as hath been used by title of prescription that is to say, from time out of mind" So no usage can be part of law or have the force of custom, that is not immemorial Millor v Taylor 4 Bur 2305 In London Corporation v Cor L R 2 H L 239 Wiles J at p 259 said "A custom originating within time of memory even though existing in fact, is void at law" In Chapman v Smith, 2 Ves 505, Lord Hardwicke, L C at p 510 said "Local common law, like general common law, is the law of the country as it existed before the time of legal memory which is generally considered time of Richard I Thus, when people allege a custom, they allege that which they call a custom as having been the law of the place before the time of legal memory" See also Hamberton v Honey 24 W R (Eng) 603 As to how the time for the commencement of legal memory became fixed, vide Dalton v Angus (1881) 6 App Ct 410 (810 811) So what the law requires before an alleged custom can receive the recognition of the Court, and so require legal force is satisfactory proof of usage so long and invariably acted upon in practice, as to show that it has by common consent been submitted to by class or district or country and the course of practice upon which the custom rests must not be left in doubt but be proved with certainty" Snananga v Motter Ramalinga 3 M H C 75 (77) affirmed on appeal in 14 M I A 570 see also Shudhojray v Narkojray 10 B H C 234 Bhojan garav v Malojray 5 B H C A C J 161, Channammal v Faradanagulu 12 M 307 see also Doe D Jogomohun v Nimu Dasi Monumental cases of Hindu Law 596 Lalu v Hina Singh, 2 A 51 Hejershad v Sheo Dyall 3 I A 259 The word immemorial merely means beyond human memory and custom which is proved to extend for a hundred years may very well be called immemorial S

Majid v Safdari Begam, 8 Ind C 1033. Antiquity of a custom is all that is needed, no time need be fixed. Jay v Durga, 11 W R 348 (349). After the existence of a custom for some years has been proved by direct evidence, it can only, as a rule, be shown to be immemorial by hearsay evidence and it is for this reason that such evidence is allowable as an exception to the general rule. Raja Rajendra v Kumar Ganganada, 30 C W N P C. So the essence of a custom is that it should be ancient and invariable. Raja Rao v The Court of Wards, 22 M 383 = 3 C W N 415 (P C) = 26 I A 83, see also Vaidamanda v Appu 9 M 14 (F B), Jugmohandas v Mangal Das, 10 B 528. Hur Prosad v Sheo Dyal, 26 W R 53 P C, Mariam v Ibrahim, 28 C L J 306, Jugmohan v Mauck, 7 M I A 283 = 4 W R P C 8, Anant v Gouri, 6 B L R 238, Durga v Bighunath, 13 C L J 559, Bhau v Sunderbai, 11 B H C R 271.

Reasonableness A custom must be reasonable. Co Litt 62 (2), Tamistry Case, Div Jr 29 (32), Tyson v Smith, 9 Ad & El 406. Broadbent v Willes, Willes 360. Lala v Hira Singh, 2 A 49. Nitya Gopal v Provas, 24 C W N 309, Bhagi v Kishi, 1 B H C 229, Udaya v Narsi, 8 B H C 19, De Souza v Pestonji, 8 B 108, Shadi Lal v Muhammad Ishaq, 33 A 257, Awarson v Mannan, 17 A 87, Raja Varma v Ravi Varma, 1 M 235. Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 3 I A 285. So even where a custom is established by evidence, it cannot be treated as a valid custom on the ground of its unreasonableness. Lutchmaiput v Sadaula, 9 C 698 (703). A custom is reasonable where no good legal reason can be assigned against it. 1 Bl Com 77. When however, it is said that a custom is void because it is unreasonable, nothing more is meant than that the unreasonable character of the alleged custom conclusively proves that the usage, even though it may have existed from time immemorial, must have resulted from accident or indulgence and not from any right conferred in ancient times on the party setting up the custom. Halsbury v Earl, Vol. 10 p 224, see Salisbury v Gladstone, 9 H L C 692, Johnson v Earl, (1908) 1 Ch 303, (311). Similarly an usage in order to become valid must be reasonable. Hammerton v Honey, 24 W R 603, Johnson v Earl, ubi supra. The reasonableness must be considered with reference to its inception. Merces v Denne, (1904) 2 Ch 534, Tamistry Case, Div Jr 29, Tyson v Smith 9 Ad & El 406. Sheikh v Behari Lal, 6 Pat L J 11 = 61 Ind C 132. A custom is not unreasonable where it is beneficial to a community but against the interest of a particular person, Tyson v Smith ubi supra.

Certainty A custom must be certain and definite. Tamistry Case (1608) Div Jr at p 33, Tyson v Smith 9 Ad & El 406. Taylor v Scott, Filz G 35, Blewith v Tregonning 3 Ad & El 554. Merces v Denne, (1904) 2 Ch 534, Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 3 I A 285, Ranatalam v Srananya, 17 W R 553, Luchman v Albar Khan, 1 A 400, Raj Kishen v Ramjoh, 1 C 195 (196), Ratanji v Pahlwan, 33 A 196 (F B), Lala v Hira Singh 2 A 48. Krishna v Abdul 34 C L J 612. Lachman Bai v Albar Khan, 1 A 440, Gopal v Bhagobind, 1 B R S N (X). In Broadbent v Willes, Willes 360, Willes C J said: That every custom must be certain is laid down as a rule in all the books, and that every custom must be certain is by way of definition, and it must be certain because, if it be not certain, it cannot be proved to have been time out of mind. For how anything can be said to have been time out of mind when it is not certain what it is? There must be some definite limit to the right claimed to exist under an alleged custom—in respect of its nature generally, in respect of the locality where the custom is alleged to exist and in respect of the person alleged to be affected by the custom. Halsbury Vol 10 p 227 226.

Continuity A custom to be valid must be continued without interruption since time immemorial. Halsbury Vol 10 231. Tamistry Case Div Jr 32. Tyson v Smith, 9 Ad & El 406. Simpson v Hills L R 7 B 214, Abraham v Ibrahim, 9 M 1 A 242. Rama v Apparu, 12 M 14. Srananya v Mithlu, 3 M H C 75, Ben v Jai Kissen 7 B L R 152. It should be unaltered uniform and constant. Jameela v Pagul, 1 W R 259, Lala v Hira 2 A 49. In Iam

S 13 Kishen v Ramjoy, 1 C 186, their Lordships of the Privy Council said "It is the essence of family usages that they should be certain, invariable, and continuous and well established discontinuance would be held to destroy them. This would be so when the discontinuance has arisen from accidental causes, and the effect cannot be less when it has been intentionally brought about by the concurrent will of the family." See also Tara Chand v Reeb Ram, 3 M H C 58, Madhaban Rao v Lal Kishna, 1 B H C A C J 113. In cases of a widely spread local custom, want of continuity would be evidence that it had never had a legal existence. Mayne's Hindu Law p 58, see also per Jessel M R in Hammerton v Honey, 21 W R 603. There is however, a distinction between an interruption of the right which forms the subject matter of the custom, and an interruption in the possession of that right, or the user and enjoyment of that right. If there be an interruption of the right, no matter for how short a period the right is extinguished and if it were possible to revive it, its revival would involve a new beginning within time of legal memory and thereupon the custom would be void. But as regards interruption of the possession or enjoyment of the right such an interruption may occur and continue for ten or twenty years, without destroying the custom, the effect of such an interruption being merely to render the custom more difficult of proof. Halsbury Vol A p 232. In Mercer v Denne, (1904) 2 Ch 534 Farwell J said "The mere non user during the period that the sea flowed over the spot is immaterial, for it was no interruption of the right, but only of the possession." See also Hamid Fatima v Bhola, 53 Ind. Cas 869, Obligatory A custom to be valid must be consciously accepted as having the force of law. Mirabibi v Vellayanna, 8 M 464. The usage must be shown to be certain and reasonable and so universally acquiesced in that every member in the particular trade knows it or might know it if he took the pains to enquire. Vollart v Vettnehi, 11 M 450. A custom which is against law ought to be established by very clear proof that the conscience of the members of the caste had come to regard it as binding. Patel Vandraoan v Patal Manlal, 16 B 470. A custom to be valid must be acquiesced in. Nitya v Provas, 24 C W N 309.

Not immoral or unreasonable A custom deserves to be recognized and enforced by the Courts unless it is injurious to the public interests, or is in conflict with any express law of the ruling power. Tarachand v Reeb Ram 3 M H C 56. Bhau v Sundrabai, 11 B H C 249. Mathura v Esu, 4 B 54. So a custom should not be immoral or opposed to public policy or unreasonable. Raja Varma v Rabi Varma, 1 M 235, Lakshmi v Sadatula, 9 C 638, Lachmeput v Sadaulla, 9 C 698, Krishna Swami v Vira Swami, 10 M 133. Desou v Pestonji, 8 B 408. Immoral custom is not recognized as valid. Ghasit v Umagan, 211 149 (P C), China v Tegara, 1 M 168.

Transaction Transaction in its ordinary acceptation signifies the conduct or management of any undertaking or business affair, any matter or thing that has been brought partly or wholly to a conclusion, any act as affecting legal rights or obligations. Standard Dictionary Worcester defines it as the act of transacting or conducting any business, negotiation, management a proceeding. Webster, as the doing or performing any business, management of any affair performance, that which is done, an affair. "A transaction" is the derivation denotes is something which has been concluded between persons by a cross or reciprocal action as it were." Per Jackson J in Guyu Lal v Fatch Lal 6 C 185. "A transaction" in the ordinary sense of the word, is some business or dealing which is carried on or transacted between two or more persons. Ibid, per Garh C J. Whatever may be done by one person which affects another's rights and out of which a cause of action may arise, is a transaction. Scarborough v Smith 18 K m 399, 406. It is a broader term than the contract, for while every contract is a transaction, every transaction is not a contract. Roberts v Donnan 70 C d 108 113. The term transaction is one of large import, and might, although a somewhat strained use of it, be held to be applicable to proceedings in a suit. Ranchoddas v Laju, 10 B 443 (142) but see Per Jackson J in Guyu Lal v Fatch Lal, 6 C 171 (142). Whether a judgment is a transaction, vide post.

The word 'transaction' in section 13 of the Evidence Act means a business or dealing which is carried on or transacted between two or more persons. Written statements filed in suits are not transactions within the meaning of the section. Where in the specified boundaries of an adjacent land the suit land is described as belonging to one of the parties, it is transaction but not a transaction in which the right of the party is asserted, claimed or even recognised and hence not admissible in evidence under section 13. Sasipalli v Kota Narasayya, 1914 M W N 779. A private transaction between persons who have no power to bind one whose rights it is sought thereby to affect cannot be admitted as evidence against him under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Abdul Ali v Rejan Ali, 21 Ind Cas 618, (Duarla Nath v Mulunda Pal, 5 C L J 55 dissented from). A transaction contemplated by section 13 is a genuine and bona fide transaction, but a benami transaction which is not meant to be acted upon is a fictitious transaction and in the eye of law is no transaction at all. Such a transaction cannot be let in as evidence in proof of a right or custom. Brojendra v Mohun Chandra 31 C W N 32 (10). In Subran Sheikh v Uday Mahto, 1 P 375, the learned Judges of the Patna High Court in a suit in which the Plaintiff claimed some land as their mal land and the Defendant claimed it as his jote an elasmama addressed by a third person to an ancestor of the plaintiffs in which the land was described as mal land was held admissible both under clause (a) and clause (b) of section 13 on the ground that it was a transaction in which the right was exercised. In this case the authority of the decision in Abdul Ali v Syed Rejan Ali, 19 C W N 163 was doubted and reliance was placed upon others upon the cases of Dattari Mahanti v Jagabandhu, 23 W R 293 and Vythilinga v Venkata Chala, 16 M 194 and also upon the decision in Jones v Williams, 2 M & W 326. In a later decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Jnanendra Nath v Neecha Das, 39 C L J 526, which was a suit by a landlord against a tenant who claimed a permanent tenure, Rankin J held that an assertion in the lobala executed by a tenant in favour of his transferee that his right in it was permanent was admissible under section 13. Brojendra v Mohun 31 C W N 32 (10). Previous transaction in respect of different property is not a transaction within the section. Radha Krishna v Sarabeswar Nay, 29 C W N 169=86 Ind Cas 671=A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 681.

Instances. An instance is that which offers itself as an illustrative case something cited in proof or exemplification, also occurring, example. Webster's Dictionary. Under this section evidence of particular instances where the right or custom was (1) claimed, (2) or recognised (3) or exercised, (4) or in which its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from, can be given. Section 13 of the Act is of no avail where the transactions were in respect of lands other than the disputed land, as there was not any transaction or particular instance by or in which the right in dispute was claimed, recognised or asserted or denied. Abhulla v Anny Behari, 11 C L J 167=16 C W N 252. The statement of an agent that his principal was a husband was admissible under section 13 of the Evidence Act as establishing an instance in which the legitimacy of the person in question was denied. Held also that a judgment referring to such illegitimacy was also admissible under the same section. Kay Faich Singh v Baldeo Singh 3 Luck 161=109 Ind Cas 31=A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 233. When a custom has been established in times showing that there has been no variation in the custom yet in point and should be relied upon no matter if such instances relate to transactions which took place after the enactment of the question of custom had been in tituled. Ashwan Singh v Jagar, A. I. R. 1925 Lah 966. Uncontested instances are by no means worthless evidence of the existence of right. Muhammed Husam v Ghulam Muhammad, 10 Ind Cas 210=133 P. L. R. 1911. Statements contained in petitions by members of a family recognizing the existence of a custom of primo geniture in the family are relevant and admissible as evidence of particular instances in which the custom was recognized as affecting their own rights. Srimanlal v Jai Lal 32 C 6. Instances in the neighbouring subdivisions of a town are relevant on the question of custom in a particular subdivision of a town under section 13 of the Evidence Act, and they may be treated as evidence supplementary to the evidence afforded by instances in the sub division. Admission by a vendee in a suit for pre-emption that the custom for pre-emption existed in the locality is an instance of the recognition of a right which is relevant under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Sant Singh v Jowala Sahi, 89 P L R 1903=12 P R 1903

S 13

Proof of trade custom by particular instances In evidencing a custom or usage (i.e. the habit of a body of persons) by specific instances, the following general principle is applicable, that is, the instances offered (a) should be sufficiently numerous to indicate a regular course of business, and (b) should occur under conditions substantially similar to that in question. Wignmore § 379

Number of instances Individual instances offered one at a time are receivable. Doe v Mason, 3 Wills 63. In Roe v Jeffrey, 2 M & S 92 Ellenborough, L C J said "It is true that one act undisturbed does not make a custom, but it will be evidence of custom." The alleged custom must be very satisfactorily proved by evidence of particular instances so numerous as to justify the Court in finding in favour of the custom. Durga v Raghunath, 18 C W N 50, Larkman v Akbar 1 A 440, Debendra v Pitamber, 98 Ind C 43=A I R 1927 Cal 43, Jugmohan Das v Mangal Das, 10 B 528 (513), Sarabjit v Indrajit, 27 A 203, Chandila v Vinna, 24A 273=29 I A 70

Custom should occur substantially under conditions substantially similar to that in question It is obvious that there must be such a similarity or unity of conditions that what is done by one or more persons or sets of persons may be taken as indicating the probable general habit of the class of persons under similar circumstances. The precedents illustrate all sorts of trade and usage and no detailed generalization seems feasible. Wignmore § 376. To prove a custom of London as to the storage of goods in regard to general average a similar custom in other English ports was received. Milward v Hubbert, 3 Q B 120, 129. So also to prove a custom of trade between Liverpool and California, after incorporation with the United States, as to discounts on freight, a similar custom as to trade with Texas after incorporation and as to other ports of British America, etc., was received. Fallner v Farle, 3 B & S 360. Similarly in proving usage as to bleaching linen in Nottingham, usage at Loughborough was admitted by reason of the vicinity of the places and the interchange of trade. In Fleet v Morton L R 2 Q B D 126=41 L J Q B N S 49 the action was for the price of fruit on a sold note signed by the brokers only, the dispute being whether in that trade brokers were liable on such notes for the default of principals. The custom of trade being held to be involved in the contract, evidence was received with some hesitation, of the custom on the point in the colonial market. Blackburn v I observed. It seemed to be conceded in the trial that the two trades were so far allied to each other that the same usages would be likely to prevail in both, and I thought that upon the question of the liability of a broker, evidence of his liability in a similar trade ought to be received. So it is enough to point out (1) that no particular circumstance is conclusive either pro or con, (2) that instances from another trade or another region are not necessarily without probative value, while instances from the same trade and the same locality are not necessarily admissible, and (3) that the question is not whether the offered instances fully prove the custom alleged, but merely whether they are receivable as having probative value. Wignmore § 379. See also Noble v Kenneyway, 2 Doug 510, M Fadden v Murdoch, 1 Ir C L 218

Customary rights in land, etc. Custom in India is tran scendent law. But a custom cannot be established by a few instances or by instances of recent date. Consequently, it is the duty of the Court, when it has to pronounce upon the question, to examine the evidence bearing upon it, not only as to the sufficiency thereof to establish all the elements (antiquity, uniformity, etc.) required to constitute a valid usage having the force of law, but also the credibility of the evidence relied on and the weight due to it. Kularna v Raja Venkata, 29 M 24 (25). There is no technical evidence of custom is not that which is afforded by the expression of opinion as to the existence but by the enumeration of instances in which the alleged custom has been acted upon, and by the proof afforded by judicial or revenue records of private accounts and receipts that the custom has been enforced." Per Turner J in Lachman Rai v Hoor Khan, 1 A 440 (441), see also Ashutosh v Chandi, A L R 1927 CIL 177=98 Ind CIs 43. Though judicial decisions are not indispensable, the acts required for the establishment of customary law ought to be plural, uniform and constant. Tara Chand v Reeb Ram 3 M H C 50. In Maharajah Heeranath Kooer v Baboo Birm Narain Singh, 17 W R. 316=9 B L R 274, it was laid down that to establish a family custom of descent, one at least of two things must be shown either a clear, distinct and positive tradition in the family, or a long series of instances of analogous inheritance from which the family custom may be inferred. In the case of Imbaila Das v Arpana Das, 45 C 835=29 C L J 261=47 Ind CIs 402=23 C W N 160 it was held that even if a particular rule of succession has been actually followed in a family for a series of years it cannot be treated as binding upon the family unless it has ripened into a family custom, and it must be shown that the custom had existed from time immemorial and where the custom set up is peculiar to a single family this rule is more strictly inferred than ever. Ashutosh v Chandi Charan, ubi supra. Statements contained in petitions by members of a family recognising the existence of a custom of primogeniture in the family, are relevant and admissible as evidence of particular instances in which the custom was recognized as affecting their own rights. Shyamchand v Rama Kanta 32 C 6. In Palal Dhari Rai v Manners 23 C 179, a suit by a landlord for ejectment of purchasers from rayats having only a right of occupancy, on the ground that the holdings of such rayats were not transferable without the landlord's consent the defendants pleaded custom or usage in support of the transfers. Questions arose as to the character of the usage required to be proved in such cases and the nature of the evidence required to prove the usage. In that case the Court observed "Since that time he (Mr Manners) states that he has been purchasing land from occupancy rayats having taken over 200 lobalas of such lands. The lobalas relating to the villages in these suits which are on the record and have been challenged are all of a very recent date, and by themselves would certainly establish neither a custom nor usage in regard to such transactions. We would here refer to section 13 of the Evidence Act as showing the character of evidence by which a right or custom must be proved. Mr Manners' evidence is not of that description. The Subordinate Judge next states that one of the purchases was made so long ago as in the year 1277. There is no doubt a lobala of that date, but it is one isolated instance, and it relates to land in a different mouzah. The other lobalas adduced in evidence also relate to lands in other mouzahs. The Subordinate Judge next refers to the fact that some of the landlords (maliks) have purchased without consent of their others sherrers and from this he finds a usage well known in the locality and acquiesced in by the other maliks. "But this is not a legitimate conclusion. Such a purchase stands on an entirely different footing from a purchase by a stranger, for it is made at least with the consent of purchasing landlord, and it could not be properly regarded as a recognition of a usage to purchase without the consent of the landlord."

Instances occurring within the same manor, it is clear, will be received, because the original unity of the holding allows each instance to appear as merely one illustration of a general system working uniformly. So in order to prove a custom of descent in the female line, particular instances were received of such descent in other estates of the manor, as well as of a general reputation as to such custom of descent in the manor, the particular instances being as to such custom of descent in the manor, the particular instances being 'only so many branches from the same root,' Per Lord Ellenborough C J in Doe v Sisson, 12 Ea t 62. Similarly to prove custom as to tithe payments by other holdings in the same township were admitted to show its general character. Blundell v Howard 1 M & S 292 see also Jenison v Dyson 9 M & W 540 556, Lendrum v Deazley, 4 L R Ir 635. On the same principle however instances from other manors may be received provided that, behind their apparent difference of conditions a unity of some sort can be shown which makes instances from the one equally illustrative of a general system including and operating in the other. Higmore § 380. In Moulton v Dallison, Cro Car 484 the question was whether an estate descended by custom to the eldest daughter in manor S. After showing that S was a part of a manor O, and thus

S 13 establishing the unity of custom, the fact was received of the rule of descent in O see also Champion v Watson, 3 Keb 90, Somersel v France, 1 Str 651 In Purpantz v Hutchins 2 Cowp 807 Lord Mansfield C J said, 'Proof of the custom in other parishes is no evidence to affect the parish in question, unless the custom had been proved as a custom of the whole country' In Roue v Brenton, 8 B & C 737, 758, the issue was as to the ownership of copper mines and the rights of a plaintiff who was a "conventional le-ee" in the copper on his land, there were 17 manors in the duchy and one of the above tenements renewable every 7 years, existed in each manor Evidence was received as to the terms of the customary right of such a tenant in the other manors Fentenden L C J said 'The same character, whatever that may be, belongs to them all It certainly belongs to all those called "free conventionalities", in this district Must we not, then, in fairness, in order to ascertain what are the relative rights of the lord and these tenants in one part of the district enquire what are the rights in another?' In the same case Bayly J said, 'I am of opinion that the usage which has prevailed in one part, is evidence to explain a grant expressed in similar terms to any other part of the district' Similarly in Inglesby v Hatherlton, 10 M & W 218, Abinger C B said 'It should be established clearly and beyond all controversy that the two manors originally formed one manor there prevails throughout those manors a particular species of tenure, called "tenant right", since in those manors all the tenants hold under the same right if it should happen that in one particular manor no example can be adduced of what is the custom in any particular case in order to explain the nature, which is not confined to one manor but prevails in a great number you may show what is the general usage in respect to that tenure' He also approved Roue v Brenton, ubi supra In the same case Alderson B said 'It indeed there be some general connecting link between them—as, for instance, if the custom in question be a particular incident of the general tenure which is common to two manors, then you have a right to show what the custom of one manor is as to the tenure, for the purpose of showing what the custom of the other manor is as to that tenure, but you must begin by showing that there is a general tenure common to both, that fact fails here'

To prove a custom or usage that occupancies holdings are transferable in any locality, it is not sufficient to show simply that such holdings are sold in the village or neighbouring villages The essence of a usage of transferability is that transfers made to the knowledge of but without the consent of the landlord are valid and must be recognised by him Peary Mohun v Jote Kumar, 11 C W N 83

Transaction whether includes judgment. 'A transaction in the ordinary sense of the word, is some business or dealing which is carried on or transacted between two or more persons If the parties to a suit were to adjust differences inter se the adjustment would be a transaction, and by a somewhat strained use of the word, the proceedings in a suit might also be called transaction, but to say that the decision of a Court of Justice is a transaction appears to me a misapplication of the term Per Garth C J in Ganji Lal v Fateh Lal 6 C 141 at p 186 A transaction, as the derivation denotes, is something which has been concluded between persons by a cross or reciprocal action as it were, whereas the judgment of a Court is something imposed by the authority of the tribunal The Court neither creates, claims modifies recognizes asserts nor denies a right or custom It determines for or against Consequently to call the judgment of a Court of Justice as a transaction is nothing more than misuse of language Per Jackson J in ibid at p 185 In Namul Ali v Gooroo Dass 22 W R C R 303, where the plaintiff claimed an istannee right to land the Court admitted in evidence against the defendant decrees in two suits in which the istannee right had been successfully asserted against a former holder of the tenure that was said to have created the right claimed but to which the defendant had not been a party Sir Richard Couchin delivering the judgment of the Court said that he could not think that such judgments were intended to be excluded, and that the expression 'transaction' in section 13 was large enough to include proceedings in suits and that the section did not require the suit to have been between the same parties, but left it to the Court to decide what weight attached to it In Narany

Bikhanbai v Dipa Umed, 3 B 3, where the plaintiffs sought to recover arrears of a Churda Lak, Westroff, C J and Melville J adopting the views taken by Couch C J of section 13, held that decrees establishing the right in prior suits between the same persons were admissible in evidence 'for the purpose of showing that the right had not only been asserted, but recognized by the tribunals of the Courts on several occasions.' In Ranchhoddas v Bapu, 10 B 139 at p 442 Sargant C J, said "In the absence therefore, of any qualification such as is to be found in section 48, 'rights and customs' in section 13 must we think be understood as comprehending all rights and customs recognized by law and, therefore, including a right of ownership. As to the term 'transaction,' it is doubtless one of large import, and might although by a somewhat strained use of it, be held to be applicable to proceedings in a suit, but as the result of holding it to be so applicable in section 13 would be to effect a most important departure from the English rule of evidence, which would make judgments, decrees and verdicts of juries only admissible in matters of public interest, it may well be doubted whether such was the intention of the framer of the code." In Tepu Khan v Rojoni Mohan, 2 C W N 531, 504, Banerjee J said "If the existence of the judgment is not a transaction within the meaning of clause (a) of section 13 it proves that a litigation terminating in the judgment took place, and the litigation comes well within the meaning of the clause as being a transaction by which the right now claimed by the defendants was asserted. So again the litigation which is evidenced by the existence of the judgment was a particular instance within the meaning of clause (b) of section 13 in which right of possession now claimed by the defendant was claimed. The judgment therefore is in my opinion, relevant under section 13." See also Mahomed v Husan, 31 B 143 "It seems to me the true point is, not that the judgments and decrees themselves are 'transactions' but that the suit in which they were made was a transaction, and that to establish that such a transaction took place they are the best evidence." Per Straight J in Collector of Goralhpur v Paladhar 12 A. 1 (F B) see also Duchess of Kingston's Case, 1 Sm L C 760, per Sir William De Grey.

"This process of embodying the terms of a final act in a single memorial," says Prof Wigmore "may be termed the Integration of the Act, i.e. its formation from scattered parts into an integral documentary unity. The practical consequences of this is that its scattered parts in their former and in coherent shape, have no longer any legal effect they are replaced by a single embodiment of the act. In other words when a legal act is embodied in a single memorial, all other utterances of the parties on that topic are legally immaterial for the purpose of determining what are the terms of their act." Wigmore § 2425 "The integration of a transaction is either voluntary or compulsory. In the former instance it may or may not be made, as the party or parties to the act may choose, but when made, the legal consequences already noticed will follow and the document supercedes all other utterances. In the latter instance—compulsory integration—the law insists, independently of the parties' choice that the transaction be embodied in a single document and when this is done, the same legal consequences attach. The instances of compulsory integration are few. At common law the only instances appear to be those of the judicial records, corporate records, and negotiable instruments. The theory of judicial records is that the judgment roll as finally made up embodies in itself alone the entirety of the controversy as adjudicated and thus supercedes the miscellaneous mass of oral and written pleading motions, and orders which have gone to make up the proceedings." Westroff v Buchurst 2 M & S 566, 567 "What are the transactions which in legal theory form part of the record? Obviously many things are said and done, in and many documents used not only out of Court but in Court, which do not in strictness form a part of the proceedings in the controversy and hence do not need to appear in the record,—hence may be established without regard to the contents of the record. This involves the whole theory of trials and appeals." From the above observation of Prof Wigmore, one of the greatest authority on the Law of Evidence, it is abundantly clear that a judgment or decree is but an integration of various transactions. When such transactions are relevant under section 13, a judgment or decree is also admissible under this section. As regards the probative value of such judgments and decrees, vide infra

S 13

Judgment whether relevant under this section Judgments in Courts of Justice on other occasions form an exception to the exclusion of evidence of transactions not specifically connected with facts in issue. Step Intro 161 There are two kinds of judgments namely judgments in rem and judgments in personam. The former kinds of judgments are always relevant (Vide s 41). Judgments in personam bind only parties and privies to facts in issue (Vide, Notes under s 40). So a judgment which operates as res judicata is relevant in a subsequent suit (Vide s 40). So also judgments, orders or decrees are relevant if they relate to matters of public nature relevant to the enquiry (Vide s 42). Now the question is whether judgments, which are not judgments in rem, nor operate as res judicata nor are judgments which relate to matters of public nature relevant to the enquiry, are admissible in evidence under this section. Such a judgment is proof of its own existence and of its legal consequences not simply inter partes, but against all the world, but not of the truth of the fact on which it is based. Such judgments are also relevant under section 43 of the Evidence Act if the existence of such judgment is a fact in issue or is relevant under some other sections (Vide section 43). Otherwise such judgments when tendered against strangers are sometimes said to be excluded as opinion evidence (R v Fontana Morcan 11 Q B D 1028), sometimes as hearsay (Steph art 14), but more commonly on the ground expressed in the maxim res inter alios acta or iudicata alteri nocere non debet (it being considered unjust that a man should be affected, and still more that he should be bound by proceedings in which he could not make defence cross examine or appeal). So a judgment or decree not inter partes is not admissible in evidence under section 43 unless as a fact in issue or as a relevant fact under other sections of the Evidence Act. Hendia v Rameswar, 87 Ind Cas 849=6 P L T 634=4 Pat 510=A I R 1925 Pat 625 see also Kashi Nath v Jagat Kishore 20 C W N 693=23 C L J 583=35 Ind Cas 298, Hira v A Hills 11 C L R 530. Ordinarily a statement of opinion made by the Judge in a previous judgment not inter partes is no evidence in a subsequent case. Harnath v Mohanlal A I R 1929 Lah 123=10 L L J 519. Under section 13 a judgment is relevant if its existence is a transaction and a clause (a) or its existence be considered an instance under clause (b). Tepu Khan v Rajoni, 2 C W N 501 504. On this point there is some conflict of opinion and it is better to treat the decisions of different tribunals under separate headings.

English Cases Verdicts judgments and settlements in actions of trespass to hereditaments [Fogers v Allen 1 Camp 309 Nail v Devonshire 8 App Cas 135, Blandy Jenkins v Dunraen (1899) 2 Ch 121] convictions for the non repairs of public ways (R v Brightside Berton 13 Q B 933) and verdicts and judgments for the recovery of pre-scriptive tolls (City of London v Charles Curth 181, Laybourn v Crisp 1 M & W 320) are admissible as relevant facts when the right to the land, the way, or the toll respectively is in question. Will. Et 61

Calcutta Cases—A judgment in a former suit brought by other parties against the same defendants where they raised the same contention as they do now though not conclusive evidence against them is admissible as evidence for what it is worth. Lala Ranglal v Deonarayan, 6 B L R 69=14 W R 21. So such a judgment is admissible as evidence in a subsequent suit. Doorga v Norendra 6 W R 232. In questions involving the determination of a right to an office and the rule of succession to the office previous judgments and decrees involving in fact in which the right and custom was used fully are admissible under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Account v Dheer Chunder 20 W R 315. Proceedings in suits in which a former belief of the nature of the person who was said to have created the utramque right was a party are transactions within the meaning of section 13, and as such are admissible in a suit to establish an utramque right. Neamat v Gorge Das 1 W R 265 see Couch C J. A judgment settling out the terms of a compromise in the form of a deed is relevant under section 13. Boopchand v Hur Khan 23 W R 162. A decision in a suit to which the plaintiff was not a party, but which was held to be not conclusively binding upon him.

Omer Dutt v Colonel 21 W R 170, See also Bundo v Thaloor, 2 Hay 472 S 13
Dutari v Jugo 23 W R 293, Soorgo v Bishumbhor, 23 W R 311 Gutta v
Gunce, 22 W R 177, Annunda v Gunce 25 W R 80 This question again arose in 1880 in Gugu Lall v Latch Lall, 6 C 171 which was a suit to recover possession of certain property, the ultimate determination of which suit in favour of the plaintiff depended on the admission in evidence of a certain judgment in a former suit, to which the plaintiff of that suit was no party, but in which the defendant was the plaintiff The question as to whether that previous judgment should have been admitted in evidence was referred by Garth C J and Mitter J to a Full Bench in the following terms 'It has been decided by this Court in several cases, three of which are reported in 23 W R pages 162 293 and 311, that decrees in suits between third parties are admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act, whilst in other cases in this Court such evidence has been constantly rejected The question, therefore, referred to the Full Bench is whether, under s 13 or any other section of the Evidence Act, the judgment in the former suit, which was admitted and acted upon as evidence in the suit was legally admissible?' The majority of the Full Bench, consisting of Garth C J, Jackson, Pontefex and Morris JJ answered the question in the negative According to them a former judgment, which is not a judgment in rem nor one relating to matters of a public nature, is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit, either as a res judicata or as proof of the particular point which it decides unless between the same parties or those claiming under them But Mitter J dissented from the view taken by the majority of the Full Bench In delivering his well considered judgment he observed at page 175 'It is clear that the judgment mentioned in the order of reference is not relevant under ss 40 to 42 Therefore the question that we have to determine is, whether or not it is relevant under some other provisions of the Evidence Act, so as to bring it within the proviso of section 43 I am of opinion that it is relevant both under ss 11 and 13' Then quoting section 13 he said, 'The existence of a right to some immovable property is in question in this case That right was asserted and recognised in a previous proceeding of a Court of Justice, and it seems to me that it would not be unwarrantably straining the language of the section in question to say that that proceeding was a transaction within the meaning of section 13 because the word 'transaction' in its largest sense means 'that which is done' If the words 'transaction' and 'right' be not construed in this way judgments, decrees, and orders which were before the passing of the Evidence Act, considered conclusive, and which now, according to the law of evidence as administered in England, are considered, when not pleaded as estoppel cogent evidence, would be excluded Take for example the following illustration—A brings a suit against B for enhancement of rent B sets up a mulurrari patta in defence A Court of competent jurisdiction finds the patta to be genuine and dismisses the suit After the lapse of several years B sells his right to C, and A then evicts the latter forcibly Thereupon C brings a suit against A to recover possession of the land covered by the mulurrari patta A denies the mulurrari right, and alleges that B was a tenant at will Before the Evidence Act was passed the former judgment would have been conclusive evidence of B's mulur- rari right, see Soorjomonee Dayce v Suddanund Mohapatteer, 12 B L R 304 and Krishna Behari v Brojesuari 2 I A 283=1 C 144 According to the law of evidence as at present administered in England, it would equally be considered conclusive and if not conclusive at least is cogent evidence in the subsequent suit Was it intended by the Evidence Act to declare such judgment as this irrelevant? But it would be irrelevant unless it be relevant either under s 11 or s 13 It is not relevant under s 40 because its existence does not by law prevent the Court from taking cognizance of the second suit under these circumstances I apprehend it would not be admissible under section 40 of the Evidence Act, because its existence would and could not at that stage of the case prevent the Court from holding a trial of the issue regarding B's mulurrari title The judgment in question then at least in some cases not being admissible under section 40 and it being evident that it is not admissible under ss 41 and 42, it would be excluded altogether, unless its existence be relevant under some other provision of the Act. But if we construe the words 'transaction' and 'right' in section 13 in their largest sense, it would be relevant under that section. Is it at all reasonable to suppose that a mere assertion of a right by a person settling it up (whether that right is corporeal or incorporeal, it is quite immaterial for the purpose of this argument) would be admissible as evidence and not the recognition of it by a Court of Justice? Certainly it seems to me to be highly improbable that that was the intention of the Legislature. For these reasons I am of opinion that the judgment mentioned in the order of reference is relevant under s 13 of the Evidence Act."

S 13

However the decision of the majority of the Full Bench in Gujju Lal v Fateh Lal was followed in Hiralal v Hills, 11 C L R 528 (530) Ramnarain v Ramcoomar 11 C 562 Mohendra v Rosomoy 12 C 207 and affirmed in Surendra Nath v Brojendra Nath 13 C 352 (F B). Again the case of Surendra Nath v Brojendra Nath was followed by Banerjee and Rampini JJ in Gobind Chunder v Srugobind, 24 C 330, see also R v Udit Prasad, 8 C 993. In referring the case of Surendra Nath v Brojo Nath, 13 C 352 (F B) for the decision of the Full Bench, McDonnell and Ghose JJ said "The appellants have contended before us that the said judgment is no evidence whatever under the Evidence Act and that the result of the Full Bench decision in the case of Gujju Lal v Fateh Lal, ubi supra is to the same effect. It is argued and it seems to us that this argument is well founded that what the said Full Bench practically decided was that except in the case of judgment in rem, and judgment relating to matters of public nature a judgment in order to be evidence must be such as would operate by way of estoppel or res judicata. A recent Full Bench of this Court in the case of Brojo Behari Mitter v Kedar Nath Mozumdar 12 C 580 (F B), has ruled in a case where the parties were not arrayed as plaintiff and defendant in a previous suit, but as co-defendants, that the judgment in that suit is not res judicata. But the question was not therein raised whether the said judgment, though not res judicata was evidence or not. If the result of the Full Bench decision in the case of Gujju Lal be as the appellants contend, then certainly the judgment adduced in this case should not have been received and acted upon as evidence. But then it appears that the authority of the said Full Bench case has been shaken by the subsequent Privy Council decision in the case of Rum Bahadur v Lochi Koer, 11 C 301 and by the decision of this Court in the case of Peari Mohun Midherji v Drobomoyi Daba, 11 C 745 and in the case of Hiralal v Hills 11 C L R 528. In the case before the Privy Council, although the Judicial Committee held that the previous judgment between the parties was not res judicata, they still treated such judgment as evidence in the case. In the case of Peari Mohun v Drobomoyi, a judgment although not inter partes was held to be admissible as evidence as showing the nature of the possession of the defendant, and in the last mentioned case, ubi supra, the decree used as evidence for the purpose of showing that rent was successfully claimed for the land which was in the subsequent suit alleged to be lakhry. It seems to us that the question raised before us is of considerable importance, and one which often arises in our Courts, and we therefore think it necessary to refer the following question to a Full Bench. Whether under the circumstances stated, the judgment in the previous case is evidence or not? But any such majority of the Full Bench consisting of Sir C. Pethamam C. J., H. J. O'Keefe, Macpherson JJ said "Apart from res judicata no question arises as to the decree referred to be admissible in evidence as we think concluded by the two Full Bench cases Gujju Lal v Fateh Lal supra and Brojo Behari Mitter v Kedar Nath Mozumdar 12 C 580 (F B). The Full Bench neither decided the question nor tried to distinguish the cases referred to in the order of reference. Mitter J however dissenting from the view taken by the Full Bench. In Gujju Lal v Fateh Lal, 6 C 171 the suit was between A and B and the question was whether C or D was the heir of H. If C was the heir of H then A was entitled to succeed otherwise not. The same question had been raised in a former suit brought by X against Y and decided against A and their former judgment was admitted in evidence in the suit between X and B, and dealt with by the C."

below as conclusive evidence against A upon the point so decided. The majority of the Full Bench decided that the former judgment was not admissible as evidence in the suit between A and B, either as a transaction under section 13, or as a fact under section 11.

This question again arose in a suit for rent in which the amount of land held by the defendant was questioned, and it was contended that the land must be measured with a hath of  $21\frac{3}{4}$  inches and not one of 18 inches as claimed by the plaintiff Zamindar. Certain decrees obtained by the Zamindar against other tenants in the same pergunah in suits in which 18 inches had been taken as the hath were tendered in evidence in support of the plaintiff's contention that the customary hath in the pergunah was one of 18 inches. In that case such decrees were admissible in evidence under the provisions of s 13 of the Evidence Act, as they furnished evidence of particular instances in which a custom was claimed. Of course such decrees and judgments are clearly admissible under s 42 of the Evidence Act as being judgments and decrees which relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the enquiry, i.e. the measurement of the hath in the pergunah. But the Court admitted the judgments under s 13 of the Evidence Act. Jumutulla v Romoni Kant 15 C 233.

In Jauallah Sherah v Inu Khan, 23 C 693 it was held that a decree for possession made by a Court under s 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) in a suit beyond the pecuniary limits of that Court's jurisdiction although not res judicata, is some evidence of dispossession by the defendant in a subsequent suit against the same defendants to recover mesne profits. In delivering the judgment the Court observed: 'It was argued for the respondent, on the authority of the Court observed: Gujju Lal v Futeh Lal, 6 C 171 (I B), Brojo Behari v Kedar Nath, 12 C 580, and Surendra Nath v Brojo Nath 13 C 352 (F B) that the decree, if not conclusive evidence is not evidence at all, but the decrees which it was sought to put in evidence in those cases were not inter partes. In Madhusudan Shaha Mundal v Brai, 16 C 300, the Full Court held that an ex parte decree for arrears of rent did not operate so as to render the question of the rate of rent res judicata but the question whether it was evidence at all did not arise. The case of Ram Bahadur v Lucho Koer, 11 C 301 P C shews that a judgment, although not conclusive on a point, may be some evidence of the matter decided. There the survivor of two brothers, claiming in the whole estate by survivorship, brought a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge against the widow of the deceased brother, who claimed her husband's share as her separate estate and the question was whether the brothers were joint or separate in estate. The decision of a Munsif in a rent suit between the same parties was put in to show that the brothers were separate. The Judicial Committee held that the judgment was not conclusive on the matters, but it was still treated as evidence to which some weight was attached.' The law was in this state when the question again came before a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Iepu Khan v Hojoni Mohun, 25 C 322 = 2 C W N 501. In that case the question was whether a judgment in a previous suit by a co-sharer of the plaintiff for the recovery of the possession of two thirds is admissible in evidence in the plaintiff's suit against the same defendants for the recovery of possession of the remaining one third share in the property. Mr Justice Banerjee in referring to the case to the Full Bench observed: 'If the cases of Gujju Lal v Futeh Lal 6 C 171 (I B) and Surendra Nath v Brojo Nath 13 C 352 (I B) upon the authority of which the lower Appellate Court has held the judgments tendered in evidence for the defendants to be inadmissible are good law, the first ground urged before us must fail. But if those cases have in effect been overruled by the decisions of the Privy Council in Ram Rangan v Ram Narain 22 C 333 = 22 I A 60 and Bhutto Kunwar v Kesho Prosad, 21 I A 10 = 1 C W N 265 then the question arises whether the judgments referred to are admissible in evidence. In the two cases ruled upon by the lower Appellate Court, namely Gujju Lal v Futeh Lal, 6 C 171 and Surendra Nath v Brojo Nath, 13 C 352 it was held by this Court that a former judgment which is not a judgment in rem nor one relating to matters of a public nature, is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit either as res judicata or as proof of the particular point decided unless between the same parties or those claiming under them. But in the case of Ram Rangan Chakherbarti v Ram Narain

S 13

Singh, 22 C 533=22 I A 60, it was held by the Privy Council that a judgment passed in a suit to which the plaintiff was no party was admissible against the plaintiff as evidence showing the rent paid, and in Bhutto Kumoor v Kesho Pershad, 24 I A. 10=1 C W N 265, their Lordships of the Privy Council, speaking of judgment in former suit against one of the defendants Bacha Tewari, observe this decision is not conclusive against Bacha Tewari as the suit was not between the same parties as the present suit, but their Lordships agree with the subordinate Judge that it was admissible as evidence against him. These two decisions of the Privy Council must be taken to have in effect over ruled the cases relied upon by the lower Appellate Court. That being so the question arises whether apart from those cases, the judgment referred to in the argument was admissible in evidence against the plaintiff respondent. I am inclined to think that this question ought to be answered in the affirmative, and that the existence of the judgments under consideration or at any rate the existence of one of them is relevant under sections 11 and 13 of the Evidence Act. First as to the relevancy of the judgment in suit no 742 of 1887 under section 11. The existence of the judgment that is the circumstance that a particular judgment was passed, is clearly a fact within the meaning assigned to the term in section 13. Next as to relevancy of the judgment in suit no 742 of 1887, under section 13. If the existence of the judgment is not a transaction within the meaning of clause (a) of section 13, it proves that a litigation terminating in the judgment took place, and the litigation comes well within the meaning of the clause as being a transaction by which the right now claimed by defendants was asserted. So again the litigation which is evidenced by the existence of the judgment was a particular instance within the meaning of clause (b) of section 13, in which the right of possession now claimed by the defendants was claimed. It has been said that the right spoken of in this section is an incorporeal right. I do not think that there is any sufficient reason for putting this limitation on the meaning of the term as used in the section. The judgment therefore is, in my opinion relevant under section 13. If such judgments were not relevant under either of the two sections 11 and 13, they could not be admissible in evidence as the Privy Council have held them to be in the two cases referred to above. The strongest argument against the admissibility of such judgments in evidence is, to use the language of a well known writer of the Law of Evidence (see Taylor on Evidence 9th edition section 1682) that no man ought to be bound by proceedings to which he was a stranger and over the conduct of which he could therefore have exercised no control. But, in the first place the judgments in question are sought to be used, not as binding and conclusive evidence but only as evidence for what they are worth the weight to be attached to the evidence being left to the Court to determine. And in the second place the reason stated above though it is a good reason for excluding from consideration as against a stranger, the evidence afforded by a judgment so far as it is the opinion of a Court upon materials in the placing of which before the Court the stranger could have had no control, does not appear to hold equally good where what is sought to be taken into consideration is the evidence afforded by the existence of the judgment as to a litigation relating to the right in question and the way in which that litigation terminated. For such collateral purposes judgments are admissible in evidence against strangers under the English Law. See Davies v Laundres 6 M & G 474. Maclean C J (with whom Macpherson J, Trevelyan J, Banerjee J and Jenkins J concurred) in delivering the judgment of the Full Bench said. In my opinion the judgments in question are not admissible in evidence in this suit, because, now that the matter has been fully and before us it appears that the subject matter of the present suit is not identical with the subject matter in the previous suits in which those judgments were delivered. In the previous suit the subject matter was to recover a two thirds share of the property in question, but in the present case it is a suit by a different plaintiff to recover the remaining one third share. The subject matter therefore, of the two suits is not identical, the title to the one third share may be, and apparently is, different from that of the other shares. In this view the judgments which were sought to be admitted as evidence in this case were irrelevant and therefore not admissible as evidence. But in the two cases decided by the Full Bench in this Court viz. the case of Gujju Lall v Fattch Lall, 6 C 171 and a later case of Surendra Nath Pal v Broja Nath Pal have been referred to, I feel bound to express my opinion that having regard to the recent observations of the Privy Council in the case of Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain 22 C 533=22 I A 60 and in the more recent case of Blutto Kunwar v Kesho Prasad, 21 I A 10=1 C W N 285, the Full Bench decisions referred to must be regarded as mutually qualified, because it is clear from the decisions in the Privy Council that under certain cases, the judgment in a previous suit to which one of the parties in the subsequent suit was not a party, may be admissible in evidence for certain purposes and with certain objects in the subsequent suit. Of course the observations of the Full Bench as regards the effect of the two Privy Council cases referred to above on the two previous Full Bench cases are mere obiter dicta.

In Abinash Chandra Chatterjee v Paresb Nath Ghosh, 9 C W N 402 the Court agreed with the view taken by the Full Bench in Tepu Khan v Rojoni Mohun, 25 C 522=2 C W N 501, but in the same case Geidt J took a quite contrary view. In Kashi Nath v Jagat Kishore, 20 C W N 643 at p 644 the Court consisting of Mookerjee and Roe JJ observed "In our opinion the judgment of the Judicial Committee in a suit not inter partes could not be used for the purpose for which it was used by the defendant in the Court below. It is well settled that although a judgment not inter partes may be used in evidence in certain circumstances, as a fact or as a relevant fact, or possibly as a transaction, (Ram Ranjan v Ramnaram, 22 C 533, Blutto v Kesho Prasad 21 I A 24=1 C W N 285, Dinomoni v Brojo Mohun, 29 I A 24=6 C W N 386 Tepu Khan v Rojoni Mohun, 25 C 522=2 C W N 501, Malcomson v O Dea 10 H L C 593 and Bristow v Cornican, 3 App Cas 611) the recitals in the judgment cannot be used as evidence in a litigation between the parties. The principle is that all judgments are conclusive of their existence, as distinguished from their truth, judgments as public transactions, of a solemn nature, are presumed to be faithfully recorded. Every judgment is therefore conclusive evidence for or against all persons whether parties, privies, or strangers of its own existence, date and legal effect, as distinguished from the accuracy of the decision rendered, in other words, the law attributes unerring verity to the substantive as opposed to the judicial portions of the record. We hold accordingly that the judgment of the Judicial Committee could not be used in proof of the facts stated therein and the first ground must prevail' Abinash Chandra v Paresb Nath, 9 C W N 402. See also Harjit v Basanta, 12 C W N 739=9 C L J 597. Again in Baulya Nath v Alep Jan, 70 Ind Cas 194=1923 A I R Cal 240=36 C L J 9 at p 14, Mr Justice Mookerjee observed "In this connection we cannot overlook that although the judgment in the suit by Karmannessa against Abdul Kader, is admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act the findings contained therein cannot be treated as part of the evidence in this case. As was explained in Kashi Nath v Jagat Kishore, 23 C L J 583=20 C W N 643, and Tripura v Rolam, 42 M L J 324, it is not the correctness of the previous decision but the fact that there had been a decision, that is established by the production of the judgment. This is clear from the decisions of the Judicial Committee in Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain, 22 I A 60=22 C 533, Blutto Koer v Kesho Prasad, 21 I A 10=19 A 277, Dinomoni v Brojo Mohun, 29 I A 24=29 C 187, Ramprohash v Anand, 43 I A 73=43 C 707=24 C L J 116, and Natal Law Co v Good L R 2 P C 121 and of the House of Lords in Malcomson v O Dea 10 H L C 593 and Bristow v Cornican 3 App Case 611. This fundamental distinction was not fully appreciated in the Court below, and references were made to the findings in the judgment in the previous suit as if they were a kind of inconclusive res adjudicata while the essence of the matter is that it was not the correctness but the fact of the decision which is relevant. If we carefully read the judgment of the majority of the Full Bench in Gygy Lal v Fateh Lal, 6 C 171 (F B), we will see that there the majority laid down that a previous judgment not inter partes is not admissible in a subsequent suit either under section 11 or section 13 of the Evidence Act but such judgment under certain circumstances may be admissible under section 43 of the Evidence Act. The cases so contemplated by s 43 are those where a judgment is used not as res judicata or as evidence more or less binding upon any opponent by reason of the adjudication which it contains,

S. 13. (because judgments of that kind had already been dealt with under one or other of the immediately preceding sections.) But the cases referred to in s 43 are such, I conceive, as the section itself illustrates, viz, when the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case. As for instance, if A sues B for slander, in saying that he had been convicted of forgery, and B justified upon the ground that the alleged slander was true, the conviction of A for forgery would be a fact to be proved by B like any other fact in the case, and quite irrespective of whether A had been guilty of the forgery or not. This I conceive would be one of the many cases alluded to in s 43. Per Garth C J in Guye Lal v. Jatch Lal, 6 C 171 (192). So the interpretation of this case given by the referring Judges to the Full Bench in Surendra Nath v. Bhajanath, 13 C 312 (1913) to the effect that the case decided that except in case of judgment in rem, and judgments relating to matters of public nature, a judgment in order to be evidence must be such as would operate by way of estoppel or res judicata is not correct.

A decree that has not been set aside by competent Court and which was obtained in the suit in which the plaintiffs and defendants of subsequent suit were defendants but which decree cannot operate as res judicata can be used as a piece of evidence with regard to the matter dealt with by it and it will be evidence under section 13. Kuan Chandra Roy v. Jagannath Bani, A. I. R. 1928 Cal 41. In a suit for recovery of possession of certain lands as muskar brahmavir the plaintiffs relied upon a recital in a judgment in a claim case, which was inter partes to prove their title, held that the recital in the claim case was not evidence. Satindra Kumar v. Krishna Kumari, 36 Ind. Cas. 882. Judgments not inter partes, pronounced by a competent Court and containing a declaration that the rights in dispute had been asserted and recognised in a Court of law are admissible in evidence under s 13 of the Evidence Act. Muhammad Elia v. Ganga Dayal, 40 Ind. Cas. 838. Where the question was whether proceedings in lunacy held under Act XXXIV of 1850 are admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit to show that the defendant was a lunatic at a particular time it was held that the orders and reports made under the Act by the Judge before whom the lunacy proceedings were had, were admissible in evidence. Padmabati v. Bonomati, 24 C. W. N. 378=58 Ind. Cas. 566. A partition decree between the ancestors of the plaintiff and the defendants nos 1, 2 and 3 and also a judgment and decree in a suit between the predecessor of the defendants nos 1, 2 and 3 as defendant, are admissible in evidence on general principles as well as under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Parbati v. Dignati, 61 Ind. Cas. 465. In a suit in ejectment judgments obtained by the plaintiff as a third person who set up the title of the defendant, are admissible in evidence as showing an assertion of title. Mohon Ali Sarai v. Mafizuddin Sarai, 63 Ind. Cas. 699. But findings arrived at in a judgment in a prior suit not inter partes should not be used against a person in a subsequent suit. Satish Chandra v. Joyram Roy, 65 Ind. Cas. 525. A judgment in a prior suit relating to a different point but between the same parties is admissible in evidence whether or not it constitutes res judicata. Sasi Mulhi v. Saraswati Sen Gupta, 65 Ind. Cas. 527. Where a judgment is admitted in evidence to prove that there was litigation which terminated in a certain way all the recitals in the judgment do not form part of the evidence. Abdul Latif v. Abdul Haq, 28 C. W. N. 62. The statements of the plaintiff's age in a decree to which the defendants or their predecessors were no parties are not conclusive and binding against them. Nibratan Mitter v. Abdul Gafur, 32 C. L. J. 75. The judgment in a previous suit to which one of the parties in the subsequent suit was not a party may be admissible in evidence for certain purposes in the subsequent suit. The legal effect of the judgment as between the parties to the previous suit has to be determined from the judgment itself and when determined, it becomes not conclusive as between the parties to the subsequent suit but a fact to be weighed in the balance like any other fact. Gopi Sundari v. Kherod Gowinda, 28 C. W. N. 942=82 Ind. Cas. 99=A. I. R. 1911 Cal. 191, see also Rai Jung Bahadur v. Rai Gudur, 1 C. W. N. 537. Where in a suit for possession of property, the judgment in prior proceedings under s 114, Cr. Pro. Code, between the same parties is adduced in evidence the judgment is admissible for the purpose of showing that the present parties were parties to those proceedings and that a particular party was maintained in possession as a result of the proceedings Hasim Ali v. Akbar Khan 40 C L J 30=82 Ind Cts 392=A I R 1924 Cil 1016. In a suit for settling a fair and equitable rent by X against his tenant, the latter pleaded that his landlord was Y. Thereupon X produced a judgment he had obtained against Y which decided that title was in X. Held, it was a very strong piece of evidence against the tenant as to who was the landlord. Purna Chandra v. Ramesh Chandra, 87 Ind Cts 753=A I R 1925 Cil 1218. Where judgments not inter partes were filed to show that similar grants were resumed by the grantor or his heirs on the death of the grantee. Held, they are admissible in evidence under the provisions of section 13 of the Evidence Act. Syed Mahammad v. Maharaja Nam Narain 7 C L J 90. Proceedings in and documents filed in a previous suit are relevant evidence against a person not a party to that suit. Madan Chandra v. Kirtanam Biswas, 23 C L J 678. Orders for the appointment and discharge of guardian of A, a minor, cannot be received in evidence to prove the date of birth of A from the recitals contained therein. Hora Kumar Dey v. Jogendra Krishna Roy, 38 C L J 186. Where the question is whether a maintenance grant is alienable or not, previous judgments as regards the alienability of such grants are admissible in evidence as instances in which the right to alienate a portion of the subject of the grant was claimed, and its exercise disputed and disallowed. Bhaya Dugaj v. Pande Futeh, 3 C L J 521.

A judgment in a case under s 9 of the Specific Relief Act does not come either under s 41 or under s 42 of the Evidence Act and it is relevant only under ss 13, 40 and 43 of the Act, that is to say, as evidence of a transaction or instance where the right to possession was claimed or disputed and also as evidence to show that there was such a judgment or decree in order either to found a further claim or to determine whether cognizance should or should not be taken of a suit or whether a trial should or should not be held. The use to which a decree passed in such a suit may be put in a subsequent suit between the parties is only to show that a right to possession was asserted and it was denied and a suit was instituted and was either decreed or dismissed. Chhudeel v. Sayad, 85 Ind Cts 979, see also Radha Churn v. Zumroonissa 11 W R 83. Jauulla v. Inu, 23 C 693.

For cases on this point which were decided before the Indian Evidence Act, vide Kanhya Lall v. Radha Charan, 7 W R 338 (per Sir Barnes Peacock C J). Jogendra Deb Roy v. Fanindra Deb Roy, 14 M I A 376, Mohamed Ali v. Shams Ali, 8 W R 422.

Decree of a co sharer landlord in a rent suit. There is some conflict of opinion in the Calcutta High Court as to whether a decree obtained by a co-sharer landlord is admissible in evidence as to the rate of rent in a subsequent suit for rent brought by another co sharer landlord. In the recent case of Kanta Mohan v. Gopi Nath, A I R 1928 Cal 355 Mr Justice Vulliamy held that such a previous judgment is admissible in evidence under section 13 in subsequent suit. In delivering the judgment he observed 'The whole controversy before me centred round the question whether the ex parte decree obtained by a co sharer landlord was admissible in evidence or not. The learned Subordinate Judge has held as I have said before, that it was inadmissible, and for this he relied on the Full Bench case of Surendra Nath Pal v. Brojo Nath Pal 13 C 352 which had followed the Full Bench decision in Gujju Lal v. Futeh Lal, 6 C 171=6 C L R 439. But in another Full Bench in Teppu Khan v. Razan Mohan Das 25C 522=2C W N 501, their lordships observed that the dictum in the case of Gujju Lal v. Futeh Lal and Surendra Nath v. Brojo Nath, referred to above have been materially qualified by the observations of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Ram Ranjan Chakravarty v. Ram Narain Singh, 22 C 533=22 I A 60. In 1925 Cil case it was held that a previous decree obtained by a co sharer landlord would be admissible in evidence in a subsequent litigation if the subject matter of the two suits be identical, otherwise not. The learned Vakil for the respondents contended that the subject matter in the suit from which this appeal arises was not identical with but different from that in the previous suit in which the ex parte decree was obtained by a co-sharer landlord, and in support of this contention he cited the case of Abdul Ali v. Raj Chandra Das, 10 C W N 1034. The facts of the case in Abdul Ali v. Raj Chandra Das, were very much similar to the facts in the present case. But their Lordships when they held that the previous decree obtained by a co-sharer landlord was not admissible in evidence as to the rate of rent in a suit brought by another co-sharer landlord on the ground that the subject matters of the two suits were different, gave no reasons why they considered that the subject matters in the two suits were not identical. It is difficult to understand how it can be said that the subject matters in the two suits were different. The amounts claimed were no doubt different and the claimants were not the same. But the real dispute in the two suits was as to what the amount of rent was. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Ram Ranjan Chatterjey v Ram Naram Singh 22 C 533 at p 542, held that the judgment in a previous suit would be evidence for the purpose of showing what the amount of the rent was. It is to be observed also that in a case that was decided in this Court subsequent to the decision in Abdul Ali v Rajchandra Das, 10 C W N 1084 namely in the case of Byom Kesh Chatterjey v Jagadishwar Ray, 22 C W N 304 = 40 Ind Cas 442, it was held that a decree obtained by a co-sharer landlord is admissible in evidence as to the rate of rent in a subsequent suit for rent brought by another co-sharer landlord. On a consideration, therefore of the authorities on the point and specially of the observations of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Ram Ranjan Chatterjey v Ram Naram Singh, I am of opinion that the learned subordinate Judge was wrong in law when he held that the decree in previous suit was inadmissible in evidence. In my opinion the decree was admissible and that being so the case must go back to the lower appellate Court to have the appeal reheard. It should be noted in this connection that in this case as well as in the case reported in 22 C W N 304 the co-sharer landlord plaintiff relied on the previous decree of his co-sharer landlord against the tenant defendant who was also a party to the previous suit. But in Kanto Mohun Mukherjee v Jadab Chandra Khara A I R 1928 Cal 353, which was decided by another Bench of the Calcutta High Court on the previous day and in which it appears the plaintiffs appellants were the same as in the case reported in 1928 A I R Cal 355, it was held that a decree obtained by a co-sharer landlord in a previous suit was not admissible in evidence as to rate of rent in a subsequent suit for rent by another co-sharer landlord. But in that case the distinguishing feature was that the tenants respondents wanted to use the previous decrees obtained by the plaintiffs co-sharer landlords against the plaintiff. In delivering the judgment Mitter J said 'On the merits it has been argued by the learned advocate for the appellant that the lower appellate Court has committed an error in law in deciding the appeal on inadmissible evidence. It is said that Exs A, C and D are decrees which were obtained by plaintiff's co-sharers against the defendants, and as the plaintiff, who represents the estate of the late Babu Munik Lal Seal was not a party to the said suit the decrees were not inter partes and consequently are not admissible in evidence. Reliance has been placed in support of this contention on two decisions of this Court in the case of Abdul Trake v Raj Chandra Dass 10 C W N 1084 and Prem Chand Mandal v Official Trustees of Bengal 27 C W N 56 of the notes portion. The first two decisions appear to be the appellants' case. The last decision which takes the contrary view, was an ex parte decision in an appeal in which the respondents were not represented. The learned advocate for the respondents argued that having regard to the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Ram Ranjan Chatterjey v Ram Naram Singh, 22 C 233 = 22 I A 60 such decrees by co-sharer landlords were admitted, and acted upon by the learned Additional District Judge in this case could be treated as evidence. However weak the value of such evidence may be. But the distinction between Ram Ranjan Chatterjey v Ram Naram Singh and the present case lies in the fact that the observations of the Judicial Committee were limited to cases where the subject matter of the previous judgment was identical with the subject matter of the suit in which the judgments were sought to be offered as evidence and their Lordships held that under s 13 Evidence Act such judgments could be treated as evidence of a transaction within the meaning of that section. Here the suit by the co-sharer was in respect of his own share of the rent in the previous suit to which the present plaintiffs were not parties. Consequently the decrees A, C and D did not refer to the same subject matter to which the present suit relates. That was a distinction which was not in the Full Bench case in Tepu Khan v Rajani Mohan Das, 25 C 522=2 C W N 501 (F B) and the majority of the Full Bench held that, where the subject matter of the previous judgments was not identical with the subject matter of the suit in which such judgments were sought to be introduced is evidence, the earlier judgments could not be held admissible."

S 13

In Abdul Ali v Rajchandra, 10 C W N 1084 although the plaintiff landlord wanted to use the decree of his co-sharer landlord against the same tenant defendant, it was disallowed by the High Court on the ground "that if such decrees for rent were obtained by a co-sharer or co-sharers for his or their share of the rent, they are neither conclusive between the Plaintiff and the rayat Defendant, nor are they admissible in evidence between them, the subject matter of the two suits being different and the Plaintiff not being a party to the previous suit." In Prem Chand v Official Assignee, 27 C W N 56 N, where also such evidence was held inadmissible, the tenant defendant relied on the decree obtained against him by the co-sharer landlord of the Plaintiff in which the plaintiff was a pro forma Defendant but which decree was obtained more than a year after the decision of the suit in question.

Ex parte decrees for rent obtained by a landlord against the heirs of a tenant and satisfied by the latter are evidence of the existence of the tenancy at the date of those decrees. Amulul Chandra v Kamala Kanta Roy, 67 Ind C 757. A decree obtained by two tenants co-sharers for enhancement of rent of his share is admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit for enhancement of rent by other co-sharers. Sarat Sundari Dabla v Anand Mohan, 5 C 273=4 C L R 448.

Bombay cases. The first Bombay case in which this point arose was the case of Naranyi v Dipa Umed 3 B 3. In that case Westoff C J said at p 7: "Under the law as it stood before the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) came into force those decrees were conclusive, inasmuch as the right to the Churda Hal was established by them as the foundation on which the arrears claimed in the suits in which those decrees were made, were recovered by the plaintiffs in the suits—Soorjomonee Dayee v Sudanand Mohapatra, 12 B L R 304 P C. Krishna Behari Roy v Brojeswari Choudhuranee, 2 I A 283. If not conclusive since the Evidence Act (I of 1872) came into force, those decisions are, at least, admissible in evidence under section 13 of that enactment for the purpose of showing that the right has been not only asserted by the claimants, but recognised by the tribunals of the country on several occasions. Neamul Ha v Gooro Das, 22 W R 365. Gutlu Korbarto v Bhindut Korbarto, 22 W R 367. As pointed out by Sir R Couch C J in the former of the two Calcutta cases, to which we have now referred, the words contained in s 43—'Unless the existence of the judgment is relevant under some other provision of the Act'—introduce another section of the Act, namely, s 13, besides those sections (10, 41, 42 and 13) which specially deal with judgments, orders and decrees. Referring to s 13 he said: 'The word transaction is certainly large enough to allow the proceedings in such suits as these to be admitted as evidence, not as conclusive, but as of such weight as the Court may think they ought to have. And in this section there is not the limit that the suit must be between the same parties as the one in which the judgment or decree in it is sought to be used. Of course the value of it will be very different where it was given in a suit to which the person against whom it is used was not a party and had no opportunity of contesting the matter, and where he was party to the suit and had opportunity of producing any evidence he might think fit. Unless the Indian Evidence Act has excluded judgments and decrees which had previously been considered as very good evidence and which are indeed in many cases almost, if not quite, conclusive it is clear that the decisions referred to were admissible in this case etc.' But in a subsequent case, i.e. in Rinchhodas v Bajji, 10 B 159. Sargent C J dissented from the view taken by Westoff C J in 3 B 3. There the learned Judge adopted the view taken by majority of the Full Bench in Gujju Lal v Fath Lal 6 C 171 (I B).

In Lakshman Gobind v Harit Gopal 21 B 91 at p 93, Jamade J in trying to reconcile these conflicting decisions said: "The real question at issue was the one viz the bona fide character of the partition deed of 1885. Though the decision in the former suit will not stop the respondents from contesting the

S 13 claim is being res judicata till the record and the judgment in that case, showing the conduct of the parties and the admissions, would be admissible in evidence under section 13. The interpretation placed upon the words 'right' and transaction in Gopu Lal v. Latch Mal 6 C. 171 seems not to have been accepted by the Privy Council and its correctness is questioned in the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palalidhari, 12 A. 1 (I. B.) in so far as the exclusion of such judgments from being received is evidence under my section is concerned. Except where they are judgments not in rem or where they relate to public matters, judgments inter partes have been always held not to be res judicata, but they cannot be wholly excluded for other purposes in so far as they explain the nature of possession or throw light on the motives or conduct of parties or identify property. The cases show that such judgments may have very high value as evidence and may even shift the burden of proof—Scamuti Shy. Goro Das, 22 W. R. 365. In a subsequent case it was said 'The judgments thus rejected were not inter partes but were in suits brought by other creditors against the same defendants in which the existence of the partnership claimed in this suit was asserted with success. The admissibility of such judgments would, apart from authority be a question of some difficulty, but it appears to me that the present case can not be fairly distinguished from that of Ishman Gount Shet v. Anurit Gopal 2 Bom. L. R. 386=21 B. 391 recently heard and decided by Parry and Ranaid II who dealt most exhaustively with this question.' Per Jenkins C. J. in Gowindu Thayer v. Chhotu Lal Puri 2 Bom. L. R. 671. 'Assuming that to be so I think it right to point out that for a judgment to be admissible, it is not in all cases necessary that it should be either a judgment inter partes or a judgment in rem as will appear from the observations of the Privy Council in the cases of Ram Ranjan Chattrapati v. Iam Narain Singha, 23 C. 333 and Bhutto Kunwar v. Kesho Prasad 21 I. A. 10=19 A. 277 (P. C.) and the remarks thereon in Tepu Khan v. Rajani Mohan Das 25 C. 572. Speaking generally it may be said in this connection that though a judgment not inter partes may not be proof of facts there are stated it is admissible for the purpose of explaining the character in which possession of the estate has been enjoyed and matters of that class.' Per Jenkins C. J. in Ganesh Dharnidhar v. Dhundray 5 Bom. L. R. 230. The Plaintiff a Mahomedan brought a suit against his brother, brother's wife and the widow of a deceased brother to recover possession of a house on the strength of a registered sale deed, passed to the plaintiff by his deceased father. Subsequent to the sale to the plaintiff certain mortgagees of the father brought a suit on the mortgage against the plaintiff his father and mother. In the said suit the sale to plaintiff was held to be a sham transaction and the plaintiff had to pay off the mortgage. In the suit brought by the plaintiff for the recovery of the house on the strength of the sale deed the defendants relied on the judgment in the suit on the mortgage to show that the sale was a colourable transaction. The first Court allowed the claim, but the Judge in appeal dismissed it on the ground that the purchase by the plaintiff from his father was not proved to be bona fide. On second appeal by the plaintiff a question having arisen as to the admissibility in evidence of the judgment in the suit on the mortgage Russell C. J. said 'We have had addressed to us very lengthy arguments upon the question of whether that judgment is admissible at all or not and in my opinion it is impossible to hold that the judgment in that case comes within either the word transaction' in section 13 or 'particular instances' in that section. But although this is so the proceedings in that suit would come within the words particular instances in which the right was claimed for I think that we are bound by the decision of Sir Charles Sargant in Ranchhodas Krishnadas v. Bapu Narhan, 10 B. 439 (442) where he says that rights and customs in section 13 must be understood as comprehending all rights and customs recognized by law, and therefore, including a right of ownership. Further for my part I cannot distinguish the present case from the case of Lalshman v. Anurit supra which was followed in Gowindu v. Chottalal, supra, and see also the case of Dharnidhar v. Dhundray 5 Bom. L. R. 230, a decision of the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Batty. It appears to me therefore that proceedings in the suit of 1886 should be admitted as relevant evidence in the present suit for it must be remembered that the present plaintiff and the defendants, either by themselves or their predecessors, were parties to that suit of 1886. In the same case Beman J observed 'The question is whether, that judgment not being inter partes is admissible and if so, what is its precise probative value? I should add that the plaintiff alleges that the sale was made to him by his father who was the judgment debtor in the suit of 1886. The relevancy of judgments of Courts of Justice is regulated by sections 40-43, Indian Evidence Act. Section 40 merely enacts that the existence of any judgment, order or decree which by the provisions of section 13 Civil Procedure Code, constitutes res judicata is a relevant fact. Section 41, without attempting any precise or exhaustive definition aims at and probably does let in all judgments in rem proper. Section 42 provides that judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the enquiry. Section 43 declares all judgments, orders or decrees, other than the specified in sections 40-41, 42 to be irrelevant unless the existence of the judgment is itself a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other section of the Act. It is not contended that the fact of the judgment is itself a fact in issue, but it is contended that the existence of the judgment is relevant under some other provision of the Act. In order to bring it in defendant has recourse to section 13 which says that, 'where the question is as to the existence of any right or custom the following facts are relevant (a) any transaction, etc., (b) particular instances, etc.' It is hardly necessary to say that there is a formidable array of authority for the general proposition that judgments not inter partes are admissible under this section and it would be as tedious as unprofitable to examine the numerous leading cases in order to extract if possible, a definite and consistent principle from them. In order to set a clear view of all that is involved in the matters available for argument on this recurring point, I should like here to approach the facts of the case we have to deal with, as though the case were for a moment res integra and then apply the law disencumbered of authority to it. Here is a plaintiff suing on a deed of sale which a defendant alleges to be void for fraud and want of consideration. The issue to be tried between the parties is 'whether as appearing on the face of the registered instrument the plaintiff paid consideration?' The burden of proving that he did not, is of course on the defendant. The defendant adduces no evidence but refers the Court to a judgment twenty years old between the plaintiff of the one part and another person of the other in which an issue was raised touching the validity of this sale, and the Court came to the conclusion that it was void for want of consideration or fraud on the creditor and so forth. Upon this the first question is whether the judgment falls within the definitions of judgments which are expressly admissible and the answer is that it does not, the next question is whether it falls within the concluding part of section 43, whether in other words its existence is a fact in issue or relevant under some other provision of the Act. It certainly is not a fact in issue, but it is contended that it is relevant under Section 13. To satisfy the requirements of that section the question must be as to the existence of a right or custom. The existence of the judgment must be relevant as a transaction by which the right was claimed, modified, etc. or as a particular instance in which the right was claimed, etc., etc. I think that, were there no case law on the subject no one would hesitate for a moment upon being asked to bring a judgment of that kind in evidence to prove that a sale deed was void, to reply that neither the language nor the object of section 13 served the purpose. What class of cases the section was intended to meet is possible not only from its language but from the illustrations. And those are cases in which the right or custom in question is regarded as capable of surviving repeated instances of its assertion and denial, where transactions may be supposed to have gone on modifying, asserting, denying, creating, recognizing it or being inconsistent with its existence leaving it, after all that has been given in evidence, for matter for judicial consideration, as to whether the Court should or should not decree it. I confess I do not find it easy to understand how that language can without absurdity be applied to such a case as this. Let us substitute it for the illustration 'The question is whether a sale-deed is fraudulent particular instances in which the Court had previously held

S 13 that the same sale deed was fraudulent although not between the same parties, and particular instances in which the vendee had declared that his deed was genuine, but other persons had denied that it was, are relevant facts' A right which is created by and inseparably bound up in a document does not admit of proof or disproof by particular instances of assertion and denial, and is therefore plainly and essentially distinguishable from all the rights which are denoted in section 13. The deed is the only proof as it is the sole foundation of the right, that has to be proved, nothing else, any attack upon its genuineness if made good, is fatal once and for all to the right founded on it, and if such an attack had really been made in another suit inter alia and had proved successful it is plain that allowing the judgment in that suit to go in, would, if the judgment were really evidence of what it purports to be, most intently decide the matter. The Court would have to accept or reject the judgment. If it accepted it, as in ninety nine cases out of every hundred it probably would, there would be nothing left to adjudicate upon. The single successful denial of the right, must have killed it for ever. The rights contemplated by section 13 are plainly conceived as admitting of proof by cumulative instances and transactions and not by a single and decisive and final way namely the terms of a document. The only question being whether a registered sale deed was genuine or fraudulent it is inconceivable that the language of section 13 can reasonably and logically be fitted to the case that was the view taken of the meaning and intention of the words 'right' and 'custom' in section 13 by majority of the Calcutta Full Bench. But it has since been dissented from and at present it must be conceded that the balance of authority favours the extension of the term 'right' to include any and every right known to the law. Against that opinion, might well be advanced the section itself. Although in every case the Courts have been most particular to disclaim the doctrine of res judicata in respect of judgments so admitted, the effect of admitting them has been to conclude the point to prove which they are admitted. That is to say that while the Courts have in theory declared consistently that these judgments are not res judicata, and are not even conclusive of the points to which they are directed, they practically, as judgments proprio vigore and incapable of any rebuttal, do conclude those points. It is indeed extremely difficult to understand what other effect they could have. It is true that in the case of public rights a judgment not inter partes while relevant may not be conclusive but it is still conclusive of its own subject matter.

If we are to take the judgment qua judgment as relevant to the extent of its subject matter and contents then eadem questione, for in that judgment it was held that the sale deed was colourable, fraudulent and void. Saying that while a judgment is relevant it is not conclusive the commonest phrase in all the leading cases, must, I think, mean one of two things either that the judgment is not conclusive of the whole case in part proof of which it is adduced, or that while relevant it is not conclusive of itself. The first proposition is comparatively simple and intelligible, although on a clever scrutiny it will be seen to impair the integrity of the salutary and well established principle of res judicata, namely that no man is to be concluded by a judgment in a cause to which he was not a party. But turning to the second proposition it is obvious that the judgment, if its subject-matter is co-extensive with the subject-matter of the suit in which it is offered as evidence, must be altogether or not at all res judicata. And that I suppose is what is meant by the rather vague phrase 'that while relevant it is not conclusive'. But if it is strictly and accurately speaking admissible, as a judgment it can only be treated as conclusive of its own content. Less than that, and what is it? Nothing more of course than the mere opinion of a person, whether a Judge or not does not matter as soon as you strip it of its special attributes as a judgment, who is not before the Court to be cross examined upon the grounds of that opinion. And that never has been deemed good evidence. There is I believe, no logical escape from this dilemma. Leaving the cases which have occasioned the immediately preceding remarks, and returning to the statute, it becomes, I think fairly plain, that adopting the most comprehensive view and allowing to 'right' the implied meaning judgments brought in under section 43 and section 13 must be either 'transactions' or 'instances'. All the best authorities, I think agree that a judgment qua judgment and in respect to its contents, certainly is not such a 'transaction' or 'instance', but it may be the simplest and most convenient proof of the transaction namely the litigation or the instance, namely the assertion by the plaintiff and the denial by the defendant of the right. So limited, there would be no great objection or difficulty in the way of admitting the judgment. Its probative effect would then be no more than this to establish that at the time it was given, there had been a transaction between the parties to it in which the right in question had been asserted or denied or so forth. It being conceded as I think on a correct reading of the best authorities it must be conceded that if judgments of this kind are admissible at all under sections 43 and 13 they are admissible only as the simplest proof of a transaction or an instance within the meaning of the latter section it follows of course that the proof cannot be taken beyond the thing to be proved and the thing to be proved is no more than that there was an assertion or a denial, not the grounds upon which a Judge held that the assertion or the denial was good or bad in law. But the inveterate habit of the Courts and advocates seems to be to confound the proper with the improper use of a judgment so admitted in evidence. And for a very good reason Restricted to its proper use, by reason of the defect of the principle under which it is brought in under section 13 the judgment cannot of course be of the slightest value to the party relying on it.

I am most strongly of opinion that a party who has been allowed to put in a previous judgment not inter partes for the purposes of section 13 cannot be allowed to use its contents qua judgment virtually thereby converting it into a res judicata. That is the distinction which I have set myself to bring out clearly and I hope simply and intelligibly. Muhamad v Hasan, 31 B 143. In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution the judgment of the criminal Court acquitting the plaintiff is relevant only as showing that he was declared innocent by that Court. The Civil Court is not to use it as a record of the facts found or as establishing the plaintiffs' claim for damages. Gulab Chand v Chuni Lal, 9 Bom L R 1134, see also Rai Gaur Bahadur v Rai Gudur 1 C W N 537. If the matter which is in dispute Under s 117 of the Criminal Procedure Code has actually been adjudicated upon by a civil Court then a magistrate has no jurisdiction to enquire into a claim which is entirely contrary to that Court's decree. That judgment although not inter partes is a relevant fact under section 42 of the Evidence Act and under section 13 is also a very important piece of evidence. In re Anya Sudhya, A I R 1927 Bom 651=29 Bom L R 715=102 Ind C 95 346.

Allahabad cases. In the Allahabad High Court the question was fully discussed in the case of the Collector of Gorakhpur v Palak Dhan Singh, 12 A 1 (F B). The facts of the case are as follows. P brought a suit against K a Hindu widow, to establish his right of inheritance in certain villages which had belonged to K's husband, and to have it declared that her husband died childless and that K had falsely put forward a child of unknown parentage as her husband's son. K was the only defendant, and she maintained that the child in question was her son by her deceased husband. The suit was dismissed on the merits by the Court of first instance and by the High Court on appeal. After K's death P brought a suit against D whom the Collector is manager of the court of wards had accepted as the minor son of K, and against the Collector as such manager for possession of the same villages as in the former suit. Held by the Full Bench that the judgments of the Court of first instance and the High Court in the former suit did not operate as res judicata in the present suit but (Brodhurst J, dissenting on this point) that they were admissible in evidence in the present suit. In delivering his judgment Edge C J said 'As to s 13 I entirely agree with the majority of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Gujra Lal v Futeh Lal, 6 C 171, and with Sir Arthur Collins C J and Mulhu Sami Iyyar J in Rama Sami v Appaia, 12 M 9, that a judgment as to whether a certain person was or was not the heir to another is neither a transaction nor a fact within the meaning of s 13. I think, however as did Sir Charles Sargent C J and Mr Justice Nanabhai Hirudas in Ian Chhodlos v Bapu, 10 B 139, that the majority of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Gujra Lal v Futeh Lal, 6 C 171, put too narrow a construction on the word 'right' in s. 13 and that 'right' there includes not only incorporeal rights but a right of ownership There are no words in s 13 which could not be applied to a right of ownership, but it is difficult to see what could, within the meaning of s 13, clause (a), be a 'transaction by which the right' of a man to have it declared that he is the son of another man out of a particular woman or that he is not some other man, could be said to be 'created, or modified' whatever the meaning of the word 'right' in clause (a) of section 13, the meaning of the word 'right' in clause (b) must according to the principles of construction be the same. In my opinion a previous litigation, although not between the same parties, may be a particular instance within the meaning of s 13 (b) in which the right or custom in question in the subsequent litigation 'was claimed, recognised or exercised, or in which its existence was disputed, asserted or departed from'. The right which was not only asserted but disputed in the suit between the present plaintiff and Panluar, in which the judgment of the 7th December, 1874, was given, was the alleged right of ownership of the then and present plaintiff in the property now in suit. Whether or not that right then existed depended on the question whether Panluar had not a son then living by Hannuman Singh. She said, she had, and that his name was Dalip Narain Singh. It appears to me that the proper evidence of that particular instance is the record in that suit, and not the judgment alone of the 7th December 1874, and that the record in that case may be admitted in evidence under s 13 (b) quite independently of s 43 as evidence of a particular instance in which the alleged right of the plaintiff to the property now in suit was at that time claimed and disputed.

S 13

It could not have been the intention of the Legislature in framing s 13 that a party to a suit could not give evidence of particular instances in which a custom for example, was exercised or recognised, unless he showed that the other party to the suit had recognised or had exercised or had had exercised against him that custom or that such party could not give in evidence the record of a suit in which such custom had been claimed and recognised without showing that the former suit was inter partes.

For the reasons already stated I am of opinion that the record of the previous suit in which the judgment of this Court of the 7th December, 1874, was delivered but not the judgment alone, is admissible under s 13 (b) for the purposes and to the extent already indicated. Tyrell J concurred with the Chief Justice. In the same case Straight J said 'It seems to me the true point is, not that the judgments and decrees themselves are the transaction but that the suit in which they were made was a transaction, and that to establish that such a transaction took place they are the best evidence. Garth C J remarks (in 6 C 171) by a somewhat strained use of the word the proceedings in a suit might also be called transactions'. Yet it is worthy of notice that Sir William De Grey C J in the commencement of the written opinion of himself and the Judges in the well known Duchess of Kingston's Case, 1 Smith—L C 760, uses the word as if it were a natural and proper expression in connection with such a matter thus—'what has been said at the bar is certainly true is a general principle that a transaction between two parties in judicial proceedings ought not to be binding on a third. In my opinion the suit of 1873 between the plaintiff, and Masammatt Pan Aur was a 'transaction' in which the right of the defendant is the living son of Hannuman Singh was asserted and recognised, and the judgments and decrees of 1874 are the best evidence of that transaction. I should also have no difficulty if it were necessary to do so, in holding, that the defendant is entitled to put forward the suit of 1873 as an 'instance' in which the right of which I have spoken was claimed and recognised.

As I have remarked before, the question is not as to the existence of the judgments and decrees of 1874 is a fact in law or a relevant fact under some other provision of the Evidence Act, but whether there was a 'transaction' or 'instance', in which the right of the defendant was asserted and recognised of which transaction or instance they are the best evidence. In the same case Mahmood J also observed 'For the reasons stated by Mr Justice Mitter in his dissentient judgment in the Full Bench case of Gynn v L v Litchell 6 C 171 I hold that the law of the land before the passing of the Statute (1 of 1872) was that a judgment such as that of Mr Justice Turner in my brother Brothurst of 1871 would be admitted in evidence.' Before this case, in Shadal Khan v Aminullah Khan, 1 A 93 at p 96, Duthoit J and "The law as regards the admissibility in evidence of former judgments has been recently discussed by the Calcutta High Court in Gujju Lal v Fattch Lall, 6 C 171 and in the conclusion of that judgment we fully concur. Where a party set up a particular right, judgments not inter partes in previous cases in which a similar right was asserted are admissible in evidence under s 13 of the Evidence Act. Kallu Misir v Bhagwati Singh, 2 U P L R 81=60 Ind Cas 142. In a suit for foreclosure, one of the defendants contended that he was a minor at the date of executing the mortgage and so not competent to enter into a contract. In support of his statements he produced certain judgments in proof of the defendant's minority under section 13, clause (b). Held that the judgments were not admissible, the cases in which they had been passed not being instances in which any right asserted by the defendant was recognised or exercised or in which its exercise was asserted, disputed or departed from. Gayadin v Musammatt Dulari, 6 A L J 693=2 Ind Cas 839. Judgments not inter partes though not conclusive as res judicata, are admissible in evidence under s 13 to show the conduct of parties or particular instances made by the parties or their predecessors in title or to identify property or to show how it had been previously dealt with. Gobinda Krishna v Abdul Quyyam 25 A 546=A W N 1903, 137. The author of a book was proceeded against by the Government for creating class hatred and the books themselves were forfeited. The author applied to the High Court under section 99 of the Criminal Procedure Code to set aside that order. It was dismissed. The judgment was sought to be relied on in a prosecution launched against the same person under s 153 A Penal Code. Held that the judgment was admissible in evidence. Kali Charan v Emperor 25 A L J 846=104 Ind Cas 225=28 Cr L J 785=A I R 1927 All 654.

Madras Cases. In Subramanyam v Parmaswaran, 11 M 116 123 the Madras High Court concurred with the majority of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court. So also in Ramaswami v Apparu, 12 M 9 where a suit was brought by the trustee of a temple to recover from the owners of certain lands in certain villages money claimed under an alleged right as due to the temple, and where judgments in other suits against other persons in which claims under the same right had been decreed in favour of the trustees of the temple, were held relevant under s 13 of the Evidence Act as being evidence of instances in which the right claimed had been asserted, the Court observed. It is contended that such judgments not being transactions or facts, they are not admissible under s 13 of the Evidence Act, and that they do not relate to a matter of a public nature within the meaning of s 42 of the same Act. We concur with the majority of the learned Judges who decided, in Gujju Lal v Fattch Lall, that a judgment of the character there under consideration, viz, as to whether a certain person was or was not the heir to another, is neither a transaction nor a fact in the sense in which the words are used in s 13 of the Evidence Act and that the judgment referred to in that case could not be given in evidence, but the judgments filed in this case are not of the character under consideration in that case, the question for determination in the previous suits was whether payments then claimed, and which were in contest in the present suits, were claimable as of right and in one case whether they are so claimable from a particular class of persons, viz Christians, and it appears to us that, when a right of the character now in question is at issue, such judgments are admissible in evidence as evidence of particular instances in which the right or custom was claimed and in which its exercise was disputed, asserted, or departed from, and was further adjudicated upon and that the right was a right of the character dealt with under s 13 of the Evidence Act. The case for the appellant is—that there is evidence in support of it in the case before us as to at least six of such villages—that from those who hold lands in a large number of villages in the vicinity of the temple (see Exhibit F) the payment claimed is demanded as of right and—that such payments have been made after suits from time to time brought and determined in reference to the liability of persons occupying lands in their villages, and this being so we are further of opinion that the decisions in the former suits are decisions which relate to matters of a public nature within the meaning of s 42 of the

- S 13. same Act The question for determination before us is not dissimilar in principle from that reported in Narayan Balabai v Dupa Unel, 3B 3. The right now claimed appears to us to be as much a right of the character indicated in s 13 of the Evidence Act as the right to a fishery, and the judgment so far to support the finding of the District Judge as to the payments claimed having been customarily made. The assumption that the appellants based their claim upon an alleged custom only appears to us to be unwarranted. The allegations in the plaint appear perfectly compatible with the case that the appellants base their claim upon a right, the origin of the right is not clearly defined, but from evidence of custom, in the sense of payments extending over a long series of years the existence of a right may, in connection with appellant's suits for the reasons stated afford good grounds for second appeal. In a subsequent Madras case to establish the plaintiff's title to certain land, he put in evidence (1) a conveyance in favour of his father (2) a sale certificate issued to his father's vendor (3) an order made in certain execution proceedings in which was recited a petition by his father asserting his title (4) a judgment obtained by his father in which the title was recognised. Neither the defendants nor their predecessors were parties to any of these instruments or proceedings. Held that all the documents were relevant but not conclusive. Penkatasami v Venkatesh, 15 M 12. In Krishnasami Ayyangar v Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M 73 at p 77 the Court observed: 'From exhibits L, L1 L2, L3 and L5 it is seen that the adoption of Varadappangar by Ammalayyanger was stated by the latter's brother Krishnayyanger in suits brought by him in 1838, 1841 and 1843 to recover moneys due to Ammalayyanger then (deceased). He explained that the suits were brought by him as Varadappangar, the adopted son of Ammalayyanger, was under his protection. It has been objected on behalf of appellants that these copies of judgments are inadmissible as evidence and in support of this objection we are referred to Suba mayan Paramasaran 11 M 116. Copies of judgments and decrees were there held to be inadmissible with reference to the decision of the majority of Judges of the Calcutta High Court in Gujju Lal v Fatteh Lal 6 C 171. As pointed out by this Court in Byathama v Arulla, 15 M 19 (23) the sole object for which it was sought to use the former judgment in Gujju Lal v Fatteh Lal 6 C 171 was to show that in another suit against another defendant the plaintiff had obtained an adjudication in his favour on the same right, and it was held that the opinion expressed in the former judgment was not a relevant fact within the meaning of the Evidence Act. The case is clearly different where the previous judgment is produced not in order to prove an adjudication between third parties, but in order to prove a statement made by a predecessor in title of the party against whom the document is sought to be used. Cf Parbhutty Dass v Purna Chunder Singh 9 C 586 and Phana v Kondan 15 M 378. Such is the case here and we have no doubt that the judgments in question are relevant under section 35 of the Evidence Act. A judgment is relevant under section 13 of the Indian Evidence Act only as an instance of an assertion of a right against third parties. The remarks in the judgment cannot be treated as evidence. They are the mere opinion of a person who is not before the Court to be cross-examined upon the ground of that opinion and hence are not good evidence. Kamulani v Kumara Rao 10 M L T 330-(1911) 2 M W N 337=12 Ind Cas 423. A judgment holding a person to be a minor does not determine any right pertaining to an individual and is inadmissible in evidence under section 13 (b) of the Evidence Act. Venkata Rangappa v Subbaraya Goundan 33 Ind Cas 112. But judgment not inter partes will be admissible under section 13 of the Evidence Act as evidence of instances of a local custom or usage being recognised. Sundaram Iyer v Theetharappa 10 Ind Cas 159. Section 43 says that judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in sections 40, 41 and 42, are irrelevant unless the existence of such judgment order or decree is a fact in itself relevant under some other provision of the Act (e.g. section 13). Secretary of State for India v Ahmed Badha Sahib 67 Ind Cas 371=41 M 778=41 M L J 223=11 L W 128=1921 M W N 776 (F B). The fact that the maker of a man filed in a contested suit to prove the relationship of his line with the deceased fifty years ago when such an issue was much more susceptible of the proof than it is now, is evidence against the existence of the right of that line to claim as heirs of the deceased within the meaning of s 13 of the Evidence Act. Secretary of State v Subraya Karantha, 18 M L J 504=2 L W 1175=(1915) M W N 962. In Natesu Gramani v Venkatarama Reddi, 30 M 510, the question was whether water in poram bole lands belonging to murasdars can be said to be Sincar water and taxed as such. "Very little evidence was tendered on either side. The zamindar called the Karnam who said that the *poram bole*s were the property of the zamindar but did not speak to any act done in assertion of his ownership. The defendants on the other hand relied on a judgment of the District Munsif of Changleput in original suits Nos 468 to 473 of 1895, suits between zamindars and some murasdars to recover possession of certain poramboles in the village, in which it was held that the waste lands in this village are the property of the murasdars. We think this judgment was evidence against the zamindar in the present suit under section 13 of the Indian Evidence Act."

Oddh cases. The question for decision was whether the appellant was the legitimate daughter of one K and R. The respondent contended that R was not the legally married wife of K and in proof of it produced a compromise and a decree between R and another person by which R obtained only a small amount as maintenance. Held that the compromise and the decree passed in the other case were relevant facts under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Parbati v Maharaj Singh 10 Ind Cis 188. The judgment passed in a previous suit, although not relating to the parties to the subsequent suit is never the less admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act to show the fact that the judgment was passed, and, therefore, it is necessary evidence of the following facts, who the parties to the previous suit were, what the land in dispute was and who was declared entitled to return possession. For this purpose, and to this extent, it is admissible in evidence for or against every one when the fact of possession at its date has to be ascertained. Ghulam v Mohammad, 65 Ind Cis 398=8 O L J 609. Where the issue is as to the title and ownership of certain property a judgment in a pre-emption suit obtained by the defendant against a third person on the strength of a deed of gift alleged to be the source of the defendant's title is admissible in evidence as an instance in which defendant's right under the gift was asserted and enforced. Anyumanumissa v Ashiq Ali 66 Ind Cis 222=1922 Oudh 171. When the question is whether a certain person is a legitimately born son applicable for mutation with regard to revenue paying properties would be admissible under s 13 and 50 of Evidence Act, as assertions of his right is a legitimate son. So also a judgment relating to a transaction in which he set up a claim as legitimate son would be relevant under s 13. Galslain v Musa Abd, 10 O L J 263=73 Ind Cis 428=9 O & A L R 282=A I R 1924 Oudh 19. Judgment in a previous case in which a member of the family had brought a similar suit for possession and obtained a decree was held admissible and relevant on the question of the plaintiff's title to the property. Indrapal Singh v Thakur Din, 10 O L J 146=78 Ind Cis 895=27 O C 77=A I R 1924 Oudh 266. The record of a judicial decision is admissible as evidence of an instance under section 13 of the evidence Act, namely as a transaction by which the custom in question was eluded and recognised notwithstanding the fact that the custom set up was admitted and the suit was contested on another ground. Rampal Singh v Doyrang Singh, 3 O W N 73. Judgments relating to a particular right, although not inter partes but dealing with the same question are clearly admissible under s 13 of the Evidence Act. Hari Kishen v Raghobhai Dayal, 3 O W N 645=97 Ind Cis 873=A I R 1926 Oudh 578. Judgment in a previous suit is admissible in evidence under section 13 to establish the illegitimacy of a certain person. Haj Fatch v Baldeo Singh, A I R 1928 Oudh 233=5 O W N 143. The respondents brought a suit against the appellants for possession of some lands in a village on the allegation that they had acquired title to the land in suit as well as the other land of the village by adverse possession. They filed a judgment in a suit brought by their father for a declaration of his title to the lands of that village, the title being based upon mortgage, all to have become irredeemable. The decision was that he was entitled to and the rest of the claim was dismissed. In the course of that judgment the Court recorded an opinion that the plaintiff was proved to be in possession of the whole land now in suit but dismissed the claim except as to 22 bighas on the ground that the plaintiff though in possession had not proved title. The judgment was inter partes. Held that the question of possession of the land with regard to which the suit was dismissed was not res judicata. A bare expression of opinion in a judgment upon a question of possession not given effect to by the decree is not a recognition of a right within the meaning of section 13 of the Evidence Act and is not admissible in proof of possession either at the date of the judgment or at any other time. Karuna v. Gobind, 7 Ind Cts 12.

S 13

Patna Cases Judgments not between parties to the suit pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction, containing a declaration that the right in dispute has been asserted and recognized in a Court of law are admissible in evidence under the provisions of section 13 of the Evidence Act. Muhammad Elia v. Ganga Dayal 40 Ind Cts 838. A decision in a case under s 103 and a judgment in a case under s 107 B T Act, regarding certain other tenants in the same village and relevant in the case under s 13 of the Evidence Act. Maharun Jani Kori v. Saudagar Ram 1920 Pat 177 = 1 P L T 221 = 56 Ind Cts 417. A final decree is to some extent evidence under s 13 of the Evidence Act as to the land lord having recognised the holding as being in the possession of the tenant and it is not conclusive against third parties and does not stand on the same footing as the delivery of possession given by a Civil Court or a decree awarding possession by a Civil Court. Nand Kishore v. Bikan Singh, 3 Pat L T 570 = (1920) P 57 = 65 Ind Cts 850 = 23 Cr L J 200. But a previous judgment of the same Court not inter partes, though not binding as res judicata and determined on the facts there provided, is still an authority which is entitled to respect, the question raised being the same. Elizabeth May v. Bhupendra Nath, A I R 103 Pat 304.

Lahore Cases A judgment in a suit holding that the property attached to the office of granthi is inalienable is admissible in a subsequent suit for the purpose of showing that at the time it was given the right of the granthi to alienate was called in question. Indar Singh v. Fateh Singh, 1 Lah 540 = 114 P W R 1920 = 59 Ind Cas 734. Plaintiff in the present suit instituted in 1874 had sued the defendant in 1873 for alienating a piece of land alleged to belong to the goddh of a Dhermsala to which plaintiff claimed to be apparent successor. A decree having been then made in favour of the plaintiff he again sued the same defendant for making another alienation of a portion of the same land. It was held that the previous judgment of 1873 was a fact and a relevant fact (Indian Evidence Act s 13) on the issue between the parties whether the land belonged to the goddh or not. Lachman Gir v. Lahori Singh, 70 P R 1875. A judgment finding that a particular person was not of sound mind based on the letter of a medical man is not admissible, either under s 13 or section 43 of the Evidence Act, in a subsequent suit to prove that the person whose mental condition is in question was not of a sound mind where the previous suit was not between the same parties and no formal deposition on oath of the medical men was recorded. Shei Mahammad v. Futeh 6 P R 1902.

Nagpur Cases A judgment though not inter partes may be admissible as evidence of title. Yeshevant v. Daulat 89 Ind Cts 663. Under section 13 judgments not inter partes pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction in a suit in which the right in dispute had been asserted and either recognized or denied are admissible. Ramadhan v. Punshottam, 88 Ind Cas 699. Judgments inter partes can be admitted in order to prove the conduct of the parties to show particular instances of the existence of rights or admissions made by parties in case tors or how the property was dealt with previously as relevant evidence under the provision of section 11 or 13. They cannot be wholly excluded from consideration because in so far as they explain the nature of the possession or the light on the motives or conduct of parties or reproduce the admissions made by the parties or their ancestors and also embody an authoritative statement of the facts which the investigation then held before the Court brought to light. Judgments have very high evidentiary value and may even lift the burden of proof. Gopal v. Sitaram, 97 Ind Cts 691 = 9 N L J 215.

Privy Council Cases Concerning the effect of previous judgment their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council decided cases on appeal from India both before the passing of the Indian Evidence Act, and after the passing of the Indian Evidence Act. Such a question arose in 1871, i.e. just before the passing of the Indian Evidence Act, in the case of Jogendra Deb Roy v Punindra Deb Roy, 11 M I A 367. In that case a Raja of an imperishable Raj died, leaving children by various wives and concubines. A suit for possession of the Raj was brought by one of the widows on behalf of an infant, to set aside a summary award, under Act No XIX of 1811 giving possession and for possession of the Raj. This suit involved issues of legitimacy, and the validity of a particular form of marriage of one of the members of the family. The Sudder Dewany Adalat decreed in favour of the plaintiff. Another suit was afterwards brought by a member of the family, who was not a party to the former suit against the party in possession which raised substantially the same issue of the spurious nature of marriage of which the plaintiff was the issue. The defendant pleaded that the decree of the Sudder Court is a bar to the suit. Held, that the suit raised a different issue, and, (acting upon Kandya Lall v Rudha Charan, 7 W R 338) that the decree in a former suit was not a judgment in rem, but a judgment inter partes.

A zemindar claimed the proprietary right and possession of manus within the limits of his zemindari, against tenants, who by themselves and their predecessors in title, had held the land from before the Decennial Settlement in Bengal, an unvaried rent having been paid to the Zemindar. The first defendant alleged a grant to his ancestor of a mulwari tenure by a ghatal then holding land within the zemindari. The other defendants alleged title as dar malwandars under the first Part of the evidence for the defence consisted of judgments among which was one of the year 1817, and another of 1843, to which the zemindar's predecessors had not been parties. There had been given in suits brought by the successor of the ghatal which had been resisted by the fixity of tenure. Held, that they could be received as evidence of long anterior possession at a rent, and of the title, on which the defendants now relied, having been openly asserted long ago. Taken with other evidence, they established possession by the defendants at a uniform rent paid to the Zemindar, thus leading to the inference that the tenure had been, and still was of a permanent character. Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain, 22 C 533=22 I A 60. In delivering the judgment Lord Shaw said: The Judge of first instance states with reference to these decrees I am of opinion that the documents produced by the defendants may be accepted as evidence in this case, as showing ancient possession, and that the title on which the defendants now rely was openly asserted as early as 1195, B S, corresponding to 1785 A D and at subsequent dates, irrespective of the findings come to in those decrees. The orders passed in these decrees themselves would not be evidence against plaintiff's title but they may be accepted to show ancient possession and to show that the title was asserted rightly or wrongly many years ago. The Judges of the High Court say 'As regards the admissibility of the judgments to which exception has been taken we observe that the lower Appellate Court has only used those judgments as evidence that there was litigation between the parties thereto at the dates to which they relate. It uses those judgments to show that at those dates the so-called ghatal was suing the so-called mulwari respecting the title, and that in those suits the parties asserted the same rights which they now assert. To this extent, we think that the judgments were admissible in evidence, even though the zemindar was no party to them.' It must be observed that by the judgment of 1817 a decree for rent of the manus now in question was given at the rate of Rs 35 per annum, against the predecessors of respondents. Their Lordships are of opinion that, although the predecessors of the Raj were party to that litigation, it was competent to use the judgment as evidence showing the rent paid for the possession it and prior to that date now nearly 80 years ago. Taken with the other evidence in the case, the respondents have their established possession at a uniform rent for so long a period as to lead to the inference that the tenure was and is of a permanent nature.

S 13

The next case is that of Blutto Kumwar v Kesho Persad 1 C W N 260 = 24 I A 10. The facts of the case are as follows — Blutto Kumwar is the widow of Bacha Tewari. On the death in November 1842 of one Bhowani Pershad Tewari the owner of the property in suit Rani Kuar and Dharma Kuar the widows of his brother Debi Pershad and one Ram Kissan Misra son of his niece, obtained possession of the property left by him. Some time afterwards a dispute arose between them and Bacha is to the right of heirship to Bhowani, and an agreement dated 4th January 1850 was thereupon entered into by all the disputants to the effect that Ram Kissan and Bacha Tewari were to be proprietors in 1 to hold possession in equal shares. Ram Kissan died on the 22nd January 1874 without issue and his widow Mitho succeeded him. She died on the 25th September 1884 and Kesho Pershad the respondent thereupon became the lawful heir to Ram Kissan's estate. On the 24th March 1886 Kesho Pershad brought a suit against Bacha Tewari and Raja Ajit Singh a purchaser from him to recover possession of certain property, on the ground that he, Kesho Pershad as heir of Ram Kissan is entitled to joint possession of the properties in question with the defendant Bacha Tewari. Bacha Tewari in his defence set up a will of Bhowani dated the 7th August 1847, by which his properties were left in trust for charitable purposes and contended that the agreement of 1850 recognised this will and constituted Ram Kissan a trustee for certain trust created by the will and that Kesho Pershad was estopped by a Judgment of the High Court dated 27th February 1878 from averring that the property was Ram Kissan's own. The Judgment was in a suit by Bacha Tewari and Mitho Kuar (widow of Ram Kissan) and others to have a mortgage made by her declared invalid. Bacha Tewari in that suit contended that under the agreement of 1850 Ram Kissan and he were declared proprietors in equal half share, the estate being kept joint and that Mitho had exceeded her right in mortgaging the property. The subordinate Judge held that Bacha was entitled to a half share only of the properties in dispute and gave a decree accordingly. On appeal the High Court decreed the appeal on the ground that the agreement recognised that Bhowani's will vested the properties in Ram Kissan and Bacha as trustees and that it therefore Mitho was not competent to charge the estate. Again in 1890 a suit was instituted by the managers of the Chate Bhandar against one, Bal Gourd and Bacha Tewari for declaration of right by removal of unlawful possession. In that suit it was alleged that Bacha Tewari had mortgaged the property to Bal Gourd in dispute to Bal Gourd. The Judge held that the estate was not bequeathed for charitable purposes and that Bhowani's will was revoked. Both these questions were in this suit. The two important questions in the present suit were whether the respondents were estopped by the High Court decree of 1878 and whether the judgment in the suit of 1890 was admissible in evidence as against the Appellant to show that the will had been revoked. In delivering the Judgment Sir Lucknow Couch said: "In 1880 a suit was instituted by two persons who are described in the plaint as managers of the Chate Bhandar of the late Bhowani Pershad Tewari which is described in the Judgment of the Judge of Jaunpur as a claim for a declaration of right by removal of unlawful possession of debts by annulment of an miscellaneous order of the Subordinate Judge. It appears that on the 14th September 1877 Bacha Tewari had made a mortgage of the property now in dispute to Lal Gourd who had obtained a decree upon it and had the property put up for sale in execution of the decree. The first and second of the issues in that suit were: 1. Was the property in dispute bequeathed for public charitable purposes? 2. Was the will revoked by the testator in his life time? Upon these the Judge found that the estate was not bequeathed for charitable purposes and that the will was revoked. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court at Allahabad and the Divisional Bench of two Judges by whom the appeal was heard differed in opinion it was heard by a full Bench consisting of the Chief Justice and two Judges the majority of whom affirmed the judgment of the lower Court and dismissed the appeal. The decision is not conclusive as against Bacha Tewari as the suit was not between the same parties as the present suit but the Lordships agree with the Subordinate Judge that it was admissible as evidence against him."

Orders for possession under Act XXV of 1861, s 318, Act X of 1872 s 530 and Act X of 1882, s 115 relating to 'disputes to immovable property' are merely police orders made to prevent breaches of the peace and decide no question of title. Such orders are admissible in evidence on general principles as well as under the Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 13 to show the fact that such orders were made. This necessarily makes them evidence of the following facts appearing on the orders themselves, viz who the parties to the dispute were, what the land in dispute was and who was declared entitled to return possession. For this purpose and to this extent such orders are admissible in evidence for and against any one, when the fact of possession at the date of the order has to be ascertained. Duoman Choudhuran v Brojo Mohun, 29 C 187=29 I A 24, see also Hosam v Iyaf, 10 C L J 30=82 Ind Cis 395, Baroda v Manmatha, 11 Ind Cis 156.

Where in a previous suit by H, a co-sharer of the plaintiff against the defendant to which the plaintiff was no party H had recovered a decree for possession of H's share. Subsequently a partition of the property was made by deed between H, defendant and plaintiff to work out the decree but without expressly referring to it. Held that the decree was not conclusive in plaintiff's suit to recover his share from the defendant and might, had it stood alone, be rejected as evidence but followed by the partition became material. Kumar Naresch Narayan Rao v The Secretary of State for India 28 C W N 453=70 C 446=77 Ind Cis 1013. But the Evidence Act does not in the finding of fact arrived at on the evidence before the Court in one case evidence of that fact in another case where parties are not the same. Per Sir John Wallis in Kumar Gopala Raman v Mal Singh, A I R 1929 P C, 99 (103).

Previous judgments to prove customs—Judicial decisions recognizing the existence of a disputed custom among the Juns of one place are very relevant as evidence of the existence of the same custom among the Juns of another place, but the evidence that the usage has application to the particular case cannot be dispensed with. Gatappa v Eramma A I R 1927 Mad 228=51 M L J 757=99 Ind Cis 303. A judgment inter partes, relating to a right or custom, is proof of an instance or transaction in which the custom has been recognised, or depicted from, or which is inconsistent with its existence. Such judgments are however pieces of evidence capable of rebuttal. Ibidi Hussein v Libi Sona Dea, 4 S L R 88=8 Ind Cis 897, Kundoo v Dhar 20 W R 345.

Recitals in documents—A recital in a deed or other instrument is in some cases evidence against the parties who make it. But it is no more evidence as against other persons than in any other statement would be. Per Garth C J in Brojesuan v Budhanuddi, 6 C 263. The Judicial Committee in the case of Ganja Chandra Dhur Biswas v Jugal Kishore Chakraborty 44 C 186=21 C W N 225 (P C) observed as follows, "Under ordinary circumstances and apart from Statute, recitals in deeds can only be evidence as between the parties to the conveyance and those who claim under them." Where a document is admitted in evidence of a transaction the parties are often apt to refer to the recitals therein as relevant evidence and the distinction between the deed as a transaction and the recitals contained in the deed is frequently overlooked. In the case of Dwarika Nath Balshu v Mulunda Lal Choudhury 5 C L J 55 which was a case in which a deed of sale and a mortgage deed though not inter partes containing recitals that a particular land belongs to a particular houla, were sought to be admitted in a suit in which the question was whether the land belonged to that houla or not so far as can be made out of the facts from the report of the case they were documents executed by trustees in favour of one of the Defendants whose share the Plaintiffs father had purchased at an execution sale. Rampuri J purporting to rely upon the cases of Dattari Mahanti v Jagabandhu Mahanti 23 W R 293 and Vythilinga v Venkata Chala, 16 M 191, held that they were admissible under section 11 (b) and section 13 of the Evidence Act and observed that they may be very weak evidence or even of no weight at all, but they could not be rejected as inadmissible. Geoff J held that they were admissible as transactions by which the right to hold the land as part of the houla was recognised. This

S 13. decision, however, was treated as obiter in a later case of the Calcutta High Court, namely, that of Abdul Ali v Syed Rejanali, 19 C W N 468 in which the cases of Dattari Mahanti v Jagabandhu Mahanti, ubi supra, and Gythalunga v Venkata Chala, ubi supra, were distinguished and it was thus observed "We know of no authority for saying that a private transaction between persons who have no power to bind a person whose right is sought thereby to affect can be admitted as evidence against him and the obvious dangers that might arise from such a proceeding make us very unwilling to hold that a transaction is one that comes under section 13 unless we are obliged to." The authority of the decision in the case of Duarka Nath v Mukunda Lal 5 C L J 55 has been doubted in Saroj Kumar Achary v Umed Ali 35 C W N 1022=35 C L J 19 and Pramatha Nath v Krishna Chandra, 28 C W N 1092=84 Ind C 120, though the latter two cases are clearly distinguishable from that case. The question whether recitals of boundaries of other lands in documents between third parties (such as there are in Saroj Kumar Achary v Umed Ali, 25 C W N 1022 and Pramatha Nath v Krishna Chandra, 28 C W N 1092) are admissible in evidence under section 11 or section 13 of the Evidence Act was considered in the case of Abdulla v Kunja Behary Lal, 16 C W N 252=14 C L J 467 and was answered in the negative Brijendra v Mohan 31 C W N 32 Mr Justice Moorgerjee, who in the case of Bhakeswar Dayal v Harbans Sahay, 6 C L J 69 had apparently held that a document of this nature was admissible in evidence under the provisions of section 11 and 13 of the Indian Evidence Act, altered his view in the decision in Abdulla v Kunja Behary Lal, 16 C W N 252=14 C L J 467, where he held that a document of this nature was not admissible in evidence under the provision of sections 11 and 13 of the Indian Evidence Act, thus differing from the view previously expressed Pramatha v Krishna, 28 C W N 1092. The same view was taken in Choom Lal v Nilmadhab Barik, 41 C L J 374=86 Ind C 734, where the Court observed "It is argued that these documents are not admissible in evidence and the Courts below were not competent to take them as evidence in the case, and for this purpose reliance has been placed upon the cases of Saroj Kumar Achary Chowdhuri v Umed Ali Houldar, 35 C L J 19, and Abdullah v Kunja Behary Lal 14 C L J 467. There was at one time a conflict of opinion upon the admissibility of documents between strangers where one of the parties to the suit was mentioned as owner of the boundary land, but recent decisions have finally settled the point. At one time it was attempted to make such documents admissible in evidence under section 11 clause (2) of the Evidence Act. In some cases the admissibility of such documents was made to rest on section 13 and in some other cases on section 3 clause (3) of the Evidence Act. It is not necessary to go in details into all the decisions. We are of opinion that a document between strangers to the suit in which mention is made of one of the parties or their predecessors as holding the land lying on the boundaries of the lands belonging to the executants of the documents is not admissible in evidence." See also Brij Mohan v Gaya Prosad, 30 C W N 761 Damodar v Jadunath 91 Ind C 449, Kumuda v Dilsook, 45 C L J 138, Abdul Karim v Chhalla, 91 Ind C 688 (c) Halim Ali v Anril, 108 Ind C 264, Abdul Gham v Fagur Mahammad, A I R 1929 Lah 78=111 Ind C 261, Lajpat Rai v Farid Ahmad, A I R 1927 Lah 448=8 Lah 651, Sarat Chandra v Saralabala 105 Ind C 61. The case of Jmrut Chamar v Sudhari Pandey 15 C L J 7=17 C W N 103, which laid down the recital of boundaries in the lease was admissible against a person not a party took the contrary view. There have been later decisions which have not accepted this later view and the trend of the recent decision is not to admit evidence which have been offered in the case and the reception of which evidence is objected either under section 13 of the Indian Evidence Act or under any other section of the Act. Per Mitter J in Kumuda Kumari v Dilsook 105 C L J 138=101 Ind C 513 see also Hadha Nath Bannerji v Jadu Nath Singh 7 W R 441, Hadha Krishna Maruani v Sureswar Nag 29 C W N 469. The view that such a statement made by a person cannot be made admissible in evidence against a stranger is supported by the principle of the decision of the Lordships of Judicial Committee in Shrinivas Dwari v Moherbaui, 49 I A 6=41 B 300=21 C W N 558=25 C L J 311 (P C). But a different view was taken by Chamier J in Natwar v Alhu 18 Ind Cas 753=11 A. L. J 139 where he said 'The latest decision on the question is that in Abdullah v Kunj Behari Lal, 14 C L J 467 in which it was held that a deed of this kind was admissible as evidence of the title to the adjoining plot referred to there in. It was held that the document was admissible under section 32 clause (3). Several cases are cited in support of this view. I am not prepared to differ from this decision and it appears to me that the document may also be admissible under section 13 if as is now generally held, the word 'right' in section 13 is not confined to an incorporeal right'. See also Farzand Ali v Zafar Ali 46 Ind Cas 119 where Dwarika Nath Brl shi v Mulunda Lal Chowdhury 5 C L J 55 was followed and Ch rug Ali Prodhania v Mohan Mohan Burdhan 19 Ind Cas 615 was not followed.

An effort is made in Sheik Katabuddin v Nafer Chandra Patta 44 C L J 582, to reconcile the conflicting decisions where at page 583 Justice B B Ghosh said 'The question of admissibility of such documents may be considered in three aspects. The first is, where the executant of a document is called as a witness and he gives his evidence and in support of that he produces a document executed by him. In such a case it is conceded that the document would be admissible under section 157 of the Evidence Act as corroborative of the evidence given by the witness on the witness box. In the present case this has happened with regard to exhibit 6 and there is no question that this was rightly admitted in evidence. The second aspect of the question arises where the executants are alive and do not give their evidence in the case. In such cases there is a strong body of opinion that such documents are not admissible either under section 11 or 13 of the Evidence Act. This has not been done in the present case. The third case is where the executants are dead whether any such documents are admissible under section 32 of the Evidence Act or not. That such documents are admissible under section 32 of the Evidence Act, has been held in long line of cases in different High Courts in India. There is no question that under the English law a statement in such documents would be admissible. It is unnecessary to cite any English case other than the leading case of Higham v Ridgway, 10 East 109. Whether such evidence is admissible under the Evidence Act was considered in favour of its admissibility in several cases the earliest of which is Leelanand Singh v Mussamat Lal hputee 22 W R 231. This case was elaborately discussed and followed in the case of Ningaya v Bhaimappa 23 B 63 which was again followed in the Bombay High Court in the case of Haji Bibi v H H Sultan Mahomed Shah, 11 Bom L R 409 and in our Court in the case of Abdullah v Kunj Behari Lal, 16 C W N 252=14 C L J 467. These cases were followed in Allahabad in the case of Natwar v Alhu, 11 A. L. J 139 and all the other cases were subsequently followed in this Court in Imrit Chamar v Sirdhar 15 C L J 9=17 C W N 108 and in the case of Ambai Ali v Lutfe Ali 45 C 159=25 C L J 619. See also Abdul Rahim v Jonabali A I R 1923 Cal 299 Promotha v Bijoy A I R 1927 Cal 231, but see Promotha v Krishna 28 C W N 1092 Kumud Kumari v Dilsook, 45 C L J 138, Ghulam v Kalim A. I R 1923 Lah 428=10 Lah L J 370 Frambal v Ganesh A I R 1923 Nag 22.

In Kiran Chandra Roy v Srinath Chakravarti, 31 C W N 135, the plaintiffs sued for assessment of fur rent for lands appertaining to their Zamin in the possession of the defendants which were entered in the record of rights as brahmottar liable to assessment with rent. The defendants relied on three documents, the first of which showed the dealing of the property by defendants of the original grantee as rent free brahmottar land and the second was the title deed on which the defendant's claim was based as purchasers at an execution sale and the third showed that delivery of possession under the purchase was taken. As regards these documents the Court observed.

It is difficult to see on what grounds their admissibility as evidence can be questioned. The first document is a piece of evidence which shows the dealing of the property by the descendants of the original grantee as rent free brahmottar land, and the other two documents are connected with the title of the defendants. One of them is in fact the title deed upon which the defendant's claim was based as purchasers at an execution sale. The other document shows that delivery of possession under that purchase was taken."

S 13.

A statement contained in an order for delivery of possession as to the rent payable in respect of the land is not admissible in evidence in a suit between the landlord and the tenant in which the rent payable is in dispute. Chandra Mohan v Shailb Elm 87 Ind Cas 512. Defendant mortgaged the rent land to the plaintiff in 1899. The mortgage deed stated the rent in respect of that holding payable to the superior landlord as Rs 18. In 1904 the mortgage debt was paid off and the plaintiff purchased the superior interest and claimed rent at the rate Rs 24, although there was no proof of such enhancement. Held, that the mortgage deed was admissible in evidence as it was a transaction by which the right of the defendant to the land was ascertained and for the definition of that right the amount of the rent had to be stated. Abdul Munshi v Yalub Bulukdar A I R 1929 Cal 703. Where the question is whether a certain person is a legitimately born son applications for mutation with regard to revenue paying properties would be admissible under s 13 and 30, Evidence Act as assertions of his right is a legitimate son. Galstam v Mirza Abd, 73 Ind Cas 428 = A I R 1924 Oudh 19. Assertions of title by a person dealing with property to which he lays claim are admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act though such assertions in recent documents or after dispute have little evidentiary value. Nallasna v Ratan Bibi, 10 Ind Cas 389 = 1921 M W N 560 = 14 L W 327. Where a document has been admitted in evidence as evidence of a transaction the recitals are often apt to refer to the recitals there as relevant evidence, but the recitals are not evidence especially if they are mere assertions by a person who is alive and who might have been brought before the Court as a witness. Nehar Beva v Hader Baksh, 68 Ind Cas 282. A deed of mortgage containing an assertion of title as owner by the mortgagor is relevant under section 13 of the Evidence Act as evidence of the title asserted. Nallasna Mudalar v Ratan Bibi, (1921) M W N 560 = 14 L W 327. In a suit for declaration of title and possession of a mango garden it was found that the garden appertained originally to a Talukdar who was amicably partitioned into three shares and that the garden fell to the share of plaintiff's vendor. In order to prove his vendor's title and exclusive possession of the garden, plaintiff produced certain documents dealing with garden in question. Held that the documents were title deeds and contained an assertion of title to and possession of, the property in dispute on behalf of the predecessor in title of the plaintiff against the defendant and should be admitted in evidence. Nityakali v Sarat Chandra 51 Ind Cas 806. Documents containing recitals that a particular plot of land belongs to a particular well are admissible in evidence either under section 11(b) or section 13 of the Evidence Act, although they are not parties to the suit. Fazand Ali v Zafar Ali 46 Ind Cas 119. Where some of the landlords have sold a holding in execution of a rent decree and have advertised it for sale as a mokurari holding they are estopped from afterwards pleading that the holding is not mokurari. But the estoppel would not affect the landlords who were not parties to the rent suit though the entry in the sale certificate would be strong evidence against them under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Khurode v Janali, 20 Ind Cas 753. Plaintiffs instituted a suit for possession based on a lease to them from the Motremdars of a village. The defendants contended that Motremdars were entitled only to the mekaram on the lands but not the lands themselves. Of the documents relied on by the plaintiff some had been executed by tenants in the same village other than the defendant and they went to show that they were merely pinaludis. These documents, though not conclusive against the defendants, were held to be relevant as relevant evidence under s 13 of the Evidence Act, as showing the tenure on which the village was held. Tythilinga v Venkata, 16 M 191. Where some of the landlords sold a holding in execution and advertised it for sale as a mokurari holding, they are estopped from pleading afterwards that the holding was not permanent. But the estoppel would not affect the landlords who were not parties to the rent suit, though the entry in the sale certificate would be strong evidence against them under s 13 of the Evidence Act. Khurode Chandra v Janali Das 17 C W N 265. See Riwaji Ram—entries in—Whether proof of custom. An entry in a munim even though unsupported by instances constitutes a strong piece of evidence.

in support of an alleged custom and it lies upon the party impugning it to rebut the value of this evidence Saule Khan v Amirunnissa, 45 Ind Cis 966=109 P W R 1918=94 P R 1913 Ita Muhammad Khan v Juam, 26 Ind Cis 492=34 P R 1915=2 P W R 1915=33 P L R 1915 Ranjha v Jinnuaddi, 24 Ind Cis 942=104 P R 1914=221 P L R 1914=122 P W R 1914, Dasamudi v Chauda Singh 13 Ind Cis 421=45 P R 1912=85 P W R 1912=71 P L R 1912 The ruwaj-i-am is a public record of custom prepared by a public officer in the discharge of the duties and under Government rules and it is clearly admissible evidence to prove the facts entered in it subject to be rebutted, and the statements in it may be accepted even if unsupported by instances Vaishna Dutt v Rameshri 28 L W 908=29 P L R 654=A. L R 1928 P C 294=55 M L J 746 (P C) Ruaj-i-am applies to urban house property Wasakha v Gutti, 112 Ind Cis 8=A. L R 1928 Lah 763 The initial presumption must in every case be made in favour of the correctness of the entry in the ruwaj-i-am, even though the custom pleaded is not in consonance with the general agricultural custom of the province Nab Singh v Sham Kuar, 111 Ind Cis 842 An entry in a ruwaj-i-am recording a special custom is prima facie proof of that custom and the onus is shifted on the other side to rebut it Labb Singh v Mt Mango, 8 Lah 281=100 Ind Cis 924=A. I R 1927 Lah 241 A ruwaj-i-am whether supported or unsupported by instances is a piece of evidence which, if unrebutted, is sufficient to decide the case Jugal Das v Josoda Bai, 103 Ind Cis 170

Wajib ul arz—entries in—evidentiary value of A wajib ul-arz is a village statement of custom as distinct from the district statement of custom which is called Ruaj-i-am Zaman Khan v Abdul Rahim 109 Ind Cis 59 Entries in a wajib ul arz relating to questions of customs are not agreements between the members of the proprietary body but they are presumptive evidence of the existence of the rules of custom embodied therein It is for the person to rebut an entry in it Zaman v Abdul, 109 Ind Cis 59 The entry in a wajib-ul-arz as regards the existence of a custom is certainly admissible in evidence though the value of such evidence may vary with the circumstances Narpat v Muhammad 3 Luck 478=5 O W N 252=112 Ind Cis 10=A. I R 1928 Oudh 265 Entries in wajib ul-arz must be deemed to have been made by the settlement officer in the discharge of his official duties and therefore furnish strong evidence of the authenticity of the facts stated therein Haridar Pantap v Bisheshwar Balsh, 3 Luck 326=5 O W N 299=109 Ind Cis 422=A. I R 1928 Oudh 307, Wasiq Ali v Athar Ali 110 Ind Cis 4=A. I R 1928 Oudh 409 Although an entry in the wajib ul-arz is a strong prima facie evidence of custom it is by no means conclusive particularly as to ryots and other occupiers of houses who are not parties thereto Syed Fajammul v Banuani 23 A L J 932=88 Ind Cis 752=A. I R 1926 All 43 An entry as to a custom recorded in a wajib-ul-arz must be authentic of which nothing is shown is of great importance Chaudhry Abdul v Mt Tahara Bano 12 O L J 167=2 O W N 357=89 Ind Cis 51=A. I R 1926 Oudh 377 A wajib ul-arz being part of a Revenue record is of greater authority than a ruwaj-i-am which is of general application and is not drawn up in respect of individual villages Gurbalsh v Partapat 2 Lah 316=(1922) Lah 234=66 Ind Cis 133 In a suit for pre-emption, the plaintiff in proof of the custom produced an extract from the wajib-ul-arz of 1872 which was headed dustur-i-haq-i-shafa and provided that a co-sharer who wished to sell his share had the right to do so, but that he should offer it (1) to his own brother, (2) to his more distant relatives, and (3) to other co-sharers in the thal and village a sale deal, two decrees of 1893 and one decree of 1898, while the defendants produced the wajib-ul-arz of 1853, the preamble of which ran thus 'we record the following conditions in the wajib-ul-arz to act according to those conditions until the next settlement comes into force and which in paragraph 6 headed mention of the transfer of rights by sale, mortgage or gift, provided that each co-sharer was entitled to transfer his share, but that he should offer it to his co-sharers in certain order, and the wajib-ul-arz of the present settlement was silent upon the right of pre-emption, held that, upon a proper

S 13 construction, the uajb ularz was prima facie evidence of the existence of custom. Held also that the sale deed produced by the plaintiff was no evidence of custom there being no mention in it either of custom or contract, and the two decrees of 1893, standing by themselves, were no evidence of custom and not admissible under s 13 of the Evidence Act. Mukht v Har Sahai, 8 A L J 770=9 Ind Cns 810

Draft record of right The draft record of right cannot be used as evidence of the presumption of the correctness of the entry made therein but the draft record is admissible for the purpose of showing what was the entry made in the earlier proceedings before the publiction. Hardeo v Kapil, 103 Ind Cns 117=A I R 1928 Pat 353

Road Cess papers An entry in a road cess return in which a former proprietor of an estate admitted the existence of a lal heraj, although not binding on the auction—purchaser of the estate at a revenue sale, is evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Manmohun v Adwaita, 19 Ind Cns 519. Under sections 9 and 11 of the Indian Evidence Act, the absence of the name of the predecessor of the plaintiff from the list of tenants in a road cess return not filed by either party to the suit is admissible in evidence against the plaintiff. Imrit v Subdhar, 17 C W N 103=15 C L J 7, see also Sagar Mull v Manray, 1 C W N 100, Ram Pershad v Lal hpathi, 33 C 247=7 C W N 162

Batwara paper A batwara khasra is not a record within the meaning of section 35 of the Evidence Act and an entry made therein of the name of a tenant in possession is not admissible to prove the fact of his tenancy. There is nothing however to prevent a tenant from putting the batwara khasra in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act to show the past history of the land before the creation of the tenancy in his favour if that can in any way lend support to its creation. Sadhu Saran v Imbika Lal, 68 Ind Cns 676. A batwara khasra not brought into existence in pursuance of a partition effected under the Partition of Estates Act, 1876 by a Collector is a document of title admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Ajodhya Prasad v Kamal Narayan, 30 Ind Cns 191. See also Shail Jalni v Dingo, 2 Ind Cns 367, Sri Lal v Jugal, 38 Ind Cns 205. A batwara signed by the Portion Dy Collector and containing entries required by the provisions of Ch 7, is a record within the meaning of official duty within the purview of section 35 Evidence Act. It would also be evidence against the proprietors under ss 18 and 13 of the Evidence Act because they were made in their presence. The batwara khasra prepared by an Amil and not signed by any gazetted officer cannot be held to be public document under s 35 though on proper proof it may be evidence either under section 15 or section 13. Ramsarup v Rammarain, A I R 1920 Pat 32=7 Pat 14

Maps and Chittas etc Chittas made by Government for its own private use in connection with resumption proceedings are nothing more than documents prepared for the information of the collector, and are not evidence against private persons for the purpose of proving that the lands described therein are or are not of a particular character or tenure. They are admissible as evidence under s 83 nor under section 13 where it is not known whether they were acted on for the purpose of the resumption proceedings or if in fact no action was placed upon them by Government for the purpose of resumption proceedings. Upendra Nath v Laddha Gobinda, 93 Ind Cns 85=A I R 1927 Cal 11. Under section 13 Zaminidars' papers prepared in the course of business and containing a statement of the Zaminidars are admissible in evidence in disputes relating to land to which such papers pertain. Satu Houladar v Hep, 101 Ind Cns 111=A I R 1927 Cal 576. Chittas prepared by Government are admissible in evidence though their value will depend on the circumstances of each case. Sarat Chandra v Sarati Lal, 105 Ind Cns 61. Chittas prepared by Zaminidars in the absence of the tenants are admissible in evidence in rent suits but their evidentiary value will depend on the circumstances of each case. Abu Hup, 83 Ind Cns 515=A I R 1925 Cal 1101. A map prepared by a private party long before the institution of a suit for declaration of title is admissible in evidence under section 11 of the Evidence Act and it is held that it was a transaction by which a right was recognised or created.

Blusan v Nawab of Murshidabad, 49 Ind Cns 951 Chittas prepared by Government for the purpose of resuming surplus lands required for the purpose of a road way in the possession of persons without title are admissible in evidence as part and as explanatory of the resumption proceedings which were regularly taken William Graham v Phanindra Nath Mitra, 19 C W N 1038 = 31 Ind Cns 41 In a suit by the plaintiff to recover possession of certain lands on the allegation that the same were included in a sub lease granted to them by the lessors of D, the defence being that the lands in suit were confined within the lease granted by C to the defendants prior to the lease of the plaintiff's lessors, Held, that the proceedings of a rent suit by C against the plaintiff's lessors including the judgment and decree and the Amin's maps, report and field book filed in that suit were admissible in evidence although the defendants were not parties to that suit. Madan Chandra Pal v Kartum Biswas, 34 Ind Cns 163 Private chittas however old are not admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act Nasir Joardar v Pratima Sundari, 41 Ind Cns 726 An entry in a thak map and its explanatory field book are evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act, both against proprietors as well as against tenants because they could not have been compiled at all unless the possession of the person holding the plots shown in them had been arrested Daulat Rau v Khul Lal 22 Ind Cns 645 Jogendra v Secretary of State, 30 C 291 = 7 C W N 193 P C, Nobendra Kishore v Kazi Latful Haq 2 Ind Cns 513 Lpendra v Chairman Calcutta Corporation, 16 C W N 116, Junmejoy v Daula 5 C 287 = 4 C L R 574

Possession—ancient instrument As the possession and enjoyment of disputed property are always indirect evidence of right by reason of the obvious and natural presumption, when the right in other respects doubtful, that such possession and enjoyment so requisited in had a lawful origin, so, acts of open delivery of possession or written instruments by which the possession and enjoyment correspond are also presumptive evidence of right, for these are in fact, no mere recitals of a fact but are of themselves acts of dominion and ownership. Hence, when such instruments are so ancient that their connection with acts of enjoyment and dominion cannot be proved by testimony of living witnesses they are nevertheless admissible as the best and most proximate evidence to explain the origin and nature of such possession and enjoyment, where they can by other evidence be sufficiently connected with those facts Stair's Evidence, Vol I p 67 The existence of a document of ownership of land (anted lease or license) may be evidence that the maker of the document had possession of the land at the time of making it. This doctrine, now well settled in English law, is applicable in proof of title by adverse possession in prior generations, where no evidence has survived except the documents themselves which embodied acts of elum of ownership Clarkson v Woodhouse 5 F R 112, Rogers v Allen, 1 Cmp 309, Doe v Ashew, 10 Est 520, Coombs v Coether, M & W 398 In Malcomson v O'Dea, 10 H L C 593, 614 Hills 1 and Ancient documents purporting on the face of them to show exercise of ownership such as a lease or a license, may be given in evidence without proof of possession or payment of rent under them, as being in them direct acts of ownership and proof of possession, this rule is sometimes limited with the qualification, provided that possession is proved to have followed similar documents or that there is some proof of actual enjoyment in accordance with the title to which the documents relate Wigmore § 157 Similarly in Bristol v Cornman L R 3 App Ct 611, 633 668 Cairns L C and Old 1154 have always been considered to be admissible as being evidence of facts of ownership [The circumstances of giving and taking them] are real transactions between man and man not intelligible except on the footing of title, or at least an honest belief in title. In the same case Lord Blackburn said "It is much as after long time all the witnesses who could prove such possession are dead the law permits ancient document either with or without evidence of ancient payment of rent, to be given as evidence from which the jury may properly draw an inference that there was such possession. For in the ordinary course of things men do not make leases unless they act on them, and lessors do not pay rent unless they are in possession, so that the ancient payment of rent

S. 13 adds weight to the ancient indenture" In Doe v Eslara, 11 Aln 1023, 1039, Collier G J said 'Ancient documents, it is said are allowed to support ancient possession, though these documents are not proved to be part of any regular series. They are admitted in such cases as forming part of every legal transfer of title and possession by act of parties. Care is first taken to ascertain their genuineness, and this is shown prima facie by proof that the documents come from the proper custody or otherwise accounting for it."

Hence it seems, says Ab Starlie "that to support any presumption or inference from such an instrument first, its antiquity is essential secondly that it should have been found in the place or repository in which it was and genuine deed or writing of that kind would have been deposited, thirdly that it should be free from all suspicion which may rebut the presumption raised in its favour fourthly in order to give it any weight, it should be supported by proof of possession or enjoyment, corresponding and consistent with it. Upon such a connection the force, if not the admissibility, of such evidence essentially depends. Declarations are, as has been seen evidence as explanatory of the act which they accompany, and where long continued enjoyment, and user of a right has been proved extending as far back as the duration of human life will permit, a deed or writing which is consistent with such user and enjoyment and explanatory of it, may under the same principle, be fairly admitted as affording a presumption that it was a genuine instrument which has been used and acted on. And where proof of the actual execution and use of such instruments would have been evidence, then when such proof is absolutely excluded by lapse of time, the production of the deed coupled with such circumstances as give it credit, appears to be the next best evidence which the case admits of and when accompanied with proof of actual enjoyment, affords a strong presumption as to the existence of the right according to that deed." Starlie's Ev pp 67, 68

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

In a dispute relating to the boundary of a holding between the plaintiff and the Municipal Corporation of Calcutta, a map prepared in 1872 under the direction of the Government, acting not in its sovereign capacity but as the landlord of this and neighbouring holdings was admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Upendra Nath Ghosh v Chairman of Calcutta Corporation, 16 C W N 116

A Kobala which recites that a holding was a dwelling house is admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Evidence Act, although it is not inter partes. Manmohan v Rageswar, 35 C 375=32 C W N 184=107 Ind C 81=A I R 1928 Cal 315

The fact that in another contested suit a party has failed to prove the relationship of his line with the deceased is evidence as to the existence of the right of that line as heirs of the deceased and is relevant under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Secretary of State v Subrdya Karantha 18 M I 1 504=2 L W 1175=(1915) M W N 962

A Kobala admitting the right of the plaintiff to an element is relevant and is such admissible under S 13 of

Inadmissible

Statements made in conveyance or mortgage that property is limited by certain boundaries are not admissible against person not party to the deed either under section 11 or under section 13 of the Evidence Act. Abdullah v Kunya Behari, 12 Ind C 119=14 C L J 467=16 C W N 242

A will which has not been admitted to probate, cannot, in the absence of proof by one of the attesting witnesses that the documents had been executed in record with the Statute be admissible in evidence under the provisions of ss 13 cl (1) and 32 cl (1) of the Evidence Act. Moheswar Pandit v Sundar Narain 22 C L J 111=12 Ind C 342

In a suit for possession of certain lands as plaintiff's nishtar brohmatur on behalf of the plaintiff the purchaser in title was produced bringing the recital of the brohmatur title. Held that the recital of a brohmatur title in the will was admissible under s 32 (1) of the Evidence Act read with section 13 of the Evidence Act. Satindra Kumar v Archana 36 Ind C 1=882

Section 13 of the Evidence Act is of no avail where the transaction

Admissible

the Evidence Act. Girish Chandra v Kunja Behary, 26 Ind Cis 781

Where the defendants are the purchasers of a tenure and the plaintiff claims in under tenure within the defendant's tenure, a petition for execution of a rent decree in which no mention is made of the under tenure is admissible in evidence under section 13 Jogesh Chunder v Rohan Kumar Roy 21 C L J 65

Where in a suit for partition between the various male members of a certain family, the widow of a deceased coparcener puts in a written statement to the effect that a particular plot of land belonged to her husband such statement is clearly admissible evidence under s 13 Rangaswami v Vaidyalinga Mudaliar, 33 Ind Cis 446

In a suit to establish the existence of a family custom, a deed containing a recital of the custom as alleged in the plaintiff's covenant to do nothing, contrary to it, was tendered in evidence by the plaintiffs. The deed had been executed before suit by the present plaintiffs and by another plaintiff who died after the institution of the suit. Held that the deed was admissible in evidence on the plaintiff's behalf though they could themselves be called as witness Hurronath v Nittanund, 10 B L R 263 were in respect of lands other than the disputed land, as there was not any transaction or particular instance by or in which the right in dispute was claimed, recognised asserted or denied Abdul lah v Kunj Behary Lal, 14 C L R 467

Inadmissible

Certified copies of judgments and decrees which a party seeks to make use of not as constituting matters in dispute res judicata but as containing summaries of statements made by parties concerned in the management of the plaintiff properties and as evidence of conduct, are inadmissible in evidence. Subramanyan v Paramaswaram, 11 M 116 When the question is whether the tenant held lands under naldi or bhaoli system of rent and the court based its decision on a statement contained in hebanama executed by the deceased grandfather of the tenant, held that the hebanama was not admissible in evidence under s 32 (7) read with s 13 (a) of the Evidence Act Bansi Singh v Mu Amur Ali, 11 C W N 703

Recitals of the claims contained in possessory orders passed under section 145 of the Criminal Pro Code, whether inter partes or not are not admissible in evidence to prove title under section 13 of the Evidence Act Ram Sunder v Harbata, 37 Ind Cis 911

14 Facts showing the existence of any state of mind, such

Facts showing existence of state of mind, or of body, or bodily feeling, as intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will or good-will towards any particular person, or showing the existence of any state of body or bodily feeling, are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind or body or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant

* Explanation 1—A fact relevant as showing the existence of a relevant state of mind must show that the state of mind exists, not generally, but in reference to the particular matter in question

* Explanation 2—But where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence, the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of this section, the previous conviction of such person shall also be a relevant fact†

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article

* These Explanations were substituted for the original Explanations to s 14, by the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891) s 1 (1)

† See the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (Act 5 of 1898), s 311

S 14.

The fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles of which he was in possession to be stolen

(b) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to another person a counterfeit coin which, at the time when he delivered it, he knew to be counterfeit

The fact that, at the time of its delivery, A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin is relevant

The fact that A had been previously convicted of delivering to another person as genuine a counterfeit coin knowing it to be counterfeit is relevant

(c) A sues B for damage done by a dog of B's which B knew to be ferocious. The facts that the dog had previously bitten X, Y and Z, and that they had made complaints to B, are relevant

(d) The question is whether A, the acceptor of a bill of exchange, knew that the name of the payee was fictitious

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person, is relevant as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person

(e) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B

The fact of previous publications by A respecting B, showing ill will on the part of A towards B is relevant, as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question

The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that A repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant, as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B

(f) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, whereby B, being induced to trust C, who was insolvent suffered loss

The fact that, at the time when A represented C to be solvent, C was supposed to be solvent, by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him, is relevant, as showing that A made the representation in good faith

(g) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B, upon a house of which A is owner, by the order of C, a contractor

A's defence is that B's contract was with C

The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant, as proving that A did, in good faith, make over to C the management of the work in question, so that C was in a position to contract with B on C's own account, and not agent for A.

(h) A is accused of the dishonest misappropriation of property which he had found, and the question is whether, when he appropriated it, he believed in good faith that the real owner could not be found

The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was is relevant, as showing that A did not in good faith believe that the real owner of the property could not be found

The fact that A knew, or had reason to believe that the notice was given fraudulently by C, who had heard of the loss of the property and wished to set up a false claim to it is relevant, as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith

(i) A is charged with shooting at B with intent to kill him. In order to show A's intent the fact of A's having previously shot at B may be proved

(j) A is charged with sending threatening letters to B. Threatening letters previously sent by A to B may be proved, as showing the intention of the letter

(k) The question is, whether A has been guilty of cruelty towards B, his wife

Expressions of their feelings towards each other shortly before or after the alleged cruelty are relevant facts

(l) The question is whether A's death was caused by poison

* This Illustration was substituted for the original Illustration (b) to s 14 by Act 3 of 1891, s 1 (2)

Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms are relevant facts

(m) The question is, what was the state of A's health at the time an assurance on his life was effected

Statements made by A as to the state of his health at or near the time in question are relevant facts

(n) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use, whereby A was injured

The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage is relevant

The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let to hire is irrelevant

(o) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead

The fact that A on other occasions shot at B is relevant as showing his intention to shoot B

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant

(p) A is tried for a crime

The fact that he said something indicating an intention to commit that particular crime is relevant

The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class is irrelevant

Scope of the section "Section 14 seems to me to apply to that class of cases which is discussed in Taylor on Evidence, 6th Ed ss 318-322,—that is to say, cases where a particular act is more or less criminal or culpable according to the state of mind or feeling of the person who does it, as for instance of slander or false imprisonment, or malicious prosecution where malice is one of the main ingredients in the wrong which is charged, evidence is admissible to show that the defendant was actuated by spite or enmity against the plaintiff, or again, on a charge of uttering counterfeit coin, evidence is admissible to show that the prisoner knew the coin to be counterfeit because he had other similar coin in his possession, or had passed such coin before or after the particular occasion which formed the subject-matter of the charge. The illustrations to section 14, as well as the authorities cited in Taylor, show with sufficient clearness the sort of cases in which this evidence is receivable. But I think we must be very careful not to extend the operation of the section to other cases, where the question of guilt or innocence depends upon actual facts, and not upon the state of a man's mind or feeling. We have no right to prove that a man committed theft or any other crime on one occasion, by showing that he committed similar crimes on other occasions." Per Garth C J in R v M J Vyapoory Moodahar, 6 C 645 at p 659. So this section is of assistance, where the existence of a state of mind such as an intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill will or good will towards a person or the existence of a state of body or bodily feeling was not and could not be in issue in the circumstance of the case. Emperor v Pachu Das 24 C W N 501=47 C 671 (F B). In Baharuddin Mandal v Emperor, 18 C L J 578, it was ruled that proof cannot be offered of an independent offence to show that by reason of such independent offence the accused is more likely to have committed the one for which he is on trial, in other words, evidence of such collateral offence cannot be received as substantive evidence of the offence on trial, though under section 14 evidence may be given of intention and like matters where the factum of such intention or like matters is relevant. The distinction between cases where intention is and cases where intention is not relevant is illustrated by the decisions in Emperor v Debendia Prosad 36 C 573=13 C W N 923 and Emperor v Abdul Wahid, which lie on the opposite side of the dividing line. Reference may also be made to the decision of West J in R v Parbhudas 11 B H. C R 90, where he emphasised the admissibility of evidence of one crime (not reduced to legal certainty by a conviction) to prove the existence of another unconnected event though cognate crime. See also R v Nur Mahamed 8 B 223, 225, R v Fakirappa, 15 B 502.

Facts similar to, but no part of the same transaction as the main fact, are not, in general admissible to prove either the occurrence of the main fact or the identity of its author. But evidence of similar facts although in general inadmissible to prove the main fact or the connection of the parties therewith, is receivable, after evidence alunde on the points has been given, to show the state of mind of the parties with regard to such fact, in other words, evidence of similar facts may be received to prove a party's knowledge of the nature of the main fact or transaction or his intent thereto. In general, whenever it is necessary to rebut, even by anticipation, the defence of accident, mistake, or other innocent condition of mind, evidence that the defendant has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific kind as that in question may be given. To admit evidence under this head, however, the other acts tendered must be of the same specific kind as that in question and not of a different character, and the acts tendered must also have been proximate in point of time to that in question. It is plain that the principles thus formulated are of no assistance to the prosecution. Anurita v King Emperor, 19 C W N 676 (692), see also Manku v Queen Empress, 27 C 139. Girdhari v Emperor, 11 Cr L J 430, Emperor v Debendra Prasad, 36 C 573. In the last mentioned case it may be noted that the Court properly declined to follow R v Holt 8 Cox 41 which is no longer in authority. R v Smith 20 Cox 804. The leading case on the subject is Makin v Att Gen for N S W, (1894) A C 57 = 63 L J P C 41, where the prisoners were charged with the murder of a child whom they had received from the mother on representation of their desire to adopt it, and whose body was subsequently found buried in their garden. It was held that evidence that several other children had been received by the prisoners on similar representations, and that other bodies of infants had been found buried in gardens of houses occupied by the prisoners, were relevant to the issue. In delivering his judgment Lord Herschell said: "The mere fact that the evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible if it be relevant to an issue before the jury and it may be so relevant if it bears upon the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental or to rebut a defence which would otherwise be open to the accused." In this connection it is also to be noted that section 15 is an application of the general rule laid down in this section. R v Debendra Prasad, 36 C 573. This important section had better be considered by remarks upon the several illustrations seriatim. It consists of a collection of the cases in which the strict rule of evidence are somewhat relaxed by the admission of the collateral circumstances where it is necessary to show a particular state of mind. Where a man is on his trial for a specific crime, such as uttering a forged note or coin or receiving an article of stolen property, the issue is whether he is guilty of this specific act. To admit therefore as evidence against him other instances of a similar nature, clearly is to introduce collateral matter. This cannot be with the object of inducing the jury to infer, that because the accused has committed a crime of a similar description on other occasions, he is guilty of the present, but to anticipate the defence that he had no intention or motive to commit the act. The first four illustrations (a) (b) (c) (d) are on the point of knowledge, the fifth (e) as also (i) and (j), of intention, the sixth (f), as also (g) and (h), of good faith, (k) of feeling, (l) (m) of state of body, (n) of negligence, and also of knowledge, and (n) (o) and (p) illustrate the explanation. Art E 131. When a person is charged with or alleged to have done, some act involving guilty knowledge or intention, or other state of mind, after proof of the physical act, evidence is admissible of his similar acts on other occasions, but only in order to show that such guilty knowledge or intention or state of mind. R v George, 18 L J M C 217 = Cock Cas 99. See also R v Rhodes, (1899) 1 Q B 77 where it was held that such evidence was admissible even when such act was subsequent to the transaction, in question if they show a connected or more scheme or system of operation. "The matter may be roughly stated thus: where connected conduct on other occasions is never admissible to prove the act or res but is admissible to prove the mens rea or other state of mind. The rule applies both to civil and criminal cases. With regard to criminal charges in the case of R v Lord (1906) 2 K B 359, Bray J summarised the law as follows:—A careful examination of the cases where evidence of this kind has been admitted shows that they may be grouped under the three heads—(1) where the prosecution seeks to prove a system or course of conduct, (2) where the prosecution seeks to rebut a suggestion on the part of the prisoner of accident or mistake, (3) where the prosecution seeks to prove knowledge by the prisoner of some fact." Coelle Et 100 With regard to civil cases, Hales v Kerr, (1908) 2 K B 601, is instructive. The plaintiff sued a barber in whose shop he alleged he had contracted barber's itch, owing to the defendant's negligence in using dirty materials. Evidence was allowed to be given by two other customers who had contracted such a complaint at the same shop in order to show that the defendant's mode of carrying on the business was dangerous.

S 14

This section is wholly inapplicable in a case where the state of mind or feeling of any of the parties is admittedly not a fact in issue or a relevant fact and the guilt or innocence depends on proof of actual facts. Pritchard v Emperor, A. I. R., 1928 Lah 392, see also Golul v Emperor 86 Ind Crs 970=29 C W N 483=26 Cr L J 906=A. I. R. 1925 Cal 674. When the intention of the accused is a relevant fact, evidence of similar transactions both prior and subsequent to the alleged offence is admissible as evidence of intention. Pane M'iaz v Emperor 83 Ind Crs 889=26 Cr L J 187.

An accused cannot be convicted of an offence with which he is charged simply because he has been guilty of another offence. Therefore when such evidence is offered to prove his commission of the offence on trial evidence of his participation either in act or design in commission or perpetration, in an independent crime cannot be received as substantive evidence of the offence on trial. Evidence however may be given to prove the elements mentioned in section 14 of the Evidence Act, (intention and like matters). Baharuddin v Emperor, 18 C L J 778=27 Ind Crs 187=15 Cr L J 43. Where A is charged with assaulting B with intent to ravish evidence that on former occasions A took liberties with B was not admissible. Ibid. This section generally deals with evidence of states of mind or body and section 15 provides for the special modes of proving a thing to have been intentional by showing that it formed one of a series of similar occurrences. Cun Et 136.

Principle Where the question is as to knowledge, intent, motive or any bodily or mental state evidence of other acts done, showing the existence of such knowledge, intent, motive, or bodily or mental state is admissible, even though it involves the proof of other crimes. Evidence admitted under this principle, in its effect, must be carefully confined within the limits for which it is admitted. The commission of one crime has no bearing as tending to prove the commission of another but the commission of a series of crimes of the same nature may have a bearing in showing a guilty knowledge. Melchey's Et §115. In Reg v Francis (1874) L R 2 Crown Crs 128, upon indictment of X for obtaining money by false pretences, by representing a ring to be a diamond ring evidence was offered, in order to prove guilty knowledge on X's part that he had shortly before, offered other false articles to other pawn brokers. In admitting the evidence Lord Coleridge C J said "It tends to show that he was pursuing a course of similar acts, and thereby it raises a presumption that he was not acting under a mistake. It is not conclusive, for a man may be many times under a similar mistake, or may be many times dupe of another, but it is less likely he should be so oftener than once and every circumstance which shows he was not under a mistake on any one of these occasions strengthen the presumption that he was not on the last and this is amply borne out by authorities." Where the crime charged is receiving stolen goods, the possession of counterfeit money or the like, the knowledge of the accused person becomes one of the material facts in issue and other acts of similar nature are admissible. Thus in Com v Russel 156 Mass 196=30 N E 763, Baker J said, "The admission of such evidence is necessary, because guilty knowledge is a fact not susceptible of proof by direct evidence and can rarely be shown by explicit admissions, but only by acts and conduct." Similarly in Reg v Francis, 43 L J M C 97, Lord Coleridge C J said "It seems clear upon principle that when the fact that the prisoner has done the thing charged is proved and the only remaining question is whether at the time he did it he had guilty knowledge of the quality of his act, or acted under a mistake evidence of the class received must be admissible." See also R v Bleasdale 2 C & K. 765, R v Vogg, 4 C & P 364, R v Lloyd 7 C & P 318 R v Bholu, 23 A 124.

S 14

States of mind, or bodily feeling, how proved. Facts are either physical or psychological. Physical facts can be perceived by senses whereas the facts which are psychological can only be subject matter of consciousness. These psychological facts are also called internal facts. These are thought and feelings, love, hatred, anger, intention, will, wish, knowledge, opinion, are all perceived by the person who feels them. When it is affirmed that a man is angry, that he intends to sell an estate, that he knows the meaning of word that he struck a blow voluntarily and not by accident, each proposition relate to a matter capable of being directly perceived is a noise or a flash of light. The only difference between the two classes of proposition is this. When it is affirmed that a man has a given intention the matter affirmed is one which he, and he only can perceive, when it is affirmed that a man is sitting or standing the matter is one which may be perceived not only by the man himself but by any other person able to see, and favourably situated for the purpose (Step Intro 20). Similarly that a man holds certain opinion, has a certain intention acts in good faith, or fraudulently, or uses a particular word in a particular sense or is or was at a specified time conscious of a particular sensation is a fact (Vide illustration (a) to the definition of Fact in s 3). "The state of a man's mind is as much a fact as a state of his digestion. It is true that it is very difficult to prove what the state of a man's mind at a particular time is but if it can be ascertained it is as much a fact as any thing else." Per Bowen L J in Edington v Fitzmaurice, 29 Ch D App 483. These facts cannot be perceived by senses. But nevertheless it can be testified by the party himself or can be proved by presumptive evidence. It is the law in Alabama in the United States that a person whether a party or not may not testify his own intent however material it may be because he may falsely describe it without possibility of exposure of other witnesses. Mauch F A-co v Ferbelman, (Ala) 33 So 759. This notion has been everywhere else repudiated, but the repudiation is often put on the ground that such a rule existed when parties are disqualified because a party could not testify to his intent nor to any thing else and that therefore the rule has ceased to exist only by virtue of the removal of that disqualification. Now before the removal, any person other than a competent witness, might testify to his own intent whenever it was material to the cause, and it is an error to suppose that there was any prohibition to such testimony (Vide Answer of the Judges concerning Foxes Label Act, 22 How St Tr 296 300, R v King, 1 Q B 214 Greenleaf Ev § 328 (c), Wigmore § 581). The propriety of it is therefore by no means due to its removal of parties disqualification, and it is unnecessary to seek for any such justification for its use. When, therefore it is a question as to the intent of an alleged criminal act, or the intent of a transfer by an insolvent or the good faith of a purchaser from an insolvent, or the reliance of a person on false representations or the intent of one having a residence or making a gift, or to any other state of mind, the person as to whom it is predicated may testify to it. Greenleaf Ev § 328 (c). It remains to be noted that this sort of testimony, or any other whatever, to the fact of a person's intent or motive, is of course receivable only on the assumption that the intent or motive is a fact permissible to be proved under the substantive law involved in the case. This assumption conditions the admissibility of all evidence and of this sort in particular. Hence if for any reason of substantive law the person's intent or motive is not provable at all it is not provable by such testimony. Wigmore § 581. But when a person testifies his own state of mind it deserves very little credit. Phy Et al Whart's 508.

So far as presumptive or circumstantial evidence is concerned the state of mind of being aware or conscious, having knowledge or belief, etc., may be evidenced either (1) by outward circumstances which would naturally have brought about such knowledge, belief, etc., or (2) by conduct of persons indicating the existence of knowledge, belief etc. Greenleaf Ev § 14 p. So far states of mind is evidence by conduct of persons, they fall within the purview of section 8 supra. This section is concerned with states of mind as evidenced by outward circumstances.

Two other questions arise in this connection, namely (1) whether a person may testify to another's person's intent or state of mind in general, this involves the principle of the adequacy of the sources of knowledge, (2) whether a person's testimony to another's intent or meaning or state of mind in general excluded by reason of the Opinion Rule. The argument in favour of rejection of such evidence on the first ground is based on the fact that because one person cannot directly see or hear or feel the state of another person's state of mind, hence his testimony is based on conjecture and therefore on inadequate data. "This argument" says Prof Wigmore is finical enough, and it proves too much, for if valid it would forbid the jury to find a verdict upon the supposed state of a person's mind. If they are required and allowed to find such a fact, it is not too much to hear such testimony from a witness who has observed the person exhibiting in his conduct the operation of his mind' Wigmore § 661, see also Insurer of the Judges to the House of Lords, concerning Fox's Libel Act, 31 Geo III, C 60, 22 How St Tr 300. The law on the subject is thus clearly stated by Alghnam C J in Delaney v Little, 4 S & R 503, where he said "It has been argued that the intention of Charles McCormick, being confined to his own breast, was not a fact to which the witness could swear. This is a very subtle argument, but I cannot say that I feel the force of it. A man's intentions may be manifested by his words or his actions, and, when known, may be sworn to with as much certainty as any other fact. When a witness undertakes to swear to a thing of that kind, the jury who hear the oath will value it at what it is worth." As regards the second point, i.e., exclusion of such evidence by virtue of Opinion Rule, it must be borne in mind that in ordinary human dealings, the formation and expression of estimates as to another's mental state is constant and necessary. There is no good reason why testimony about it, based on personal observation of the other person's conduct, should not be admissible, so far as the Opinion Rule is concerned, for it is clearly impossible to remember and re-state to the jury all the minute data of conduct and words which have served to convey the impression. Such was the orthodox common law view (vide Frost's Trial, 22 How St Tr 484, Horne Tooke's Trial, 25 How St Tr 420, Watson's Trial, 32 How St Tr 67, Tundy's Trial 27 How St Tr 1215, Earl of Thanet's Trial, 27 How St Tr 927) Greelcaf Ev § 441 H, Wigmore § 1963.

So apart from the question whether such evidence is inadmissible by the operation of the Opinion Rule, it is settled that where there is a question whether a person said or did something, the fact that he said or did something of the same sort on different occasion may be proved if it shows the existence on the occasion in question of any intention, knowledge, good faith, malice or other state of mind or of any state of body or bodily feeling the existence of which is in issue or is or is deemed to be relevant to the issue but such acts or words may not be proved merely in order to show that the person so acting or speaking was likely on the occasion in question to act in a similar manner. Steph Dig Ev Art 11. The Court can draw its own inference of the existence of the requisite state of mind or bodily feeling where the said bodily or mental state is a material fact in issue or a relevant fact. A statement made by an accused person immediately after the occurrence of the offence is relevant as showing his state of mind, but where that statement is a repetition of what some body else said to the accused the better statement must be proved by direct or evidence of a person who heard it under section 60 of the Evidence Act. Kakar Singh v Emperor 81 Ind Cas 717.

State of mind.—Proved by three species of evidential facts. Three species of evidential facts are available to prove states of mind.

(1) Conduct this is the expression in outward behaviour of the quality or condition operating to produce those effects. These results are the traces by which we may infer the moving cause. In point of time, conduct is closely associated with the internal condition giving rise to it, nevertheless, the indication is strictly not a concomitant, but a retrospectant one, because the argument is backwards from effect (conduct) to cause (internal condition). Vide Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Kamana, 22 C 164 (174), R v Behance, 3 W R Cr 23, R v Rutten 2 W R Cr 63.

(2) External facts (prospectant) pointing forward to the probable coming into existence of the quality, for example, the victim's gold, as pointing for

S 14 ward to the defendant's probable desire to rob him, or the reputation of A's insolvency, as pointing forward to B's probable receipt of knowledge of it. In using this evidence, we take our stand beforehand and argue that the evi<sup>l</sup>ent fact probably give rise to the emotion, knowledge, or intent he proved. The indication is thus prospectant, while that of conduct is retrospectant.

(3) There is also a third sort of fact, having either a pro spectant or a retrospectant indication, and not exactly corresponding to either of the preceding sorts, namely, prior or subsequent condition, as showing condition at a given time. Thus, to prove insanity, we may offer (1) conduct as the effect illustrating its cause mental aberration, (2) circumstances of unsuccessful business domestic troubles, and the like tending to bring on insanity, and (3) prior or subsequent insanity, pointing forwards or backwards to insanity at the time in question. So also, to show a husband's desire or motive to get rid of his wife, we may offer (1) his conduct exhibiting such a desire (2) the existence of a paramour, tending to create such a desire and (3) a prior desire, as pointing forward to its continued existence at the time in question. A similar general question presents itself in all evidence of this third sort namely, how far before or after the time in question the survey may extend in considering the fact of prior or subsequent condition. Wigmore § 190

States of mind, knowledge etc.—Importance in civil and criminal cases—States of mind, knowledge, intention, and the like, are among the most important topics with which judicial enquiries are concerned. In criminal cases they are invariably a main consideration, and in civil cases they are often highly material as for instance, where there is a question of fraud, malicious intention, or negligence. Cun Ev 120

Intention, meaning of Motive is that which moves or induces a person to act in a certain way. Intention must be distinguished from motive. The mental condition termed 'intention' is manifestation of will power exhibited in action. It determines the nature of an act. Motive is the reason which induces action. It may be dependent on surrounding circumstance, or to causes beyond the control of the actor. Every sane person must have a motive, though it may not be always possible to discover it. So every sane person must have an intention, whether it be relevant or not unless his action is accidental or unintentional. Donough Cir Ev 102 The distinction between intention and motive is important. A man's motive may be good, but his intention bad. A loaf is stolen. The intention was to steal, and the act therefore criminal, although the motive to save a starving child was good. If the motive be bad, it is difficult to conceive that the intention can be good. In a great many instances motive and intention are so closely related, motive being parent of the intention, that it matters little of which we speak. But still it is desirable never to forget that there is a difference, nor in what that difference consists. Hills Cir Ev 38

When a man is charged with an offence, he frequently says that he did not intend to commit it, and apparently supposes that the answer, if believed, would be complete. Does he mean that, in doing the act charged against him, he did not intend to commit a crime, or does he mean that he did not intend to do the act which the law declares to be a crime? In the latter case the plea could generally be a good one. In the former case it would always be bad. It would only mean that he had formed a wrong opinion as to the legal aspect of his conduct, or as to the consequences to himself that might flow from it. For instance a man is charged with killing a person by firing a gun at him. He says that he did not intend to kill him. If he means that the gun went off by accident, this is a good defence independent of s 30 of the Penal Code, as it shows that he never fired the gun. If he means that he fired at the man to frighten him and did not believe the gun would carry so far, this if a reasonable belief, would negative the criminal intention necessary under section 299, but would be no answer to a charge under s 304 which involves no intention to injure. If he means that he fired at him mistaking him for another person whom he had no right to kill, this is a good defence whatever as it is merely a description of the offence defined by s 301. If he means that he fired at him in his house at night, believing him to be a burglar, this would be a good defence under s 79, as it shows that he has committed no offence. If he means that he fired at him, intending to wound but not intending to kill him, this again would be no defence if the natural result of hitting the man would be to kill him (s 299). To say that he intended to do a particular act, but did not intend that the ordinary consequences should follow from it, is merely to say that he expected that the laws of nature would be suspended in the particular instance for his convenience. Mayne's Criminal Law § 9

Theory of evidencing intent. To prove intent, as a generic notion of criminal volition or wilfulness including the various non-innocent mental states accompanying different criminal acts, there is employed an entirely different process of thought. The argument here is purely from the point of view of the doctrine of chances—the instinctive recognition of that logical process which eliminates the element of innocent intent by multiplying instances of the same result until it is perceived that this element cannot explain them all. Without formulating any accurate test, and without attempting by numerous instances to secure absolute certainty of inference the mind applies this rough and instinctive process of reasoning namely that an unusual and abnormal element might perhaps be present in the instance, but the oftener similar instances occur with similar results, the less likely is the abnormal element likely to be the true explanation of them. Thus, if A while hunting with B hears the bullet from B's gun whistling past his head, he is willing to accept B's bad aim or B's accidental tripping as a conceivable explanation but if shortly afterwards the same thing happens again, and if on the third occasion A receives B's bullet in his body the immediate inference (i.e., as a probability, perhaps not a certainty) is that B shot at A deliberately, because the chances of an inadvertent shooting on three successive similar occasions are extremely small, or (to put it in another way) his own inadvertence or accident is only an abnormal or occasional explanation for the discharge of a gun at a given object, and therefore the recurrence of a similar result (i.e. discharge towards the same object, A) excludes the fair possibility of such an abnormal cause, and points out the cause as probably a more natural and usual one, i.e. a deliberate discharge at A. In short, similar results do not usually occur through abnormal causes, and the recurrence of a similar result (here in the shape of an unlawful act) tends (increasingly with each instance) to negative accident or inadvertence or self defence or good faith or innocent mental state and tends to establish (provisionally, at least, though not certainly) the presence of the normal, i.e. criminal, intent accompanying such an act and the force of each additional instance will vary in each kind of offence according to the probability that the act could be repeated within a limited time and under given circumstances with an innocent intent. Wignall § 302. This principle is also recognized by Colledge C J in R v Francis, L R 2 C C R 128, where he said 'It seems clear upon principle that when the fact of the prisoner having done the thing charged is proved, and the only remaining question is whether at the time he did it he had a guilty knowledge of the quality of his act or acted under a mistake, evidence of the class received must be admissible. It tends to show that he was pursuing a course of similar acts and thereby it raises a presumption that he was not acting under a mistake. It is not conclusive, for a man may be many times under a similar mistake, or may be many times the dupe of another, but it is less likely he should be so oftener than once and every circumstance which shows a course of acts under a mistake on any one of these occasions strengthens the presumption that he was not on the first.'

It will be seen that the peculiar feature of this process of proof is that the act itself is assumed to be done, either because (as usually) it is conceded or because the jury are instructed not to consider the evidence from this point of view until they find the act to have been done and are proceeding to determine the intent. This explains what is a marked feature in the rulings of the Courts—namely, a disinclination to insist on any feature of common purpose or general scheme as a necessary requirement for the other acts evidentially used. It is not here necessary to look for a general scheme or to discover a united system in all the acts, the attempt is merely to discover the intent accompanying the act

S 14 in question, and the prior doing of other similar acts, whether clearly a part of a scheme or not, is useful as reducing the possibility that the act in question was done with innocent intent wigmore § 302

Intention, mens rea, criminal knowledge, etc Guilty knowledge and intention are usually associated with one another in every criminal act. They together constitute the mens rea which is supposed to underlie every offence. The doctrine of mens rea is a very ancient one. It is said to have originated with Lord Cole who enunciated the maxim actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea (The act itself does not make a man guilty, unless his intention were so). The intent and the act must both concur to constitute the crime. Dougherty 101. When the maxim originated criminal law practically dealt with common law offences, none of which were defined. The law gave them certain names, such as treason, murder, burglary, larceny, or rape and left any person who was interested in the matters to find out for himself what these terms meant. To do this he had to resort to the explanations of text writers and the decisions of judges. Then he found that the crime consisted, not merely in doing a particular act such as killing a man or carrying away his purse but in doing the act with a particular knowledge or purpose. This superadded mental state was generalized by the terms mens rea, and the assertion that no one was a criminal unless he had the mens rea, really came to this that nothing amounted to a crime which did not include all its necessary ingredients. Steph Cr L § 9, per Stephen J in Cundy v Le Cocq, 13 Q B D 267, Reg v Tolson, 23 Q B D at p 187. Of course the mental state which had to be established to make out a crime varied with the crime itself. The maxim that every criminal must have a mens rea was generally true, but always valueless. The real question was whether in each case the accused had the particular mens rea which proved him to be a criminal. Under the Indian Penal Code such a maxim is wholly out of place. Every offence is defined and the definition states not only what accused must have done but the state of mind with regard to the act when he was doing it. It must have been done, knowingly, voluntarily, fraudulently, dishonestly, or the like. And when it is stated that the act must be done with a particular knowledge or intention, the definition goes on to state what he must have known, or what he must have intended. Mayne's Criminal Law § § 8, 9. This is thus stated by Wright J in Sherry v De Rutzen, L R (1900) 1 Q B 918. "There is a presumption that mens rea, an evil intention or a knowledge of the wrongfulness of the act is an essential ingredient in every offence, but that presumption is liable to be displaced either by the word of the Statute creating the offence or by the subject matter with which it deals and both must be considered."

Intention—Method of proving The criminal law merely defines the criminal state of mind essential for each respective crime. The idea of criminal intent, then usually implies of deliberateness, knowledge, object, and the like, its absence is often indicated by the ideas of mistake, good faith, reasonable belief, and the like. So far as evidence of it is concerned the evidence of emotion, of knowledge, or of design has a bearing only so far as emotion or knowledge, or design enter by the criminal law as constituents of criminal intent. In other words, there is no special evidence of intent (with the exception to be mentioned) apart from evidence of emotion, of knowledge, or design. If those elements affect criminal intent (as they usually do) then whatever evidence would serve to prove those elements would be receivable, but no special or peculiar principle of evidence would be involved. Wigmore § 242. In illustration (e) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B. The fact of previous publications by A respecting B, showing ill will on the part of A towards B is relevant, as proving a criminal intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question. Here previous ill feeling shows motive of the publication. See also illustration (j). So also where the charge is of breaking and entering into a house with intent to steal, obviously intent there signifies "design or plan," and what ever would otherwise be receivable to show design would also be here receivable—in particular, the conduct throwing light on the design.

of the person's entrance. This is further illustrated by illustration (1). So on a charge of uttering counterfeit notes, knowing them to be spurious, knowledge is an ingredient of the criminal intent, and whatever evidence would be otherwise suitable to show knowledge would here be appropriate. In short, intent is a separate proposition for proof does not commonly exist. Knowledge, emotion, and design are distinct from each other, and have more or less distinct modes of proof. But as intent is constituted of one or more of these ingredients, it forms no separate title of proof, for each of the ingredients is to be proved in the way proper to itself. Wigmore § 242. There is, however, one element in intent which is distinct from any of those above, and may thus have to be shown by different evidence. This is the element of deliberateness or wilfulness,—the negative of inadvertence, accident. (193 Section 15) The accused in a case of forgery and conspiracy had previously given evidence in a Court as to the genuineness of the document. Held that though the statement could not be admitted as confession, the jury if independently satisfied that the documents are not genuine the evidence is to be regarded as having high evidentiary value upon the question of intention whether or not they are in conspiracy. Ambar Ali v Emperor A I R 1929 Cal 539.

Intention—Presumption from act. Every person is presumed to intend the natural and ordinary consequences of his act. If the tendency of the publication was injurious to the plaintiff, the law will assume that the defendant by publishing it intended to produce the injury which it was calculated to effect. Have v Wilson, 9 B & C 613. So it often occurs in human experience that the mere fact that a particular act has been done affords the best evidence of the motive or intention with which it was done. If one was to break and enter a building which was known to be on fire the reasonable presumption from his act would be that his intention was either to attempt the extinguishment of the fire or the rescue of the property or persons within it. So if one was to be found in the night time in the act of breaking into a building in which money or property of great value was deposited, his act would give very strong evidence indeed of the motive or purpose which prompted it. State v Tuler 69 Ia 718=27 N W 485. So in R v Casement (Not Tr) Lord Reading C J expressed the view in almost identical terms. He said "A man's intention is to be gathered from his acts. A man must be held to have intended the natural and reasonable consequences of his act. That is one of the fundamental principles of our law, and after all, it is only plain common sense. Where a man does an act which would appear reasonably to involve certain consequences, you are entitled to assume that he intended those consequences." Donough Car Ex 105, see also Sella Muthu v Palla Muthu, 35 M 186, Per Cuming J in Hazrat Gul Khan v The King-Emperor, 32 C W N 315. But in the same case Mukherjee J took a different view. It is not always quite easy to apply the rule of English law that a man must be presumed to intend the natural or probable consequences of his act to the Indian criminal law in view of the distinction that the Indian Penal Code makes between intention and knowledge. Per Mukherjee J in Ibid.

The argument is based purely on the doctrine of chance, and it is the mere repetition of instances and not their system or scheme that satisfy the logical demand. Yet, in order to satisfy this demand it is at least necessary that prior acts should be similar. Since it is the improbability of a like result being repeated by mere chance that carries probative weight, the essence of this probative effect is in the similarity of the instances. So, where the intent of an erroneous addition in a book keeper's accounts is in issue the erroneous addition of a bill rendered to a former employer ten years before would have significance because it is still within the limits of ordinary casual error that such things should occur at intervals, but several other erroneous additions in the book keeper's own favour in the same year and in the same book of accounts go to exclude the explanation of casual error and leave deliberate intent as the more probable explanation. In short there must be a similarity in the various instances in order to give them probative value,—as indeed the general logical canon requires.

It is this requirement of similarity which leaves so much room for difference of opinion and accounts for the bewildering variances of rulings in the different

S 14 jurisdictions and even in the same jurisdiction and in the case of the same offence. Some judges incline to treat the judicial test of probative value as identical with the common sense test, and to admit such instances as bear a similarity liberally interpreted by the standard of every day reasoning. Other judges set their faces firmly against every instance which is not in all fours with the offence in issue regardless of the consideration that justice consists quite as much in protecting the public against evil doers as in showing mercy to those whose guilt has been more or less skilfully concealed. It is hopeless to attempt to reconcile the precedents under the various heads, for too much depends on the tendency of the Court in dealing with a flexible principle. Wigmore § 302

Anonymous Intent. It will be seen that to prove ~~the~~ the strength of foregoing kind of inference does not rest exclusively on a given person's connection with the prior injurious transactions. It is possible to negative accident or inadvertence and to infer deliberate human intent, without forming any conclusion as to the personality of the doer. Thus, if a cellar window is found broken and the pieces falling inside, one morning after a high wind, he may well assume the probability that the force of the wind blew the glass in, but if on the next morning and the next he again finds a window broken in the same way though no high wind prevailed the night before he gives up the hypothesis of the force of the wind as the explanation, and concludes that a deliberate human effort was the highly probable cause of the breaking, although he can form no notion whatever of the personality of the doer. It is thus clear that innocent intent—accident, inadvertence or the like—may be negatived by anonymous instances of the previous occurrence of the same or a similar thing. After assuming or proving the accused's connection with the deed charged, then to negative innocent intent, resort is had to the anonymous instances, and they may have equal force for that purpose, whether they are connected with the defendant or not. This mode of proof is not infrequently resorted to. The only limitation upon this mode of proof is that the defendant's doing of the act in issue must be shown by other evidence at some stage of the trial, and the anonymous instances should not be received until the trial Court is satisfied with the amount of evidence introduced or pleaded for showing that connection. Wigmore § 303

Theory of Evidencing Design or System. When the very doing of the act charged is still to be proved one of the evidential facts receivable is the person's design or plan to do it. This in turn may be evidenced by conduct of sundry sorts as well as by direct assertions of the design. But where the conduct offered consists merely in the doing of other similar acts it is obvious that something more is required than that mere similarity, which affords for evidencing intent. The object here is not merely to negative an innocent intent at the time of the act charged but to prove a pre-existing design, system, plan, or scheme, directed forward to the doing of that act. In the former case (of intent) the attempt is merely to negative the innocent state of mind at the time of the act charged; in the present case the effort is to establish a definite prior design or system which included the doing of the act charged as a part of its consummation. In the former case the result is to give a complexion to a conceded act, and ends with that, in the present case, the result is to show (by probability) a precedent design which in its term is to evidence (by probability) the doing of the act designed. The added element, then, must be not merely a similarity in the result but such a concurrence of concurrent features that the various acts are naturally to be explained as caused by a general plan of which they are the individual manifestations. Thus, where the act of passing counterfeit money is conceded, and the intent done is in itself the fact of two previous utterances in the same month might well tend to negative innocent intent, but where the very act of uttering is in dispute—is where the defendant claims that his identity has been mistaken—and the object is to show that he had a general system or plan of working off a quantity of counterfeit money and did carry it out in this instance the fact of two previous utterances may be in itself of trifling and inadequate significance. In Indle v Insurance Co L R 1 C P D 91, 100, Lushley J R said: "I agree, that—" order to prove that A has committed a fraud on B it is neither sufficient nor even relevant to prove that A committed fraud upon C D and E. Stopping there, I admit that proposition. But let it be shown that the fraud on B is one of a class of other transactions having common features, then I disagree altogether with that proposition. The answer to the objection that evidence of frauds on other persons cannot be admitted is that this transaction is one of a class, that there are features in common, the features in common being a false pretence and a knowledge of that false pretence on the part of the defendant company, and the moment that is shown the plaintiff's case is established.

It will be seen that the difference between requiring similarity, for acts negating innocent intent, and requiring common features indicating common design for acts showing design, is a difference of degree rather than of kind, for to be similar involves having common features, and to have common features is merely to have a high degree of similarity. This is another reason why the precedents are so difficult to reconcile, for the Courts have not always perceived that there are in truth these two distinct purposes and therefore two distinct tests for such evidence. Nevertheless the distinction is a real one. It is to be seen in concrete illustrations, even though in abstract definition it is not easy to formulate. The clue to the difference is best gained by remembering that in the one class of cases the act charged is assumed as done, and the mind asks only for something that will negate innocent intent, and the mere prior occurrence of an act, similar in its gross features—i.e. the same doer, and the same sort of act, but not necessarily the same mode of acting nor the same sufferer—may suffice for that purpose. But when the very act is the object of proof, and is desired to be inferred from a plan or system, the combination of common features that will suggest a common plan as their explanation involves so much higher a grade of similarity as to constitute a substantially new and distinct test. An occasional error in judicial rulings is to require the higher conditions of the present test where only the preceding test (for intent) is needed. Two necessary limitations are to be observed in the use of this class of evidence of design. (1) Anonymous acts are not available as they are for evidencing intent for the whole purpose of the evidence is to fix a design upon the accused as making it likely that he carried it out, and thus that it was he who did the act charged. (2) The object being to argue to the act charged from a design or plan to do it, the prior acts are received to show that system since, however, it may require a number of acts and circumstances to furnish the desired mass of conduct illustrating this design or system, and since the production of only parts or fragments of it would in effect violate the principle and remain in evidence merely as affecting the accused's character, the trial Court must pass upon the offer before hand, to see whether if offered in its entirety it satisfies the proper test and is sufficient to go to the jury, and must, if the offer is sanctioned, require an assurance that it will be forthcoming in its entirety. Wigmore § 304

Knowledge, meaning of. Knowledge signifies a state of being aware. The notions of knowledge, belief, and consciousness are not precisely identical, but they have a common feature, which is the typical one so far as concerns the modes of evidencing these mental states. That feature is most nearly expressed by the term consciousness, i.e. presence in the mind of an impression as to a given fact. Thus a person's knowledge of a city's streets may be inferred from his conduct in finding his way through them unerringly, his consciousness of guilt may be inferred from his conduct in fleeing from arrest, his belief in a friend's innocence of embezzlement may be inferred from his conduct in trusting him with money. The respective terms are by usage more usually associated with different relations in which this impression of mind arises, the term belief is used commonly when the impression is thought of as bearing on present or future action, consciousness when thought of as bearing on past action, and knowledge when thought of in connection with the reality of external objects. Wigmore § 300

External circumstances as evidencing knowledge, belief or consciousness. There are, in a broad analysis, four kinds of circumstances (events or things) which may point forward to the probability that a given person received a given mental impression (i.e. obtained knowledge, formed a belief, or was made conscious)

S 14

- (1) The direct exposure of the fact to his sense of sight, hearing, or the like,
- (2) The express making of a communication to him,
- (3) The reputation in the community on the subject, is leading, probably to an express communication,

(1) The intrinsic quality of the occurrence, is leading either to actual perception by his senses or to express communication.

Throughout all the four modes there run two considerations, affecting some modes more strongly than others (a) the probability that the person received an impression of my fact at all, and (b) the probability that from the particular occurrence he would gain an impression as to the specific fact in question. Doubt may arise upon either of the points, and the various modes above are stronger or weaker in one or the other of these considerations. The four modes may now be examined more in detail.

(1) Direct exposure of the fact to the senses. Here there is seldom any doubt as to the element (b) above: the question usually is whether the fact in question was brought within the range of the senses so as probably to be perceived at all. The typical case is the possession of a document. If a deed or a notice was laid on A's desk, the probability (greater or less according to circumstances) is that A read it. But actual possession by A is not necessary: the posting of a placard in a street through which A habitually passes is some evidence that A ultimately came to see and understand its contents. Occasionally the element (b) above is the emphatic one, for example where A is charged with selling liquor to B a minor: the appearance of B is indicating A's knowledge of B's minority or his belief in B's maturity was the fact brought before A, and the question is whether it would probably have informed him as to the further specific fact namely, B's age.

(2) Express communication. Little difficulty can arise here. There may be a question as to whether the communication came from a source which the person was fairly bound to consider authentic, but this would be a question of substantive law involving the elements of good faith, constructive notice, or the like. There may also be a question as to the interpretation of the communication,—whether its sense could properly be taken as of one sort or another, but this also is a question of substantive law.

(3) Reputation. Here the element (a) is the important one. The probative considerations are that, when a matter is so much talked of in a community that a reputation arises about it, a member of that community, in his ordinary intercourse with others will come to hear it mentioned, i.e. by express communication, and the question is whether the probability is that there would be such a general discussion and whether the person is likely to have learned of that discussion. The first part of this inquiry—whether a reputation can arise—depends on the nature of the matter: the second part depends on the situation of the person in question.

(4) Quality of the occurrence, in general. Sundry cases here combine the considerations of all the preceding modes as well as of both the elements (a) and (b) above. Thus a former accident to apparatus owned by A may indicate that A learned of the defect in the apparatus either because he probably observed the former accident or because he probably was told of it by his subordinate having charge of the apparatus, or because complaint was probably made to him, and not only is the probability (a) of his having learned of the former accident thus involved but also the probability (b) that the former accident would have revealed to him, as to the fact of the existence of the defect. So, also, a former act of violence by the deceased in order to have any value to show the slayer's ground for apprehension of an attack must (a) not only have been communicated to the slayer, (b) but also must be such as would create a belief in the deceased's probable aggression. Wignmore § 245

Proof of knowledge from other instances. Where the doing of the act involved is not disputed a knowledge existing at the time of the act may be in dispute. Thus proof of knowledge becomes absolutely necessary for certain offences—such as uttering of forged or counterfeit paper and the possession of stolen goods, while it is ruely an element to be proved in other offences.

such as robbery, rape and homicide. In resorting to former offences or other similar acts to show knowledge, it is sufficient to invoke the general principles of proving knowledge, as already set forth Wigmore § 301. In R v Dosset 2 C & K 307, Maule J said "If a person were charged with having wilfully poisoned another, and it were a question whether he knew a certain white powder to be poison, evidence would be admissible to show that he knew what the powder was because he had administered to another person who had died." In R v Cooper, 3 Cox Cr 547, which was a case of false charge of indecent conduct towards S with the intent of extorting money, evidence of a previous obtaining of money by such means was offered. Cresswell J observed "If a prisoner is proved to have stated on other occasions that he had obtained money by the same means that are stated to have been used in this case is it not a fair inference to make to the jury that his object was to obtain money here?" Surgey Ballantine for the accused said in reply "That does not show that he had in intention to obtain money at this particular time. Suppose the charge was breaking into a house with intent to steal, the fact of his having broken into the house before would show that he knew how the offence was to be accomplished but it could not be adduced to show what his intention was on the second occasion, and this shows the difference between proof of knowledge and that of intention." Cresswell J "The question is whether on this occasion he did an act with the design of effecting a certain object. One step in the proof would be to show that he would be likely to know that a certain result would follow and if it can be proved out of his own mouth that he was aware that such a result would be produced, it is one ingredient in the necessary proof that he contemplated it. Suppose a charge against a man that he attempted to procure abortion the same medicine might be administered with that intention or without it if it could be shown that he had often given that medicine before and that he knew that abortion had always followed, surely that would be evidence against him. Or if on a charge of wounding a certain instrument had been used by the prisoner with a dangerous result, would not that be admissible to show that he knew the consequences of using it?"

Intention and Drunkenness Involuntary drunkenness, by operation of s 85 of the Penal Code, places a man exactly in the same position as if his aberration of intellect arose from any of the usual forms of unsoundness of mind. But voluntary drunkenness is itself no defence. The Penal Code requires it to be assumed that a man voluntarily drunk had the same knowledge as he would have had if he had been intoxicated (vide ss 85 and 86 of the Penal Code, Mayne's Criminal Law § 200). In R v Doherty 16 Cox 306 Stephen J in his address to the Jury said "The general rule as to intention is that a man intends the natural consequences of his act. It is almost trivial for me to observe that a man is not excused from crime by reason of his drunkenness. If it were so, you might as well at once shut up the Criminal Courts because drink is the occasion of a large proportion of the crime which is committed but, although you cannot take drunkenness as any excuse for crime yet when the crime is such that the intention of the party committing it is one of its constituent elements, you may look at the fact that a man was in drink in considering whether he formed the intention necessary to constitute the crime."

According to section 85 of the Indian Penal Code drunkenness if it is voluntary is no excuse. "So voluntary drunkenness does not, of course, preclude any offence, but it is generally taken into account as throwing light on the question of intention." Per Glover J in R v Lamm Sahai (1861) W R Gap No 24. This section was in accordance with the English law as obtained at that time. In R v Monkhouse 1 Cox C C 55 Coleridge J said

"Drunkenness is ordinarily neither a defence nor excuse for a crime and where it is available as a partial answer to a charge it rests on the prisoner to prove it, and it is not enough that he was excited or rendered more irritable unless the intoxication was such as to prevent him from restraining himself from committing the act in question or to take away from him the power of forming any specific intention. See also L v Mead 7 C & P 297 per Alderson B, R v Thomas, C S P 817, per Parke B.

S 14

Therefore, where from a given state of facts the law assumes a particular knowledge, or that knowledge is a matter of inference, intoxication cannot be set up. For instance, if a man shoots another he would not be allowed to say that he was drunk, and did not know that he held a pistol in his hand or that the effect of discharging it would be to cause death. So if he killed another under circumstances which, had he been sober, could have created no alarm in his mind, he would not be allowed to plead that through intoxication he imagined that his life was in danger. But where it is incumbent on the prosecution to make out specific knowledge of a particular fact, and where the circumstances raise no necessary inference of it, the rule would be different. For instance, if a man is charged with passing off a counterfeit rupee, knowing it to be such, the knowledge must be made out by the prosecution, and is not necessarily to be assumed, though it might be inferred, from the mere fact of passing the coin. Suppose the fact to be established that the man had several good rupees in his pocket but knew also that he had one bad rupee, still it would have to be made out that he knew he was passing the bad rupee, not merely that he had the means of knowing, if he had taken better precautions. It would be clearly inadmissible to show that he was in a hurry to catch a train, and therefore did not examine the coin, and I can see no reason why evidence of his intoxication should not be admissible for the purpose. Hurry is a state of mind voluntarily brought about just as much as drunkenness. Mayne's Criminal Law § 290.

In England recently the liability of a person for voluntary intoxications has undergone some change. "The legal aspect of intemperance are very involved. Till recently it was generally held that drink was no excuse for crime. This doctrine must now, however, be modified, and it is held that total deprivation of self control, or at all events delusions induced by excess, as in delirium tremens, renders an individual irresponsible for his actions." Tay Med Jur 6th Ed p 897, see also R v Davies, 14 Cox Cr C 703. R v Meade (1909) 1 K B 395 = 78 L J K B 476, the Court said "It is not expedient to confer upon voluntary drunkenness a wider immunity than the partial immunity it has enjoyed since 1819. The presumption that everyone intends the natural consequences of his act, may be rebutted in the case of a man who is drunk by showing his mind to have been so affected by the drink that he was incapable of knowing that what he was doing was dangerous."

If this be proved the presumption that he intended to do grievous bodily harm may be rebutted. The language of the Judge at the trial (did not vary) from the true rule and it did not imply that short of insanity drunkenness could not reduce murder to manslaughter. Ibid. So "deliberate acts neither done by a sober or a drunken man, constitute murder, not manslaughter." R v Scholey, 1909 cited in Roscoe Cr Ev 1151. It is for the jury whether defendant was so drunk as to be unable to form an intention. R v Moulton 8 Cr A R 98. Nothing but inability to distinguish between right and wrong is a defence to murder. R v Galbraith, 8 Cr A R 101 (1912.) Roscoe Cr Ev 1151.

In England the law was finally settled by the House of Lords in R v Beard, 14 Cr A R 159 (1920). The following rule was laid down in that case—

Involuntary intoxication, whether produced by intoxication or otherwise, is a defence to a criminal charge.

When a specific intent is a necessary ingredient of the offence charged the jury may take into consideration evidence going to show that the defendant was so intoxicated as to be unable to form such intent.

Evidence of intoxication falling short of such incapacity, though it may establish a more ready tendency to some violent passion (than if defendant were sober), does not rebut the presumption of the existence of an intent to produce the natural consequences of his acts." Roscoe Cr Ev 1152.

Dealer with a Partnership—Knowledge of dissolution. The modes available for showing notice of a dissolution of partnership as against one who has dealt with its members after dissolution are three in number, namely (1) exposure to observation, i.e. publication where the person would be likely to see it (2) express communication and (3) reputation or notoriety. So far as the first kind of notion is concerned the only question which should be considered in regard to it is whether the newspaper containing the notice of dissolution must be shown to have been subscribed to or taken by the person to be notified, but this question is rarely raised as one of admissibility, and is generally treated as one either of constructive notice or of the sufficiency of the evidence on all the facts of the case. In Gordfrey v Macauley, Peak. 155, Lord Ellenborough C J said "The Gazette was not (conclusive) evidence of notice any more than any other newspaper, but in all cases, if published in the neighbourhood of a person it ought to be left to the jury whether he had notice of it or not." Similarly in Leson v Holt, 1 Stark 186 the same learned judge said "I shall receive evidence of the advertisement in the Gazette, but that unless it were proved that the party was in the habit of reading the Gazette the evidence would be of little avail. The advertisement in the Times was not admissible at all without proof that it was taken by the party. The first instance in which such evidence was received was a case where a person inserted a notice in a provincial Sunday paper, and the Court held that it was admissible in evidence because it was probable that the party had seen it since he took in the paper and the advertisement related to his business. See also Jenkins v Bliard, 1 Stark. 418, 420, Munn v Baker 2 Stark 355, Rouley v Horne, 3 Bing 2, Hart v Alexander 7 C & P 746 749, 751 753. An express communication raises no evidential question. A reputation or notoriety of dissolution serves to evidence knowledge. Because it is based upon probability that the plaintiff would be likely to know a fact of which no one else in the neighbourhood seemed to be ignorant. Humes v O'Bryan 74 Ala 81. But here the question tends to become one of constructive notice or ostensible partnership and thus of substantial law. Wigmore § 255.

Prosecution without probable cause. Where in an action for malicious prosecution or defamation or for false arrest the issue arises whether the prosecutor had reasonable grounds and acted in good faith, a bad reputation of a plaintiff is a circumstance bearing on this state of mind, and is admissible. Vide, Fabrigas v Mostyn 20 How St Tr 94. Rodriguez v Tadmec, 2 Esp 721, Downing v Litcher, 2 Mo & Rob 374, Wigmore § 258.

Knowledge—Presumption of—from other sundry facts. The question is whether A at the time of committing an act of bankruptcy, knew that he was insolvent. Letters found in his possession after the act of bankruptcy, but bearing post mark before it, and containing refusals to lend him money are admissible (after the fact of his insolvency has been proved independently) to show his knowledge of the matters referred to but not the truth of the facts. Vacher v Coels M & M 353. Thomas v Cornell, 4 M & W 267, Phip Ev 68. Execution of a document will imply knowledge of its contents. In re Cooper, 20 Ch D 611. Phip Ev 4th Ed 127. Knowledge of the contents of a document will be implied where it is a party's duty to know. Halmari's Case, L R 9 Ch D 329, Phip Ev 4th Ed 128. On a question whether a captain of a ship knew the blockade of a port a notification in the gazette to the effect that it was blockaded was held to be relevant. Harrai v Wise, 9 B & C 712, Step Dig 90. From the attestation of a document by a witness, knowledge of the contents of the document on his part cannot be presumed. Salamat v Budh 1 A 306. Bonga v Jagat, 44 C 186 (P C). 37 A 300, Ram Chunder v Haridas 9 C 463.

A person is said to have 'notice' of a fact when he actually knows that fact, or when, but for wilful neglect or omission from an enquiry or search which he ought to have made, or gross negligence he would have known it, or when information of the fact is given to or obtained by, his agent under the circumstances in the Indian Contract Act, 1872 s 229. Vide s 3 of the Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882, see also s 3 of the Indian Trusts Act II of 1882. This definition correctly codifies the law as to notice which existed before the passing of the Act. Chunaman v Balli 9 A 599. Constructive notice may be defined to be knowledge which the Court imputes to a person from the circumstances of the case upon a legal presumption, so strong that it cannot be allowed to be rebutted, that the knowledge must exist, though it may not have been

S 14 formally communicated Hewitt v Looxmore 9 Hare 149, Gour T P 1st 2nd Ed p 59 According to section 229 of the Contract Act, a notice to an agent is a notice to the principal According to English law this kind of notice is termed imputed notice Kettlewell v Watson 21 Ch D 685 (724)

Whatever puts a party on enquiry, amounts in law to notice, provided the enquiry becomes a duty and would lead to a knowledge of the facts by the exercise of ordinary intelligence and understanding Wherever the facts put a party on enquiry, constructive notice will be imputed to him if he deignedly abstain from enquiry for the purpose of avoiding notice But where a party could have learnt the facts by enquiry he is not prejudiced because he did not inquire Radha v Kalpataru 17 C L J 209, see also Obit v Hinton, (1899) 2 Ch 264 Beruel v Fice 1905 1 Ch 632, Agra Bank v Barry, L R 7 H L 135 If a person is in possession, it may be sufficient to put one dealing with the property, on enquiry as to the nature and extent of his interest Barnhart v Greenshields, 9 Moo P C 18 Manchary v Kongsooo 6 B H C R 59, Haileem v Beejoy, 22 W R R 8, Jugal Kishore v Kartie, 21 C 116 Bhikhu v Udit, 25 A 366, Kondiba v Nana 341 A 138

There is some conflict of opinions as to whether registration is sufficient notice According to the Calcutta High Court mere registration does not amount to notice Bumari v Ramjee 7 C W N 11, Monmaha v Troylloch, 2 C W N 750 The same view is taken by Sir Arthur Collins and Mr Justice Hindeley of the Madras High Court in Shan Mann Mull v Madras Building Co, 15 M 268 According to Bombay and Allahabad High Courts registration is sufficient notice Dundaya v Chenbasapa, 9 B 427, Chintaman v Rur chandra 14 B 506, 16 Ind Cas 102=9 A L J 759 But now the question has been set at rest by the decision of the Privy Council in Tilakdell v Khedam pal, 25 C W N 49=48 C 1 P C So notice according to that case cannot in all cases be imputed from the mere fact of registration of a document Whether registration is or is not notice in itself depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case, upon the degree of care and caution which an ordinarily prudent man would necessarily take for the protection of his own interest by search into the registers kept under the Registration Act Ibid

Knowledge—observation, opportunity to observe It is obviously impossible to speak with accuracy of a witness' knowledge as that which the principles of testimony require When a thing is known to be it is, and that would be the end of inquiry A witness cannot be assumed beforehand, by the law to know things, the most it can assume is that he thinks he knows Accordingly, the rules upon the subject in hand are all concerned, not directly with the witness' knowledge but with the opportunity of observing and his actual observation The practical tests, then and the detailed rules, are in strictness concerned with observation and not with knowledge Hignore § 63

Good faith—According to the General Clauses Act, (X of 1897) a thing shall be deemed to be done in good faith where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not [Rule 3 (20)] Facts apparently collateral may be proved if they show good faith or pudence or the knowledge or information on which a person has acted when such fact is in issue These instances occur most frequently in cases of assignments for the benefit of creditors the good faith of the holder of a bill or note and of vendors and purchasers Thus in an action for fraudulent representations as to the solvency of a person, the general reputation as to the solvency of such person is at the time the representations were made Illustration (f) Sheen v Bumpstead 1 Hurl & C 38 Here the gist of the offence is fraud (Illustration (f)) Freeman, 2 Smith L C 71 Bonafides may always be given in evidence as a defence, necessarily for where there is bonafides there cannot be any fraudulent intent Shewsbury v Blomt, 2 M & G 475 Jawlings v Bull 1 C B 291 The illustration (f) is based on the case of Sheen v Bumpstead 2 H L 193=32 L J Lx 271 In that case which was in action brought against the defendant for false representation as to the trustworthiness of W the plaintiff as part of his case showed that the defendant at about the time of the representation had bought goods from W at 25 per cent under cost price, the dant was allowed to ask his shopman (when he was called to explain the last mentioned transaction) and four other trade-men of the town where W carried on business "Was W, at the time of the representation as to his character, trust worthy to your belief?" Coelburn C J in admitting such evidence said

With regard to the question put to the other witnesses respecting the general reputation of W for trustworthiness as a tradesman, I think it also admissible. It was important to ascertain the state of mind of the defendant at the time he made the representation complained of, and that could only be shown by inference. A plaintiff may not be able to bring home to the defendant, by direct and positive evidence, a knowledge of the falsehood of his representation, the plaintiff may, however, prove certain facts which necessarily lead to that inference. Now suppose the plaintiff had called every trade-man in the town to say not only that W was insolvent but that his insolvency was notorious would it not have been fair and obvious to the jury that the defendant must have known what was the common knowledge of every other trade-man? On the other hand if, after the plaintiff has established a prima facie case against the defendant the latter calls a number of trade-men who have had dealings with W, and they say that at the time the defendant made the representation they believed that W was perfectly solvent, is not that strong evidence—morally at least—from which the jury may infer that what was the common opinion of trade-men in the neighbourhood was shared by the defendant and that in making the representation he acted in good faith?"

North Et 136, Woodroffe Et 193 Illustrations (g) and (h) are also examples of good faith. Illustration (g) is based on the case of Gerish v. Chastier 1 Com B 13. In that case Maule J observed "The evidence was material and was properly admitted. It intended to show that the defendant was not seeking to evade payments of goods ordered for his benefit, but that he had actually paid the person with whom done he had contracted. It showed that the defendant conducted himself like a party who was dealing with C as a principal and not as an agent." Woodroffe Et 193. And in cases of assignments for the benefit of creditors a deed apparently valid may be attacked for circumstances surrounding the making of it. The good faith which is necessary to support it is then a vital part of the proof, to rebut the presumption of fraud. Deus v. Cornish 20 Ark 332. Illustration (h) is based on the leading case, R. v. Thurborn, 1 Den Cr C R 387. In that case Parke B said "The rule of law on this subject seems to be that if a man find goods that have been actually lost, or are reasonably supposed by law to have been lost and appropriates them, with intent to take the entire dominion over them, really believing when he takes them that the owner cannot be found, it is not larceny. But if he takes them with the like intent though lost, or reasonably supposed to be lost, but reasonably believing that the owner can be found, it is larceny. In applying this rule, as indeed in the application of all fixed rules, questions of some nicety may arise, but it will generally be ascertained whether the person accused had reasonable belief that the owner could be found, by evidence of his previous acquaintance with the ownership of the particular chattel, the place where it is found, or the nature of the marks upon it. In some cases it would be apparent, in other appear only after examination. It would probably be presumed, that the later would examine the chattel, as a honest man ought to do, at the time of taking it and if he did not restore it to the owner, the jury might conclude that he took it, when he took complete possession of tanquam suum. The mere taking it up to look at it would not be a taking possession of the chattel." In this connection it must be borne in mind that the definition of 'good faith' as given in the Penal Code runs as follows "Nothing is said to be done or believed in 'good faith', which is done or believed without due care and attention."

In cases of homicide, proof is allowed of threats made by the deceased against the accused and communicated to him for the purpose of showing that he had reasonable ground to fear violence and to show that he acted in self defence. R. v. Hopkins 10 Cox Cr 229. In Allison v. United States 160 U S 203 Chief Justice Fuller said "Here the threats were recent and were communicated, and were admissible in evidence as relevant to the question

S. 14 whether defendant had reasonable cause to apprehend an attack fatal to life or fraught with great bodily injury, and hence was justified in acting on a hostile demonstration and one of much less pronounced character than if such threats had not preceded it. They were relevant because indicating cause of apprehension of danger and reason for promptness to repel attack, but they could not have been admitted on a record such as this, if offered by the prosecution as tending to show spite, ill will, or grudge on the part of the person threatened, nor could they being admitted on defendant's behalf, if coupled with an actual or apparent hostile demonstration, be turned against him in the absence of evidence justifying such a construction. The logical inference was that these threats excited apprehension, and another and inconsistent inference could not be arbitrarily substituted. The same view is taken by Long C J in Thomason v Territory, 4 N M 150, a New Mexico case where he said "If there is even slight evidence to indicate that the act of killing was done under a present reasonable apprehension to himself of great bodily harm prior threats should not be excluded." Evidence of communicated threats is intended to shed light upon the mental attitude of the prisoner towards the deceased when homicide occurred, uncommunicated threats are evidence of the mental attitude of the deceased toward the prisoner. State v Evans 33 W Va 417. When the good faith of a party is in issue, the proof is not confined to circumstances from which such good faith may be inferred, but the witness may state directly that he acted in good faith. Shaw v Payne 114 Mass 520. But a man's own assertion of what he believed or recollection of what he thinks he believed at a certain time, is worth very little without some kind of confirmation from external conditions. Derry v Peak, 14 App Cas 337. In each case good faith as defined by the Indian Penal Code should be considered with reference to the general circumstances and the capacity and intelligence of the person whose conduct is in question. Bhaurao v Mulji, 12 B 377 (393), Emperor v Abdul, 31 B 293 (298), Arfan Ali v Emperor, 44 C 66, Darey v Corey, (1901) A C 477.

In a case where an accused is charged with murder, he can assert that he has committed the crime in self defence. In such a case the state of his mind at the time of the killing becomes a material fact. An important element in determining his justification is his belief in an impending attack by the deceased. So reasonable fear of such an attack repels the conclusion of malice. And the character of the deceased for violence has much to do in determining the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the fear under which the accused claims to have acted. So to prove good faith or want of malice evidence can be given that the deceased was a reckless and overbearing bully and was fatally bent on mischief. Nomoe v State, 5 Ga 137, Franklin v State, 29 Ala 17, Harbacl v State 43 Tex 250.

Negligence whether proved by habit. Negligence is in one aspect, the not doing of a particular act, but in another and more correct aspect, it is the doing of one act in a manner which amounts to negligence in that some other act is omitted which ought to have accompanied it. There is no reason why such a habit should not be used as evidential—either a habit of negligent action or a habit of careful action. Higmore § 97. In State v M & L Railroad, 7 N H 528 (532), the indictment was for negligently running over a person at a crossing. One of the issues was whether the bell had been rung and the whistle sounded. Seracant C J in receiving the evidence that the same train run by the same engineer and fireman, had some times passed the crossing during the preceding year without those precautions, observed. It would seem to be axiomatic that a man likely to do or not to do a thing or to do it or not to do it in a particular way, as he is in the habit of doing or not doing it. But this must be understood of acts which are done or omitted to be done without any particular intent or purpose to injure any one, it cannot apply to acts that are done intentionally, wilfully or maliciously, because such acts are done with a specific object in view and they are performed, not by force of habit, but with a definite purpose. But when the question is, did these servants of the road without any intention whatever and through mere negligence or carelessness, omit to give these signals on that occasion, we think the enquiry was properly made.

as to what they had done before in that regard, and whether they had or had not grown habitually negligent of the requirements of the road in that particular. In this view of the case, we think the evidence was admissible,—not as evidence of character, not as evidence of fitness or unfitness, but simply as having some tendency to show that on this particular occasion these agents were more probably negligent and careless because they had before frequently neglected the same duty with impunity and had thus become habitually negligent in that regard.” As regards the admissibility of this kind of evidence Prof Wigmore says: “The real difficulty here seems to be two. Is it possible to believe that careless action can ever be anything more than casual or occasional? If it is, are we not preheating a careless disposition, rather than a genuine habit, and then are we not violating the rule against character in civil cases in employing such evidence? These doubts serve to explain the precedents that exclude such evidence, but the doubts are not well founded and that such evidence is often of probative value and is not attended by the inconveniences of character evidence.” Wigmore § 97. Such evidence is generally received under the Workmen’s Compensation Act, where evidence as to the habits or practice of the deceased or even of his class are admitted both in favour of the applicant and against him or her. Joy v Phillips Mills & Co, (1916) 1 K B 849.

If negligence can be inferred from repair of machine, high way or the like after an injury. The fact that the owner just after corporal injury improves the condition of the machine, high way etc is often offered as a piece of evidence which would indicate a belief on his part that the injury was caused by his negligence. But this assumption is not tenable. Injuries are often caused by reason of inevitable accident, and also by reason of contributory negligence of the injured person. To improve the condition of the injury-causing object is therefore to indicate a belief merely that it has been capable of causing such an injury, but indicates nothing more and is equally consistent with a belief in injury by mere accident or by contributory negligence, as well as by the owner’s negligence. Mere capacity of a place or thing to cause injury is not the fact that constitutes a liability for the owner, it must be a capacity which would have been known to an owner using reasonable diligence and foresight, and capacity to injure persons taking reasonable care in its use. Wigmore § 283. In Hart v A Co, 21 L T R N S 263 Bramwell B said:

“People do not furnish evidence against themselves simply by adopting a new plan in order to prevent the recurrence of an accident. I think that a proposition to the contrary would be barbarous. It would be, as I have often had occasion to tell juries, to hold that, because the world gets wiser as it gets older, therefore it was foolish before.” Similarly in Beever v Hanson, 20, L J Notes of cases 132, Coleridge CJ said: “Now a perfectly humane man naturally makes it physically impossible that a particular accident which has once happened can happen again, by fencing or covering or at any rate making safe the particular thing from which it arose. That, however, is no evidence of, and I protest against it being put forward as evidence of negligence. A place may be left for a hundred years unfenced when at last some one falls down it, the owner like a sensible and humane man, then puts up a fence, and upon this the argument is that he has been guilty of negligence, and shows that he thought the fence was necessary because he put it up. This is both unfair and unjust. It is making the good feeling and right principle of a man evidence against him.”

Ill will, malice, etc. The term ill will as used in the Act is not the exact equivalent of the term of malice, for malice as used in the English law implies the criminal intention which is presumed to underlie in every criminal offence. In a case of defamation malice is inferred from the defamatory character of the libel. If for any reason this presumption is rebutted it becomes necessary for the person seeking redress to show actual malice. In Hebditch v McIlwaine, L R (1894) 2 Q B p 58 Lord Esher said: “It is for the defendant to prove that the occasion was privileged. If the defendant does so the burden of showing actual malice is cast upon the plaintiff, but unless the defendant does so the plaintiff is not called upon to prove actual malice.” By the ex-

S. 14. expression 'ill will' then, is probably meant not merely the criminal intention which is the essence of the offence under enquiry, but a more positive mental condition exhibited in other overt acts. It is more akin to the somewhat technical term 'express malice', a phrase which is well known in the English Courts. Donough Cn Fr 123. Former grudges and antecedent menaces are evidence of the prisoner's ill will against the deceased (1 Phill Ec 511; Roscoe 550) because his state of mind with reference to the transaction is material. Phips 180, Roscoe Ec 580, see also R v Mason 8 Cr A R 171 (1912).

On a question of malice evidence of other criminal acts leading up to the one in question, which show the state of mind of the accused is admissible. Friend v Hamill 34 Md 298 (305). Threats to commit the crime for which a person is upon trial are constantly received as evidence against him, as circumstances proper to be considered in determining the question whether he has in fact committed the crime, for the reason that the threats indicate an intention to do it and the existence of this intention creates a probability that he has in fact committed it." Groves J in Stokes v People, 53 N Y 112. Such threats may also be circumstantially evidential of hatred or ill feeling or malice towards the injured person, in this way they are evidence to show emotion, while the emotion itself is evidential as an independent circumstance to show the act. So also where an emotion of hostility at a specific time is shown the existence in the same person of the same emotion at another time is in general plainly admissible. What that limit of time should be made to depend largely upon the circumstances of each case, and ought always to be left to the discretion of the trial Court. The state of feelings, with reference to malice, of one who has uttered a defamatory statement, may become important, under the substantive law in two ways, (1) as involving an excess of privilege otherwise existing, (2) as affording ground for aggravation of damages. For the purpose of showing this malice at the time of uttering the defamation, character of other utterances of the defendant may be offered, and the question arises whether and on what terms they are admissible. The probative value of other utterances showing malice at the time charged rest on a double argument. (A) that the other utterances indicate malice at the time of utterance, and (B) that malice then indicates malice at the time charged. Higmore §§ 103, 306, 401. In Burrett v Long, 3 H L C 395 (414), Purke B said "We are all of opinion that under such a plea the publication of previous libel on the plaintiff by the defendant is admissible evidence to show that the defendant wrote the libel in question with actual malice against the plaintiff." A long practice of libelling the plaintiff may show in the most satisfactory manner that the defendant was actuated by malice in the particular publication, and it did not take place through carelessness or inadvertence and the more the evidence approaches to the proof of a systematic practice, the more convincing it is. The circumstances that the other libels are more or less frequent, or more or less remote from the date of the publication of that in question, merely affects the weight not the admissibility, of the evidence." The length of time elapsing between the earlier utterance and that charged may of course affect the strength of the inference but lapse of time never affects the admissibility of the utterance. Burrett v Long, 3 H L C 395. So it is clear that after the plaintiff has proved the words as laid he may give evidence of other expressions made use of by the defendant, as proof of his ill will towards him. Buller v Atkinson 7 Q B 400. Cool v Field, 3 F p 133, Charlton v Burrett 5 Q B 121. Donaghay v Peake 5 P 125. Lord Kenyon, L C J in Whitman such evidence observed. The plaintiff may give evidence of any words used by the defendant to show the spirit and temper by which he was actuated." See also Lees v Hadon 5 P 166, Plunkett v Cobbett 5 I p 126. In M v H 14 H L C 30 C P 311 another libel two days before the trial was admitted. Tinterden L C J where he observed "However late anything, takes place it may be evidence of a previous intention as to previous facts." So any evidence of expressions of the defendant showing that he was actuated by a malicious spirit will be admissible. Per Purke B in Wright v B 11 Q B 171. M & R 175, Fargley v Bidey, 2 Buz N C 137.

In Bond v Douglas, 7 C & P 627, Ibinger L C B admitted evidence of other libels published of the plaintiff on the same subject within a few days after wards as showing the animus, see also Webb v Smith 4 Bing N C 379, Barnell v Allins, 1 M & Gr 807 But subsequent libels are not admissible where animus is not equivocal Stuart v Lovell 2 Stark 93 see also Pearce v Omsby, 1 Moo & Rob 455 But where it shows animus it is admissible Chubley v Estby, 6 C & P 136 But evidence of subsequent utterances of the same slander is only admissible, and not of any other actionable words Defries v Davies, 7 C & P 112 In some cases other slanders to the same effect was rejected on the ground that "the damages in this case may be increased by those words, and yet this record be no evidence in a subsequent action which may be founded upon them" Symmons v Blale, 1 Moo & Rob 477 In Pearson v Tematic 5 M & G 700 719, Findal C J in admitting repetitions of libel said "This appears to be the correct rule, viz, that either party may with a view to the damages give evidence to prove or disprove the existence of malicious motive in the mind of the publisher of defamatory matter but that if the evidence given for that purpose establishes another cause of action the jury should be cautioned against giving any damages in respect of it and that evidence tending to prove it cannot be excluded simply because it may disclose another and a different cause of action" Similarly in Simpson v Robinson 12 Q B D 311, Denman L C J said "Acts although subsequent might indicate the existence of motives at a former time and every other part of his conduct showing the same disposition may equally be laid before the jury,—refusing to make reparation for unjustifiable slander may have that effect In Lony v Barret, 7 Ir L R 439, other libels published in the same newspaper more than six years before, were received to show malice, see also Barret v Lony 3 H L C is 395, 401, 407, 411 Campfield v Bird, 3 C and K 36

In State v Humphrey, 1 Cimp 73 note which was an action for perjury Graham B admitted evidence of another false charge in another form to show malice In Hummings v Garson E B & C 346, the fact that the defendant, six months after the utterance of libel, charging a breaking and entering had publicly charged the plaintiff with dishonouring bills and had called him a rascal, was offered to show malice, but was rejected

Good will The term 'good will' is peculiar to the Act, and there is no equivalent for it in the English law, nor is used at all, except in a different sense The answer to a charge of 'express malice' would probably be the absence of express malice or some sort of defence that implied it This moreover, seems to be the meaning of the last clause of the illustration Donough Pt 123

State of body or bodily feeling, etc This section also provides for the admission of evidence regarding the state of body when that is in issue or relevant It would be in issue in all crimes of violence or offences affecting the human body within the meaning of the Penal Code It would be relevant in all questions of insanity, legitimacy, life insurance inheritance, and identity of persons Donough Cn 127 Illustration (1) shows how persons' expressions of feeling towards each other at or about any particular time may be used to show what those feeling were and (1) and (m) show the same thing in regard to states of body Cm 131 So whenever the bodily or mental feelings of an individual are material to be proved, the usual expressions for such feeling, made at the time in question, are also original evidence If they were the natural language of the affection whether of body or mind they furnish satisfactory evidence, and often the only proof of its existence And the question whether they are real or feigned, is for the jury to determine Greenl Et § 162 (a) cited in Taylor § 580 Thus the representations by a sick person of the nature and effects of malady under which he is labouring are receivable as original evidence, whether they may be made to the medical attendant, or to any other person, though the former are naturally entitled to greater weight than the latter in as much as a physician is far more capable than a man unacquainted with the symptoms of diseases of forming a correct judgment respecting the accuracy of the statement

S 14

Areson v Ld Kinnaird, 6 East 188, R v Blandey, 18 How St Tr 113, Grey v Young 4 Mc 31, Gilchrist v Bale 8 Wm 355 cited in Taylor § 500. Illustration (m) is based on Areson v Kinnaird, 6 East 188. So also answers of patients to enquiries made by medical men and others are evidence of their state of health provided they are confined to contemporaneous symptoms, and are not in a nature of irritative as to how, or by whom such symptoms were caused. Gardner Pezage Case, Le Mueh, 169, R v Nicholas 3 C & K 246, R v Gloster, 16 Cox 471, R v Gutridge, 9 C & P 471. The real test for the admission of such evidence is thus given by Mellish L J. Wherever it is material to prove the state of a person's mind, or what was passing in it, and what were his intentions, there you may prove what he said, because that is the only means by which you can find out what his intentions were. Suplen v St Leonards, L R 1 P D 154. This use of such statement is often spoken of as admissible under the res gestae notion, or as "original" evidence, i.e. not an exception to the Hearsay Rule. But this seems clearly unsound. There is one sort of evidence of mental condition which is in truth merely indirect or circumstantial and therefore not subject to the Hearsay Rule, e.g. where the sharpening of a knife on the morning before a homicide is taken as evidence of a design to kill, or where the repeated infliction of blows indicates malice or where running away is taken as indicating fear. But where a distinct assertion in the form of words, predicated a mental state, is offered—as "I have a pun in my side" or "I have the intention of going out of town" or "I do this for such and such a reason,"—this language is not an assertion of the existence of a fact, but is an assertion of my other sort of fact in the next phrase of Bowen L J. "The state of a man's mind is as much a fact as the state of digestion," and therefore such assertions being taken on the credit of the declarant as testimonial evidence of the fact asserted, are met by the Hearsay Rule. To admit them, then is to make an exception to the Hearsay Rule. The different kind of facts that may be the subject of such assertions may be roughly grouped as follows: (1) assertions of pain or other physical condition (2) assertions of pain, design, intention (3) assertions of feeling emotion motive reason (4) sundry assertions by a testator. Greenl Ev § 162 a Wigmore §§ 1714 to 1740. It is usually said that such declarations are receivable though they form the only proof of the given condition (Tay § 500) but this has been doubted, and it has been concluded to be the manifested condition and not the sickness itself which is the true res gestae to be explained (Phayer, 15 Ir L T 141—143) Phip Ld 3rd Ed p 51 M. Cunningham thinks that statements in illustrations (l) (i) and (m) are unaccompanied by any conduct on the part of the person making it, and can be admitted only so far as it relates to the existence of the mental or physical condition. It cannot be meant that a statement made by a person as to the circumstances in which he came to be poisoned should be admissible to prove the act of poisoning in a case in which the sufferer himself could be called and section 32 (1) would thus be inapplicable—Cunningham Ff 49, but see Palmer's Case, Not Tr, Reg v Madeline Smith, Will 358 Reg v Maybriel Not Tr, Reg v Richard Not Tr, Reg v Lamson, Not Tr cited in Donough Cir Ld pp 127—132.

Such Statements are exceptions to Hearsay Rule. It has already been stated that such statements are not original evidence but are real exceptions to the Hearsay Rule. In this case the Necessity Principle (rule notes under c 37) presents itself in a different form, viz. relative value of the statement. It is on the consideration that though the person's testimony on the stand may still be both actually and conveniently practicable yet the probability of their receiving from him testimony which shall be in value equal or superior to certain hearsay statements is small, thus, while there is hardly a necessity in the strict sense there is at least a desirability of resorting also to the hearsay statement. Applied specifically to the present Exception the judicial doctrine has been that there is a far necessity for lack of other better evidence for resorting to a person's own contemporary statements of his mental or physical condition. It is in fact possible to obtain by circumstantial evidence (chiefly of conduct) some knowledge of a human being's internal state of pain, emotion, motive, design and the like but in directness amount, and value, this source of evidence must usually be decidedly inferior to the person's own contemporary assertions of those conditions. It might be argued, however that the person's own statements on the stand would amply satisfy the need for his testimonial evidence. The answer is that statements of this sort on the stand, where there is ample opportunity for deliberate misrepresentation and small means of checking it by other evidence or testing it by cross examination are comparatively inferior to statements made at times when no inducement to misrepresentation existed and the probability of trustworthiness was greater. For the use of such statements, then made out of Court and under certain circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness there is a further necessity in the sense that there is no other equally satisfactory source of evidence either from the same person or elsewhere. It follows that the death insanity or non residence of the declarant is not a condition precedent, and this has not been questioned. Wigmore § 1714, see also section 21 clause (2).

In Aleson v Kinnaird 6 East 195 which appears as illustration (m) of section 14 Lord Ellenborough in admitting such statements observed "A witness has been received to relate that which has always been received from patients to explain—her own account of the cause of her being in bed at an unreasonable hour with the appearance of being ill. What were the complaints, what the symptoms, what the conduct of the parties themselves at the time are always received in evidence upon such inquiries, and must be resorted to from the very nature of the thing. The declaration was upon the subject of her own health at the time, which is a fact of which her own declaration is evidence, and that too made unwarped before she could contrive any answer for her own advantage and that of her husband, and therefore falling within the principle of the case in Skinner which I have alluded to. (The case referred to by him was Thompson v Trelanion Skin 402) So 'the evidence is admitted on the presumption, arising from experience that when a man does in fact his contemporary declarations accord with his real intention, unless there be some reason for misrepresenting such intention' Upham J in Hadley v Carter, 8 H N 42 "Wherever the bodily or mental feelings of an individual are material to be proved, the usual expressions of such feelings are original and competent evidence. These expressions are the natural reflexes of what it might be impossible to show by other testimony. As independent explanatory or corroborative evidence it is often indispensable to the due administration of justice. Such evidence must not be extended beyond the necessity upon which the rule is founded. It must relate to the present, not to the past. Anything in the nature of narration must be excluded." Per Swayne J in Insurance Co v Mosley, 8 Wall 397. So "such declarations made with no apparent motive for misstatement, may be better evidence of the maker's state of mind at the time than the subsequent testimony of the same purpose." Per Holmes J in Elmer v Fessenden, 151 Mass 359.

State of body In Annesley v Anglesea, 17 St Tr 1139 where the question was whether the claimant was the legitimate son of Lord and Lady Altham a vast amount of evidence was gone into on both sides regarding the bodily condition of Lady Altham during a certain period. Even medical testimony was adduced to prove that she was shortly before the claimant's birth, in a condition expecting maternity and that she had asserted her belief to that effect. In Douglas Caun Not Tr which was a similar case of succession, a question of legitimacy was also raised. The appellant, who claimed to be the heir to a dukedom and vast estates alleged that he was the legitimate son of Lady Jane Douglas and her husband Col Stuart. It was contended, on the other hand, by the objector that she was a spurious child. Consequently evidence was led as to the bodily condition of Lady Jane at various times and places. The three points considered by the House of Lords were as Lord Mansfield said "The situation of Lady Jane before her delivery, at her delivery and after it was over. The three were the points to which the evidence was directed at the trial. In Reg v Stanton, Not. Tr., where four prisoners were charged with conspiring to cause the death of a woman of weak intellect by a slow process evidence was admitted regarding her bodily state at

S 14 various intervals down to the date of her death "The object of his evidence" said Hawkins J "is to show that those who were about her and saw her from week to week had in opportunity of seeing the condition to which she was being reduced" Donough's Cr Et 131 The physical strength of a person may be of probative value to show that he was peculiarly capable or peculiarly incapable of doing the act in question Goodfille v Braham, 4 J R 498

Owner of vicious animals 'Whoever' says Lord Denman "keeps an animal accustomed to attack and bite mankind, with knowledge that it is accustomed, is prima facie liable in an action on the case if the suit of any person attacked and injured by the animal, without any advertment of negligence or default in securing or taking care of it The gist of the offence is the keeping the animal after knowledge of its mischievous propensities" Jenkins v Turner 1 Ld Raym 110, R v Huggins, 2 Ld Raym 1585, Cox v Burbidge 19 C B N S 430, Cole v Waring, 2 H & C 332, Gladman v Johnson, 36 L J C P 153 So where against the owner of an animal a scienter is to be proved (the knowledge of the animal's vicious quality), reputation of the animal is relevant Jones v Perry, 2 Ld Raym 482, Palmer v Coyle, 107 Ma 136 Particular acts of viciousness are also relevant, for the same reason Vide illustration (c) So previous attempts of a dog to bite was admitted to show the owner's knowledge of its disposition Worth v Gilling, 1 L R 2 C P B, see also Thomas v Morgan, 2 C M and R 496, Judge v Cox, 1 Starkie 285 Hudson v Robert, 6 Ex 697, May v Burdett, 3 Q B 112

Receiving stolen property—Proof of knowledge The act of possession is in this class of cases (except rarely) concealed, and the question is as to the circumstantial intent, as specifically, as to the knowledge recomposing the possession. In what way does the fact of possession of other stolen goods at other times throw light upon this knowledge or this intent? From the point of view of the knowledge principle the argument requires that the former possession be such as is likely to have led to a knowledge or a warning of the stolen character of those goods and that such warning would have naturally warned the defendant also of the stolen character of the goods in question As to the first element it may be assumed that the receipt of stolen goods is in itself always more or less likely to result in a warning, chiefly because the owner is apt to follow them up and reclaim them but also in part because a purchase not made in the ordinary course of trade has often suspicious features about the vendor's offer As to the second element the warning thus obtained affords the subsequent receipt of other goods upon one condition only namely, that there is a similarity in the transactions, i.e. that the same person comes to the disposal of the second article, or that the second article is of the same lot as the first Hippon § 324 In R v Dunn 1 Moo Cr C 146 which was a case of receiving stolen goods with guilty knowledge, the fact of having received and pledged, within five months various other goods stolen from the same persons and brought to the defendant by the same person was admitted as an ingredient to make out the guilty knowledge See also R v Durr 6 C and P 177, A v Hinley 2 Mo and Rob 524 = 1 Cox Cr 13 illustration (d) But in R v Odley 2 Den Cr C 264 such evidence was held inadmissible Alderson B in delivering the judgment said Here the evidence merely went to show that the prisoner was in possession of other property which had been stolen in December and not that he had received such property known to be stolen Now the mere possession of stolen property is evidence, prima facie, not of receiving, but of stealing, and to admit such evidence in the present case would be to allow a prosecutor in order to make out that a prisoner had received with a guilty knowledge which had been stolen in March to show that the prisoner had in December previously stolen some other property from another place and belonging to other person The result of A v Odley was a legislative change of the law in 1871 by Stat 34 & 35 Vict C 117 Section 19 of that Act 'evidence may be given that there was found in the possession of such person other property stolen within the preceding period of twelve months for the purpose of proving that such person knew the property for which he is indicted to be stolen." But illustration (a) to this section makes no reservation as to ownership or time, so that it would seem that though the stolen property belonged to other persons than the prosecutor and without reference to the lapse of time since it was stolen evidence of its possession may under the Act, be given against the accused. See also R v Vaynam 16 B 414. Its weight in each case must be left to the discretion of the jury. Nott El 132. In England s 19 of Stat. 34 & 35 Vict 112 has been repealed by the Larceny Act, 6 & 7 Geo V c 50. See also R v Carter, 10 Cox Cr 448, R v Diage, 14 Cox 85. R v Harwood, 11 Cox 388, R v Smith, (1918) 2 K B 415, R v Jones 14 Cox Cr 3.

Forgery and Counterfeiting The Chief form of offence connected with forged and other counterfeit documents or money are (1) making the false article (2) possessing it knowingly with intent to utter, (3) knowing utterance of it. In the last two, the defendant's knowledge is always in issue, in the first, it is occasionally in issue, as where the act of writing is conceded but an authority is claimed. The principle here applicable is that a former utterance is likely to have resulted in a questioning of the false article by the person to whom it was presented and thus the attention of the accused would have been called to its suspicious character. The former utterance is thus relevant as showing that the accused thereby probably acquired the knowledge charged. Vide illustration (b), Wigmore § 310. In R v Hylie 1 B & P N R 92, which was a case for uttering a forged bank bill, the fact of three previous utterings in the preceding month to other persons was admitted. In admitting the evidence Loid Ellenborough said "The more detached in point of time the previous utterings are, the less relation they will bear to that stated in the indictment. But in such a case the only question would be whether the evidence was sufficient to warrant the inference of knowledge from such particular transactions it would not make the evidence inadmissible." See also R v Boll R & R 132, R v Ball, 1 Crump 324, R v Milford R & R 245, R v Phillips, 1 Lew Cr C 105. R v Smith, 4 C & P 411. R v Forbes 7 C & P 224, R v Ball 7 C & P 429. In R v Forster Dears Cr C 456 to prove a guilty uttering on December 12 an uttering of a similar piece on December 11 was shown, see also R v Goodwin 10 Cox Cr 554. In R v Whaley 2 Leach 985, Thompson J observed "As to the cases put by the prisoner's counsel of uttering bad money, I by no means agree in their conclusion, that the prosecutor cannot give evidence of another uttering on the same day, to prove guilty knowledge. Such utterings cannot be punished, until it has become the subject of a distinct and separate charge, but it affords strong evidence of the knowledge of the prisoner that the money was bad. If a man utter a bad shilling, and fifty other bad shillings are found upon him this would bring him within the description of a common utterer, but if the indictment do not contain that charge, yet these circumstances may be given in evidence on any other charge of uttering to show that he uttered the money with a knowledge of its being bad." Illustration (b) speaks only of possession, but it is only a single illustration of the knowledge spoken of in the section. See also R v Jarvis 20 L J M C 30. Blake v Albion Life Assurance Society 1 C P D 102, R v Green 3 C & K 204. In Mason's Case, 10 Cr App 169 which was a case of uttering a forged deed evidence of possession of two other sets of forged deeds a fortnight and five months later was admitted. See also R v Foster, 24 L J M C 131. The possession of other forged or counterfeit articles operates in a different way to show knowledge. The mere fact of possession has in itself no force for this purpose though it may be relevant to show intent. But the possession may involve conduct betraying a knowledge of the falsity of the article, as where counterfeit coins are separately wrapped in paper or counterfeit paper is kept secreted, or tools are also found, and thus the prior knowledge applies equally to the article in question. Wigmore § 311.

Illustration (d)—This illustration is based on the case of Gibson v Hunter 2 H BL 286. H drew a bill on G payable to F (a fictitious person), or order, and indorsed in F's name the plaintiff, a bona fide holder for value, sued G and in order to show that G knew this particular F as fictitious person,

S 14 offered the fact of the former instance of such bills with irregularities and suspicious circumstances of such a nature that they must have made G aware of the fictitiousness of F's name and it was admitted

Illustrations (i) and (j) These two are illustrations of intention. The case in (i) is that of R v Pole R and R 551, the case in (j) is that of R v Robinson, 2 East P C 1110. These are in principle like illustration (o) Nort Ex 147. The difference between (i) and (o) is that (i) is a case of shooting with intent to kill (o) of murder outright. The principle of intent here admits other acts of the defendant tending to negative innocent intent and thus to establish the criminal intent charged (to kill to wound, to resist or effect, and the like). No fixed rule can be formulated as to the similarity which the other act must bear, it may be done to another person, it may not accompany immediately the act charged, and it may occur at a time subsequent. The precedent illustrates these various aspects of the principle Higmore § 364. In R v Pole R and R 531, the accused was charged with assault with intent to kill. The defence was accident. The fact of the accused having run away after the firing and concealed himself beside the road ahead, and then fired again at the same person, was received to prove intent.

Explanation I Illustrations (a), (o) and (p) refer to Explanation I. The rejection of general facts rests on the ground that the collateral matter has been too remote it indeed there was any connection with the factum probandum Nort Ex 149. The meaning of this explanation is that the state of mind to be proved must be, not merely a general tendency or disposition towards conduct of a similar description to that in question, but a condition of thought and feeling having distinct and immediate reference to the matter which is under enquiry. The fact that a man is generally dishonest, generally malicious generally negligent or criminal in his proceedings does not bear with sufficient directness on his conduct on any particular occasion or as to any particular matter to make it safe to take it as a guide in interpreting his conduct what is wanted is a fact which will throw light on his motives and state of mind with immediate reference to that particular occasion or matter. Illustrations (a) and (b) make this clear. A man is accused of receiving stolen goods with guilty knowledge if he is merely shown to be generally dishonest, the probability of his having been dishonest in this particular transaction is perhaps increased but only in a vague and indefinite way but if at the time he is found in possession of a number of other stolen articles this fact throws a distinct light on his knowledge and intentions as to the articles of which he is found in possession. It would be dangerous to infer because a man was generally dishonest he was dishonest in any single case, but it is not dangerous to infer that a man who is found in possession of 10 articles, which are shown to have been stolen from different people came by each and all in a dishonest manner. Cum Ex 122. The principle underlying this explanation is this stated by Willes J in Hollingham v Head, 4 C B N S. 388, "The question may be put thus. Does the fact of a person having once or many times in his life done a particular act in a particular way make it more probable that he has done the same thing in the same way upon another and different occasion? To admit such speculative evidence would I think be fraught with great danger."

"In cl (n) 'says Mr Donough' the first of these illustrations, it is difficult to see why a man's habitual negligence in letting defective carriages for hire should be irrelevant in an enquiry as to his negligence in this respect on any particular occasion. Surely the evidence of habit would have some probative value. The same view has been taken by the Bombay High Court in regard to the second illustration, cl (o). It has been observed that on the issue of whether A actually shot B or not the fact that he had previously shot at him would have some probative force. So too would proof of a general malignity of disposition by evidence that 'A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them yet this evidence is excluded, even as proof of A's intention, either as too remotely connected with the particular intention in issue or as raising collateral questions which could not be resolved in the case per West J in Reg v Prabhudas, 11 B H C R 90 at p 92

"It is presumed that if evidence of 'habit' is not admissible as a 'state of mind' under section 14, it might be admissible as 'conduct' under s 8. Habit after all is only previous conduct, which is provided for in section 8"—Donough Cir Ev 2nd Ed p 133

The fact that a man is generally dishonest, generally malicious, generally negligent or criminal in his proceedings does not bear with sufficient directness on his conduct of any particular occasion, or as to any particular matter, to make it a safe guide for interpreting his conduct. What is wanted is a fact which will throw light on his motives and state of mind with reference to that particular occasion or matter. It would be dangerous to infer that, because a man was generally dishonest, he was dishonest in a particular case. Gunnant v Emperor, 38 Ind Cas 723 = 13 N L K 35

Whether evidence can be given of habit. Of the probative value of a person's habit or custom, as showing the doing on a specific occasion of the act which is the subject of the habit or custom, there can be no doubt. Every day's experience and reasoning make it clear enough. There is, however, much room for difference of opinion in concrete cases, owing chiefly to the indefiniteness of the notion of habit or custom. If we conceive it as involving an invariable regularity of action, there can be no doubt that this fixed sequence of acts tends strongly to show the occurrence of a given instance. But in the ordinary affairs of life a habit or custom seldom has such an invariable regularity. Hence it is easy to see why in a given instance something that may be loosely called habit or custom should be rejected, because it may not in fact have sufficient regularity to make it probable that it would be carried out in every instance and in most instances. Whether or not such sufficient regularity exists must depend largely on the circumstances of each case. There are two other difficulties that arise in connection with such evidence both of them, however, depending on other exclusionary rules. (1) The idea of habit is sometimes difficult to distinguish from that of character—for example where negligent habit is charged, and if it is interpreted in the latter aspect, it may of course become obnoxious to the rule against the use of party's character in civil and criminal cases (Rule ss 52, 54). (2) Assuming the relevancy of a Habit or Custom, the proof of it may often have to be made by marshalling various evidential instances as the basis of an inference to a habit or custom. Higmore § 92. It is generally accepted that the character of a person charged with negligent act as throwing light on the probability of his having acted carelessly on the occasion in question is inadmissible. Per Stephen J in Brown v R Co L R 22 Q B D 393. The real difficulty in such a case is to determine whether the fact offered is really character (Disposition) or only a Habit i.e. of prudent or negligent methods. The latter in any case should be admitted. Now the question is whether the habit of negligence as in illustration (n) or the habit of care is obnoxious to the Character Rule. Negligence is in one aspect, the not doing of a particular act, but in another or more correct aspect, it is the doing of one act in a manner which amounts to negligence in that some other act is omitted which ought to have accompanied it. There is no reason why such a habit should not be used as evidential—either a habit of negligent action or a habit of careful action. Joy v Phillips Mills & Co (1916) 1 K B 849. The real difficulties here seem to be two. It is possible to believe that careless action can ever be anything more than casual or occasional? If it is, are we not really predicating a careless disposition rather than a genuine habit and then are we not violating the rule against character in civil cases in employing such evidence? These doubts serve to explain the precedents that exclude such evidence, but the doubts are not well founded, and that such evidence is often of probative value, and is not attended by the inconvenience of character evidence. Higmore § 97

Explanation II—Originally there was only one explanation to the section. By s 1 (1) of the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891), these two explanations were substituted for the one original explanation. Only slight verbal alterations were made in the original explanation and it was numbered as 'Explanation 1.' The Explanation 2 is new. This amendment was thought necessary on account of the decision of the Calcutta High Court in the S 14. case of Queen Empress v Kartic Chandra Das, 14 C 71 (F B,) In that case the question referred to the Full Bench was whether in the trial of a person charged with the dishonest possession of stolen property, evidence could be given of a previous conviction of the accused for attempting to receive stolen property, knowing it to be stolen. The Full Bench decided on the 20th July 1887, that under (old) section 54 of the Evidence Act, a previous conviction was in all cases admissible in evidence against an accused person. Section 54 of the Evidence Act as it then stood, ran as follows — 'In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has been previously convicted of any offence is relevant, but the fact that he has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character in which case it becomes relevant.' Explanation — This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is in itself a fact in issue. By Act III of 1891 the said section has been amended in such a way as to render the previous conviction of an accused person irrelevant when it is sought to prove the conviction with the object merely of showing that the accused is a man of bad character and is therefore more likely to have committed the offence with which he is charged. The fact that a person has been previously convicted of an offence has of itself little probative force to establish the fact that he has committed another offence and it is not expected to admit evidence which can only prejudice the accused." Statement of Object and Reasons of Act III of 1891 The result of this amendment of the law is that the rule as to the relevancy of a previous conviction is to be contained in section 43 of the Act. The existence of the judgment convicting the accused is only relevant if the fact of the conviction is a fact in issue or is relevant under some provisions of the Act. Explanation 2 has been added to section 14, so as to allow a previous conviction to be proved in order to show a guilty knowledge or intention. Statement of Object and Reasons of Act III of 1891 As regards regard to the character of the offence under s 400 I P Code, previous commissions of dacoity are relevant under s 14 of the Evidence Act, so convictions previous to the time specified in the charge or to the framing of the charge are relevant under Explanation 2 of s 14 but convictions subsequent to the time specified in the charge and to the framing of the charge are not so admissible. Empress v Naba Kumar, 1 C W N 146. In a trial for an offence under section 4 (a) of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (Bom Act IV of 1887) the evidence that the accused was previously convicted of similar offence is admissible to show guilty knowledge or intention. Emperor v Aloomiya, 28 B 129=5 Bom L R 500 per Chandavarkar and Ashton J J (Jacob J dissenting). In Manlana Parsi v The Empress, 4 C W N 97=27 C 139, the appellants were convicted under section 401 of the Indian Penal Code of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of committing thefts. The question was whether evidence of previous convictions of some of the accused of theft was admissible for the purpose of proving association for that purpose and bad character. In rejecting the evidence the Court observed "It is sufficient to add in reference to the case now before us that the character of the accused was not in issue and that in consequence evidence of such character or reputation is not admissible." But this case has been distinguished and doubted in Banar v The King Emperor, 15 C W N 461=38 C 403. In delivering the judgment the Court observed "But in cases where the other evidence has established association for purpose of habitually committing theft evidence of previous convictions whether for offences against property or for bad livelihood has, we find, always been admitted not as evidence of character, but as evidence of habit and it would seem that of such evidence, convictions for bad livelihood would be more cogent than those for isolated thefts. Such evidence must of course be weighed. A single instance of theft for instance would count for little or nothing. There must be at least two or more cases against the same individual to show habit but the evidence of such convictions is admissible clearly against the weight of authority in this case. We have already cited to cite four unreported cases that have been laid before us affirming the admissibility of such evidence." See also Emperor v Tukaram, 15 Ind. Cas.

811=14 Bom L R 373 So when several persons are charged with belonging to a gang of persons habitually committing dacoity under section 400 of the Indian Penal Code, evidence of the commission by them of offences other than dacoity, being evidence of bad character, is inadmissible under section 14 of the Evidence Act Emperor v Haji Sher Mahomed, 46 B 958=75 Ind Cis 67=25 Bom L R 214 The reason for admitting such evidence is thus given by Flucett J, in 46 B 958 "Such evidence clearly falls under section 14 of the Indian Evidence Act, as showing a disposition on the part of the accused towards particular conduct alleged against him in the charge, namely, a habit of committing (1) dacoity (2) theft. But if in order to establish a habit of committing dacoity you rely on evidence that the accused had previously committed thefts, you no doubt produce evidence which may show a disposition towards conduct of a similar description to that in question, but not of the exact description in issue. A person may be a habitual surreptitious night thief, but this goes very little way towards showing that he has a disposition towards dacoity. It is little, if anything more than evidence of bad character which is excluded by section 14 of the Indian Evidence Act." See also Public Prosecutor v Bonegers 2 Ind Cis 307=32 M 179=5 M L 1 1001=9 Cr L J 567, Emperor v Debdanda 36 C 573 184=13 C W N 973, Emperor v Pachu Das 47 C 671 692=24 C W N 501 But when a person is being tried for the offence of belonging to a gang of thieves, evidence that he was previously convicted of dacoity is relevant and admissible. But if the conviction took place long before the second prosecution no weight can be attached to such evidence for the purpose of proving that the accused has a habit of committing thefts. Moti Ram v Emperor 89 Ind Cis 527=A 1 R 1925 Bom 195 In a prosecution for theft it cannot be assumed as a matter of course that a previous conviction for the same offence is relevant in establishing the guilt of the accused. Nga Shwe v Queen U B R (1897—1901) Vol I 144 But such previous conviction may be admissible after conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment imposed. Queen Empress v Nga Yan (U B R 1892—1896) Vol I, 82

Seditious speeches—Intention Where certain speeches form the subject matter of a charge for sedition and when such speeches form part of a series of speeches or lectures on one topic delivered within a short period of time any of such speeches or lectures will be admissible under section 14 of the Evidence Act, as evidence to prove the intention of the speaker in respect of the speech which forms the subject matter of the charge. Chidambaram v Emperor, 32 M 3 This principle is recognised in illustration (c) to section 14 of the Evidence Act and has been acted on in cases of prosecutions for sedition in all the other High Courts in India. Such evidence was held admissible in the case of Queen Empress v Jogendra Chunder Bose 19 C 35 (16) and also in the case of Emperor v Pannudra Nath Mitter 35 C 915 and as well in the case of Queen Empress v Bal Gangadhar Tilak 22 B 112 In charging the jury in the last named case Justice Stracey at p 139 said "You will thus see that the whole question is one of the intention of the accused in publishing these articles. Did they intend to excite in the minds of their readers feelings of disaffection or enmity to the Government? Or did they intend merely to excite disapprobation of certain government measures?" It was also held admissible in the case of Queen Empress v Anil Kumar 19 C 20 A=55 (17) by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court In delivering the judgment of the Full Bench, Sir John I J at page 69 said "The intention of the speaker writer or publisher may be inferred from the particular speech, article or letter or it may be proved from that speech, article or letter considered in conjunction with what the speaker writer or publisher has said, written or published on another or other occasions. In this connection reference may also be made to the judgment of the majority of the Judges sitting in the Court for the consideration of the crown cases reserved in Her v Baid (1900) 2 K B 383 So seditious articles published in the same newspaper not forming the subject of the charge on which the prisoner is being tried at the time are admissible to show the intention of the person who printed or published the letter Emperor v Phamunda, 35 C 945 But articles not forming the subject of the charge and appearing in other issues of the same paper, are not admissible to show the intention of the writer in the article complained of in the absence of proof of his identity Manmohan Ghose v Emperor, 38 C 251 In case of sedition the question of intention is one of the fact Ganesh v Emperor, 34 B 378=12 Bom L R 21 The question of the intention or knowledge of an individual may determine his criminal liability under the ordinary law of abatement by incitement by means of words, written or spoken, but under the Newspaper (Incitements to Offences) Act no question of the intention of the writer, printer or publisher arises and no formal habit is imputed to any particular person Gujra Sunder v Emperor, 36 C 40 So in sedition (including seditious riot and seditious libel) other acts and utterances are receivable under the present section, to evidence seditious intent R v Hunt 1 St Tr N S 171, Redford v Birley 1 St Tr N S 1071, R v Obrien, 7 St Tr N S 1, 75, R v Barron, 41 D L R 332 (Canada)

S 14

Instance where such evidence were admitted under the English Law In Earl of Pembroke's Trial 6 How St Tr 1309 1325 1327, 1331, 1336, which was a case of murder deceased person's complaints of pain and the cause of the wound, made to bystanders and to a doctor, received see also Canning's Trial, 19 How St Tr 478, Arson v Kinnaird, 6 East 195 But the statement must be confined to contemporaneous symptoms, and nothing in the nature of a narrative is admissible as to who caused them or how they were caused Per Glover 16 Cox Cr 471 (475) So in a case injury to a workman in a field his statement that a wasp stung him was held inadmissible Amys v Burton, (1912) 1 K B 40 In Gardner Peerage Case, Le Marchant's Rep 170 174 a woman's statement to a physician attending for childbirth of the date of the conception was excluded In Spencer Couper's Trial 13 How St Tr 1163 ff statement of the deceased as to being melancholy, ill, and in low spirit was admitted In Redford v Birley 1 St Tr N S 1171 1235, 1238, 1241 which was case against seditious mob, expressions of alarm by persons in the neighbourhood were admitted to show feelings produced by the gathering In R v Vincent 9 C & P 275 complaints to police by persons alarmed at violent chartist meetings were admitted, the persons not being called. But in Thomson's Case 7 Cr App 276=(1912) 3 K B 19 which was a case of abortion in March 1912 the woman's statement in February that she intended to do it herself was excluded See also in R v Wainwright 13 Cox Cr 171, which was a case of murder of one H L On this last day when H L was seen alive, she made a statement on departing from her house declaring her intention Coelburn C J excluded the terms of the statement A reporter's note cites R v Pool 1871, before Brill C J is involving a similar ruling Wignmore § 176 In the two last mentioned cases the evidence was disallowed on the supposed application of the res gestae doctrine As regards the Thomson's case Prof Wignmore remarks "It is strange that in this day and generation an English Court can be so uninformed upon the principles of the law of Evidence" Vide § Wignmore 1726 foot note (4)

In Kellous v Williamson, Moo & M. 307 which was an action upon a representation that D was solvent, the plaintiff's declarations at the time of a dinner "that they had received a favorable account of him and would no longer send them" was received as showing their reason for sending the issue to him whether they sent them in reliance on the representations So also in Skinner v Shen (1891) 2 Ch 581, 593, which was a case of loss of a contract by defendant's illegal threats of litigation against the plaintiff's patented article letter of a would be customer was admitted to show his reason for not dealing with the plaintiff

In Walton v Green 1 C & P 621, which was a case of necessity to a wife and the defence was her adultery wife's statement was admitted as forming part of the cause of her being so turned out In Wills v Brarh, 8 Buz 376 letters of a wife to her husband or others were admitted to show her feelings towards him In Jones v Thompson, 6 C & P 115 statement of a wife in criminal conspiracy as to a diary kept by her that she kept it to show to her husband was admitted to evidence her feelings towards her husband But in Walt v

Webster, 7 C & P 198, letters by a wife, offered to show her happiness with her husband, were not admitted because written after attempted adultery. S

Statements by a testator in a will case are also admissible as assertions of a state of mind. In Syden v St Leonards, L R 1 P D 151, Mellish L J said "The declarations which are made before the will are not, I apprehend to be taken as evidence of the will which is subsequently made, they obviously do not prove it, but wherever it is material to prove the state of a person's mind, or what was passing in it and what were his intentions, there you may prove what he said because that is only the means by which you can find out what his intentions were." So also in Quel v Quel, 3 S W 2 Tr 442, Wilde J observed "It is familiar enough practice to receive the unsworn declarations of the testator in evidence for the purpose of arriving at this general intention where his competency is in dispute or where there is any imputation of fraud in the making of his will, for in such cases the state of his mind and affection is in itself a material fact of which such statements are the fair exponents. But where those declarations are vouched to prove the fact that he had declared and embodied those intentions in a certain will, they have no other title to confidence than the statements of any other person who had seen the will and could speak to its contents. In this respect they become mere hearsay," see also Keen v Keen, L R 3 P & D 107, Wigmore §§ 1718, 1722, 1729, 1730, 1735, 1736.

Fraudulent intention—proof of "It is in truth confirmed by all experience that in the great majority of cases fraud is not capable of being established by positive and express proofs. It is by its very nature secret in its movements, and if those whose duty it is to investigate questions of fraud are to insist upon direct proof in every case the ends of justice would be constantly, if not invariably, defeated. We do not mean to say that fraud can be established by any less proof, or by any different kind of proof from what is required to establish any other disputed questions of fact or that circumstances of mere suspicion which lead to no certain result should be taken as sufficient proof of fraud, or the fraud should be presumed against anybody in any case, but what we mean to say is that, in the generality of cases circumstantial evidence is our only resource in dealing with questions of fraud, and if this evidence is sufficient to overcome the natural presumption of honesty and fair dealing and so satisfy a reasonable mind of the existence of fraud by rusing a counter presumption, there is no reason whatever why we should not act upon it." Per Miller J in Mothoor Pandey v Ram Rachya, 11 W R 482, 483 = 3 B L R A C 108. So where the question of the fraudulent or fictitious character of a transaction arises it can only be decided on a consideration of all the circumstances of the case as proved or admitted direct proof of fraud being rarely forthcoming. Seth Goluddas v Mt Jankee 9 C P L R 142.

Mere speculation and probability is not sufficient in law to support a finding of fraud. Raj Narain v Roushu Mull, 22 W R 124, Sheikh Imdad Ali v Mt Kootby, 6 W R P C 24 = 3 M L A 1. Fraud may be presumed on good grounds. Kishen v Ramdhan 6 W R 235. Fraudulent intention can be inferred from secrecy. Joshua v Alliance Bank of Smyrna, 22 C 185.

Fraudulent transfers to defraud creditors In cases of transfers in fraud of creditors the act of transfer is conceded. Generally no specific question as to knowledge (except in cases of insolvency) arises and the inquiry is only confined to the intention accompanying the act. Other transfers of property may have some bearing in proving fraudulent intention by negating the probability of good faith. But they must have such a probative value whenever they are made under such circumstances that they cannot be naturally accounted for by the ordinary course of business in which such transfers occur from time to time with good faith. The difficulty is to determine what circumstances are essential to produce this improbability that the transfer was in that ordinary course which involves good faith. In such cases the following circumstances are to be considered (1) The quantity of property conveyed, (2) the persons to whom the transfers are made, (3) the time of other transfers, and (4) the consideration paid. On the whole, while several sorts of circumstances are significant, the

S 14 weight may vary in each case, and no one of them is essential, except that of time and here no fixed rule can be laid down Vide Wignore § 333 The fraudulent intent of the transferor may be indicated by other circumstances not of the above sort—such as the debtor's remaining in possession after the mortgage or sale, the pendency of suits at the time of the sale and other circumstances suggesting their own significance and not raising any difficulty of principle Wignore § 335

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Admissible

A writing made some time after the committing of an offence under section 124 I P Code is admissible in evidence under s 14 of the Evidence Act Emperor v Phillip, 30 Bom L R 315=108 Ind Cas 30=29 Cr L J 320=A I R 1928 Bom 78

Former judgment more than 25 years old and convicting accused of dacoity is admissible in a case under s 401 I P Code for showing criminal tendency to commit theft and not habit of committing theft Motiram v Emperor, 89 Ind Cas 529=A I R 1925 Bom 195 see also Bonar v Emperor, 38 C 403=15 C W N 461 Emperor v Naba Kumar 1 C W N 146, Emperor v Haji Sher Mahomed, 25 Bom L R 214=75 Ind Cas 67

In a trial for an offence under ss 235 and 243 I P Code of being in possession of counterfeit coins and instruments and materials for counterfeiting coin evidence of the possession by the accused of counterfeit coins and instruments for their manufacture at his house in another district is admissible Munir Gossain v Emperor, 61 Ind Cas 647=22 Cr L J 407

On a charge against the accused of cheating by falsely representing that they were the servants of a wealthy lady and were entrusted to act on her behalf in the arrangements for loans to be made to the complainants out of the money she possessed, and thereby obtaining money from them on one pretext or another in connection with the affair, held that evidence of instances similar but unconnected transactions with other persons during the period covered by the evidence of the complainant is admissible under section 14 of the Evidence Act in order to prove the intention of the accused Emperor v Yalrub Ali, 15 A I J 211=39 A 273

In a case of cheating it is open to the prosecution to show that the acts

Inadmissible

Where the accused is charged under s 409 Penal Code, for embezzling three specific sums Held, that evidence of collateral offences in respect of other sums was not admissible Pritchard v Emperor, A I R 1932 Lah 382

Where in a particular trial under section 420, I P Code evidence was let in with regard to a previous act of fraud which was alleged to have been committed by the accused person on the witness who spoke to the fact that on a particular occasion he was cheated by the accused in respect of a certain sum Held, that the evidence is clearly inadmissible in law and it cannot be brought in with the aid of s 14 or 15 of the Evidence Act Gokul v Emperor 29 C W N 483=86 Ind Cas 970=70 Cr L J 906 see also R v Abul Wahid, 34 A 94

In a case of murder by administering sweetmeats, the facts that the accused offered sweetmeats to boys and poisoned one of them is not evidence under section 14 of the Evidence Act Kashiram v Emperor 73 Ind Cas 262=6 N L J 144

In a prosecution under section 409 of the Penal Code for having knowingly made a false claim in a suit against certain persons, evidence relating to other suits brought by the accused against other persons may be admissible against the accused under sections 14 and 15 of the Evidence Act for the purpose of showing, all will or minus of the accused, and as to the nature of the fraud or fraudulent scheme of fraudulent claims and for the purpose of rebutting the defence that the particular suit was brought in good faith or any suggestion that it was brought under some mistake or misapprehension But evidence relating to suits instituted by other persons is not admissible against the accused unless the elements and the suit instituted by the charged against the accused were parts of a series of similar acts committed by him or in which he was concerned, at or about the time in question. Evidence of such other acts, whether previous or subsequent to the frauds charged against the accused is relevant for the purpose of showing whether or not the intention of the accused was honest or fraudulent. Gudhari v. Emperor, 269 P. L. R. 1914.

Admissible

In cases where the other evidence has established association for purposes of habitually committing theft, evidence of previous convictions, whether for offences against property or for bad livelihood is admissible, not as evidence of character but as evidence of habit and of such evidence, convictions for bad livelihood would be more cogent than those for isolated thefts. Bonar v. Emperor, 9 Ind. Cas. 353=13 C. W. N. 461=38 C. 403.

Inadmissible

accused are part of the same transaction or the result of a conspiracy between them. Evidence which goes merely to the character or disposition of the accused as a person likely to have committed the offence is generally inadmissible against the accused. But evidence which is otherwise relevant does not become inadmissible merely because it discloses the commission by the accused of other offences. Baghunath v. Emperor, 46 Ind. Cas. 696=22 C. W. N. 494=19 Cr. L. J. 776.

The accused, a license clerk in a Municipal office, was charged with having cheated three persons by demanding from each two annas in excess of what was legitimate license fee. On behalf of the prosecution evidence was produced to prove that he had also cheated other persons. Held that the evidence was inadmissible. Emperor v. Abdul Wahid, 8 A. L. J. 1269=12 Ind. Cas. 987.

Evidence of other atrocities by accused is inadmissible either under section 14 or 15 of the Evidence Act. Mandi Ghazi v. Emperor, 13 Ind. Cas. 781=1912 M. W. N. 49=13 Cr. L. J. 125.

In a suit on libel, evidence of instances of acts of the plaintiff more or less closely resembling the particular acts of misconduct imputed to him in the libellous statement is inadmissible. The defendant can justify the libel as true in substance and in fact by proving its truth, not the truth of other acts and occasions having nothing to do with the act in question, unless it is intended to show that those acts were parts of the habitual and intentional not accidental, conduct of the plaintiff. Nadushaw v. Pirojshau, 19 Ind. Cas. 98=15 Bom. L. R. 130 see also Queen Empress v. Kasi Gonda, 19 B. 51.

In an action for an injunction to restrain the use of a trade mark, if the defendant's goods on the face of them and having regard to the surrounding circumstances are calculated to deceive, evidence to prove the intention to deceive is inadmissible as being unnecessary, the rule being that a man must be taken to have intended the reasonable and natural consequences of his own act. Munna v. Jauala, 35 C. 311.

S 15

15 When there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional, * (or done with a particular knowledge or intention), the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences, in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, is relevant

Facts bearing on question whether act was accidental or intentional.

dental or intentional, * (or done with a particular knowledge or intention), the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences, in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, is relevant

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of burning down his house in order to obtain money for which it is insured

The facts that A lived in several houses successively, each of which he insured, in each of which a fire occurred and after each of which fires A received payment from a different insurance office, are relevant, as tending to show that the fires were not accidental.

(b) A is employed to receive money from the debtors of B. It is A's duty to make entries in a book showing the amounts received by him. He makes an entry showing that on a particular occasion he received less than he really did receive.

The question is, whether this false entry was accidental or intentional.

The facts that other entries made by A in the same book are false, and that the false entry is in each case in favour of A, are relevant.

(c) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to B a counterfeit rupee.

The question is whether the delivery of the rupee was accidental.

The facts that, soon before or soon after the delivery to B, A delivered counterfeit rupees to C, D and E are relevant, as showing that the delivery to B was not accidental.

Scope of the section. Section 15 of the Evidence Act is an application of the general rule laid down in section 14 Emperor v. Debendia, 36 C. 3=13 C. W. N. 973=9 C. L. J. 610. It lays down that where there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional or done with a particular knowledge or intention the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, is relevant. It is wrong to say that this section only deals with intention as opposed to accident. The bracketed words were added by s. 2 of Act III of 1891 which must not be overlooked in construing section 15. Per Chaudhury J (dissenting) Emperor v. Panchu Das, 24 C. W. N. 501 at p. 525 F. B. But in the same case Moolerjee J took a different view. At page 516 he observed "There was no room for any hypothesis that the death of the woman, whoever might have caused it, was either accidental or unintentional. The medical evidence makes it incontestable that the act amounted to deliberate murder. No question consequently arises whether the act was accidental or intentional or was done with a particular knowledge or intention. In so far as the charge of theft was concerned, there was also no question, whether the act was accidental or intentional or was done with a particular knowledge or intention." Fletcher J agreed with Moolerjee J in that case. According to Sanderson C. J. this section has no application where there is no question of an act being accidental or intentional. So evidence of other crimes is admissible if it bears upon the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the offence in the indictment were designed or accidental. Per Lord Harschell in Math v. Att. Gen. of New South Wales, 75 L. J. K. B. 693= (1906) 2 K. B. 389, see also R. v. Bond, (1906) 2 K. B. 389. In Gumwant v. Emperor 38 Ind. Cas. 723=13 N. L. R. 35, which was a case under ss. 467, 471 and 193 of the Indian Penal Code, in respect of a receipt of Rs. 4200 discharging a debt the complainants were allowed in the lower Court to file certain certified copies intended to prove that four different documents, namely (1) a will, (2) a receipt * These words in s. 15 were inserted by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891), s. 2.

(3) a deed of larceny, and (4) another receipt, written by the accused K were suspected to be false documents, and were not acted upon by Court. As regards the admissibility of these documents the Court observed "There was no question here whether the writing, attestation or production of the receipt for Rs 4200 was accidental or intentional. Loh was admittedly an intentional act and it seems to me that to judge of the intention and knowledge of the scribe and attesting witness by the opinions of other Judges on other documents written and attested by these persons in suits and proceedings to which they were not parties is a use of section 15 of the Evidence Act which was never intended by the Legislature. Section 15 must be read as subject to section 14, so far as evidence of knowledge and intention is concerned. So under this section the prosecution cannot use this evidence as to the commission of other acts of a similar nature in proof of the existence of the specific acts which form the subject matter of the charge. But when the existence of the acts has been established by evidence abundante and the only question which remains to be decided is whether they were done accidentally or intentionally or with a particular knowledge or intention then and then only could the evidence of other similar acts be let in. Pritchard v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1928 Lah 382. An illustration of the kind of cases in which such evidence can be admitted is Gudhari Lal v. Crown, 12 P. R. 1913 Cr = 269 P. L. R. 1914 = 6 Ind Cr 964 where the accused had been charged under s. 420 I. P. Code for having received from the two complainants certain sums of money on false pretences that he had been authorised to recruit unskilled labour for service in Africa and that on payment of certain fees he would be able to engage them for service in that country. The prosecution alleged that the accused had not been given any such authority to recruit and that the whole of his recruiting business was bogus and fraudulent. The accused admitted having received this sum of money but alleged that he had done so honestly and not with any fraudulent intention. To rebut this defence the prosecution was allowed to show that in the course of this recruiting business the accused had defrauded other persons from whom he had received sums of money on false pretences of a similar kind.

In general whenever it is necessary to rebut, even by anticipation, the defence of accident, mistakes or other innocent condition of mind evidence that the defendant has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific kind as that in question may be given. Per Mookerjee J in Amrita Lal v. Emperor, 42 C. 77 = 21 C. L. J. 331 = 19 C. W. N. 676. But systematic act mentioned here should not be confused with design or system. (Vide p. 236)

Section 14 provides that facts showing the existence of any state of mind, such as intention or knowledge are relevant when the existence of any such state of mind is in issue or relevant and section 15 provides specifically for allowing evidences of similar occurrence in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, whenever there is a question whether the act is done with a particular knowledge or intention. Per Faucett J in Emperor v. Harjwan Singh, A. I. R. 1926 Bom 231 = 50 B. 174 = 28 Bom. L. R. 115. This section applies to all cases where the question is whether an untruthful statement is accidental or intentional or done with a particular intention, etc. The test to be applied must include every possible defence and must not be confined merely to the actual defence raised by the accused. Emperor v. Yakub Ali, 39 Ind Cr 673 = 15 A. L. J. 241 = 39 A. 273 = 18 Cr. L. J. 529, but see Rez v. Bond, 75 L. J. K. B. 693 = (1906) 2 K. B. 38.

The statement of Objects and Reasons of Act III of 1891 by which the words "or done with a particular knowledge or intention," were added will show the purpose for which these words were added. It runs as follows: "In English law for the purpose of proving guilty knowledge evidence of other acts of a nature similar to that charged may be given in cases of uttering false coins or disposing of forged bank notes (Russell 233). On the whole evidence of this nature has been confined to cases of coinage and forgery, but there is one case Reg. v. Francis, 43 L. J. M. C. 97, in which evidence was admitted on a charge of obtaining money on false pretences. In that case Lord Coleridge, C. J. and

S 15

'It seems clear upon principle that when the fact that the prisoner has done the thing charged is proved and the only remaining question is, whether at the time he did it he had guilty knowledge of the quality of his act, or acted under some take evidence of the class received must be admissible.' This case probably goes further than any other case and the amendment which has been proposed of section 13 seems to provide sufficiently for the class of cases in which the peculiar nature of the offence makes this question the crucial test.' In Reg v Ollis 69 L J Q B 918 Bruce J stated the law to be as follows: "A line of cases has established the rule that when in a case no material to establish that an act charged in the indictment and was intentional and not accidental evidence is admissible of similar acts done by the same persons having no bearing upon or connection with the acts charged in the indictment, save that the acts are similar and done by the same person. This rule is sometimes stated I think, inaccurately to be a rule which admits indirect evidence of this class to prove guilty knowledge. The evidence is I believe admissible under the rule I have mentioned on the ground that it leads to negative mistake or accident." In Reg v Bond, (1906) 2 K B 389, Kennedy J after citing the above passage, proceeds "It is in strict accordance with the principle enunciated by the authorities that evidence of the conduct of the prisoner on other occasions was admitted in cases of arson (Reg v Gray 1 F and F 1102) of embezzlement (Reg v Richardson 7 F & T 343) of false pretences (Reg v Francis 43 L J M C 97, Reg v Rhodes, 68 L J Q B 83) of coining (Reg v Fuller, Russ and R 308), of forgery (Reg v Hylie 1 Bos and P N R 92 at p 94 Reg v Collough, 10 L R Ir 241) and obtaining credit by fraud (Reg v Wyath, 73 L J K B 15). In all these cases it was necessary to negative accident or mistake, in all of them the multiplication of similar acts having some connection in their circumstances to the act which was the subject-matter of the trial was admitted to prove as evidence showing systematic conduct of the prisoner at the time of the offence charged against him and, therefore negating accident or mistake on his part in the last occasion."

Of course such evidence is not admissible merely for the purpose of showing that the character of the accused was such that he was a person likely to commit the acts of cheating with which he is charged. That is a totally different question, and the distinction between the two classes of cases is well brought out by Channel J in Reg v Fisher 26 L T R 122. "The principle" said the learned Judge "was perfectly clear and if attended to the difficulty disappeared. That principle was that the prosecution must not prove facts to show that the prisoner was guilty because he was of bad character and, therefore, likely to commit the offence charged. But if proof of the facts went to show that the prisoner was guilty of the offence charged, it was admissible notwithstanding the fact unfortunately for the accused, that it showed that he had committed another offence. For instance, in a charge of embezzlement, when the prisoner said that he had made a mistake evidence could be given to show other instances of the same kind, because such evidence tended to show that he was not making a mistake on the occasion charged. Whenever it could be shown that the question involved was whether there was a mistake, or whether there was a system, evidence might be given although it proved other offence, that the prisoner's actions were systematic and fraudulent."

In Reg v Rhodes, 68 L J Q B 83=(1899) 1 Q B 77, the prisoner was indicted for obtaining eggs by false pretences and it was proved that he had falsely represented by advertisement in news papers that he was carrying on a bond fide Dairyman's business. Evidence was admitted that subsequent to the transaction in question he had obtained eggs from other persons by means of similar advertisements and the Court for the consideration of Crown case Reserved held that such evidence had been properly admitted. In delivering the judgment of the Court Lord Russell L C observed "It seems to me quite clear that, if the transactions with Elston and Chambers had taken place before that with Boys and at a period not too remote, the evidence of Elston and Chambers would have been admissible against the prisoner. Is that evidence admissible although the transactions were subsequent to the offence charged?"

That depends as it seems to me, on the question whether or not the case put forward for the prosecution was that the prisoner was not carrying on a real business, but that the business in which he was engaged was from first to last a bogus or show business. If the prosecution merely alleged isolated transactions of a fraudulent character against the prisoner, with no connection between them I should certainly say that evidence of transactions which took place after the offence charged was not admissible more generally. But if the transactions took place two months after the offence. But never intended by the prisoner to be made out was that of carrying on a bogus business, and on the whole, I think the evidence was admissible on the ground that it showed part of a scheme to defraud persons by the pretence of carrying on an honest and bonafide business. In the same case Willis J said 'The fact that his business is a bogus business can only be shown by giving evidence of transactions of a similar character. I do not see how the carrying on of a bogus business can be proved in any other way. If the transactions sought to be given in evidence had been prior to the offence charged and within a reasonable period of time, it is clear that they would have been admissible. What difference does it make if they were immediately after the act complained of? If they formed part of the same system of fraud, I think it can make no difference. The only difficulty in this case is I think the long interval of time that elapsed between the act charged and the other acts. Very often the only nexus between such transactions is their proximity in point of time. That however, is not the case here, and, had there been no other connecting link, I should certainly have thought that the transaction two months after was at any rate too remote. But when it appears that the same advertisement continued to appear down to the last transaction and that it operated in the last case exactly as it did in the case on which the charge was based then as it seems to me, both in law and in common sense the evidence becomes admissible.'

So to come under this section it must be established that the act forms part of a series of similar occurrences. It is well established that the gist of the section is that unless there is a sufficient and reasonable connection between the fact to be proved and the evidentiary fact, that is, unless there is in substance some common link, they cannot form a series. So where each of the occurrences had its own special features they could properly be deemed similar occurrences. Per Woolfery J in Emperor v Panchu Das, 24 C W N 501 (517) F B. So "whether they were evidence or not depends upon whether they were evidence of similar transactions. Per Reading C J in Rex v Baird 84 L J K B 1785. To admit evidence under this head, however, the other acts tendered must be of the same specific kind as that in question and not of a different character, and the acts tendered must also have been proximate in point of time to that in question. Anurita v King Emperor 19 C W N 676 at p 692 see also R v Smith, 20 Cox C C 854=92 L J 208, R v Rhodes (1899) 1 B 77 Section 13 of the Evidence Act covers both previous and subsequent similar occurrences. Raghunath v Emperor, 22 C W N 491=46 Ind Cr 696=19 Cr L J 776.

In a case of cheating, it is open to the prosecution to show that the acts charged against the accused were parts of a series of similar acts committed by him or in which he was concerned, at or about the time in question. Anurita v Emperor 26 P W R 1910 Cr, see also Emperor v Debendra 36 C 573=13 C W N 973=9 C L J 610 but see Golul v Emperor, 29 C W N 483=29 Cr L J 300=30 Ind Cr 300. In the case of Blair v Albion Life Assurance Co 4 L R C P D 97 at p 106, Lord Lindley observed. Nothing could, at first sight seem more plain and straight forward and there would be no appearance of fraud, but then the plaintiff proposed to adduce evidence to show that the transaction was one of a fraudulent class. Was he or was he not to be precluded from doing this? I think he was quite at liberty to put his case in that way, and could only do so by going into a great number of other transactions having some features in common with this. I agree that in order to prove that A has committed a fraud upon B it is neither sufficient nor even relevant to prove that A committed frauds upon C D and E. Stopping there, I admit the proposition. But let it be shown that the fraud on B is one of a class of transactions having common features, then I disagree altogether with the proposition. The answer to the objection that evidence of frauds on other persons cannot be admitted is that this transaction is one of a class that there are features in common, the features in common being the false pretence and a knowledge of that false pretence on the part of the defendant company and the moment that is shown the plaintiff's case is established." Similarly in Reg v Bond, 75 L J K B 693=(1906) 2 K B 389, Bray J said "The ground on which in cases of this class evidence is admitted of act not charged in the indictment is, in my opinion that the case which the prosecution seeks to prove is that the prisoner has in his mind a scheme or plan say for obtaining money by fraud, and the other acts, of which evidence is sought to be given, when proved will show the existence of the plan, and therefore, the guilty mind of prisoner."

S 15

Evidence of the commission by the accused of a previous or subsequent offence—General Principle of In Malin v Att Gen of New South Wales, 75 L J K B 693, 708 710 712=(1906) 2 K B 389 409, 414, 417 Lord Chancellor, Lord Hershell said "It is undoubtedly not competent for the prosecution to adduce evidence tending to show that the accused had been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment, for the purpose of leading to the conclusion that the accused is a person likely from his criminal conduct or character to have committed the offence for which he is being tried. On the other hand, the mere fact that the evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible if it be relevant to an issue before the jury, and it may be so relevant if it bears upon the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental or to rebut a defence which would be otherwise open to the accused." In Reg v Bond, 75 L J K B 693=(1906) 2 K B 389, Mr Justice Darling and Mr Justice Bray called attention to the fact that Lord Hershell's last words quoted above must have been intended to apply only to a defence which is really in issue, and that the words of the Lord Chancellor should be read with that limitation. Per Banister J, in Reg v Rodley, (1913) 3 K B 468=82 L J K B 1070. In Reg v Bond, supra Mr Justice Bray observed "A careful examination of the cases where evidence of this kind has been admitted shews that they may be grouped under three heads. First, where the prosecution seeks to prove a system or course of conduct, secondly, where the prosecution seeks to rebut a suggestion on the part of the prisoner of accident or mistake, and thirdly, where the prosecution seeks to prove knowledge by the prisoner of some fact." In their judgments in that case it was pointed out by several of the learned Judges who formed the majority of the Court that a single prior act of a like criminal nature would in general not be admissible as evidence of system. Reg v Rodley supra. In a more recent case of Director of Public Prosecution v Ball, (No 2) 80 L J K B 691 692 sub nom Reg v Ball (1911) A. C 47 71 the Lord Chancellor, in speaking of the grounds upon which he held that the evidence is admissible said "Further evidence was then tendered to show that these persons (brother and sister) had previously carnally known each other and had a child in 1908. The object was to establish that they had a guilty passion towards each other and that therefore the proper inference from their occupying the same bed room and the same bed was an inference of guilt, or—which is the same thing in another way—that the defence of innocent living together as brother and sister ought to fail." The first ground given by Lord Chancellor for the admissibility of evidence suggests an extension of the rules indicated in the case above referred to, but the second ground comes with the rule previously indicated that evidence is admissible to rebut a defence really in issue. Reg v Rodley, supra.

Evidence of death by poisoning The question is, whether the administration of poison to A by Z his wife in September 1848 was accidental or intentional. The facts that B C and D (A's three sons) had the same poison administered to them in December 1848 March 1849, and April 1849 and that the meals of all four were prepared by Z, are deemed to be relevant though Z was indicted separately for murdering A, B, and C, and attempting to murder D R v Geering 18 L J M C 215, Step Dig Et Art 12 In admitting the evidence Pollock C B observed "I am of opinion that evidence is receivable that the death of the three sons proceeded from the same cause, namely, arsenic. The tendency of such evidence is to prove, and to confirm the proof already given, that the death of the husband, whether felonious or not, was occasioned by arsenic. In this view of the case I think it wholly immaterial whether the deaths of the sons took place before or after the death of the husband. The domestic history of the family during the period that the four deaths occurred is also receivable in evidence to show that during that time arsenic had been taken by four members of it, with a view to enable the jury to determine whether such taking was accidental or not. The evidence is not inadmissible by reason of its having a tendency to prove or to create a suspicion of a subsequent felony." The ruling in this case was approved in Malin v At Genl New South Wales, (1894) A C 57 and has been followed in other indictments for poisoning. Vide R v Heesom 14 Cox 40, R v Flannagan, 15 Cox 403, R v Neill Cream 116 Cent. Crim Sess Pap 1451, R v Klossou 137 Cent Crim Ct Sess Pap 471. See also R v Roden 12 Cox 630 (a trial for murder of a child by suffocation in bed). In R v Cotton, 12 Cox 400 (poisoning a child) evidence was admitted of the previous deaths of other children by the same poison. The prisoner and his wife were indicted for the murder of his mother by poison. The prisoner's former wife died in March, 1861, and his present wife was then their servant. The prisoner's mother lived with him after his second marriage and died in December 1861. He sold arsenic for agricultural purposes and there was evidence of administration by the prisoners of articles of food in which arsenic might be contained and of arsenical symptoms following. There was, however, evidence that three horses, one of them belonging to the male prisoner, had been accidentally poisoned by arsenic, and that some of his customers against whom he was not supposed to have any ill feeling, had suffered from arsenical symptoms evidently arising from some accident, and it was held that, in order to prove that the administration of the poison to the mother was wilful evidence was admissible of the circumstances which attended the death of the first wife and to show that she had died of arsenic. R v Garner, 3 F & T 681 4 F & F 346. Wills J after consulting Pollock, C B. R v Winslow 8 Cox 397, in which Wilde C J after consulting Martin, B excluded evidence of the same character, has been disapproved in R v Flannagan, 15 Cox 403 and in Malin v At Genl N S W it was pointed out that Martin B, was consulted by and agreed with Wills J, in admitting such evidence in R v Gray 4 F and F 1102, and that R v Winslow could not therefore be treated as of much importance. 2 Russ Cr 2111. On an indictment for murder by poison of S, evidence was admitted of the previous and subsequent deaths of J and L under like circumstances, and from similar symptoms to show that the poisoning, was not accidental, and it being proved that a motive for the death of S might exist from the fact of the prisoner having insured the life of S in a Benefit Society, evidence was also admitted to show that there might be an equal motive for the deaths of J and L by showing that they also had been insured by the prisoner. R v Heesom 14 Cox 40 see also R v Flannagan, 15 Cox 403, where Brett J took a similar view. 2 Russ Cr Ev 2112. In A v Armstrong, (1922) 2 K B 550=91 L J K B 904 where the accused was charged with the murder of his wife by administering arsenic, evidence that the accused had attempted to poison another person with arsenic on a subsequent occasion was held to have been rightly admitted to rebut the defence that the wife had committed suicide and that arsenic was kept by the accused for innocent purpose. See also Lala v Crown, 32 P L R 1191=12 Cr L J 125=9 Ind Cas 701, Kasuram v Emperor 73 Ind Cas 262.

Causing death by other means. On the trial for the murder of an infant, it was proved that the prisoners had alleged that they had received only one child to nurse before, and had given it back to its parents and that they would take the child, with whose murder they were charged, and would adopt it as their own for the payment of £3. Evidence was admitted to show that several other infants had been received by the prisoners on like representations, and

- S 15. upon payment of sums inadequate for their support for any long period, and also that the bodies of several infants had been found buried in a similar manner to that of the infant in question in the gardens of other houses which had been occupied by the prisoners. On appeal it was held that this evidence was relevant to the issue and was rightly admitted. Makin v Att Gen of N S W (1894) A C 57, 2 Russ Cr 2112. Appellant was charged with the murder of B M a woman with whom he lived and with whom he had gone through a form of marriage. She was found drowned in her bath. Evidence was admitted that subsequently two other women with whom he had gone through a form of marriage had been found drowned in their baths in very similar circumstances. R v Palmer, 84 L J K R 7133. In R v Voke, (1823) R and R, 331 where the charge was one of maliciously shooting at the prosecutor, evidence was admitted that defendant fired at prosecutor twice during the day, partly on the ground that the two shots were one continued transaction, but also that counsel for defendant by his cross-examination of prosecutor, had endeavoured to show that the gun might have gone off the first time by accident.

False representations and cheating—Principles of admitting other evidence. The utterance of forged paper or counterfeit money is simply one species of false representation, a representation in conduct instead of in word. The general principle of evidencing knowledge is examined in the other topics applies equally to this topic. "Other former acts of a similar sort in certain conditions show the likelihood of a warning being received, but this specific form of proof is rarely brought out clearly. No doubt with every prior occasion of the sort the probability grows that the prior promises would have sought out and charged the defendant with the falsity of the representations, but this reasoning does not appear to be used by the courts. The argument to the improbability of innocent intent from the repetition of similar acts is the apparently accepted ground for the use of this class of evidence. As to the similarity of the other representations, no attempt has been made by the courts to lay down a general test. The precedents illustrate a wide variety of rulings on this point. A common sense liberality is the best guide for decision as to the length of time over which the evidence should range, it is equally impossible to fix a general test the circumstances of each case must determine it. Subsequent representations are equally admissible with prior ones, because on the principle of Intent, it is the repetition of them that is significant, and a subsequent instance reduces the probability of innocence equally as well as a prior one. Knowledge of the falsity of the other representations, need not be shown for, if it could be shown there would be an end of the proof, and practically the present question would never need be discussed. It is the mere recurrence of similar incorrect (not necessarily knowingly false) representations which lead to the belief that they could not have been made innocently. We may assume that any given one might have been innocent but cannot conclude this when we note the recurrence.

"When the very act of making the representations is to be proved, and a system or design is to be argued from the evidence is to be restricted by the rigorous rule applicable to that purpose, i.e., there must be shown a connection of features, in all the instances so strong as to indicate a system throughout them. What is to be noted is that occasionally a court is found applying the same test where the doing of the act is not disputed but the intent alone is in issue. This is wholly misplaced strictness, out of harmony with all other analogies, and resting on a confusion of Intent and System. Wignmore 3 J 323.

False representations and cheating—Illustrative Cases. In Hillway's Trial 11 How St Tr 664, cheating was by pretending to be bewitched by Sarah M. So that he fasted, went into a trance etc., through her bewitching. The popular belief was that the sorcery was true, for many people had been fasting for twelve weeks. To show that the fasting was a fraud in that he secretly took food evidence to that effect was offered covering a fortnight of it, which, however, fell after the date of the information charging him and therefore objected to. In admitting this evidence Hill 1 C J 321. It an evidence of his cheating since that time, and that one of the information (i.e. not charged), but it is in evidence also to prove that his pretended fasting before was a mere deceit for he then pretended to have fasted ten weeks before he came hither, and afterwards pretends to continue fasting in the same manner, if that he proved to be a fraud it is strongly to be inferred that this pretended fasting was so too." In R v Roberts 1 Camp 399 the charge was criminal conspiracy to obtain goods fraudulently by representing themselves as wealthy people. The evidence of representations by the accused to other trade-men were admitted. In R v Sturges (1899) 1 Q. B. 77 where prisoner was indicted for obtaining eggs by fraudulently pretending by repeated advertisement that he was carrying on a substantial business it was held that evidence was rightly admitted that persons other than the prosecutor had subsequently been deceived by similar advertisements, issued by the prisoner. In admitting such evidence Lord Russell C.J. said "On the whole I think the evidence was admissible on the ground that it showed part of a scheme to defraud persons by the pretence of carrying on an honest and bona fide business. The transactions in all three cases were, therefore, connected by the advertisement which formed part of the scheme." Powell Et 125, Rex v Smith 92 L. T. 208. See also Reg v Stinson, 25 L. T. 666=12 Cox C. C. 111, Reg v Hamilton, 1 Cox C. C. 211. The question being whether an Insurance Company acted fraudulently in obtaining a premium from A through their agent B who had represented to A, that if he would insure, B would procure him a loan from the company. The fact that premiums had previously been obtained by the same agent and by same means from other persons to the knowledge and benefit of the company, without loans being made, held admissible, as showing fraudulent character of the transaction in question. Blair v Illion Co, 4 C. P. D. 94=45 L. J. C. P. 663, Thy S 340, Philp Et 142. Upon a trial of an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences by means of worthless cheques evidence of other and similar frauds by the prisoner, given in support of an indictment for a similar fraud upon another person in respect of which the prisoner was acquitted, is relevant and admissible as illustrating a course of conduct showing an intention to defraud. Reg v Otis, 69 L. J. Q. B. 918=(1900) 2 Q. B. 758. Upon a trial of an indictment for obtaining credit by means of fraud evidence of other similar frauds by the prisoner immediately preceding the offence charged in the indictment is relevant and admissible as tending to show a system of fraud and negating any honest motive on the part of the prisoner. Rex v Wyatt, 73 L. J. K. B. 15=(1904) 1 K. B. 188 see also, R v Walford, 7, J. P. 215, R v Jean 69 J. P. 27. So evidence of the same kind of practice is admissible, when only separated by a short interval of time as tending to negative accident or mistake and to show system. Rex v Walford 71 J. P. 215. Upon the trial of an indictment charging the prisoner with having obtained goods and credit by false pretences, and also with having obtained credit by fraud other than false pretences, evidence cannot be admitted that on two previous occasions the prisoner had obtained goods from other persons on credit by false pretences inasmuch as it does not tend to show that he is guilty of the offences charged in the indictment. Rex v Fisher 79 L. J. K. B. 187=(1910) 1 K. B. 149. On a trial of an indictment for endeavouring to obtain an advance from a pawn broker upon a ring by the false pretence that it was a diamond ring evidence was admitted that two days before the transaction in question the prisoner had obtained an advance from a pawn broker upon a chain which he represented to be a gold chain, but which was not so, and had endeavoured to obtain from other pawn brokers advances upon a ring which he represented to be a diamond ring, but which in the opinion of the witness was not so. Reg v Francis 43 L. J. M. C. 97=L. R. 2 C. C. 128. In R v Holt, 8 Cox C. C. 411=30 L. J. M. C. 11 A was indicted for obtaining money from B by false pretences. He was employed by his master to take order but not to receive moneys, and he was proved to have obtained the specific sum from B by representing that he was authorised by his master to receive it. Evidence of his having, within a week afterwards, obtained another sum from another person by a similar false pretence, such obtaining not being mentioned in the indictment in any way, is not admissible for the natural presumption was that whoever cut the tree did so with the design of precipitating the deceased into the water. Those facts were given in evidence on the trial of Donellan for murdering Sir Theodosius afterwards and were received, though quite unconnected with the prisoner in order to show that some one entertained a design on his life and that the probability was that he had not come to a natural death." Of course the accused's doing the act complained of must be proved by other evidence direct or circumstantial. See also the observation of Jelang J in R v Vapuram 16 B 414, where he expresses the view that such evidence is admissible. Here the principle recognised is that the recidivance of a similar fire may tend decidedly to negative innocent intent, even though the author of the other fires is not shown thus the prosecution having negatived innocent intent in the present fire by whomsoever set, the accused may be shown to have kindled it. On an indictment for setting fire to a rick of straw it appeared that the rick had been set on fire by the prisoner having fired a gun very near it. It was proposed to prove that the rick had been on fire on the previous day, and that the prisoner was then close to it with a gun in his hand. The defence was that the firing of the rick was accidental. It was contended that the evidence was not admissible. The firing of the rick on the previous day, if wilfully done, was a distinct felony. Maule J in admitting the evidence said "Although the evidence offered may be proof of another felony that circumstance does not render it inadmissible, if the evidence is otherwise receivable. In many cases it is an important question whether a thing was done accidentally or wilfully. It is only by the conduct of the prisoner that a judgment can be formed whether the act was accidental or intentional." But on an indictment for setting fire to a building, Farl J, held that the mere fact of the prisoner's having given notice of other fires, and claiming the reward usually paid on such occasions at the engine station, was not evidence which could be adduced to found a presumption that he caused the fire in question. R v Regan 4 Cox C 337. In R v Nattrass, 15 Cox C 73 (charge of attempt to burn the house by setting fire to articles so that the house would catch fire) the fact was admitted that on the same day articles were found on fire at four different times in different parts of the house.

Embezzlement Illustration (b) is founded on R v Richardson, 2 F & F 343. On an indictment for embezzlement where the entries of sums were correct but the castings up incorrect, a series of similar errors in casting up both previously and subsequently to the cases to which the indictment referred were held inadmissible in order to negative the evidence that the o were mere accidental errors. R v Richardson 2 F & F 343. R v Balls L R 1 C C R 328, R v Proude, L & C 97. R v Stephens 16 Cox 38, R v Girod 70 J P 514. In R v Stevens, supra, Manisty J said "This cannot be done merely with a view of inducing the jury to believe that, because the prisoner has committed a crime on one occasion, he is likely to have committed a similar offence on another, but only by way of anticipation of an obvious defence,—such as, that the prisoner did the act of which he was accused, but innocently and without any guilty knowledge or that he did not do it because no motive existed in him for the commission of such a crime, or that he did it by mistake." It is not with a view of proving guilt, but of proving the intention with which the act was done, that you anticipate it by such evidence." See also R v Readon 1 F & F 79, Emprior v. Babbington, L R 1927 Loh 549=28 P L R 313. In People v Sharp, 107 N Y 468 Peckham J said "A man indicted for the embezzlement of funds by false entries might claim with some degree of plausibility perhaps, that the entry was a mistake, but the probability of such mistake would be greatly lessened by proof that other false entries of the same kind had been made at or about the same time by the same person."

Extortion and black mail In R v Cooper 3 Cox Cr 517 the prisoner was charged for feloniously accusing H C S of in a tumult with intent to commit an unnatural offence with the intent to extort money. Cresswell J held that evidence of declarations of the prisoner on a former occasion, on coming off guard, that he had obtained money from a gentleman by threatening

S. 15. purpose of proving the intent when he committed the acts charged in the indictment Reg v Holt 30 I J M C 11. In R v Stenson, 12 Cox C C 11=20 L. P. 666 the charge was false pretences by causing an order to be given to a book seller purporting falsely to be from a lady of quality, for a book sold by the accused. The fact of sending of other false orders of the same sort was received to show the intent.

In R v Saunders 1 Q B D 19 which was a case of false pretences by advertising to give work and requesting money by mail to pay for the preliminary instructions the fact that a number of subscribers have been induced afterwards by him in the same way to forward money on such advertisements was received to show intent. In R v Smith 20 Cox C C 801 the charge was that the accused obtained credit on false pretences as agent of M. The accused alleged that he had merely given M's name as a reference. Evidence of his representation to another vendor a few days later that he was agent of M was admitted (R v Hyatt commented on R v Holt discredited).

In Reg v Daint 84 I L K B 1787 the prisoner was convicted on an indictment which charged him that in incurring a certain debt by purchasing a motor cycle he did unlawfully obtain credit by means of fraud. The fraud charged against him is that at the time he bought the cycle he had no intention of paying for it, for it is said that he knew quite well that he was not in a position to do so. His defence was that he was purchasing the machine on the credit of his parents. In that case evidence of two other transactions were admitted in evidence to show his intention. By the first transaction the prisoner obtained a motor cycle and in the latter he had obtained a camera. He had failed to pay for either. In the Court of appeal Lord Reading C J in allowing the evidence observed 'The circumstances of the cases are certainly peculiar, but in the opinion of this Court, would not have justified a criminal charge. They were used in this case for the purpose of proving to the jury that the appellant had in the case before them an intent to defraud. It is only in that way that they ever could be relevant to the charge then being investigated. Whether they were evidence or not depends upon whether they were evidence of similar transactions and we are of opinion that neither of those cases was of a similar character and that the evidence of the two transactions was not admissible.'

Setting fire to buildings. Illustration (a) is based on the facts of R v Gray 4 F and I 1102. This case was decided by Hales J Justice Stephen in a note to this case in his Digest of Evidence art 12 states that he acted on this case in R v Stanley Liverpool Summer Assize 1887, but he greatly doubts its authority. The objection to the admission of such evidence is that it may practically involve the trial of several distinct charges at once, and it would be hard to exclude evidence to show that the other fires are accidental. This kind of evidence is admissible not on the Knowledge principle (Vide p 231) nor on Intent principle (Vide p 233) but on the principle of "Anonymous Intent" as Professor Wigmore terms it (Vide p 236). In R v Bailey, 2 Cox Cr 311, the fire had originated near the kitchen, where the accused stayed as servant. Evidence was offered of two fires occurring shortly before in the prosecutor's shop and ware houses attached, though no connection of the prisoner or any one else with these was shown. In admitting this evidence Pollock C B observed 'I think this is clearly evidence, and may be used at all events for the purpose of showing that the present fire which was third on the same premises within so short a time, could not have been the result of accident. Surely, if a man finds certain mysterious circumstances to arise day after day in his establishment, he is at liberty to refer to them, if only for the purpose of showing that they could not have had their origin in accident and that a repetition of them could only lead to the conclusion that they resulted from malice and design. This course of evidence is not without precedent and authority moreover, for on the trial of Donellan for the murder of Sir Theodosius Broughton by administering him some poison evidence was given that a certain tree which hung over a deep and dangerous brook near a spot where Sir Theodosius was accustomed to fish, had been sawn almost in two by some unknown person. This was proved to show that some one entertained a design against the life of Sir Theodosius, for he was accustomed to stand on the tree while engaged in fishing, and the natural presumption was that whoever cut the tree did so with the design of precipitating the deceased into the water. Those facts were given in evidence on the trial of Donellan for murdering Sir Theodosius afterwards, and were received, though quite unconnected with the prisoner in order to show that some one entertained a design on his life and that the probability was that he had not come to a natural death. Of course the accused's doing the act complained of must be proved by other evidence direct or circumstantial. See also the observation of Jelang J in R v Vapuram 16 B 414 where he expresses the view that such evidence is admissible. Here the principle recognised is that the recollection of a similar fire may tend decidedly to negative innocent intent, even though the author of the other fires is not shown thus the prosecution having negatived innocent intent in the present fire by whomsoever set the accused may be shown to have kindled it. On an indictment for setting fire to a rick of straw it appeared that the rick had been set on fire by the prisoner having fired a gun very near it. It was proposed to prove that the rick had been on fire on the previous day, and that the prisoner was then close to it with a gun in his hand. The defence was that the firing of the rick was accidental. It was contended that the evidence was not admissible. The firing of the rick on the previous day, if wilfully done, was a distinct felony. Vaule J, in admitting the evidence said: "Although the evidence offered may be proof of another felony that circumstance does not render it inadmissible, if the evidence is otherwise receivable. In many cases it is an important question whether a thing was done accidentally or wilfully. It is only by the conduct of the prisoner that a judgment can be formed whether the act was accidental or intentional." But on an indictment for setting fire to a building Earl J, held that the mere fact of the prisoner's having given notice of other fires, and claiming the reward usually paid on such occasions at the engine station, was not evidence which could be adduced to found a presumption that he caused the fire in question. R v Regan 4 Cox C 337. In R v Nathans 15 Cox C 73, (charge of attempt to burn the house by setting fire to articles so that the house would catch fire) the fact was admitted that on the same day articles were found on fire at four different times in different parts of the house.

Embezzlement Illustration (b) is founded on R v Richardson, 2 F & F 343. On an indictment for embezzlement where the entries of sums were correct, but the castings up incorrect, a series of similar errors in casting up both previously and subsequently to the ones to which the indictment referred were held admissible in order to negative the evidence that these were mere accidental errors. R v Richardson 2 F & F 343. R v Balls, L R 1 C C R 328, R v Proude, L & C 97, R v Stephens, 16 Cox 38. R v Girod, 70 J P 514. In R v Stevens, supra, Manisty J said: "This cannot be done merely with a view of inducing the jury to believe that, because the prisoner has committed a crime on one occasion he is likely to have committed a similar offence on another, but only by way of anticipation of an obvious defence,—such as that the prisoner did the act of which he was accused, but innocently and without any guilty knowledge or that he did not do it because no motive existed in him for the commission of such a crime, or that he did it by mistake. It is not with a view of proving guilt, but of proving the intention with which the act was done that you anticipate it by such evidence. See also R v Readon 4 T & T 79, Empress v. Bakiyayai—A. I. R. 1927 Lah 549=28 P L R 313. In People v. Sharp, 107 N Y 468, Peckham J said: "A man indicted for the embezzlement of funds by false entries might claim with some degree of plausibility perhaps, that the entry was a mistake, but the probability of such mistakes would be greatly lessened by proof that other false entries of the same kind had been made at or about the same time by the same person."

Extortion and black mail In R v Cooper, 3 Cox Cr 547, the prisoner was charged for feloniously accusing H C S of an assault with intent to commit an unnatural offence, with the intent to extort money. Cresswell J held that evidence of declarations of the prisoner on a former occasion, on coming off guard, that he had obtained money from a gentleman by threatening

S 15. to take him to the guard house, and accuse him of an unnatural crime, was admissible. The evidence was not offered by way of proving simply that the prisoner had been guilty of the same crime before. The question was, whether on this occasion he did an act with the design of effecting a certain object. One step in the proof was to shew that he would be likely to know that a certain result would follow, and if it could be proved out of his own mouth that he was aware that such a result would follow, and if it could be proved out of his own mouth that he was aware that such a result would be produced, it was an ingredient in the necessary proof that he contemplated it. 2 Russ Cr 1168. See also R v Braynell 4 Cox 402. The argument is here applied, ~~seemingly~~ <sup>some</sup> what forced, such knowledge being a matter of common understanding and not needing to be proved. It is clear, however, that the intent argument is entirely applicable to the doing of similar act at other times tends to negative the supposition that the demand on the occasion charged was made in good faith (for example, with a genuine desire to obtain compensation for supposed injuries). This use of such evidence is generally sanctioned. Vide Barnard's Trial, 19 How, St Tr 825. R v Hinkworth, 4 C & P 444. R v Egerlon, R & R 375. R v Boyle & Merchant (1914) 3 K B 339, but see R v McDonnell 5 Cox Cr 153, Wigmore § 352, 2 Russ Cr 1168.

Rape. When the charge is of assault with intent to rape, the propriety of admitting evidence of similar offences cannot be doubted. There should be some limitation of time, but merely to avoid the objection of unfair surprise. There need be no limitation as to the person assaulted, because the only purpose is to negative any other than the rape intent and a previous rape is a fault on another woman has equal probative value for that purpose, for it is the general desire to satisfy the test that is involved in this crime, and no particular woman is essential for this. Wigmore § 357. But mere liberties taken by the defendant with the prosecutrix, does not show hurtful intention. R v Light, C & P 318. So also where the charge is burglary with intent to commit rape the evidence of defendant's entry into another house on the same night and having intercourse with a woman is not admissible, as being relevant. Rodley's Case, 9 Cr App 69 = (1913) 3 K B 468. On an indictment for abducting a child under the age of ten years the first occasion spoken by the child was a Thursday morning on which the prisoner threatened to beat her if she told, and it was held that evidence of subsequent perpetrations of the offence on Saturday and Monday was admissible. Wiles J said "I shall allow all the material to be proved in order to show the real nature of the case. It has repeatedly appeared to me in cases of this sort that a man by a threat of violence detains the child from complaining, and thus requires a species of influence over her by terror, which enables him to repeat the offence on subsequent occasions and this seems to me to give a continuity to the transaction which makes such evidence properly admissible."

Abortion. In R v Dale, where an instrument or appliance is used which might be properly employed for innocent treatment of women, Charles J ruled that evidence that the accused had by similar means caused or attempted to cause miscarriage was admissible to prove that the act was done with a guilty intent. In R v Perry, 2 Cox Cr 223, when the charge was to administer a drug with intent to miscarry, Wilde C J admitted evidence of subsequent administrations of other drugs to show intent. See also R v Palm 4 Cr A R 253 1910. R v Starkie, (1922) 2 K B 275-331. In 181. In R v Bond, (1906) 2 K B 389 where the admissibility of similar acts is discussed at length and which was also a case of abortion the evidence of the use of similar instruments upon another woman three months later to procure a miscarriage, was admitted on facts. "Such evidence is admissible with great caution. It should only be admitted where the prisoner has suggested that the administration of the drug or the use of the instrument was legitimate or accidental on his part, and not where the defence is a denial of the act itself. And proof of only one other similar case, without any special connection with the case charged in the indictment, ought not to be admitted the object being to rebut legitimate action or accident." Halsbury Vol. 13.

p 597, Roscoe v El 367, see also Thomson's Case, 7 Cr App 276, R v Lovegrove, 90 L J K B 285=(1920) 3 K B 643 In such a case Knowledge principle has application in as much as prior or subsequent acts are available to show a knowledge of the nature and effect of the instruments or drugs used, if that is disputed Similarly such evidence is also admissible on Intent principle Other occasions of using such instruments or drugs whether prior or subsequent, tend to negative an innocent intent Brunet v The King, 42 D L R 405 (Canada), but see R v Hicks, 36 L J O 421

Indecent Exposure, etc.—The above principles are occasionally applicable on the charge of indecent exposure, sodomy, bigamy, or enticing for prostitution and cognate offences Higmore § 360 In Pertins v Jeffery, (1915) K B 702 which was a case of obscene exposure in July, the respondent taking the stand was cross-examined as to a former exposure to the same woman in May, and the prosecution offered to prove the fact if denied Held that this former instance was admissible to show intent, but that an offer of a systematic course of conduct etc should not be admitted until the defence of accident or mistake or absence of intention to insult is definitely put forward In R v Thompson, (1917) 2 K B 630 on appeal (1918) A C 221 which was a case of gross indecency with boys, evidence of possession of photographs of naked boys and other appliances or implements was admitted, see also R v Weiss, (1918) 2 K B 853

Other acts to show intent or plan in civil cases The principle under which other acts are admissible to show plan or intent in criminal cases applies equally in civil cases The peculiarity of the question involved is merely whether and under what conditions other similar acts are receivable to show Knowledge Intent or Design is to the act charged The question is of much less frequent occurrence in civil cases than in criminal cases mainly because the issues of intent and the like are less commonly open in civil cases But wherever Knowledge or Intent or Design is relevant in a civil case the foregoing principles are equally applicable Thus, where the act of forgery is in issue, there may be a criminal prosecution for the forgery or there may be a civil action based on the forged document, and the same evidence may be applicable in both So where a false representation is charged it not only may be but usually is a civil case in which the issue arises and the foregoing principles become applicable In almost everyone of the foregoing classes of cases there are instances of the application of the principles in civil litigation The salient feature is the nature of the issue and the kind of evidence offered not the penal or the civil form of the proceeding Higmore § 371

Copyright infringement In Copyright infringement cases the defence often is that the passage in question is taken from the common source But this hypothesis of other sources is not available as an explanation where the same errors—either of fact or of printing—occur in the defendant's as well as plaintiff's books Accordingly the recurrence of such errors is a well established mode of evidencing to a high degree of probability the copying of such a specific passage by B from A Spiers v Brown, 31 L J 16 Higmore § 372 So 'if evidence is unsatisfactory on the question whether the defendant did use the plaintiff's work or not, to show the same errors in the subsequent work that are contained in the original is a strong argument to show copying which the ordinary and familiar mode of trying the fact whether the defendant had used the plaintiff's book But assuming in this way there is shown the probability of the copying of the specific passages it remains to invoke the principles of intent and design, and to argue that the copying of a number of such passages indicates a more extensive copying of other passages not otherwise shown to have been copied This argument is always open and its use has constantly been sanctioned there can merely be a question of its weight in a given instance Longman v Winchester, 16 Ves Jr 269, Maunder v Tegg, 2 Russ 385, Leuis v Fularton 2 B & W 6 Higmore § 373

Admissible

Accused were prosecuted for misappropriation by defalcation of accounts made in 1925 and 1926, evidence was adduced by the prosecution of similar acts done by the accused before 1925. Held that the evidence was admissible under section 115 to rebut the probable plea of mistake or innocent condition of the mind of the accused, the evidence being that of a system in which there was a common link between acts of 1924 and those of 1925.

The accused, a grocer at Bhuwandi ordered goods for Bombay and the goods were put into a hired motor lorry. To reach Bhuwandi the lorry passed through the limits of the Kalyan Municipality, but the lorry driver instead of paying octroi on the goods at Kalyan rapidly passed the incoming Nala and similarly passed out at the other end of the limits. The Nahedar in charge of the incoming Nala reported this matter to the municipality. The accused was charged under s 77 (2) of the Bombay District Municipal Act for introducing the said goods within the Octroi limits without paying dues. Held, that the evidence that the accused had been connected with similar cases as the one under charge was admissible to show his knowledge and intention. Emperor v Hanjam Vala, A I R 1926 Bom 231=50 B 174=28 Bom L R 115.

The accused on the 7th June 1909 administered dhutwa poison to A and B both of whom died from the effects thereof, and on the following day administered the same poison to C and D. The former got ill and recovered but the latter died. Held that the events which occurred or were said to have occurred, on the 7th and 8th of June were relevant to the case of charge of murder of D as forming incidents in series of similar transactions occurring about the same time and tending to show system and intention and to negative the idea of accident. Lala v Emperor, 9 Ind C 15 731=32 P L R 1911, see also Kasiram v Emperor 73 Ind C 15 262=6 N L J 111. Where in a trial upon a charge under section 399 of the Penal Code the accused pleads that their presence at a particular spot armed and in company was accidental and innocent it

Inadmissible

Where the accused was charged under s 409 Pen il Code, for embezzling three specific sums. Held that evidence of collateral offences in respect of other sums was not admissible. Pid chair v Emperor, A I R 1923 Lih 382.

In a suit on libel evidence of instances of acts of the plaintiff more or less closely resembling the particular act of misconduct imputed to him in the libellous statement is inadmissible. The defendants can justify the libel as true in substance and in fact by proving its truth not the truth of other acts and occasions having nothing to do with the act in question, unless it is intended to show that those acts were parts of the habitual and continuous, not accidental, conduct of the plaintiff. Nadirsha v Piraj Shri 19 Ind Cas 98=15 Bom L R 150.

It is not open to the prosecution to adduce evidence to show that on two previous occasions the accused ~~was~~ had committed murders ~~them~~ but had falsely charged and got convicted some other persons as murderers. Gangaram v Emperor 62 Ind C 15 545=22 Bom L R 1274=22 Cr L J 529.

Two persons A and B were tried on 21st July 1919 for the offence of murdering D a woman of the town, on the 10th December 1914, of conspiring to rob her, of theft of property from her house and for abetment of murder and theft. At the trial the prosecution wanted to adduce evidence (1) of association of the two accused, (2) of their association in crimes spoken of by other women of the town in connection with the charges of theft which they made against them and generally of a series of incidents from 1914 to 1918 that they used to go about together under different names, A taking B with him as his ~~daughter and introducing him to~~ Bibi to rich prostitutes of the town, thus being followed by their frequent disappearance and discovery of loss of money and ornaments. Held that the evidence was not admissible. Emperor v Panchu Das 44 W N 501 (F B).

In a case under s 420 of the I Code the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused depends on is open to the prosecution to rebut the plea, and section 15 of the Evidence Act admits the production of any evidence which would determine the construction to be placed upon the acts of the accused which in themselves might or might not be preparatory for dacoity, and evidence that one or more members of the gang had been concerned in previous and similar offences committed at the same place is admissible for the purpose. Khuaja v Emperor, 71 Ind Cas 361=24 Cr L J 136

Admissible

In a case of cheating it is open to the prosecution to show that the acts charged against the accused were parts of a series of similar acts committed by him, or in which he was concerned, at or about the time in question. Evidence of such other acts, whether previous or subsequent to the frauds charged against the accused, is relevant for the purpose of showing whether or not the intention of the accused was honest or fraudulent. Evidence merely to prove that the accused person's character is such that he is likely to commit the act with which he is charged is not admissible. Gardhari v Emperor, 26 P W R 1910 Cr=6 Ind Cas 964

In a charge against the accused of cheating by falsely representing that he was the Dewan of an estate and could procure employment for the complainant and thereby obtaining a sum of money as a pretended security deposit, evidence of instances of similar but unconnected transactions with other persons before or after the date of the offence charged, is admissible, not to establish the factum of the offence but to prove that the transaction in issue was one of a systematic series of fraud, that the intention of the accused on the particular occasion in question was dishonest and fraudulent. Emperor v Debendra, 36 C 573=13 C W N 1013=13 Q B D 77. See also Reg v Rhodes, 1 Q B D 77. Reg v Wyatt, 20 Cox Cr C 462 proof of actual facts and not upon the state of the accused's mind. Therefore evidence as to any previous act of fraud (committed by the accused) is not admissible under any provision of the law. Gokul v Emperor, 29 C W N 483=26 Cr L J 906=86 Ind Cas 970 (But see Emperor v Debendra, and other English cases)

Inadmissible

In a trial of an accused person for giving false evidence in respect of an alleged forged document 'to judge of the intention and knowledge of the scribe and attesting witness by the opinion of other Judges on other documents written and attested by these persons in suits and proceedings to which they were not parties is a use of section 15 of the Evidence Act which was never intended by the Legislature. Gumwant v Emperor, 38 Ind Cas 723=13 N L R 35

16 When there is a question whether a particular act was done, the existence of any course of business, according to which it naturally would have been done is a relevant fact

Illustrations

(a) The question is, whether a particular letter was despatched

Existence of course of business when relevant

S 16

The facts that it was the ordinary course of business for all letters put in a certain place to be carried to the post, and that that particular letter was put in that place, are relevant

(b) The question is, whether a particular letter reached A. The facts that it was posted in due course, and was not returned through the Dead Letter Office, are relevant Principle Of the probative value of a person's habit or custom as showing the doing on a specific occasion of the act which is the subject of the habit or custom, there can be no doubt. Every day's experience and sagacity make it clear enough. Wigmore § 92. 'Customs may, like any other facts or circumstances, be shown where their existence will increase or diminish the probabilities of an act having been done or not done, which act is the subject of contest.' Per Flandam, J in Walker v Barron, 6 Minn 598, 618 (Am). In another American case Sargent v J said "It would seem to be axiomatic that a man is likely to do or not to do a thing, or to do it or not to do it, in a particular way, according as he is in the habit of doing or not doing it." State v Railroad, 52 N H 528, 532. In Mathias v O'Neill 94 Mo 527 = 6 S W 2, (Am) evidence of a book keeper's custom of handing over collateral notes to the teller as indicating that it was done in this instance was admitted. The reason of such admission is thus given by Sherwood J "It is really immaterial, under the authorities cited, whether he was able to do more than to verify his entries and prove his invariable custom. These things being proven the presumption arises therefrom that the usual course of business was pursued in this particular instance. Every one is presumed to govern hims if by the rule of right reason, and consequently that he acquits himself of his engagement and duty. Whenever it is established that one act is usual concomitant of another, the latter being proved, the former will be presumed, for this is in accord with the experience of common life. It is simply the process of reasoning one fact from the existence of another." There is, however, much room for deference of opinion in concrete cases owing chiefly to the indefiniteness of the notion of habit or custom. If we conceive it as involving an invariable irregularity of action, there can be no doubt that this fixed sequence of acts tends to show the occurrence of a given instance. But in the ordinary affairs of life a habit or custom seldom has such an invariable regularity. Hence it is easy to see why in a given instance something that may be loosely called habit or custom should be rejected, because it may not in fact have sufficient regularity to make it probable that it would be carried out in every instance or in most instances. Whether or not such sufficient regularity exists must depend largely on the circumstances of each case. Wigmore § 92.

Scope of the section In commercial transactions the presumption is that the usual course of business was followed by the parties thereto. Henry v Bensita 37 Fla 609. 'Where the maxim of omnia presumuntur rite et solemniter esse acta (all acts are presumed to have been done rightly and regularly) applies, there indeed if the event ought probably to have taken place on Tuesday, evidence that it did take place on Tuesday or on Wednesday, is strong evidence that it took place on Tuesday.' Avery v Bowden, 6 E & B 973. So to prove that an act has been done it is admissible to prove any general course of business or office, whether public or private, according to which it would ordinarily have been done there being a probability that the general course of business will be followed in a particular case. This probability is stronger in the case of public offices, e.g. the Post Office. Phipps v L 84. There is no presumption that the course of business in a private office has the regularity of that in a public department. But the existence of any course of business, according to which an act in question would have been done, is relevant to the question whether such act was in fact done. Hetherington v Kemp 16 R R 773. Illustration (ii) is based on this case. The question in that case was as regards the postal department of a particular letter. In this connection Lord Ellenborough, C J observed "You must go further. Some evidence must be given that the letter was taken from the table in the counting house and put into the post office. Has you called the poster, and he had said that although he had no recollection of the letter in question, he invariably carried to the Post Office all the letters found upon the table, this might have done, but I cannot hold this general evidence of the course of business in the plaintiff's counting house to be sufficient. In a private office the course of business is only a relevant fact. In a public office the Court will presume that the act was properly done." So if a letter be properly addressed to A and posted and if it does not come back through the Dead Letter Office the Court will presume that A had received it. Warren v Warren, 1 C M & R 250. Jones v Great Central Railway, C A (1909), Powell, 141. In Ault v Loan Assn, 47 Pac. Rep. 13 (Wash.) it was said "The evidence that a letter left at the Tremont House and addressed to B actually reached him is of the same nature as a similar presumption arising from putting a letter so addressed into the Post Office, and may even be considered as considerably stronger in as much as there would be less probability of a failure." It is the usage at a Boston hotel to deposit all letters left at the bar in an urn kept for that purpose, whence they are distributed every fifteen minutes to the rooms of the different guests to whom they are addressed. B is a guest at the hotel on a day on which A leaves at the bar a letter addressed to B. The presumption is that the letter was received by B. Dana v Kemble, 19 Pick. 112.

In Warren v Warren 1 C M & R, 250 Parke B said "If a letter is sent by post, it is prima facie proof, until the contrary be proved that the party to whom it is addressed received it in due course." See also Sundersons v Judge 2 H Bl. 509, Woodcock v Holdsworth, 16 M & W 124, Shipley v Todhunter, 7 C & P 680 (686), Abbey v Hill, 5 Bing 299, Kent v Louen, 1 Camp 178, Plumer's case, R & R 264, Dunlow v Higgins, 1 H L Cas 381, House hold Fire v Grant 48 L J C P 577, Bussord v Leering, 6 Wheat 102. To prove the posting of a letter it is relevant to show that it was delivered to a clerk who, though he had no recollection of the particular letter, took all letters delivered to him to the post. Hetherington v Kemp, 4 Camp 193, Trotter v McLean, 13 Ch D 574, Phip Ev 3rd Ed 97, Slubee v Garbett 7 Q B 846, Ward v Londesborough, 12 C B 252, Percy Supper Club v Whyte, 106 L T Jo 308. But without any proof that it was properly addressed, stamped and posted, there is no presumption of its receipt. Best v German Ins Co 68 Mo (Aps) 520 (U S).

A telegram properly addressed is delivered to a telegraph company. The presumption is that it was received by the addressee. Oregon Steam Co v Otis, 100 N Y 416, Gerding v Harlow, 21 N Y S 636. To prove that a certain indorsement had been made on a (lost) licence entered at the custom house, it is relevant to show that the course of the office was, not to permit the entry without such licence. Butler v Allnut, 1 Stark. 222, Phipson 3rd Ed 97, Taylor § 183 A, Van Omerson v Douiel, 2 Camp 41, Waddington v Roberts, L R 3 B 579.

In an action against the acceptor of several bills of exchange which were made in November, 1850 and became due on February 5th and March 12 1851, the defence is that they were accepted by the defendant while an infant. It is proved that the defendant came of age on March 11th 1851. The presumption is that all the bills were accepted before he attained his majority. Roberts v Bethel, 12 C B 779. The reason of this presumption is thus expressed by Jervis C J. "There is nothing on the face of the bill to show when it was accepted. Why, then, is it that this evidence is sufficient? It is because it must be presumed that the bill has been accepted during its currency, and, secondly, before the commencement of the action, because it is the usual course of business to present bills for acceptance before the time for the payment of them has run out and within a usual time after the drawing of them. I decide this case upon this broad ground, that we are to presume, unless the contrary is shown that a bill of exchange has been accepted not on the day of its date but within a reasonable time afterwards. It is not to be presumed that the acceptance took place after the maturity of the bill. That view disposes of the case as to all these bills—as to five of them, because they became due before the defendant attained the age of twenty-one, as to the sixth, because a reasonable time for its acceptance had elapsed before the defendant's majority. And Maule J added 'Although it is not usual to accept a bill on the day

S 16 on which it is drawn, it is usual to do so at some early opportunity after that day. Therefore, where the drawer and acceptor are both living in the same town, the presumption is that the bill is accepted shortly—within a few days—after it is drawn, it being manifestly the interest of the drawer to have a negotiable instrument made perfect as early as conveniently may be. The date of the bill, therefore, though not evidence of the very date of the acceptance, is reasonable evidence of the acceptance having taken place within a short time after that day, regard being had to the distance the bill will have to travel from the one party to the other. Upon the same principle upon which that presumption rests, it may be presumed in this case that the bills were accepted before they arrived at maturity. It is alleged in a bill for relief that a certain agreement was in writing. The presumption is that it was signed. Rist v. Hobson, 1 Sm and Stu 513.

Course of business, meaning of—The expression "course of business" must mean the ordinary course of a professional avocation or mercantile transactions or trade business. Lingam v. Bharmappa, 23 B 63 (66). The usage in a private house, however methodical, cannot convey the same weight as the ordinary routine of office. Ibid.

Regularity in Public Office It has already been stated that the fixed method and systematic operation of the Government postal service have long been conceded to be evidence of the due delivery to the addressee of letters, notices etc., duly placed for that purpose in the custody of the authorities. The only requisites to raise a presumption of due delivery are that the letters are duly stamped, addressed and posted. Walter v. Haynes, Ry & M 149. Stalbeel v. Garbet, 7 Q B 846. This presumption is so universally conceded, that the strength of the evidence of this kind has been even raised to a presumption (vide illustration (f) to section 114, Mediapath's Case 40 L J Ch 39). Of course it is always open to show circumstances which would rebut that presumption. The general experience that a rule of official duty, or a requirement of legal conditions, is fulfilled by those upon whom it is incumbent, has given rise to a presumption of due performance. Wignote § 2534. The strength of this presumption is so great that provisions have been made in certain Statutes for the service of notice etc., by post. (Vide ss 148, 149 of the Indian Companies Act, VII of 1913, Taylor § 180). So, on proof that goods, which cannot be exported without a license were entered at the custom house for exportation license to export them will be presumed. Van Omeron v. Dunn, 3 Camp 44, Taylor § 180. An envelope produced bears the post mark and date of a certain office. This raises the presumption that the letter was mailed and sent at this time. New Haven County Bank v. Mitchell 15 Conn 906 (Am), see also Fletcher v. Braddyll 3 Stark R 61, Stocken v. Collin 7 M & W 515. R v. Johnson, 7 East 65, R v. Watson, 1 Camp 215, Archengels v. Thompson, 2 Camp 623, R v. Plumer, R & R 264, Butler v. Mountgarret, 6 Ir L R N S 77, Taylor § 179.

Course of business in private firms The habit of a private house, doing systematically a similar service being equally relevant, the principle has been applied to an express carrier's delivery of packages and to a telegraph company's transmission of telegraphs. White v. Flemming, 20 N Sc 332 (Canada). Epping v. Scott, 112 Cal 369 (Am). Com v. Jeffries, 7 All Ma s 518 (63) (Am), Heatherington v. Kemp, 4 Camp 193. The application of the same principle would also admit a private person's usual course of business to evidence any act of delivery or transmission, such as the sending of a notice or letter by post. The only difference is that the course of business followed in a Government Office will be judicially noticed without further evidence whereas in the case of private business the system alleged to have been followed must be proved like all other facts. The course of business of an individual firm may under circumstances not appear sufficiently fixed to be of that probable value. In Heatherington v. Kemp, 4 Camp 193 on which illustration (a) was based to show the sending of a letter, the usage of the country house in placing the letters on a table and the testimony of the partner as to his habit of putting them, were held admissible. In Hart v. Alexander, 7 C & P 746, 751, the question was whether a circular was sent. Evidence of the practice of the house to send circulars on every change in the firm was admitted. In the course of his judgment, Lord Abinger, said "That does not show that a particular person received a circular, except upon the presumption that a jury may make upon the general habit." In Woodcock v Houldsworth, 16 M. & W. 124, Parke B said "He has done all that was usual and necessary, and he does not guarantee the certainty or correctness of the Post Office delivery." See also Dunlop v Higgins, 1 H. L. C. 381 (398), Trotter v Maclean, L. R. 13 Ch. D. 574 (580). In U. S. v Babcock, 3 Dillon, 571-575 the evidence of telegrams delivered to a rubber-keeper accustomed to distribute despatches to defendant's office was admitted. In a case of injury at a high way blockaded by a trim to disprove the blockade, evidence was admitted of a practice of managing trains so as not to obstruct the highway. Hall v Brown, 58 N. H. 93 (4m). A course of liquor sales in a preceding month, was admitted to show a specific sale. In admitting such evidence the Court observed "Where there is a question whether a particular act was done the existence of any course of business according to which it naturally would have been done is a relevant fact." State v Shaw, 58 H. N. 73. In a North Carolina case, where the question was whether a receipt for rice was given by a miller evidence of his habit to give a receipt was admitted. Ashe v De Rosset, 3 Jones p. 240.

In Lucas v Novosilsheski, 1 Esp. 296 to prove payment of wages, evidence was offered of the defendant's custom of paying the workmen every Saturday night and of the plaintiff's presence waiting with the rest. This evidence was admitted "as he worked under the same terms with the other workmen." See also Sellen v Norman, 4 C. and P. 80. So also in Elans v Birch, 3 Camp. 10, which was an action against a milk carrier for money not turned over to his employer, evidence of the regular course of business in paying over the receipts duly, was admitted as showing payment. Similarly where goods have been consigned to a factor to sell on commission, it may be presumed, after a reasonable time (e. g. 14 years), that he has accounted. Topham v Braddish, 1 Trunt. 72. In a case of non-delivery of a package evidence of custom of the plaintiff's driver of a package is admissible. American Express Co. v Hogyard, 37 L. M. 465 (Am). In Vaughan v R. Co. 63 N. C. 11 (1m) where the question was whether goods have been received by a railway company evidence of its custom to weigh and mark goods was received as showing that they would have been found marked. In Hine v Promeroy, 24 Vict. 211, 214 (1m) the question was whether an attorney had directed a process server to take N and M as receptors. Evidence of his uniform course of business to give no instructions as to receptors was admitted as corroborative. In Houard v Sherwood, L. R. C. P. 148, the question was whether the defendant's servant who had warranted a horse sold to the plaintiff, had authority to do so. To show probable non-existence of such authority, evidence was offered of a usage among horse dealers not to warrant under the circumstances.

Refusal of a registered letter. The use of a post mark in evidence involves at least three distinct principles. In the first place, the question arises may it be inferred from the presence of what purports to be the official mark that the mark was genuinely affixed by an officer of the Post Office concerned? This is a question of authentication and may be answered in the affirmative though there has been some fluctuation of judicial opinion on the subject. In the second place the question arises, whether if the post mark be taken as genuine, it is evidence that the cover bearing it was stamped on the date the impression bears. The answer is in the affirmative. In the third place the post mark is evidence that the place or office mentioned therein was actually the place where it was affixed. The mere fact of a notice bearing a certain date is no proof that it must have been posted on the same date. An article posted and delivered may be inferred to have been delivered in due course of post. Gobinda v Durarka, 20 C. L. J. 455.

Telegrams—Times of delivery. The documents kept by the Post Office showing the terms of receipt and delivery of telegrams are not admissible in evidence as public records, in as much as they are kept only a short time, are

S. 16 not accessible to the public, are not the result of public enquiry, and do not deal with a general public right but are merely kept for the purpose of regulating the pay and the work of the post office servants Heyne v Fichel, 110 L T 264=30 T L R 190

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

A notice was sent by the plaintiff firm to the defendant firm by registered letter which was posted to the correct address of the latter, but was returned with the word 'refused' endorsed upon it by the Post Office. Held that under section 16 of the Evidence Act the presumption was that the letter had reached the Kothi of the defendant firm Louis Dreyfus & Co v Chumandas, 50 Ind Crs 195=2 S L R 142, see also Jogendra v Dwarla Nath, 15 C 691, Baluram v Bali Pannabai, 11 Ind Crs 351=13 Bom L R 328.

The question is, whether a letter was sent on a given day. The post mark upon it is deemed to be a relevant fact R v Canning 19 St 370, Gobinda v Duala 20 C L J 455=15 C W N 489=26 Ind Crs 962.

To prove the posting of a letter, it is relevant to show that it was delivered to a clerk who, though he had no recollection of the particular letter habitually took all letters delivered to him to the Post Office. Heathcington v Kemp, 4 Camp 153, Frotter v Mclean, 13 Ch D 574 or, that the letter was put in a given place, where all letters were regularly put for posting, whence they were always carried to the post by a servant (Heathcington v Kemp, supra Skilbeal v Gorbett 7 Q B 846, Percy Supper Club v Whyte, 106 L T Jo 303)—Phip Lr 3rd Ed. p 97.

In a suit by one banking firm against another firm for the recovery of the balance of an account between them it was held with reference to the keeping of the firm's account books and their periodical transaction to the principals that it was reasonable to presume that that which was the ordinary course was pursued in that case Dwarika v Laboo, 6 M I A 88 (90).

To prove the delivery of a letter on a given date, it is relevant to show that the letter was properly addressed and posted in due time and not afterwards returned. Warren v Warren 1 C M & R 20, British and Am Telej Co v Colson L R 6 Ex 122, Phip Lr 98.

Inadmissible.

An endorsement on the cover of a registered letter that the cover had been tendered to the addressee on a certain day and had been refused by him, is at best a record of the statement by the peon and would be admissible either under section 32 (2) or section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, if the requirements of those sections are fulfilled. If it be not admissible under sections 32 (2) or section 33, in that case the events recited therein by the peon must be proved by calling him as a witness. Gounda v Dwarika, 26 Ind Crs 962=20 C L J 455=19 C W N 489.

To prove the posting of a letter written by A to B,—evidence by one of A's clerks that he habitually copied all letters written by A, then returned them to A to seal, and that afterwards when A gave back the writing to another clerk posted them, held in the absence of evidence to show that he had returned that particular letter to the clerk, this is no proof of posting. Thoscy v Williams, M & M Lr, Phip Lr 97. So also where A's clerk proved that the letter had with several others been given by him to a deceased clerk to post, and that the latter had left for the post with them, held that mere possession for posting was insufficient. Roulunds v De Vecchi, 1 C & E 10, Phip 97. So handing a letter to a town postman is no evidence of posting as it is again his duty to receive it (Re London etc Lr, Exp Jones, 1900 1 Ch 220) Phip Lr 97—see also Ram Dass v Official Liquidator 9 A 366.

To prove the delivery of a letter posted to H at Bristol, the fact that it was addressed as "Mr H Bristol" was insufficient. Waller v Haydon, 1 C & M 149.

ADMISSIONS

S

17 An admission is a statement, oral or documentary, which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, and which is made by any of the persons, and under the circumstances, hereinafter mentioned

Admission defined

Admissions, meaning of.—An admission is defined by Stephen to be “a statement, oral or written suggesting an inference as to any fact in issue or relevant or deemed to be relevant to any such fact made by or on behalf of any party to any proceeding” Step Dig Ev, Art 15 In English law the term admission, means any statement made out of the witness box by a party to the proceedings whether civil or criminal, or by some person whose statements are binding on the party against his own interest Wills Ev 2nd Ed 149 In our law says Mr Taylor ‘the term admission is usually applied to civil transactions, and to those matters of fact, in criminal cases which do not involve criminal intent, the term confession being generally restricted to acknowledgment of guilt This distinction will be better understood by an example Thus in the trial of Lord Melville, who was charged, amongst other things, with criminal misapplication of money received from the Exchequer, the admission of his agent and authorised receiver was held sufficient proof of the fact of such agent having received the public money, though, had such admission been tendered in evidence to establish the charge of any misapplication of the money by the noble defendant, it would clearly have been rejected The law was thus stated by Lord Chancellor Erskine “This first step in the proof” (namely, the receipt of the money by the agent,) ‘must advance by evidence applicable alike to civil, as to criminal cases, for a fact must be established by the same evidence, whether it is to be followed by a criminal or civil consequence, but it is a totally different question, in the consideration of criminal as distinguished from civil justice how the noble person now on trial may be affected by the fact when so established The receipt by the pay master would in itself involve him civilly, but could by no possibility convict him of a crime” Lord Melville’s Trial, 29 How St Tr 746—764, Taylor § 724 citing verbatim from Greent Ev § 170

So it is impossible to hold that admissions only mean statements, made by parties to civil proceedings, and that they do not include statement of accused persons in criminal proceedings All admissions of an accused person are not, in the eye of the law, confessions To ascertain whether a certain statement, made by an accused person is an admission only, or amounts to a confession, a reference must always be made to the terms of the statement Every statement, oral or documentary ‘which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, made by an accused person is an admission under ss 17 and 18 of the Evidence Act, which is provable against the person making it, unless some provision of the Evidence Act or other law renders it inadmissible Itah Bala v Empress 16 P R 1886 Also in India the restrictions put by Prof Greent and Taylor that “admission is usually applied to civil transactions and to those matters of fact in criminal cases, which do not involve criminal intent have no application Vide Peroz v Emperor, 45 Ind Cr 343=11 P R 1918 Cr=19 Cr L J 651 Shere Singh v Empress 21 P R 1881 Cr Buta v Empress, 52 P R 1887 Cr Madan Guru v Emperor, 4 Pat. 381=73 Ind Cr 963=24 Cr L J 723 Raj Kumar v Emperor 9 Pat. L T 449=A. I R 153 Pat 475, Bishen v Tam 103 P R 1915 Ganpat v Emperor, 8 Ind Cr 1181 But the statements of an accused cannot be used against his co accused Emperor v Akbar 34 B 599

The word ‘admission’ is used in sections 17—23 does not include admissions of relevant facts made by party in the witness box, since these are part of his direct oral evidence, nor admissions made on pleadings since their function is to limit the issues and therewith the scope of the evidence admissible Wills Ev 2nd Ed p 150 An admission in a pleading is a different thing from such an admission as is contemplated by these sections of the Evidence Act It is generally understood to be a concession made by one of the parties that a fact alleged in the pleading of the party opposed to him need not be proved time of trial, a statement which, when brought into the case, comes in as a piece of evidence, direct or circumstantial, from which the Court and jury may draw an inference or inferences as to the truth of the fact in issue McKee's Fr § 61. As to the formal admissions little need be said. They simply fix the relation between the parties as to the facts. They help to define the issues concerning which evidence is to be heard, but they are not in themselves evidence. As to the second kind of admissions those which may be called evidential admissions, they be of many different kinds with respect to form and character, but in general they fall into two classes. First, direct statements of main facts in issue, second, statements of facts from which inferences may be drawn as to main facts in issue. Both kinds of statements may be called evidential admissions, because of the fact that they are introduced as evidence. It will be readily seen however that they may differ very much in conclusiveness, that in the latter case they are likely to be in the nature of circumstantial evidence, as to which there is always much uncertainty while in the former case they are likely in themselves to carry conviction. McKee's Fr § 62.

Direct Admissions Direct and express admissions are practically the same. They are direct statements of main facts in issue. As regards this kind of admissions there is nothing to be said, except that, to be available, the statements which constitute the admissions must be proved in the ordinary way. The form in which the admission is made is immaterial, so that it amounts to a statement of fact, and is not a statement of opinion or promise. Driscoll v City of Taunton, 160 Mass 486 (Am). The proof of a direct admission is usually by the introduction of testimony, or by written, as to the language constituting the admission. The statement constituting the admission may be oral or written. Its form is immaterial. So, also, are the place and circumstances attending its making. It may have been heard by witness over a telephone. Wolfe v Railway Co, 87 Mo 473-10 Am St Rept 331 (Am).

Indirect Admissions Indirect admissions are in the nature of circumstantial evidence. An illustration of indirect admission may be found in the following. A sues X for damage done by X's cattle on A's crop, and for the purpose of showing an admission on the part of X that his cattle had caused the damage. A offers the testimony of a witness to the effect that X had told witness that he had offered A a certain amount of money to cover the damage. From such statement an inference naturally arises that X's cattle did do the damage. Story v Nidiffer, 146 Cal 549 (Am). That the defendant in the illustration just used made the statement that he had offered the plaintiff something to cover his damages although not equivalent to a direct admission that the cattle caused the damage, is, nevertheless, very nearly so. An illustration of an admission somewhat further removed in character from a direct admission is found in a case where A sued X for the loss of his sheep charging that X's dog had killed them and as a proof of the fact of the killing, which was the main fact in issue offered evidence that X had killed his dog, at the time remarking that it would not kill any more sheep. Anderson v Halterson, 126 Iowa, 125 (Am). A step further from the direct admission is the statement which by omission becomes evidence of some fact. When we go still further from the direct admission, we finally reach the field of admissions by conduct, or in what are frequently spoken of as implied admissions, and which are simply circumstantial evidence. According to Bow, implied admissions are those which result from some act, or failure to act of the party. Bow ex's Law Dict. They may also arise from acquiescence. An implied admission is proved by introducing testimony as to such conduct as shows an acknowledgment of the truth of the fact in question. There are various cases of implied admissions strictly speaking. In most instances when actions or conduct are introduced as bearing upon the truth of a fact it is as circumstantial proof of the fact itself, and not as proof of an admission. The term "implied admission" is often used to designate proof of this sort, but really the element of admission is frequently wanting. McKee's Evidence § 65. Admissions by conduct are not included under this section. Under this section admission is a statement oral or documentary. An admission by conduct has been dealt with in section 8. Such admissions

17

Unless a statement in a pleading is in the nature of such a confession, it can hardly be considered to be a fact admitted in the pleadings for purposes of the proceedings in which the pleadings are originally filed. Ippara Chathar v. Annappa 20 Ind. Cas. 792 = 25 M. L. J. 329 = 11 M. L. T. 117. Nor the sections include any admissions made out of Court in so far as they are not so-called in the nature of admissions, but create specific rights and liabilities, as known party, statements made in the nature of admissions made by the opposite party, circumstances were such as to make it a part of the Civil Procedure Code or in an

Principle on which admissions are received. The admission is received as evidence, and on the faith of its own natural truthfulness, and in dispensation of the ordinary tests of oath and cross-examination. Goodere F. 496. See also Spargo v. Brown, 9 B. & C. 935 (938). "Another class of evidence," says Mr. Starnie, "which is admissible though the usual tests are inapplicable, consists of declarations made by one of the parties to a suit, in the nature of a confession or admission contrary to his own interest. Whatever a party voluntarily admits to be true though the admission be contrary to his interest, may reasonably be taken for truth. The same rule, it will be seen applies to admissions by the other party so identified in situation and interest with a party that their declaration may be considered to have been made by himself. As to such evidence, the ordinary tests of truth are properly dispensed with, they are inapplicable as oath is administered to a witness in order to impose in addition an obligation on his conscience, and so to add weight to his testimony, and he is cross-examined to ascertain his means of knowledge as well as his intention to speak the truth. But where a man voluntarily admits a debt, or confesses a crime, there is little occasion for confirmation, the ordinary motives of human conduct are sufficient warrants for belief." Starnie on Evidence p. 50. Admissions and confessions are generally admitted as an exception to the Hearsay rule, considering them as declarations against his interest, and therefore probably true. But there is nothing in their nature which entitles us to say that they are explainable only as made against the person's interest. The simple and broad rule for receiving them is, in the language of Chief Baron Pollock, that "if a party has chosen to talk about a particular matter, his statement is evidence against himself (Darby v. Ouseley, 1 H. & N. 1) and the theory of their use seems to be that they are to a party what prior inconsistent statements are to a witness viz, a means of discrediting his present claim by showing that he has at other times made a smaller or otherwise different claim. If a witness says on the stand that he saw the plaintiff give the defendant one hundred dollars a prior statement of his that he saw fifty dollars given, discredits his present testimony, in that both statements cannot be true and at one time or the other the witness has apparently erred. In a similar way, a plaintiff's statement at a prior time that he lent the defendant fifty dollars, throws discredit on his present claim in the pleadings that he lent one hundred dollars. The evidential weight of the inconsistency may be greater if his prior statement was against his interest—as if he declared that he never lent any money at all—but that is not essential to its admissibility so that in the end the purpose and effect of using admissions of this sort is simply to get a prior statement of the party against the statement now advanced by him in his pleadings or through his witnesses, and thus discredit the present claim by its inconsistency with the former one. Green v. Evans § 169.

Probative Status of Admission.—Prof Wigmore's views "The statements made out of Court by a party opponent are universally deemed admissible when offered against him. What is their probative status?"

"(1) Regarded from the point of view of ordinary logic and psychology they are of course testimonial utterances like any other human assertions whether made in or out of Court.

"But even from this point of view they have two kinds of probative value.

"(a) One is the ordinary value of any person's testimonial utterance, this value depending on his capacity to observe, etc., his means of knowledge, his time of trial, a statement which, when brought into the case, comes in as a piece of evidence, direct or circumstantial from which the Court and jury may draw an inference or inferences as to the truth of the fact in issue. McKelvey's Ev § 61. As to the formal admissions little need be said. They simply fix the relation between the parties as to the facts. They help to define the issues concerning which evidence is to be heard but they are not in themselves evidence. As to the second kind of admissions, those which may be called admissions, they be of many different kinds with which we have made a statement but in general they fall into two classes. First, a party opponent is discredited when he has made a statement inconsistent with his present claim against him. The witness speaks in Court through his testimony only, and hence his testimony forms the sole basis upon which the inconsistency of his other statement is predicated. But the party-opponent whether he himself takes the stand or not, speaks always through his pleadings and through the testimony of his witnesses put forward to support his pleadings, hence the basis upon which may be predicated a discrediting inconsistency on his part includes the whole range of facts asserted in his pleadings and in the testimony relied on by him. Thus, in effect and broadly, anything said by the party opponent may be used against him as an admission, provided it exhibits the quality of inconsistency with the fact now asserted by him in pleadings or in testimony.

"(2) But, regarded from the point of view of the legal rules of admissibility, the party's extra-judicial statements, like all other extra-judicial statements, are met and challenged by the Hearsay rule. How is it, then (since they are nevertheless admissible against the party opponent,) that they are able to pass the gruntlet of the Hearsay rule?

"Very simply. The answer is that the party's testimonial utterances do not pass the gruntlet of the Hearsay rule when they are offered for him (unless they can satisfy some exception to that rule), but that they do pass the gruntlet when they are offered against him as opponent, because he himself is in that case the only one to invoke the Hearsay rule and because he does not need to cross-examine himself. The theory of the Hearsay rule is that an extra-judicial assertion is excluded unless there has been sufficient opportunity to test the assertion by cross-examination by the party against whom it is offered e.g. if Jones had said out of Court, 'The party opponent, Smith borrowed these fifty dollars', Smith is entitled to an opportunity to cross-examine Jones upon that assertion. But if it is Smith himself who said out of Court, 'I borrowed these fifty dollars', certainly, Smith cannot complain of lack of opportunity to cross-examine himself before his assertion is admitted against him. Such a request would be absurd. Hence the objection of the Hearsay rule falls away, because the very basis of the rule is lacking viz. the need and prudence of affording an opportunity of cross-examination. In other words, the Hearsay rule is satisfied. Smith has already had an opportunity to cross-examine himself, or (to put it another way) he now as opponent has the full opportunity to put himself on the stand and explain his former assertion. The Hearsay rule, therefore, is not a ground of objection when an opponent's assertions are offered against him in such case, his assertions are termed Admissions.* But the Hearsay rule is a ground of objection by the first party when the opponent's assertions are offered in his favour and such statements are then not termed admissions.*

"(3) It follows that the subject of an admission is not limited to facts against the party opponent's interest at the time. No doubt the weight of credit to be given to such statements is increased when the fact stated is against the person's interest at the time but that circumstance has no bearing upon their admissibility. On principle, it is plain that the probative reason why a party opponent's utterance is sought to be used against him, is ordinarily the reason noted above in para 1b viz. that it exhibits an inconsistency with his present claim, tending to throw doubt upon it, whether he was at the time speaking

* This does not accord with the definition given in the Indian Evidence Act, Vide s. 17, 21

S 17

apparently in his own favour or against his own interest. For example a plaintiff who now claims a debt of £ 100 is clearly discredited by having made a demand a month ago for only £ 50, even if at the time the debtor conceived only £ 25, and thus put the demandant in the position of then making an admission purely in his own favour for the aggrindment of his claim. If the principle upon which admissions were received rested at all upon the discrediting quality of the fact asserted at the time of assertion, such a statement would be certainly rejected with as much force as an admission offered by the first party as it would be when even offered by the opponent himself in his own favour. Nevertheless the fallacy is sometimes committed of placing the inadmissibility of such statements on the ground that it is a fallacy, in the strict sense, as to be seen not only by reflecting upon the principle involved, but also by observing that no Court ever yet excluded an opponent's admission because of such a limitation. Doubtless practice and unquestioned tradition are here unmistakable.

(4) The logical value, therefore of the use of admission is two fold. In the first place, all admissions may furnish, as against the opponent, the admitted fact, as a basis for inference, both in its strength and in its prior self-contradiction, the nature of this inference, both in its strength and in its weakness, has been already examined, and need not here be reconsidered. In the next place, all admissions used against the opponent, satisfy the Hearsay rule, and, when once made, have such testimonial value as belongs to any testimonial assertions under the circumstances, and the more notably they run counter to the natural bias or interest of the party when made, the more credible they become. This element adding to their probative value, but not being essential to their admissibility. This double evidential utility explains the proposition, sometimes judiciously sanctioned, that an admission is equivalent to affirmative testimony for the party offering it. However, any attempt to stress this distinction tends to vain logical quibbles and should not be made basis of any instruction on the weight of evidence. Higmore § 1048

Admissions, distinguished from Hearsay exception for statements of Facts against interest, Death not necessary. It has already been stated that the use of admissions in the sense of self harming statement is on principle not obnoxious to the Hearsay rule. Nevertheless because, most statements used as admissions do happen to state facts against interest, admissions are generally treated as obnoxious to the Hearsay rule, and are only allowed as exceptions to it (Vide Foyler Et § 723). In such cases, as the statements are against the interest of the persons making it, their trustworthiness is supposed to be guaranteed. That this is a mere local error of theory and in no sense represents a rule anywhere obtaining may be seen from three circumstances first, that the limitation of the Hearsay exception to facts against pecuniary or proprietary interest (Vide s. 32, clause 3) has never been attempted to be applied to admissions, secondly that the further requirement of the Hearsay exception namely, that the declarant must be accounted for as deceased, absent from the jurisdiction, or otherwise unavailable (Vide section 32), has never been enforced for the use of a party's admissions (Vide Woolway v. Roue 1 A. & E. 114), and thirdly that if an opponent's admission fell under the protection of this exception they would be equally admissible in his favour, but of course they are not. Higmore § 1049. But under the Indian Evidence Act admission which is not a self harming statement is inadmissible in favour of the party making it, if it satisfies the conditions of clauses (1), (2) and (3) of section 21.

Admissions whether subject to rules of testimonial qualifications, such as personal knowledge, infancy, Opinion Rule, etc. "A primary use and effect of an admission says Prof Higmore 'is to discredit a party's claim by exhibiting his inconsistent other utterances. It is therefore immaterial whether these utterances would have been independently receivable as the testimony of a qualified witness. It is their inconsistency with the party's present claim that gives them logical force.' Higmore § 1053. For such admissions therefore a party's personal knowledge is not indispensable and it may be founded on Hearsay although its weight may be slight. Re Perton, 53 L. T. 766. But where the admissions" says Mr Taylor "whether oral or in writing, contain matters stated as mere hearsay, it may be questionable whether such matters can be received in evidence. If tendered against the party making the statement, they are clearly entitled to very little weight, and unless connected with a further admission, that he believes them to be true, they would seem, like hearsay declarations against interest, to be inadmissible. Lord Trimbleston v Kemmis, 9 Cl and F in 780, 784." Taylor § 737. Mr Justice Charnie in the case of an answer in Chancery, read against the party in a subsequent suit at law, thought that portion of it not admissible, "for" he added, "it appears to me that where one party gives a part of the answer of the other party in evidence he makes the whole inadmissible only so far as to waive any objection to the competency of the testimony of the party making the answer, and that he does not thereby admit as evidence all the facts which may happen to have been stated by way of hearsay only in the course of the answer to a bill filed for a discovery. But where the answer is offered as the admission of the party against whom it is read, it seems reasonable that the whole admission should be read to the jury, for the purpose of showing under what impressions that admission was made, though some parts of it be only stated from the hearsay and belief Greenl Ex § 202, Taylor Ex § 737. But Stephens J in Kitchen v Robbins, 29 Ga 713, 766 (Am) expressed contrary view where he said. Are no admissions good against a party, unless founded on his personal knowledge? The admissions would not be made except on evidence which satisfies the party who is making them against his own interest that they are true, and that is evidence to the jury that they are true. Admissions do not come in on the ground that the party making them is speaking from his personal knowledge but upon the ground that a party will not make admissions against himself unless they are true. The fact that he makes them against his interest can be reasonably explained only on the supposition that he is constrained to do so by the force of evidence. The source from which a knowledge of fact is derived, is a circumstance for the jury to consider in estimating the value of the evidence but that is all." See also Wigmore § 1053. Bishop of Meath v Marquis of Winchester, 3 Bing, N C 183 (203), Bulley v Bulley, L R Ch App 739 (747). But such considerations do not apply when a party wants to use testimonially his own admission in his own favour under clauses 1 to 3 of section 21. In such cases personal knowledge seems to be necessary. In R v Waller, 1 Cox 99, where the question was whether, A was an infant at the time of making a certain contract, an admission by A that R was so was received against him although founded on hearsay. See R v Symonds, 4 Cox 277, Re Preston, 53 L T 706. As to statements by an agent containing hearsay or opinions, vide The Aclacon 1 Speaks E & A 780. The Solway 10 P D 137 cited in Phip Ex 196, 216.

On the same principle the admission of an infant party would be receivable. O'Neill v Read, 7 Ir L R 434. See also Dharamaji Vaman v Gurrar Shrinivas, 10 B. H. L. R. 311. Theoretically, the admissions of a lunatic party would stand upon the same footing, although the weight to be given them might be nil. Wigmore § 1053. The opinion rule also does not limit the use of a party's admissions. Doe v Stell, 3 Camp 115. But a bare statement that a party is informed without addition of his belief in the information will not amount to an admission. Trimbleston v Kemmis, 9 C and P 780, Roe v Ferris 2 B and P 548. Phip Ex 196.

Admission and Confession distinguished.—Admission is usually applied to a civil transaction and to those matters in criminal cases which do not involve a criminal intent. While the term confession is usually used in criminal Court as denoting an acknowledgment of guilt. The accused in a criminal case may make admissions, just as a party in a civil case, i.e. by saying things inconsistent with the present points of proof. Admissions in the sense of inconsistencies are not peculiar to civil cases. Greenl Ex 170. Admission in a civil suit that a document is genuine can not in a forgery case be regarded as confession at all. Per Rankin C J in Ambar Ali v Emperor A. I. R. 1929 Cal 339. "A confession" says Prof Wigmore "is one species of admissions, namely an admission consisting of a direct assertion, by the accused in a criminal case of the main fact charged against him or of some fact essential to the charge."

17

Wigmore § 1050, Taylor Ev § 724, Steph Dig Art 24 "Confessions" are a sub species of 'statements' and a species of admissions." Per Rankin J in Amrudy v Emperor, 44 C L J 253 (259) = A I R 1927 C L 17 The expression confession occurs under the category of admissions, it has not been defined in the Evidence Act Per Mahmood J in R v Babu Lal, 6 A 509 (539) But there is distinction between 'an admission' and 'a confession' in the Evidence Act R v Macdonald, 10 B L R App 2, Empress v Jugrub, 7 A 746, Empress v Pandharinath 6 B 34 Empress v Maher Ali, 15 C 389, Empress v Dabee Pershad 6 C 530, Empress v Admadhab, 15 C 595 A confession is only an admission of guilt 4 A L J 174 (Journal) The word confession as used in the sections of the Evidence Act relating to confessions, should be construed as including inculpatory admissions which fall short of being an admission of guilt Empress v Jugrub, 7 A, 646 = A W N (1885) 131 All the admissions of an accused person are not, in the eye of the law confessions It is also impossible to hold that admissions only mean statements made by parties to civil proceedings and that they do not include statements of accused persons in criminal proceedings A confession may be defined as 'an admission made at any time by a person charged with an offence stating or suggesting the inference that he committed the offence' When the statement taken by itself does not suggest the inference of guilt in relation to the particular charge, it is not a confession Illahi Baksh v Emperor, 16 P R 1886 Cr An inculpatory statement which falls short of an absolute confession but from which the inference of guilt follows is a 'confession' Hakuman v King Emperor, 31 P L R 1905 = 2 Cr L J 239 = 20 P R 1905 Cr For further elucidation of this subject, vide s 24 infra

Admission as distinguished from conduct Admissions are statements or assertions in words, and it is their inconsistency with the party's other assertions that discredits the latter Hence conduct cannot of itself be treated as an admission Yet various sorts of conduct, which indicate a guilty consciousness and are undoubtedly receivable in evidence, are sometimes spoken of as admissions The truth is that they are just what they seem to be, namely, acts not assertions, and that their use in evidence is strictly a circumstantial one by way of inference from the conduct to the mental state beneath it, and from that to some ulterior fact But the above observations are not applicable where silence is treated as admission on the part of a party When by a party's silence assent is given to the assertion of a third person that assertion is thereby adopted by the party, and therefore may be used against him as his own statement and admission It is the statement, however that constitutes the admission the conduct merely effects its adoption. Wigmore § 1052 Mercantile Bank v Talbaram, 8 S L R 112 = 27 Ind C L 309

Admission must be taken as a whole When an admission is tendered against a party, he is entitled to have proved, as part of his adversary's case so much of the whole statement, document, or correspondence containing or referred to in, the admission as is necessary to explain the admission and although such other parts may be favourable to himself, but the jury may attach different degrees of credit to different parts Phy Ev 3rd Ed 19 The reason for this rule is that unless the whole is received and considered the true meaning and import of the part which is good evidence against the party making the admission cannot be ascertained Id. § 201 The Id. § 725, For general statements of this principle see the Id. Id. arguments in Stoddard's Trial 22 How St Tr 217 Per Abbott C J in Queen's Case 2 B & B 287 Thomson v Austen 2 Dowl. & R 361 Fletcher v Froggatt 2 C & P 566 Cobbet v Grey, 4 Ex R 729. So it is a well settled rule of law that the whole of a declaration or statement containing an admission should be received together In the United States the rule is thus laid down by Mr Justice Field in Mutual Benefit Life Ins Co v Newton, 22 Wall (U S) 332 Every admission upon which a party relies is to be taken as an entirety of the fact which makes for his side, with the qualifications which limit, modify or detract its effect on the other side This rule together with its reason, is thus stated by Mr Best 'Where part of a document or statement is used as self-harm, evidence against a party he has a right to have the whole of it laid before the jury who may then consider and attach what weight they see fit to my self serving statements it contains." Best § 520, see also Benmon v Hoodbridge, 2 Doug 788, per Lord Mansfield, Smith v Blonday, Ry & M 259, Cray v Halls, cited in Ry & M 279, White Well v Weyer, 11 Mass 6, 10, see also Sooltan v Chand Bibee, 9 W R 130, Rajah Nilmoney v Ramangarh, 7 W R 29, Sheikh Shurfuraz v Shailh Dhunoo, 16 W R 257, Lallah Probkhat of the nath, W R 1864, Act X, 27. Where, taking the confession to have been making against the party is completely voided, qualified ones were so in the branch, and there is nothing beside, either as of either the branch or the branch, and it is not very uncommon as is said, and the whole is considered by the cases as not weighing a feather against the party. Phil Et Caw & Hill's Notes p 343. The above remark applies with equal force to written documents, and it is equally well settled that the introduction of a part of a writing as an admission renders admissible so much of the remainder as tends to explain or qualify what has been received. Jones v Hopkins 32 Iowa, 503, Burr Jones Et § 291. Where the plaintiffs had requested the defendant to make out an account of the amount which he owed them for goods sold, but the defendant's agent before delivering it jotted down upon it with his master's authority a note of a counter claim which the defendant had against the plaintiffs and the plaintiffs sought to give the account alone in evidence as an admission of the amount of their claim, it was held by Lord Mansfield C J that the whole document must be taken together, since the defendant's statement was made "all in one breath" and he never admitted the account as distinct and independent from the counter claim. Randle v Blackburn, 5 Trunt 245. So also if part of a letter is offered as evidence other explanatory parts may be offered if a party is sought to be charged or affected by a letter received in evidence, his reply thereto is admissible, and where one party uses as evidence a number of a series of the letters written by the other party, the letter may introduce the entire series. Burr Jones § 294. It is a well established principle of law that if a plaintiff wishes to rest his case solely on the admission of the defendant he must accept the admission as a whole. It is not open to him to pick out some parts of it as may be favourable to him and neglect the rest. Syed Ismail v Hamud Begum, 2 Pat L R 608. If a Court takes into consideration an admission in a deed to find a party the whole of the statement therein should be considered. Admissions must be taken either altogether or not at all, although a party cannot by admission make evidence for himself, still, if it is sought to be used as an admission against him, all the words of the admission must be taken even if they operate in his favour. Sree Dharam v Narayana Nambudripad 41 M L J 22, (1921) M W N 639. An admission must be deemed to be exhaustive. It must be read as it stands and it is not permissible to take one part of an admission and reject another part. Baz Bahadur v Raghubar, 49 A 707=25 A L J 572=100 Ind Cas 1037=A I R 1937 All 385. Ordinarily a Court is bound to take the whole of an admission together but a Court is not bound to give equal weight to all portions of it. Bijendra v Madhub 8 C 843, see also Gound Pershad v Chatturbhuj 60 Ind Cas 493 Shub Nath v Annada Prasad, 11 C L J 382, Konwar Doorganath v Ram Chunder, 2 C 341 (350) P C. So also an admission in pleading cannot be dissected, and if it is made subject to a condition it must either be accepted subject to that condition or not accepted at all. Motabkoy Mutu v Vuhji In Was, 19 C W N 713=39 B 399, Saritan Ali v Chand Bibee, 9 W R 100, Shah Surfaraz v Seilh Dhunoo 16 W R 257, Jadoonath v Burda Kant 22 W R 220, Niamuttoolah Khadim v Humnu Iti, 22 W R 519. Pattu Beharoo v Watson, 9 W R 190, Badantha nath v Chandra Mohan, 1 B L R (A C) 133, Ishan v Haran 11 W R 525. Tarnee v Dwarla, 15 W R 421, Shailh Shurfuraz v Shailh Dhunoo 16 W R 257.

"The chief difficulty in the application of the rule lies in determining when statements are so connected together as to form a whole within the meaning of the rule. The matter does not depend on the statements being contained in one single document, but on the nature and degree of connection between

S. 17. admissions The law is practically the same with regard to them as to letters, and is, that that which is written by a person or at his direction may properly be used in evidence against him in any proceeding to which the written matter may relate. So that on principles already discussed other documents or memoranda written or authorized by a party may be offered as admissions against him like his oral statements. If self-serving in their character, it is immaterial in what form the document may appear. Burr Jones § 270. This rule has been applied to receipts [Harrison v Remington Paper Co, 140 Fed 385, (1m), Gadian v Veerappa, 28 M L J 92], bills of lading [Shanell v Hart 2 A K Marsh (Ky) 191 (Am)], orders [Macomber v Parlei 14 Pick (Mass) 497], advertisement [Mann v Russel, 11 Ill 585, (1m)] newspaper articles verified as being the approved statement of the person making the admission (Eduard v City of Watertown, 59 Hun, 620) maps (Bridgman v Jennings, 1 Ld Raym 734) Huronath v Poonath, 7 W R 249], wills [Cowan v Hite 2 A K Marsh (Ky) 250], circulars (Beary v Mathews 7 Ga 457, (Am) hand bills (Dennis v Van Foy 31 N J L 38 Am), and under certain circumstances, entries in the books of a bank held admissible in favour of a receiver of the bank in an action against its president (Olney v Chadsey 7 R J 224) Burr Jones Ev § 270.

The entries in account books are, like other admissions, evidence against the party making them, (Lang v State 97 Ala 41) and, of course, equally admissible if made by some person authorized to make them, against the party giving the authority [San Pedro Lumber Co v Reynolds, 121 Cal 74 (Am)] Sri Kishen v Huri Kishen 5 M I A 432 (433) R v Hanmantia, 1 B 610, 617]. They are admissible irrespective of the name by which the book may go or pass, or the manner in which it is kept. The reason is that such book entries are not admissible merely because they are book entries but because they are statements in writing which are binding upon the party responsible for their inscription whether the entry is in his own hand writing or that of the person he has authorized in that behalf. Leouenthal v McCormick, 101 Ill 143. An entry in a book belonging to a Zemindar and showing the extent of a tenant's holding and the rate of rent even when unstamped, can be admitted in admission on the part of the defendant that the particulars contained in the entry were true. Narain Coomar v Ramkrishna, 5 C 864=6 C L R 266. Similarly partnership books are presumed to be equally under the control of the several partners, and to be kept under their direction. Therefore entries in such books are competent as against the firm as admissions (Glover v Hurbert, 89 Ala 324) and in controversies between the members of the firm, such entries are competent against each member. Daji Abaji v Gound, 10 Bom L R 811. They are presumed to be with knowledge and consent although the presumption may be rebutted by proof that the partner or partners, against whom the entries are offered, have not had access to the books and have not inspected them and that the entries are incorrect. Burr Jones § 271. The horoscope of the plaintiff can be relied on by the defendant under ss 17 and 18 of the Evidence Act. Raja Goundan v Raja Goundan, 17 M 134 (139) distinguishing 9 C 613 and 17 C 949. Admissions in affidavits or in answers to interrogatories in the same or former proceedings are also competent. Phip Ed 4th Ed p 213. Fleet v Pernus L R 3 Q B 536, Harish v Prosumo, 22 W R 303, Legal Remembrance v Motulal Ghose, 41 C 173, Bhugwant v Lall Jha, Mar h 48.

Of the various kinds of judicial admissions, those contained in pleadings command careful consideration by reason not only of these presumed solemn contents but with regard to the time at which they were made, their use in the action of which they form the basis, their ex deors that action, the change in circumstances by withdrawal and amendment, in brief by the circumstances surrounding their offer in evidence against the party making them, including of course their contention by parties having absolute knowledge and those who speak only from information and belief. When parties allege matters of fact in their pleadings, these pleadings may be offered in evidence against such parties as admissions of the facts so alleged. Gursh Chander v Shama Charn, 15 W R 137. Iusten v Ferst 2 Ga App 91 (Am) A statement in the plaintiff's unchallenged and made by the putni dar after his interest had been transferred is in no way binding upon the transferee. Jahnuomull v Saroda Prosad, 7 C

L J 604. The plaintiff may also rely upon the defendant's admission in the pleadings Fairnce v. Durla Nath 15 W R 451 But admissions contained in a statement filed in plaintiff's name are not proof that they have been made by her Asmuttoo v. Alla Hafi, 25 W R 125 A defendant's written statement referred to is evidence in plaintiff's favour makes the whole of it evidence in the suit. Ridha Churn v. Chunder Monee, 9 W R. 290, Viamutullah v. Himmur 14 22 W R 519 But it does not bind his co-defendant Lochman v. Tansukh, 6 A 395 = 1 W N 1881, 136, 1, ullah Khan v. Ahmad, 7A 353 = A W N 1885, 54 So also admissions may be made in verified petitions Girish v. Shama, 15 W R 437, Mohun v. Chuttoo 21 W R 24, Gour v. Mohesh 14 W R 484 An admission in a Tubulyat is also competent Jogeswar v. Akhoy 19 C L J 1 An admission in a previous deposition is also admissible Bibee v. Ahmut, 14 B L R App 3 Ali Mahomed v. Sh. Moharaj 36 C L J 186

Admission on points of law — An erroneous admission by a counsel on a point of law is of no effect and does not preclude the party from claiming his legal rights in the Appellate Court. Secretary of State v. Shibprosad, 27 C L J 147 = 41 Ind Cas 953 Tugore v. Pagore, 9 B L R 377 = 18 W R 359 = 1 A Sup 47, Bem Pershad v. Daulmath 27 C L 156 = 26 I A 216, Holms v. Johnston 12 Hesk (59 Jan) 175, Uryuhart v. Butterfield, 37 Ch D 357 Abdullah v. Israf Ali 7 C L J 152, Ramvaran v. Khalhan 11 C W N 340 So also an erroneous admission of the pleader of a party on a point of law cannot bind the party Duar Bux v. Katil 3 C W N 222 See also Krishna v. Rajmool 24 B 360 Narayan v. Venkata 28 B 109

Statements made under constraint or duress — In regard to admissions made under circumstances of constraint a distinction is taken between civil and criminal cases, and it has been considered that on the trial of civil actions admissions are receivable in evidence provided the compulsion under which they are given is legal, and the party was not imposed upon or under duress. Thus in the trial of Collector v. Lord Keith, 4 Esp 212 the testimony of the defendant given as a witness in an action between other parties in which he admitted the taking of the ship was allowed to be proved against him, though it appeared that, in giving his evidence, when he was proceeding to state his reason for taking the ship, Lord Kenyon has stopped him by saying it was unnecessary for him to vindicate his conduct. In that case Le Blanc J., remarked, that the manner in which the evidence has been obtained might be matter of observation to the jury but that, if what was said bore in any way on the issue he was bound to receive it as evidence of the fact itself. See also Bushun das v. Ramlabanya, 106 P R 1915 Neuhall v. Jenkins, 2 Gray 562 The rule extends also to answers voluntarily given to questions improperly asked, and to which the witness might successfully have objected. So the voluntary answers of a bankrupt before the commissioners are evidence in a subsequent action against the party himself, though he might have demurred to the questions, or the whole examination was irregular (Holt v. Squire Ry and M 282), unless it was obtained by imposition or duress (Maltby v. Christie 4 Esp 342 as expounded by Lord Ellenborough, in Railin v. Horner 16 East 193), Green Et § 193 When such admissions are obtained by illegal duress they are not admissible Stockfield v. De Tastel 4 Camp 11 Robson v. Alexander 1 M and P 448

18 Statements made by a party to the proceeding, or

Admission— by an agent to any such party, whom the by party to proceeding Court regards, under the circumstances of the or his agent, case, as expressly or impliedly authorized by him to make them, are admissions

Statements made by parties to suits sung or sued in a representative character, are not admissions, unless they were made while the party making them held that character by suitor in representative character,

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

Statements made by--

- (1) persons who have any proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject-matter of the proceeding, and who make the statement in their character of persons so interested, or by party interested in subject matter,

- (2) persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject-matter of the suit, by person from whom interest derived the admissions, if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statements

Principle The general rule is that an admission is an evidence against the party making it and not against any other party, in as much as in the case the rule against Hearsay is not violated (vide p 281) Moreover one can with impunity take a position in the trial of an action inconsistent with the previous position taken by him, and accordingly any acts or statements made by him which show a different attitude or position from that which he has taken in the action are admissible Melchey's Ex § 66 It is likely, however, that the prohibitive or evidentiary quality of the statement is secondary, and the element mentioned, which may be called the "estoppel element," and this being the real reason why it is admissible Ibid § 65 Many admissions, however belonging to the res gestae, partly as made against the interest of the person making them and partly because of some privity with him against whom the are offered in evidence Green Et § 169 In the case of admission of person not parties to the suit the doctrine of estoppel plays no part, but admissions of statements rests solely upon the fact that they have been made against interest of the party making them, and that interest is identified with Melchey Et § 66 To make such admissions receivable in evidence the party suggest themselves as possible By pre appointment, or reference the party designate a person whose utterance, he assented to before as correct and utterance, when made, thus represents the party's own belief (Vide S 20) adoption the party may assent to a statement already uttered by another person which thus becomes effectively the party's own admission By privity of interest and by agency the party's rights may in the substantive law be affected by the acts of another person and thus the other person's admissions may equally be available evidentially Higmore § 1070 In order that an admission may be relevant it is necessary to show that the person who made it had an interest at the time of making it within the meaning of section 18 of the Evidence Act Jogestica v Akhoy 19 C L J 1=22 Ind Ca 714 see also Mashene v Mann Da Li 33 Ind Cas 888

Scope of the section—This section deals with admissions in general by persons by whom admissions may be made are the parties to the suit or the agents (Cl 1), or those identified in interest with them (Cl 2) Spargy v Brown 9 B & C 938, or persons sub modo in sub-clauses (1) and (2) If they proceed from a stranger, and cannot be brought home to the party, they are inadmissible unless upon some of the other grounds stated in sections 18 to 20 Thus admissions of payee of a negotiable promissory note, not overdue when made, cannot be received in an action by the indorsee against the maker, to impeach the consideration there being no identity of interest between him and the plaintiff Borough v White 1 B & C 325 Bristol v Dunn, 12 Wend 14 An admission made by an infant after he attains age will bind him So if the action be brought against an adult for necessities supplied to him during minority, admissions made, and letters written by him while under age, may proved on behalf of the plaintiff O'Neill v. Read, 7 Ir Law R 434 "No distinction should be drawn between nominal and real parties to a suit. The Courts of India being Courts of Equity should deal directly with admissions made by nominal parties, e.g. consignees suing in the name of consignor. When the Court considers the admission of such a party fraudulent, it should be rejected at once. See notes to Banerman v. Radimus, 2 Sim L. C. 363." Nort F. 143 Admissions under this section are only evidence against the persons making them. Under section 32, infra the admissions there enumerated are evidence against all the world.

In order to render the admission of one person receivable in evidence against another, it must relate to some matter in which either both were jointly interested or one was derivatively interested through the other and a mere community of interest will not be sufficient. Thus, where two persons were in partnership, and an action was brought against them as partners of a vessel, an admission made by the one, as to a matter which was not a subject of co-partnership, but only of co-part-ownership was held inadmissible against the other Taylor § 750 Ransforme v. Gandell, 15 M. & W. 304 Phillips v. Elaget 11 M. & W. 84. So, where a joint contract it severed by the death of one of the contractors, nothing that is subsequently done or said by the survivor can bind the personal representative of the deceased, (Illms v. Tiedgold, 2 B. & C. 23 Fordham v. Wollis, 10 Hare, 217, Slaymaker v. Gundaes Ex. 10 Serg. & R. 75), nor can the admissions of the executor bind the survivor Seaton v. Lawson 4 B. & Ad. 996, Hathaway v. Hasell, 9 Pick. 24. Neither will the admissions of one tenant in common be receivable against his co-tenant, though both are parties on the same side of the suit. Dun v. Braun 4 Cowen 483 (492) Taylor § 751.

Where a party sues in a representative capacity—i.e. as trustee, executor, administrator, or the like,—the representative is distinct from ordinary capacity, and only admissions made in the former quality are receivable, in particular, statements made before or after incumbency are admissible. Conversely his admission as executor or the like would not be receivable against them as a party in his personal capacity. A guardian so far as his powers place him in a representative capacity, is subject to the same rules, but the function of a guardian ad litem begins to end with the litigation, and consequently his extrajudicial admissions are not receivable at all. Wignore § 107 citing Pindell v. Rubenstein 115 Atl. 809, Steirus v. Continental, 97 N. W. 862 Chipman v. R. Co., 12 Utah 8 (1m).

Where procedure still permits my litigation to be conducted without joining the real and beneficial party in interest, his admissions would nevertheless be received. Hanson v. Parler 1 Wils. 257, Wignore § 107. In R. v. Harducke 11 East. 578 584 Bayley, J. said "Banerman v. Radimus only decided that the declarations of the nominal party in the record were evidence against him, but not that the declarations of the real party would not also have been evidence." In Smith v. Lyon 3 Camp. 455 which was an action by a ship master, for the benefit of the owner on a charter contract, Ellenborough L. C. J. said "Although this action is in the name of the master, it is brought for the benefit of the owner, I am therefore of opinion that anything said by the latter is admissible evidence for the defendant. A share-holder of a company is not the real party in legal interest, and his statements cannot be received as admissions of the corporation." Wignore § 107. But a contrary view was early taken in England for parish inhabitants R. v. Harducke, 11 East. 578, 585.

Sub-clause (2) is the converse of sub-clause (1). There the statement was that of the representative, here it is of the party through whom he derives his right to sue. Thus if an executor were to sue for a debt, the declaration of his testator that the debt was paid would be evidence against him. Pocoel v. Billings, 1 R. and M. 127, Smith v. Smith, 3 Bing. N. C. 29. In the same way the declaration of the ancestor respecting his title to the land held by him is evidence against the heir (Doe v. Pette 5 B. and A. 223) and the declarations of the former owner of goods that he had sold them have been admitted against the lord of the manor who claimed them heriot Kat v. Finch, 1 Taunt. 141 Nort E. 148.

S 18.

Statements made by a party—It has already been stated that declaration of a party to the record, are against such party, admissible in evidence Spargo v Brown 9 B & C 935. In the Court of Chancery, in England, evidences are not received of admissions or declarations of the parties, which are not put in issue by pleadings and in which there was not, therefore any opportunity of explaining or disproving Copland v Toulmin 7 Cl & Fin 350 373, Austin v Chamber 6 Cl & Fin 1. Huttor v Small 6 Cl & F 231. The admissions of a party are not open to objections to which other prior evidence may be open. For example, the admission of a party is not subject to the "best evidence" rule. In an action by A against X for prosecuting a suit contrary to an agreement, to prove the prosecution of the suit by X, A offered admissions by X of the obtaining of the judgment and issue of execution. They were objected to, on the ground that they were not the best evidence and that a certified copy of the judgment should be produced.

In Smith v Pabner 6 Cush (Mass) 513. 21 Fletcher J says "This is a case of the admission of a party and the admission of a party stands on different grounds. The admission of a party is not open to the same objection which belongs to parol evidence from other sources. A party's own statements and admissions are in all cases admissible in evidence against him though such statements and admissions may involve what must necessarily be contained in some writing, deed or record. Thus the statements of a party that certain land had been conveyed might be admitted, though the conveyance must be by deed recorded. The general principle is to the production of written evidence is the best evidence does not apply to the admissions of parties, as what a party admits against himself may reasonably be taken to be true."—A statement made by defendant in another suit may be used as an admission within the meaning of this section. Harish v Prosinno, 22 W R 303, Mohun v Chutloo, 21 W R 34. Lala v Digambar 22 W R 301 N, Jorbes v Mahomed 14 W R 28 P C, Haranath v Paresb, 7 W R 249. Kashi v Bama 23 W R 271, Gutish v Shama 15 W R 437. Obhoy v Bhoj, 14 W R 165.

The subject of admission is presented in its simplest form when the admissions are made by one who is a party to the record and who is also a real party in interest. In such a case it is very clear that the statements and acts of the party when they afford presumption against him may be received in behalf of the adverse party. Scales v Chambliss 35 Ala 10 (1m). It cannot be made too plain that this evidence is not by way of attacking the credibility of the party witness and there is no occasion to lay the foundation of a link him first if he make the statement. When the statement proven is between the parties to the main action it has always been the rule that one party could prove the statements of the other at any time which would throw light upon the issues involved or facts relevant to the issues. Moore v Crosthwait, 13 Ala 272 (1m). It follows that the admissibility of such admissions is independent of explanations which may come later, and of the date or place. Lorenson v Camarillo 45 Cal 125 (1m) at which they were made or of such other circumstantial verification which ordinarily accompanies the recounting of an event. Brandon v Cubens 10 Ala 155 (1m). Such statements or admissions are original evidence and the point in controversy is not their truth or falsity but whether or not they were made. McBlain v Edgar 65 N J L 631=10 Al 600 (1m). It is axiomatic to say they are not conclusive but are in the nature of prima facie evidence and go to the jury to give them their just weight in settling questions of fact involved in the case to which they are directed. Casseratta v Casseratta 21 Mo 237. The principle on which the plaintiff is held bound by his acts, conduct or representation is of common law origin, and results from the rule that parties to a suit are bound by admissions against their interest, respecting the subject of the action. Such a binding is prima facie conclusive against the party who makes them may be explained or qualified but if evidence for this purpose is introduced, the whole is submitted to the tribunal and the liability of the party is decided by its verdict as a question of evidence. Cox v Buck 18 Ark 200. The question always is, did the party (by a party is meant party to the action who has been involved with process. Hunt v Coal Co v Hick, 14 Ill. App 1) make the statement? And if they did, the jury will weigh the presence or absence of confirmation, and the strength or weakness of the establishment of the fact. Mason v. Lothrop, 7 Gray (Mass) 354 (Am.), Burr Jones v. Felt § 237. In holding that admissions of parties to the record are receivable in evidence it matters not whether such admissions were made before or after the party had arrived at full age, and therefore, if an action be brought against an adult for necessities supplied to him during his minority, admissions made, and letters written by him while under age may be proved on behalf of the plaintiff. O'Neill v. Read, 7 Jr. L. R. 431, Taylor § 740, but see Haulins v. Luscombe, 2 Swins, 371. An accused is a party to a proceeding, but it is doubtful whether a person against whom an offence has been committed is also a party to the proceeding. (Cum Ft 5156). But his admission may be accepted as an agent of the crown or under section 19. Previous depositions of a party to the suit are admissible in evidence. Sooyun v. Achmuty, 21 W. R. 411=14 B. L. R. App 3, Wolfe v. Queen Empress, 21 C. 392. Maps filed by the parties in former arbitration proceedings may be used as admissions against them in a subsequent suit. Haronath v. Piconath 7 W. R. 249. See also Slack v. Buchanan, 101 R. 5, Gregory v. Howard, 3 Esp. 113. Admissions made by an accused in his previous examination in the Insolvency proceeding are admissions under section 17 of the Evidence Act. So they are relevant and admissible unless they are excluded by sections 1831 of the same Act. Per Woodroffe J in Joseph v. Official Assignee 47 C. 251=24 C. W. N. 425=31 C. L. J. 209=36 Ind. C. 778=21 C. L. J. 722. "Admissions are always evidence against the party who makes them, but they are evidence which varies much in value according to the circumstances and a Court is quite at liberty to reject them if it is satisfied from other circumstances that they are untrue." Golul v. Karilash, 55 Ind. C. 345. "But what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so and until the presumption was rebutted the facts admitted must be taken to be established." Glulam v. Muhammad, 65 Ind. C. 398 (400). See also the observations of Lord Atkinson in Chandra Kunnar v. Chaudhuri, 29 A. 184=11 C. W. N. 321 P. C.

Parties on record—Nominal parties. This general rule, admitting the declarations of a party to the record in evidence, applies to all cases where the party has any interest in the suit, whether others or joint parties on the same side with him or not, and howsoever the interest may appear and what ever may be its relative amount. Bancerman v. Radenius, 7 T. R. 663=2 Esp. 653, Gibson v. Winter 5B & Ad 96. "Whatever a party voluntarily admits to be true, though the admission be contrary to his interest may reasonably be taken for the truth. The same rule it will be seen applies to admissions by those who are identified in situation and interest with a party that this declaration may be considered to have been made by himself. As to such evidence the ordinary tests of truth are properly dispensed with, they are inapplicable. An oath is administered to a witness to impose on him the additional obligation on his conscience and so to add weight to his testimony, and he is cross-examined to ascertain his means of knowledge as well as his intention to speak the truth. But where a man voluntarily admits a debt or confesses a crime, there is little occasion for confirmation, the ordinary motives of human conduct are sufficient warrants for belief. Southern Ins. Co. v. White 58 Ark. 277 (1m). "But where the party sues alone and has no interest in the matter, his name being used of necessity by one to whom he has assigned all his interest in the subject of the suit though it is agreed that he cannot be permitted, by his acts or admissions, to disprove the title of his innocent assignee or vendee, yet the books are not so clearly agreed in the mode of re-training him that Chancery will always protect the innocent, either by injunction or otherwise, very certain, and formerly this was the course uniformly pursued, the admissions of a party to the record at common law being received against him in all cases. But, in later times the interests of an assignee suing in the name of the assignor, have also to a considerable extent, been protected in the Courts of Common Law, against the effect of any acts or admissions of the latter to his prejudice. A familiar example of this sort is that of a receipt in full, given by the assignor, being nominal plaintiff, to the debtor after the assignment which the assignee is permitted to impeach and avoid, in a suit at law, by showing the previous assignment. Henderson v. Wild 2 Camp 561. Greenl. E. § 172. 'In modern practice at law even, the admissions of a party to the record who has no interest in the matter will not be permitted to be given in evidence to the prejudice of the real party in interest.' Dancy v. Mills, 10 Ill. 67, Shaler v. Bumstead, 99 Mass. 112, 127.

S 18

Statement by agents—Principles of admissibility. Qui Per Alium Facit Scipsum Facere Videtur (He who does an act through another is deemed in law to do it himself). This maxim is of universal application. Per Tindal C J in S. Scott N R 830. The agency may be constituted by an express limited authority to make such contract or a larger authority to make all falling within the class or description to which it belongs, or a general authority to make any, or it may be proved by showing that such a relation existed between the parties as by law would create the authority, as for instance, that of partner, by which relation when complete one becomes by law the agent of the other for all purposes necessary for carrying on their particular partnership, whether general or special or usually belonging, to it or the relation of husband and wife, in which the law under certain circumstances, considers the husband to make his wife an agent. In all these cases if the agent in making the contract acts on that authority, the principal is bound by the contract, but not otherwise. This agency may be created by the immediate act of the party, that is by really giving the authority to the agent, or representing to him that he is to have it or by constituting that relation to which the law attaches agency, or it may be created by the representative of the defendant to the plaintiff that the party making the contract is the agent of the defendant or that such relation exists to constitute him such, and if the plaintiff really makes the contract on the faith of the defendant's representation the defendant is bound—he is estopped from disputing the truth of it with respect to that contract, and the representative of an authority is quoad hoc precisely the same as a real authority given by the defendant to the agent. This representation may be made directly to the plaintiff, or made publicly, so that it may be inferred to have reached him and may be made by words and conduct. Upon none of the propositions is there, we apprehend, the slightest doubt and the proper decision of all these questions depends upon the proper application of these principles to the facts of each case, and the jury is to apply the rule with due assistance from the Judge. Reynell v. Lewis and Wyde v. Hopkins 15 M & W 517. Colquhoun v. Berkeley 15 C B N S 14. Cross v. Williams 7 H & N 675, Baker v. Stead 16 L J C P 160. So statement made by parties includes the statement of his agent as well. Hall v. Jahar 39 C 995. The words whom the Court regards under the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly authorised by him to make them leave it open to the courts to deal with every case that arises upon its own merits. Field p 44.

The principal constitutes the agent his representative, in the transaction of certain business whatever therefore the agent does in the lawful prosecution of that business is the act of the principal whom he represents. Greenl. E. § 184C. And where the acts of the agent will bind the principal, there his representations, declarations and admissions, respecting the subject matter will also bind him if made at the same time and constituting part of the gestae. Story on Agency §§ 134-137. He who sets another person on to do an act in his stead as agent is chargeable by such acts as are done under that authority, and so too properly enough is affected by admissions made by the agent in the course of exercising that authority. Higmore § 161. In Williams v. Innes (1808) 1 Camp 364 Lord Ellenborough said 'a man refers another upon any particular business to a third person on he bound by what this third person says or does concerning it as much if it had been said or done by himself.' So a statement made by an agent whom the Court regards under the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly authorised to make it is admissible though not on oath. Per Jenkins C J in Gowdridge v. Chattalal 3 Rom L R 651 (652). In Franklin Baul v. Pennsylvania, D & M S N Co 11 G & J 28, at p 33 Buchanan C J said

"The principle upon which the representations or an agent, within the scope of his authority, are permitted to be proved, is, that such declarations, as well as his acts, are considered and treated as the declarations of the principal. What is so done by an agent, is done by the principal through him, as his mere instrument. So whatever is said by an agent, either in making a contract for his principal, or at the time, and accompanying the performance of any act, within the scope of his authority having relation to and connected with, and in the course of a particular contract or transaction in which he is then engaged, is in legal effect, said by his principal, and admissible in evidence, not merely because it is a declaration or admission of an agent, but on the ground, that being made at the time of and accompanying the contract or transaction, it is treated as the declaration or admission of the principal, constituting a part of the res gestae a part of the contract or transaction, and is binding upon him as if in fact made by himself. But declarations and admissions by an agent, of his own authority, and not accompanying the making of a contract, or the doing of an act, in behalf of the principal, nor made at the time he is engaged in the transaction to which they refer are not binding upon his principal, not being part of the res gestae and are not admissible in evidence but come within the general rule of law excluding hearsay evidence, being but an account or statement by an agent of what has passed or been done or omitted to be done—not a part of the transaction, but only statements or admissions respecting it.

The declarations by agents are original evidence and not hearsay, and being regarded as verbal acts, they are receivable in evidence without calling the agent himself to prove them Doe v Haulins, 2 Q B 212, Tay § 602. They are the ultimate facts to be proved and not an admission of some other fact, and the only question is whether the declarations were made and relied upon. It often happens, however that the declarations of an agent are admissible as part of the res gestae and that they form no part of any contract and contain no element of estoppel in which cases they are, of course, open to explanation or may be shown to be incorrect, like admissions in general. Burn Jones § 255. The admission of an agent that he purchased as agent is evidence that the purchase was made by him in that capacity and not on his own account. Gorebollah v M R G D Boyd 2 W R 10.

Admission by agent—When receivable. The admission of an agent can not always be assimilated to the admission of the principal. The party's own admission, whenever made may be given in evidence against him, but the admission or declaration of his agent binds him only when it is made during the continuance of the agency, in regard to a transaction then depending et dum confertur opus. Karl stall Brewery Co v Fenness Ry Co 9 L R Q B 468=43 L J Q B 142, Re Dejala Prov Gold Min Co L R 22 Ch D 593, Taylor § 602. The question therefore turns upon the scope of the authority. This question frequently enough a difficult one depends upon the doctrine of Agency applied to the circumstances of the case and not upon any rule of evidence. Wignmore, 1078. The best of the earlier expositions is that of Sir W Grant M R in 1803 in Fairlie v Hastings 10 Ves Ir 123. Lord Kenyon who became Chief Justice in 1788 had set himself against receiving any admissions by agent, and it was some time before the true principle was defined and accepted. Ibid foot note (1). As the case of Fairlie v Hastings, 10 Ves 123 (1804) is of some importance as well as of interest the judgment of Sir William Grant, Master of the Rolls is given in extenso. 'The subject of this cause is a loan of money by the plaintiff, Maharajah Nabolissen to the defendant Warren Hastings. As it is not by bill in equity that money lent is to be recovered, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to state, and to prove, some ground for coming into this Court for the payment, or the means of obtaining payment of his demand. The question of jurisdiction must depend upon the allegations of the bill, which states that the defendant applied to the plaintiff for the loan of three lakhs of rupees upon the security of the defendant's bond, that the plaintiff agreed to advance that sum by instalments, that a bond was executed which it was agreed should remain with a Cauntoo Baboo, an agent of the defendant, until the whole money should be advanced, and then should be delivered to the plaintiff, that the money

S 18. was advanced, but the plaintiff never received the bond, Cauntoo Baboo in answer to his repeated applications at length informing him that it had been delivered up to the defendant. In support of this statement the plaintiff has not read, and could not read any part of the answer. But the plaintiff has gone into evidence of declaration by Gobindee Baboo and Cauntoo Baboo, and the question is whether these declarations can amount to proof of such facts as are alleged by the bill. Upon that question my opinion is, that these declarations do not come within the principle upon which they are supposed to be admissible. As a general proposition, what one man says not upon oath, cannot be evidence against another man. The exception must arise out of some peculiarity of situation coupled with the declarations made by one. An agent may, undoubtedly within the scope of his authority, bind his principal by his agreement, and in many cases by his acts. What the agent has said may be what constitutes the agreement of the principal, or the representations or statements may be the foundation of or the inducement to, the agreement. Therefore if writing is not necessary by law, evidence must be admitted to prove that the agent did make that statement or representation. So with regard to acts done, the words with which those acts are accompanied frequently tend to determine their quality. The party, therefore to be bound by the act, must be affected by the words. But except in one or the other of those ways, I do not know how what is said by an agent can be evidence against his principal. The mere assertion of a fact cannot amount to proof of it, though it may have some relation to the business in which the person making that assertion was employed as agent. For instance, if it was a material fact that there was the bond of the defendant in the hands of Cauntoo Baboo that fact would not be proved by the assertion that Gobindee Baboo supposing him an agent, had said there was for that is no fact, that is no part of any agreement which Gobindee Baboo is making or of any statement he is making as inducement to an agreement. It is mere narration, communication to the witness in the course of conversation, and therefore could not be evidence of the existence of the fact. The bill was dismissed. The same general principle is tersely put by Mr Justice Gibbs in Loughbourn v Allnut, 1 Trunt 519 where he said: "When it is proved that A is agent to B whatever A does, or says, or writes in the making of a contract as agent of B, is admissible in evidence against B because it is part of a contract which he makes for B and which therefore binds B but it is not admissible as the agent's account of what had passed." So letters of the agent to the principal containing narrative of the transaction in which he had been employed, would not be admissible as evidence against the principal. Ibid, see also Kahl v Jansen 4 Trunt 565, Admiralty Com v Aberdeen Steam (1909) 5 C 335.

In another case where the plaintiff sued the defendant, a coal merchant, for a penalty for selling short measures a witness was proceeding to state what was said to him by one Peely who managed the defendant's business, as to a sale about to take place. Lord Ellenborough admitted the evidence saying: "Peely appeared to be the manager and conductor of the defendant's business, what he might have said respecting a former sale made by the defendant, or on another occasion, would not be evidence to affect his master, but what he said respecting a sale of coals then about to take place, and respecting the disposition of the coals then lying at the wharf which were the object of sale, was in the course of witness's employment for the defendant and was evidence to affect his master." Peto v Hague (1801) 5 Esp 131. In an action against the Railway Company for loss of a parcel of money statements made by the station master to a Police Officer, tending to show theft hereof by one of the Company's servants, were received as admissions against the company, the station master being the proper agent to make such statements. Ibid. In that case Cockburn C J said: "I think it is impossible to say that a man who had the sole management of a railway station, and had authority to cause a person to be apprehended if he had reasonable and probable cause to suppose that a felony had been committed could not have authority to give instructions to the Police and could not make such communications as would be admissible in evidence just as if they were made by principals. In the same case Quinn J said. In putting the police in motion he was acting within his duty, and within the scope of his authority.' Similarly Archibald J said "Being in charge of the station at the time a felony was committed, it was his duty to put the police in motion. That being so, I think he was acting within the scope of his duty that he had power to bind the company, and therefore that the evidence is admissible." This appears to be scarcely a case of "course of employment," but of "scope of authority." The matter may be responsible in tort for acts of his servant quite unauthorised by him, if done in the course of employment. But in contract and as regards admissions, the question appears to be one of authority. Cockle Cas 177. In Peto v Haque, ubi supra Lord Ellenborough used the expression 'course of employment,' but it would appear that statements outside the scope of authority of an agent would not bind the principal although made in the course of employment. But to be within the scope of authority the statement must apparently be made in the course of employment. Cockle Cas 178.

Where an agent, acting within the scope of his authority, wrote to his principals, that he had received a sum of money on their account, and they replied giving directions as to its disposition it was held that the agent's statement was evidence that the principal received the money. Coates v Bambridge, 5 Bing 58, Pouell 438. So the declarations of an agent bind the principal only so far as the agent had authority to make them. Faussett v Faussett 7 Ecc & Mr Cr 93-95. Hogg v Garrett, 12 Ir Eq R 559. If goods were deposited with a pawn broker in the ordinary course of business a declaration of the shop man that his master had received the goods would probably be admissible against his master, because it might be assumed that the shopman was authorised to answer any inquiries respecting the goods, made by persons interested in them but if the admission related to a transaction unconnected with the immediate business of the shop—as, for instance, if it referred to the loan of several hundred pounds on a single pledge at 5 per cent interest—it could not be received. Gaith v Howard, 8 Bing 451. See also Varlata Vamanra v Chanla, 6 M H C R 127. In that case Tindal J said "It is dangerous to open the door to declaration by agents beyond what the cases have already done. The declaration itself is evidence not given upon oath, it is made in his absence, when he has no opportunity to set it aside, if incorrectly made by any observation or any question put to the agent." Evidence of such a nature ought always to be kept within the strict limits to which the cases have confined it.

In an action against a Railway company for not delivering cattle promptly the plaintiff gave evidence of a conversation a week after the transaction between himself and the company's night inspector who had charge of the night cattle trains at a certain station, in the course of which the night inspector said the cattle had been forgotten. It was held that this statement was not an admission against the company, as the night inspector was a subordinate servant without authority to make such statement and also the statement was made sometime after the transaction. G O Ry Co v Willis 34 L J Q B 195=18 C B N S 748. In rejecting the evidence Earle C J said "I am of opinion that this night inspector is not to be presumed to have authority to make admissions relative to transactions gone by, so as to bind his employers."

"It is sometimes said that the declarations of an agent are not receivable as to past transactions. This is misleading and has probably arisen from the common saying that the declarations of the agent must constitute a part of the res gestae. But it has been pointed out that the Latin phrase is here used merely as a compact expression for 'the business regarding which the law identifies the principal and agent, and must not be taken to import that the declarations must form a part of the res gestae in the evidentiary sense of the term for so long as they are made concerning the principal's business and in the ordinary course thereof, it is immaterial whether they relate to past or present events' (Prof Thayer Ir L T Feb 19 1891). Of course, if the transaction or business in which the agent is employed is at an end, his subsequent admissions regarding it will be rejected, as will his admissions regarding matters which are not properly within the scope of his employment. Phyp Et 3rd Ed p 210. So when the agent's right to interfere in the particular matter has ceased, the principal can no longer be affected by his declara-

S 18 rations, any more than by his acts, but they will be rejected in such case as mere hearsay. Fairlie v Hastings, 10 Ves 123, 126, Garth v Howard, 8 Bing 451, Langhorn v Elliott & Taunt 519, Betham v Benson Gow R 40, Mortimer v Callan, 6 M & W 58 69, R v Hall 8 C & P 358, Hannay v Stewart 6 Watts 487, Stoclon v Demuth, 8 Watts 39, Baring v Clark 29 Pick 220, see also Paramesuar v Vijayathen, 25 M L J 51 = 70 Ind Cas 637. Before admission of an agent can be received the fact of his agency must be proved. Ram Balash v Kishori Mohan 3 B L R A C J 273, Emperor v Ribaram, 4 Pat L W 120 = 46 Ind Cas 709. So the one condition of receiving the declarations of one alleged to be an agent is that the agency must be proved abunde (Clarke v Dun 161 Aln 633 (In) and not by the declarations themselves. Even when accompanied by acts purporting to be acts of agency. Montgomery v Leath 162 Ala 246 (Am). Unless and until the agency is so proved and the declarations acts or admissions of the agent come within the rule laid down the evidence is not admissible. Such proof need not be invariably introduced in the first instance, the order of proof being within the discretion of the Court. Burr Jones § 256. Declaration and acts are competent to prove agency if there is proof of former similar acts or declarations recognized or approved by the principal. Burr Jones § 251. Agency may also be proved by proving that the agent has acquired credit by acting in that capacity, and that he has been recognized by the principal in other instances of a similar character to that in question. In Wallins v Venice 2 Stark, 368 a guarantee signed by a son for his father was admitted upon proof of the son having signed for his father upon three or four previous occasions. Roscoe v P Li 68 but see Consteen v Touse 1 Camp 43. Such relationship may be established by oral evidence, Whitfield v Brand M and W 282. Where a particular person is proved to be the general agent special power to do a particular act need not be shown. Ram Balash v Kishori Mohan 3 B L R A C J 273.

Agency may be either general or special and it may be expressed when it is constituted by written or verbal authority in the first instance or it may be implied and inferred from the acts and conduct of the parties, or the original act, though not authorised at the time, may be adopted by the principal subsequently and be an equivalent to an original authority, Omnis ratihabito retrotrahitur mandato priori equiparatur. (A subsequent ratification has a retrospective effect and is equivalent to prior command.) So where A and B were jointly interested in a quantity of oil which A contracted to sell without B's authority, and B at first refused to be bound by the agreement on hearing of it, but afterwards consented, B's subsequent ratification made the contract binding upon him. Shomes v Spencer, 1 D and R 32. The point to be regarded in this clause is not only the establishment of an agency as to which the Court must be satisfied but that there was authority given sufficient to cover the particular statements relied on as admissions. Though the maxim is qui facit per alium facit per se the identity cases where the agent exceeds the scope of his authority, and his admissions in such cases will not bind his principal. Nort Li 141.

The declarations and acts of an agent can not bind an infant because an infant can not appoint an agent. Doe v Roberts 16 M and W 778. Hograze v Hograze 12 B & A 108. Where a wife is authorised to carry on the business of her husband's shop during his absence, her admission within the scope of her necessary authority will bind her husband. Clifford v Benton 1 Bing 192. But her acknowledgments of an antedated contract for the hire of the shop or her agreement to make a new contract for the future occupation of it will be rejected, as it can not be necessary that the wife should have this extensive power of binding her husband for the mere purpose of conducting the business of the shop. Meredith v Footner 11 M and W 202. Tay § 604. Where a party to a suit directly or impliedly constitutes a third person his agent for the purpose of an admission the admission so made is evidence. Thus, if a person agrees to admit a claim provided J. S. will make an affidavit in support of it such affidavit is proof against him. Lloyd v Wallan 1 L & P 173. See also Thacker v Thacker 157 Roscoe v P Li 73. Statement by an agent to a party to proceedings in circumstances which show that they are expressly impliedly authorised to make the admissions are admissible in evidence Rugby S Fateh v Baldeo, 5 O W N 155=A I R 1928 Oudh, 233

Statements made by one before his appointment as agent or after the termination of his agency by revocation or otherwise are not binding upon the principal as admissions of his agent Burr Jones § 255, see also Parameswara v Niyathen, 25 M L J 51=20 Ind Cis 51 But where evidence of a deceased agent's statements was admitted a letter written by him after the termination of his agency on the same subject matter was also admissible to discredit the alleged oral statements Turnbull v O'Hara, 4 Yerecs (Pr) 446

Effect of agent's declarations When the agent is acting and speaking for the defendant within the general scope of his authority his admissions are to be taken as if they had been made by the defendant himself Barring v Clark, 19 Pick (Mass U S) But the opinion or conclusion of an agent relative to the legal effect of acts and transactions is not binding on his principal unless the latter has authorized his agent to form and express an opinion on his behalf, and when the expressions of the agent are but legal conclusions they are not admissible Therefore the evidence of agents duly authorized is admitted but is regulated by rigid rules The declarations of an agent authorized to make a contract are incompetent to establish breach of a contract by his principal Burr Jones § 256

Agents of Corporation The same rule applies to corporations and associations, which usually act through officers and agents The admissions of the latter will only be evidence against their principals if the officer or agent makes them (a) in the course of executing and is forming part of an authorized transaction, or (b) in pursuance of an authority to make statement or reports as to matters affecting his principal's business or interests or (c) in the due execution of a general authority to carry on the business of his principal or a particular department of it with full discretion and powers of management Wills Es 163 So a letter written by the secretary of a company by order of the acting directors, stating the number of shares held by M was admitted on behalf of his executors, in proceedings against them Meuses Executors Case 2 D M & G 522, see also Natural Exchange Company of Glasgow v Drew, 2 Macq 103 But a statement made by the chairman of a company incorporated under the Companies Act, 1862, at a general meeting of the company cannot be used as an admission against the company In Re Deralo Provident Gold Mining Co, 22 Ch D 593 Roscoe N P 70 in rejecting the admission of the chairman Fry J said "The only ground upon which, in my view, this statement could possibly be admitted would be that the chairman was the agent of the company, and that he was making the statement in the course of a transaction with a third party in which he was acting as the agent of the company, and that it was within the scope of his agency If that were so the statement would be admissible against the company It appears to me, however, that it was not admissible for it was made by the agent, not in the transaction between the company and a third party, but at a meeting of the company It is the case of an agent making the report to his own principal, and in my view when an agent is making a confidential report to his principal, the report is not admissible evidence in favour of a third party" So also the secretary of a projected company has not, by virtue only of his office, any power to bind the members of the provisional committee by admission Burnside v Dayrell 3 Exch 225 In Bruff v Gt N Ray Co 1 F & F 315, Hilles J rejected an admission of the secretary of a company as to the receipt of a letter And an admission by the board meeting of a company registered consisting of a less number of directors than was required by the deed of settlement was rejected in Rudley v Plymouth Banking Co 2 Exch 711 Admissions by servants of a company as to ferocious habits of a dog were not allowed to bind the company, in the absence of evidence that these servants had the care of animal Shles v Cardiff 33 L J Q B 310, Roscoe N P 70

The subject is also frequently illustrated in the case of declarations of agents and employees of corporation and other defendants in action for negligence Thus, the declarations of an employee or officer as to who was responsible for

S 18. an accident, or as to the manner in which it happened, when made at the time of the accident or soon after have been held incompetent, as against the company, on the ground that his employment did not carry with it authority to make declarations or admissions at a subsequent time as to the manner in which he performed his duty and that this declaration did not accompany the act from which the injuries arose and was not explanatory of anything in which he was then engaged but that it was a mere narration of past occurrence. But as has already been pointed out there is a class of cases in which the rule that the declarations must be contemporaneous with the act is construed less strictly, and in which such declarations are admitted, although not technically contemporaneous if they are spontaneous and tend to explain the transaction, and if so slight an interval of time has elapsed as to render premeditation improbable. Accordingly in numerous cases the declarations of employees and agents, made soon after an accident have been received as part of the res gestae. The transaction may be of such a character as to extend through a considerable period of time and in such cases the declarations of the agent in reference to the business if within the scope of the authority may be received, provided they are made before such transaction is completed. Burr Jones § 357, see also Arlstall Brewery v Furness Ry Co L R 9 Q B 468 Gl W Ry Co v Willis 18 C B N S 748, Payton v St Thomas Hospital 3 M & R 625n, Agassi v London Tramway Co 27 L T 492 Wayhen v Nelson 6 C & P 58 Loughboro Highway Board v Curzon 55 L T 70, North v Miles, 1 Camp 389. But in all such cases to bind the principal the declarations must be within the agent's authority, and must accompany an act which he is authorized to do. Murdock v Humberston Ry Co, 72 Iowa, 201. So in every case the question invariably arises—Was the declaration made by the agent in the scope of his authority or, as it is sometimes put, in the time of his duty? If so it is admissible against the corporation. The declarations of the agent are admissible only when made in the execution of the duties imposed upon him, and concerning a matter regarding which he is called upon to act, and which matter is within the scope of the authority usually exercised by him. Burr Jones Et § 357.

Manager of a Hindu Joint Family. The manager of a joint Hindu family is the agent for the other members, and is supposed to have their authority to do all acts for their common necessity or benefit. Kota Rama sams v Bangari 3 M 115 (150). But in a later Madras case it was held that the manager of a joint family is not an agent in the strict sense of the term. Kanula sams v Somasanda, 31 M 177=20 M L J 371=5 Ind Cas 922. Although the head of a joint family administers its properties for the purposes of the family as its accredited agent, yet so long as he does so manage its affairs he is not under the same obligation to economize or to save as would be the case with a paid agent or partner in trade or a trustee. Sircar's Hindu Law p 334. Where the agent incurs like money lending, has to be carried on in the interests of the family as a whole the managing members may properly make contracts, give receipts, compromise, and discharge claims ordinarily incidental to business. Aisham v Har, 38 I A 1=33 A 272=13 C L J 347=15 C W N 321. He can maintain suit on behalf of the family and can execute decrees and can receive payments and give valid receipts which will be binding on the family. Shah Ibrahim v Rama 37 M 685. Shree v Jaddo, 36 A 333=18 C W N 963 (P C). Subramani v Ramkrishna 15 Bom L R 810, Hari v Munman, 34 A 104 (F B). Behar v Ram, 35 A 330. Sarkar's Hindu Law p 33.

An acknowledgment of debt made within the period of limitation by the manager of a joint Hindu family is binding on the other members of the family. Vide section 21, sub-section 3 (b) see also Indar-Pal v Meenah P 4, 23 Ind Cas 41=36 A 261=12 A I J 374, Thakumal v Mullatta 53 Ind Cas 578=3 M L J 249. Chunaya Naydu v Gurunatham 5 M 169 (1 B). Payment made by the managing member of a joint Hindu family is payment by an agent duly authorized within the meaning of section 22 of the Limitation Act (Act of 1877) and will bind all the co-partners. Savala v Durga Charan 11 C W N 41=1 Ind Cas 181=37 C 461=11 C L J 484. see also Rama Charan v Ganga Prasad A C 122 (F B). Bhasler Patya v Tayal Nathu 17 B 31. Harpasad Das v Bilashi Harshar Pasal, 19 C W N 280, Chandla v Datta.

31 C L J 7, Hari v Sourendra, 41 C L J 535 "But it seems clear that when, a creditor deals not with the managing member only of a family, but with all the members of the undivided family as co-obligors and on that footing enters into a transaction, thereby involving any question as to whether the transaction was really for the benefit of the family, he can not rely upon an acknowledgment of the liability made by one of them as an acknowledgment duly made on behalf of all co-obligors by reason only that the person acknowledging is in fact the managing member of the family consisting of the co-obligors." Narayyan Ayya v Venkata ramana, 25 M 220 (234) F B., Baikanta v Lalchand, 26 Ind Cas 511 So an acknowledgment of liability by the manager of joint Hindu family will not, save under special circumstances, bind the other adult co-parceners, who are also parties to the original contract. T S Duraiswami v Krishner, 54 Ind Cas 318=10 L W 466=(1919) M W N 797 It is also not open to a member of a joint Hindu family, not being its manager to make an acknowledgment so as to bind the other members of the family, except those who claim through the person acknowledging Ram Kishan v Hindi Ram, 71 Ind Cas 737=1923 Lah 135

Admission by agents in cases of torts The most difficult field in the application of this principle is in that of tortious liability. For example, If A is an agent to drive a locomotive, and a collision ensues, why may not his admissions after the collision ensue, acknowledging his carelessness be received against the employer? Because his statements under such circumstances are not made in performance of any work he was set to do. If he had before the collision been asked by a brakeman whether the train would take a switch at a certain point, and had then mentioned receiving certain instructions from the train despatcher, this statement might be regarded as made in the course of performing his appointed work. Wigmore § 1078

Admission by agents in criminal cases—The rules of admissibility are in general the same for the trial of civil and of criminal causes. Not only in practice but in principle and in spirit there is no occasion for a distinction. Wigmore § 4. "I have never heard" said Grove J in R v Mallory, 15 Cox 460, "that there was any difference (between civil and criminal cases) in the rules of evidence as to the admissibility of evidence, though there may be a difference in their application, and it may be that a piece of evidence, admissible in either class of cases, may not be sufficient in a criminal case (for conviction) that is, without further evidence, but the evidence is not the less admissible." So conformably to the general doctrine by which the rules of evidence are not different in criminal cases the admissions of an agent may equally be received in a criminal charge against the principal. But whether the fact thus admitted by the agent would suffice to charge the principal criminally without his personal knowledge or connivance would depend upon the particular rule of criminal law involved. Wigmore § 1078 The law on this point has been elaborately dealt with by Story J in United States v Gooding, 12 Wheaton 460 (Am). In that case the indictment was against one Gooding for being engaged in a slave trade, contrary to the prohibitions of the Act of Congress of the 20th April, 1818. Story J in delivering the judgment observed "The first question that arises is upon the division of opinions whether under the circumstances of the case the testimony of Captain Cout to the facts stated in the record, was admissible. That testimony was to the following effect. That he, Captain Cout was at St Thomas while the General Winder was at that island, in September, 1824, and was frequently on board the vessel at that time, that Captain Hill the master of the vessel, then and there proposed to the witness to engage on board the General Winder as mate of the voyage then in progress, and described the same to be a voyage to the coast of Africa for slaves and thence back to Trinidad de Cuba, that he offered to the witness seventy dollars per month, and five dollars per head for every prime slave which should be brought to Cuba, that, on the witness inquiring who would see the crew paid in the event of a disaster attending the voyage, Captain Hill replied 'Uncle John meaning (as the witness understood), John Gooding, the defendant,

S 18.

"It is to be observed that, as preliminary to the admission of this testimony, evidence had been offered to prove that Gooding was owner of the vessel, that he lived at Baltimore, where he was fitted out, and that he appointed Hill master, and gave him authority to make the fitments for the voyage, and paid the bills therefor, that certain equipments were put on board peculiarly adopted for the slave trade, and that Gooding had made declarations that the vessel had been engaged in the slave trade, and had made him a good voyage. The foundation of the authority of the master, the nature of the fitments, and the object and accomplishment of the voyage, being thus laid, the testimony of Captain Coit was offered as confirmatory of the proof, and properly admissible against the defendant. It was objected to, and now stands upon the objection before us. The argument is, that the testimony is not admissible, because, in criminal cases, the declarations of the master of the vessel are not evidence to charge the owner with an offence, and that the doctrine of the binding effect of such declarations by known agent is, and ought to be, confined to civil cases. We cannot yield to the force of the argument. In general, the rules of evidence in civil and criminal cases are the same. Whatever the agent does, within the scope of his authority, binds his principal, and is deemed his act. It must be shown that the agent has the authority, and that the act is within its scope, but this being conceded or proved, either by the course of business or by express authorization, the same conclusion arises in point of law in both cases. Nor is there any authority for confining the rule to civil cases. On the contrary, it is the known and familiar principle of criminal jurisprudence, that he who commands or procures a crime to be done, if it is done, is guilty of the crime, and the act is his act. This is so true that even the agent may be innocent, when the procurer or principal may be convicted of guilt, as in the case of infants or idiots employed to administer poison. The proof of the command or procurement may be direct or indirect, positive or circumstantial, but this is matter for the consideration of the jury, and not of the legal competency. So, in the cases of conspiracy and riot when once the conspiracy or combination is established, the act of one conspirator, in the prosecution of the enterprise, is considered the act of all, and is evidence against all. Each is deemed to consent to or command what is done by any other in furtherance of the common object. Upon the facts of the present case, the master was just as much a guilty principal as the owner, and just as much within the purview of the act by the illegal fitment.

The evidence here offered was not the mere declarations of the master upon other occasions totally disconnected with the objects of the voyage. These declarations were connected with acts in furtherance of the objects of the voyage, and within the general scope of his authority as conductor of the enterprises. He had an implied authority to hire a crew, and do other acts necessary for the voyage. The testimony went to establish that he endeavoured to engage Captain Coit to go as mate for the voyage then in progress, and his declarations were all made with reference to that object, and as persuasive to the undertaking. They were therefore, in the strictest sense a part of the res gestae, the necessary explanations attending the attempt to hire. If he had hired a mate, the terms of the hiring, though verbal would have been part of the act, and the nature of the voyage, is explained at the time, a necessary ingredient. The act would have been so combined with the declarations as to be inseparable without injustice. The same authority from the owner which allows the master to hire the crew, justifies him in making such declarations and explanations as are proper to attain the object. Those declarations and explanations are as much within the scope of the authority as the act of hiring itself. Our opinion of the admissibility of this evidence proceeds upon the ground that these were not the naked declarations of the master unaccompanied with his acts in that capacity, but declarations coupled with proceedings for the objects of the voyage, and while it was in progress. We give no opinion upon the point whether mere declarations, under other circumstances would have been admissible. The principle which we maintain is stated with great clearness by Mr Starkie, in his Treatise on Evidence, 2 Stark. Evidence, p 4, p 60. "Where says he, 'the fact of agency has been proved, either expressly or presumptively, the act of the agent, so extensive with the authority, is the act of the principal, whose mere instrument he is, and then whatever the agent says within the scope of his authority, the principal says and evidence may be given of such acts and declarations as if they had been actually done and made by the principal himself."

"An admission by an agent" says Mr Roscoe "is never evidence in criminal, as it is sometimes in civil cases in the sense in which an admission by defendant himself is evidence. Thus in order to make a client criminally responsible for a letter written by his solicitor it is not sufficient to show that such letter was written 'in consequence' of an interview, but it must be shown that it was written by the instructions of the client. R v Downer, 14 Cox C C 486. Where a person is charged with the offence with the instrumentality of an agent, then it becomes necessary to prove the acts of agent, and in some cases, as where the agent is dead, the agent's admission is the best evidence of the acts which can be produced. Thus, on the impeachment of Lord Melville it was decided that a receipt given in the regular and official form by Mr Douglas, Lord Melville's attorney to transact the business of his office as treasurer of the navy, and to receive and give receipts for all money, who was dead, was admissible against Lord Melville to establish the single fact that a person appointed by him as his pay master did receive from the exchequer a certain sum in due course 29 St Tr 746-61, 1806." In Lord Melville's Trial, Mr Serjeant Best, for the reception of the evidence said "We must first prove the money has been received, and after we have satisfactorily proved that then comes the evidence to prove what has been its application after it has been received. The learned counsel has endeavoured to distinguish between civil and criminal cases. There is a considerable distinction between civil and criminal cases but that distinction consists rather in the number of facts to be proved than in the manner of proving any of them. It is necessary that more facts should be proved for the purpose of showing that a man has money in his possession or has had money come into his possession, than to make him civilly responsible, but though more facts should be proven in one case than is necessary to be proved in the other, each particular fact is to be proved by precisely the same evidence." Mr Plumer on the opposite side "I desire it may be distinctly understood that I do not dispute that the rules of evidence are the same in both. What is the distinction, then? It is not that the rules of evidence are all altered, but that when you are looking at the individual who stands in a civil relation, and are pursuing it with that view there is an identity of persons between the agent and the principal and all that one has done or said is done or said by the other, (but otherwise for criminal responsibility) Lord Chancellor Erskine in admitting the certificate observed "This first step in the proof must advance by evidence applicable alike to civil as to criminal cases, for a fact must be established by the same evidence, whether it is to be followed by a criminal or civil consequence. But it is a totally different question in the consideration of criminal as distinguished from civil justice, how the noble person now on trial may be affected by the fact when so established. The receipt by the paymaster would in itself involve him civilly but could by no possibility convict him of a crime."

According to the Indian Evidence Act admission of an agent is admissible against the principal if made within his authority but confessions of an agent are not so admissible. But in a criminal trial if it is intended to bind a master by the statement of his servant, the relationship of master and servant must be strictly proved. It is not sufficient to say that because a man accompanied another to the theatre, the former is a servant of the latter. Rutbaram v Emperor, 46 Ind Cas 709=1 P L W 120=19 Cr L J 789

Admission by wife The admission of the wife will bind the husband, only where she has authority to make them. Emerson v Blomden, 1 Esp 142; Anderson v Sanderson, 2 Stark 201; Carey v Adkins, 1 Camp 92. This authority does not result, by operation of law from the relation of husband and wife, but is a question of fact, to be found by the jury, as in other cases of agency, for though the relation is peculiar in its circumstances from its close intimacy and its very nature, yet it is not peculiar in its principles. As the

S 18 wife is seldom expressly constituted the agent of the husband, the cases on this subject are almost universally those of implied authority, turning upon the degree in which the husband permitted the wife to participate, either the transaction of his affairs in general, or in the particular matter in question. In regard to the inference of her agency from circumstances, the question has been left to the jury with great latitude, both as to the fact of agency and the time of the admissions. Greenl Ev § 185, Gregory v Parler, 1 Campb 485, Plummer v Sells, 3 N & M 422, Riley v Snyder, 4 Barb 222, Palchrop v Furnish, 2 Esp 511 N. Where a wife is authorised to manage business of her husband, during his absence her admission is evidence against her husband. Clifford v Burton, 1 Bing 199. The law on this subject is that laid down by Alderson B in Meredith v Footner, 11 M & M 202. "A wife can not bind her husband by her admissions, unless they fall within the scope of the authority which she may be reasonably presumed to have derived from him and which she is carrying on a trade, if it be necessary for that purpose that she should have such a power, she may be his agent to make admissions with respect to matters connected with the trade." An admission of a daughter is not binding on the father. Bucha v Lulee, 2 Agia 20.

Admissions by Pleadings, Attorneys and Counsels A valid in this country has not ordinarily any greater power to bind his client than that which is possessed by an attorney in England. Woodroffe Et 237, Pratt v Sulke v Parlice Ram, 2 Agia Rep 222. An attorney is an agent to conduct litigation, his admissions, therefore under certain circumstances are receivable. So an attorney's admission may be used against the party client only so far as it concerns the management of the litigation. The reason for the limitation is that the attorney's admission can affect his client so far only as he has authority to act as agent in his client's place. That authority so far as it is to be implied from the mere general appointment as attorney, and has not been enlarged in the particular case extends only to the management of the cause. Act, conversely, all his admissions during the management including utterances in the pleadings, do affect the client. Higmore § 1063. "The attorney is not the agent of the client for the purpose of making admissions except in the cause and for the purpose of the cause. All that appeared here was that one of the plaintiff's witnesses heard the plaintiff's attorney say that there was an agreement in writing. That clearly was no evidence at all to affect the plaintiff." Per Wilde C J in Watson v King, 3 C B 608. Wagstaff v Watson, 4 B & Ad 339. Ley v Peter 3 H & N 101. 111. Barristers and solicitors are the agents of their clients for the purpose of making admissions while engaged in the actual management of the cause either in Court or in correspondence relating thereto, but statements made by a barrister or solicitor on other occasions are not admissions merely because they would be admissions if made by the client himself. Step Dig Ev Art 17. An admission made by a barrister while conducting a suit is binding on the client. Berkeley v Chittur, 5 N W P 2. see also Kalukanand v Giribala 10 W R 322, Srinani v Pitambar 21 W R 332, Abdul v Gourmani 9 W R 375. Rajendra v Byoji, 2 M L A 253, Jahadali v Ajimunnessa, 44 Ind Cr 18. But it is clear that whatever the attorney says in the course of conversation is not evidence in the cause. Young v Wright 1 Camp 139, Petch v Lyon 9 Q B 147 (154). The reason for this distinction is found in the nature and extent of the authority given the solicitor being constituted for the management of the action in Court and for nothing more. Ibid see also Parlins v Haulshan, 2 Stark R 239, Doe v Richards, 2 C & K 216. Wilson v Turner Taunt, 398, Watson v King, 3 Com B 608. Greenl Ev § 186. If the admission is made before suit, it is equally admissible, provided it appears that the attorney was already retained to appear in the cause. Marshall v Cliff 4 Camp 133. Ellis v Allen, (1914) 1 Ch. 904. But in Wagstaff v Wilson 4 B & Ad 339 a letter threatening legal proceedings but written before action begun was excluded. See also, Doe v Richards, 2 C & K 216. So in the absence of any retainer at that time in the cause there must be some other proof of authority to make the admissions. Wagstaff v Wilson 4 B & Ad 339. Lord v Baylow, 121 Mass. 185, Burghart v Angerstein, 6 C & P 693, Pope v Andrews 9 C & P 564. Greenl. Ev § 186. The authority of an attorney may be delegated to a clerk. "If an attorney leaves the conduct of a cause to his clerk, what the latter does therein binds the party, as much as the act of attorney himself" Taylor v Williams, 2 B & Ad 843, 855, Standage v Creighton 5 C & P 106 Taylor v Foster 2 C & P 195, Griffiths v Williams, 1 T R 710, Truslove v Burton, 9 Moore 64, Lord Owen & Co v Wood, 120 Ia. 303 (Im).

"Admissions made by counsel stand on much the same footing as those made by solicitors. Indeed, it may be laid down as a general proposition of law, that a consent once given, or an admission made by a counsel under his signature with the authority of his client, with a full knowledge of the facts and without some egregious mistake is conclusively binding and cannot afterwards be withdrawn" Taylor § 783 citing Hursey v Croydon Union, per Ct. of App 13 Feb 1884. But in Colledge v Hann 3 Bing 119, where there was no express authority, Best C J said "I can not allow that the counsel is the agent of the party." But in Bhuthnath v Ramlal 6 C W N 82 Mr Justice Lanerjee said "When a person engages an advocate or vakil to conduct his case it must follow that he authorises his advocates or vakils to make binding admissions before the Court in the course of his conduct of the case." See also Rajender v Byori, 2 M I A 253 Kalechannud v Gireebala 10 W R 322, Kouer Naram v Sreenath, 9 W R 485, Jagapati v Chamba, 21 M 274 Venkata v Bhasiya 22 M 538 Jang Bahadur v Shanlar 13 A. 272, Mathews v Minister, 20 Q B D 141 Macaulay v Polley (1897) 2 Q B 122, Venkata v Bhasya Kuree 25 M 267 P C. A counsel's authority is less extensive than that of a solicitor Richardson v Peto, 1 M. & G 896, R. v Greenwich 15 Q. B D 54. But an admission of law where it is erroneous, by a vakil is not binding on the client Kishnaswami v Rajagopal, 18 M 73 (83).

In criminal cases there is no authority in a solicitor to bind his client by making admission, in the absence of express authority. R v Downer 14 Cox 486, but see Bansi Lal v Emperor, 30 Bom L R 646 = A I R 1928 Bom 241.

If a plaintiff relies upon any statement by the defendant or his pleader made in a previous litigation between the parties, that statement must be regularly proved. On proof of such statement the question arises as to the weight to be attached to it. Mam Lal v Uma Charan, 19 C L J 541.

A judgment deliberately recording the admission of a pleader must be presumed to be correct, unless contradicted by an affidavit, or the Judge's own admission that the record was wrong. Hur Dyal v Hina Lal, 16 W R 107.

Oral testimony on behalf of a litigant in a litigation with A, cannot be admitted as evidence against him in a litigation with B on the footing of an admission by counsel. The case lodged by a litigant in the House of Lords is not strictly a plea, but is a document in the nature of a plea, and the statements in it, although binding on the party making them, ought not to be regarded in any subsequent action as admissions. British Thompson-Houston Co v British Insulated and Helsby Cables Ltd (1924) 1 Ch 203 = (1923) W N 344 (Eng) = 68 Snl Jn 252 = 156 L T Jo 440 per Russell J affirmed an appeal in (1924) 2 Ch 160 = 93 L J Ch 467 = 131 L T 683.

Partners and joint contractors. A partner changes the partnership by virtue of an agency to act for it, how far his admissions are receivable depends therefore on the doctrines of agency as applied to a partnership. Wignmore § 1078. According to section 11 of the Uniform Partnership Act, 1914 (Am)

"an admission or representation made by any partner concerning partnership affairs within the scope of his authority as conferred by this Act is evidence against the partnership." See also Cal C C P 1872, § 1870, Adair v Kansas City 282 Mo 133 = 220 S W 920 (Am). Whenever any number of persons associate themselves in the joint prosecution of a common enterprise or design conferring on the collective body the attribute of individuality by mutual compact, as in commercial partnership and similar cases the act or declaration of each member in furtherance of the common object of the association, is the act of all. By the very act of association each one is constituted the agent of all. Greenl Et § 181 (b) Taylor § 598, Sandilands v Marsh, 2 B and Ald 673 Wood v Braddick 1 Taunt 104 Pethering v Turner 1 Taunt 104 R v Hardwick, 11 East 589, Fbz v Clifton, 6 Bing 792, Nicholls v Dowding, 1 Stark, R. 81,

S 18 Lucas v De la Cour, 1 M and S 249, Whitcomb v Whithung, 1 S L C 644-9
Dong, 652, Kali v Gope, 2 C W N 166 168, Doe v Hawkins, 2 Q. B 212

Partners and joint contractors are each other's agents for the purpose of making admissions against each other in relation to the partnership transaction or joint contracts. Step Dig Ev art 17. See also Kousullia v Mukta, 11 C 588 (591) Depending upon this principal of agency are the rules with respect to the admissibility of admissions by partners as against partners. They are also admissible on the principle of joint interest. Grunenburg v Smith, 58 Ill App 281 (Am), Re Whiteley, L R 1 Ch 558. In a suit by or against several persons who are proved to have a joint interest in the decision, a declaration made by one of them while engaged in the joint business, concerning a material fact within his knowledge, is evidence against him and against all who are parties within the suit. This principle is often illustrated in respect of declarations of partners. Thus if the action is against partners to recover money alleged to have been obtained by false representations, the statement of either partner, made during the partnership relative to and tending to establish the cause of action, are admissible against both, and entries in the partnership books made by a partner during the continuance of partnership are admissible against both. Admissions of one partner are admissible against all to prove the execution of a promissory note, the genuineness of such note, the existence of other forms of indebtedness, the financial condition of the firm, the payment of money, the ownership of goods in possession of the firm, the authority of an agent, that a note made in the firm's name was given on the credit of the firm and not on individual credit, that one notice had been given of the dishonour of a bill, that the partners are liable as Garnishees. So statements of account by a partner in the ordinary transaction of the firm's business are admissible. Although one partner is shown to be hostile to another, such admissions may be received although of course this hostility may affect the question of credibility. Burr Jones § 248. The admissions of one partner are not received against another on the ground that they are parties to the record, but on the ground that they are identified in interest and that each is agent for the other and that the acts and declarations of one during the existence of the partnership while transacting its business and within the scope of the business are evidence against the others. Kousullia v Mukta, 11 C 588 (591), Step Dig Ev art 17, Re Whiteley, (1891) 1 Ch 598, Calho v Jhora, 39 C 995. While the firm thus created exists, it speaks and acts only by the several member and of course when the existence ceases by dissolution of the firm, the act of an individual member ceases to have the effect. Their subsequent acts are binding on themselves alone, except so far as by the articles of association or of dissolution it may have been otherwise agreed. Bell v Morrison, 1 Peter-371, Burton v Issit, 5 B & Ald 267, Wood v Braddick, 1 Taunt 109, Kilgour v Finlison, 1 H Bl 155.

The declarations of a dormant partner, relating to partnership business, are admissible against his co-partners [Kassiusa Bridge v Shannon, 1 Gilman (Ill) 15 (America)] and those of a deceased partner are admissible against his survivors. Doremus v McCormick, 5 McLean (U S) 44. There appears to exist some doubt as to the admissibility of statements concerning partnership transactions, but there is no reason for it. If the matter was within the scope of the partnership and the statement made during the existence of the partnership, it is undoubtedly binding on and evidence against the other members of the firm. Burr Jones § 248. In Wood v Braddick, 1 Taunt, 104 (1808) which was an action brought to recover from the defendant the sale proceeds of certain linens, which the bankrupts in the year 1796 had consigned for sale to America, as the plaintiffs alleged, to the defendant jointly with one Cox who was then his partner but as the defendant contended, to Cox only. The plaintiff produced a letter from Cox, dated 24th June 1804 stating a balance of £919 to be then due to the bankrupts upon this consignment. It was in proof that on the 30th of July 1802 Braddick and Cox dissolved their partnership, as from the 17th of November, 1800. Cockell and Lens Serjts objected that this letter, being written after the dissolution of the partnership, was not admissible evidence to charge Braddick. In rejecting the contention Mansfield C J said "Clearly the admission of one partner, made after the partnership has ceased, is not evidence to charge the other in any transaction which has occurred since their separation, but the power of partners with respect to rights created pending the partnership remains after the dissolution since it is clear that one partner can bind the other during all the partnership, upon what principle is it that from the moment when it is dissolved his account of their joint contract should cease to be evidence?—and that those who are to dry as one person in interest should to-morrow become entirely distinct in interest with regard to past transactions which occurred while they were so united? This last exception may be illustrated by the case of Pritchard v Draper, 1 Russ and Myl 191, 199, 200, where Lord Brougham held, that the admission of one partner, as to the payment, subsequently to a dissolution, of a debt due to a firm, was admissible against the other partners. Taylor § 593, Green Ev § 184 (b), Whitcomb v Whiting, 2 Doug 652, Mc Intire v Oliver, 2 Hawk 209, Loomis v Loomis, 3 Deane Verne R. 193. In the case just cited, the party making the admission was at the time, so far as the debt in question was concerned, jointly interested with the parties against whom his statement was tendered in evidence. Taylor § 599, see also Parker v Morrell, 2 Phill 464, 465.

Where members of a firm sued upon a contract made by one of their number outside the scope of partnership business and without the knowledge of the others, admissions made by the signatory at a time other than the execution of the contract were held inadmissible. Taft v Church, 162 Mass 527 (Am). And where one partner after having given a note in his own name, said it was for the partnership firm such admission was held not to bind the firm. Thorn v Smith, 21 Wind (N Y—America). It is true from the very constitution of a partnership, that a presumption arises, that each partner is an authorized agent for the rest, in contracts relating to the subject matter of the partnership. But that relationship does not deprive either party of the liberty of making contracts for himself in similar matters. Thus, if A and B constitute a firm to merchandise goods, either of them, unless it is forbidden in the articles, is at liberty to enter into the same business, at the same place, on his own account. The legal presumption is, when a person purchases a thing, he purchases it for himself. In such case, the vendor in order to charge another person as a partner, must show the purchase was made for the firm or that it went to their use. So where a member of a partnership bought a mule ostensibly for himself, and when it was sent home he said it was for the firm his declaration so made after the purchase was not of itself competent to bind them. It is a general rule of the law of evidence that the acknowledgment of one joint contractor or partner is evidence against all the rest, and sufficient to bind them. The principle upon which such evidence is admissible, is the community of interest between the party making the admissions and the party to be affected by them, and the presumption that the former would not make an acknowledgment against his own interest. Where therefore, it appears that it was the interest of the party making the admission to throw the burden of the contract on the firm, his acknowledgment could not be received when the rule of interest in the case excluded the witness. Burr Jones § 248.

Partnership books being accessible to all the partners, and kept more or less under their individual supervision may also generally be received as prima facie evidence inter se. Gelling v Keightley, 9 Ch D 547 551, Lindley on Partnership p 566. Daji v Gobind Narain, 10 Bom L R 810. In Lodge v Pritchard, 3 De G M & G 906 at pp 909 910 Knight Bruce & J said 'Prima facie the books of partnership are evidence among all the partners for them all, and against them all owing to the agency which pervaded all the partnership transaction. If one partner succeeded in establishing a case of fraud that would form a ground for an exception from the general rule nor is there anything in the rule to exclude an allegation of a mistake or erroneous omission or insertion. The only question is whether the books are prima facie evidence between partners and their estates. In my opinion they are. But it is not conclusive evidence against a person complaining of them if he can by clear evidence show that there is an error in the books, Per Jessel M R in Gelling v Keig Kley, 9 Ch D 549, contra, Sheuarts case, (1865) 1 Ch App 587, Butcher v Smith,

S 18. 5 Ir Eq 117 The last two cases have been commented upon by McLeod J in Day v Gobind, 10 Bom L R 811

The general rule is that those admissions which relate to matters connected with partnership only bind the partners Lucas v De la Cour, 1 M and S 248. So an admission that two had committed trespass would not bind the other Ibid. But representation or misrepresentation of any fact made by one partner, with respect to some partnership transaction, will bind the firm Raph v Latham, 2 B and A 795, Thwaites v Richardson, Pea R 16, Nicholls v Douding, 1 Stark, R 81, per Lord Ellenborough, Tay § 744. But if an admission is made by one of several parties in fraud of the others jointly interested with them, and in collusion with the opponent, then, on proof of this fact by the innocent parties, such admission will, on principles of equity, be rejected by the Court Kauistorne v Gandell, 15 M and W 304, Taylor § 749. One member of a firm can borrow money for the firm by executing promissory notes and such promissory notes are binding on the firm Shanmuga v Srinivasa, 40 M 727, Karmali v Karmali, 39 B 261.

Limitation—Saving of, by acknowledgment of one partner An acknowledgment or a payment by a partner without special authority is binding upon another partner. Under section 21 of the Limitation Act a partner ipso facto has no authority to acknowledge or to make a part payment, but if he has general authority to contract debts or make payments he has implied authority to keep the debt alive and it is unnecessary to make out a special authority. Chegamull v Gounda Suami A I R 1928 Mad 972. So in the absence of direct evidence that a contractor or partner has authorised his co-contractor or partner to make acknowledgments or payments saving limitation on his behalf, such authority can be inferred from other circumstances, such as the position of the other co-contractors or partners in the business Pandiri Veerana v Veerabhadraudu, 41 M 427=34 M L J 373=7 M L W 552=45 Ind Cas 18=(1918) M W N 285 (F B) overruling Valusubramania v Ramanathan, 2 Ind Cas 309=32 M 421 and Sheikh Mohideen Saheb v Official Assignee, 11 Ind Cas 332=35 M 142, see also K R v Firm v Sathya vada, 21 Ind Cas 83=31 M 146=25 M L J 501.

In Premji v Dossa 10 B 358, Scott J said "It must be shown that the partner giving the acknowledgment had the authority, express or implied to do so. In going mercantile concern such agency is, I think to be presumed as a rule." This case was followed with approval by the Allahabad High Court in Gada Bibi v Parsotam 10 A 418 and Candy J of Bombay High Court in Dulsukhram v Kaludas, 26 B 42 see also Akhood v Kirshen, 25 W R. 145 Lalla v Bibu, 32 A 51. So in the absence of evidence to the contrary one partner is presumed to be the agent of the other to make payments in respect of partnership debts (Godwin v Parton 41 L T 91) and though the agency is in general terminated by a dissolution of partnership (Watson v Woodman, 20 Ld 721=15 L J Ch 57) it may under special circumstances be treated as continuing where for instance the retirement of a partner is kept secret and payments of interests are made in the name of the firm In re Tucker (1894) 3 Ch 129=63 L J Ch 737, see also Abdulali v Ranchadall 38 Ind Cas 573=19 Bom L R 86 (95), Karamali v Borakarmji, 26 Ind Cas 91=19 B 261=19 C W N 837.

In considering the effect on other partners of admissions of payments by one partner which result in removing the bar of the Statutes of Limitation as to that partner the question of the agency which is the basis of that particular form of liability is of first importance, and the solution lies in stripping the proposition to the bare statement of the authority, express or implied, with which the declarant was invested at the time of the declaration. The discussion is limited to admissions made after dissolution. Prior to it, and whether the admission be regarded as a new contract or an extension of an old one, there need be no question of the partner's ability to charge his co-partners with the act which bars the Statute. But after dissolution the agency and its cessation or rather the exact time of the determination of the agency regulates the period when such admissions or payments which operate as admissions become, as to the other partners, ineffectual Burr Jones § 213.

But the mere fact of a partner being in charge of a branch of the partnership business does not authorize him to bind the firm by a payment or acknowledgment Veerapa v Cudambara, 28 Ind Cas 845. The test for determining the effect of the acknowledgment by third party will in each case be whether the person who keeps alive the debt, had express or implied authority to act on behalf of those against whom limitation is to be arrested Kothandaraman v Shunmugam, 32 Ind Cas 603. But admission of liability by a partner in his insolvency schedule does not bind the other partners 36 Ind Cas 389. So also in the absence of express evidence of authority in acknowledgment of a partnership debt by an ex partner after the dissolution of partnership does not bind any ex partner 30 Ind Cas 675=18 M L T 273. Similarly a partner of a money lending business which is being wound up has no authority to give an acknowledgment for a subsisting debt so as to bind the firm 36 Ind Cas 225=8 L B R 363.

Parties suing or sued in representative character. Admission of one party is receivable as evidence against another on the ground of privity of interest, i.e., a relation which permits one person's rights, obligations or remedies to be affected by the acts of another person and thus also permit resort to such evidence as that other person may have furnished by way of admission. This privity may be of two sorts, namely privity of obligation and privity of title. Where the party sues in a representative capacity—i.e., as trustee, executor, administrator, or the like—the representative is distinct from the ordinary capacity, and only admissions made in the former quality are receivable, in particular, statements made before or after incumbency are inadmissible. Conversely, his admissions as executor or the like would be receivable against him as a party in his personal capacity Wigmore § 1076. The admissions which are thus receivable in evidence, are those of a person having at the time some interest in the matter afterwards in the controversy in the suit to which he is a party. The admissions, therefore, of a guardian, or of an executor or administrator, made before he was completely clothed with that trust, or of prochein amy, made before the commencement of a suit, cannot be received either against the ward or infant of the one case or against himself, as the representative of heirs, devisees and creditors, in the other (Webb v Smith, R & M 106, Fraser v Marsh, 2 Stark 41 Couch v Ely 2 Stark 366) though it may bind the person himself, when he is afterwards a party suo jure, in another action. A solemn admission however, made in good faith, in a pending suit for the purpose of that trial only is governed by other considerations Green v El § 179.

Generally the competency of admissions is not affected by the time at which they are made. But it is an important qualification of the above statement that, if the admission is made by a person suing or being sued in a representative capacity only, it must be made while the person making it sustains that capacity Freeman v Brewster 93 Ca 618 (1st). On this point there was some dispute in England. In one case, Chief Justice Tindal is reported to have received an admission of a person, who was crying as an ad igneo now called the trustee of bankrupt, though it was made before he became such Smith v Morgan, 2 B & Rob 257. But Lord Tenterden has ruled otherwise on precisely the same point Fenwick v Thornton M & M 51. In that case he disallowed the admission by an Official Assignee made before his appointment. See also Methers v Brown 32 I J P 140 Plant v M'Fuen 4 Cox 341, Taylor § 755. So statements of an executor or administrator, guardian, or trustee made before his appointment, cannot be received except to affect themselves individually. Church v Howard 79 N Y 415, Imor v Wico 112 U S 472 Moore v Butler 48 N H 161 Whitton v Smyler 88 N Y 299 Burr Jones § 266, Leyge v Edmonds 25 L J Ch 125, 130 141. It certainly appears to be a somewhat startling proposition says Taylor that the assets of a testator, and the consequent rights of legatees may be affected by some inconclusive statement, which the executor before the death of the testator, may have been induced to make. Taylor § 755. But statement of such persons is competent, if made while representing the person beneficially interested, and in the true action of his mind or in performance of the trust in such manner as to be part of res gestae. Church v Howard 79 N Y 415 (Ann.) For v Walters 12 A & E 43. So an affidavit of a guardian of an infant in one suit can not be used against the infant in another suit Eccleston v Speke, 3 Mod 258. So admissions made during the representative tenure of a trustee are competent against his beneficiary, assuming them to be in accordance with the scope of his authority, but not of a "dry" or "technical" trustee Thompson v Dale, 32 Ala 99 (Am). "If he was a continuing trustee, holding the legal title for them, his admissions, while actually handling the subject matter of the trust in such acts as collecting the rents (which as trustee he was authorized to do), would be good against them" Anon v Raymond, 73 Ga 749 (Am). In Beknapp Sa Banl v Lamo Land etc Co, 28 Colo 326 the Court refused to hold beneficiaries bound by fraudulent admissions of a faithless trustee. In delivering the judgment the Court observed "We decline to dignify with discussion the argument that such action of a trustee binds its beneficiaries. We merely dismiss, with the observation that neither in morals nor in law will it bear scrutiny and the Court of Equity will not listen for a moment to such an unconscionable proposition." Executors or administrators who are specially charged with the general interest of the state, and statements made concerning it while they are transacting its business are admissible Duaranath v Chundee, 1 W R 339, Chunder Kant v Ramnarain, 8 W R 63. The admission of the executor of a donor must be treated as the admission of the donor Duarla v Chundee 1 W R 339. The admissions of one executor will not bind the others Slator v Lawson, 1 B & Ad 396, Tullock v Dunn, Ry & M 416, Chundra Kant v Ramnarain, 8 W R 63, Scholey v Walton, 12 M & W 514, Fox v Walters, 12 A & E 43, Brynn v Russell, 32 Hun 17=4 N Y Supp 784 (Am), Church v Howard 79 N Y 415 (Ln). But where one of several trustees, who are personally liable admits the receipt of money his admission will not bind the others Phyp Ev 4th Ed 222 Skafse v Jackson, 3 B & C 221, Davis v Ridge, 3 B & C 421. But such receipt may operate as a waiver Karlas v Sheikh Chhemu, 42 C 546, Woodroffe, 232.

S 18

Guardians—A guardian, so far as his powers place him in a representative capacity, is subject to the rules which govern executors administrators etc but the function of a guardian ad litem begins and ends with the litigation and consequently his extrajudicial admissions are not receivable at all Wigmore § 1016 (2) see also Eggleson v Pettit, 3 Mod 258. But admissions made by the guardian of the person of an infant as to the property right of the latter are not binding on the infant but such admissions may be receivable for other purposes Per Mookenjee J in Banuari Lal v Duaranath, 52 Ind Cas 825 see also Bijendra v Chairman, 20 W R 223, Suriy v Bhagwati, 10 C L R 311, Ran v Mahammad 24 I A 107=34 C 853=1 C W N 417. An admission by the Court of Wards, made at the time when the estate was in charge of the Court, can not bind or prejudice the infant proprietor Banuari Lal v Duaranath 52 Ind Cas 825, Ram Autar v Ruyah Mahammad 24 C 803=1 C W N 417, 21 W R 253. An acknowledgment of debt by a duly constituted guardian, gives a fresh period of limitation Ram Charan v Gaya Prosad, 30 A 235 (F B)=5 A L J 375, Sobhanidari v Suramulu 17 M 221, Karlava v Ponnai Ram 18 M 456 Annahaganda v Sangadigayya 26 B 221 contra Hijabun v Kadu, 13 C 292 Chhato v Bitto 26 C 1, Tital v Chhutu, 26 A 39. But de facto guardian of a Hindu minor has no power to keep debt alive against the minor Ramaswamy v Kashinath, 108 Ind Cas 529=4 I R 1928 Muz 226.

Admission by co plaintiff or co defendant—It is clear that in receiving the admission of a party as such the only question can be who the party is. The probative process consists in contrasting the statements of the same person made now as litigant and made formerly elsewhere, and it is in that view that it becomes necessary to define the identity of the person. It follows that the statements of one who is confusedly a distinct person B do not become receivable as admission against A merely because B is also a party. In other words, the admissions of one co plaintiff or co-defendant are not receivable against another, merely by virtue of his position as a co party in the litigation. This is necessarily involved in the notion of an admission for it is impossible to discredit its claims as a party by contrasting them with what some other party

B has elsewhere claimed, there is no discrediting in such a process of contrast, because it is not the same person's statements that are contrasted. Moreover ordinary furnaces would forbid such a license, for it would in practice permit a litigant to discredit an opponent's claim merely by joining any person as the opponent's co party and then employing that person's statements as admissions. It is plain, therefore, both on principle and in policy, that the statements of a co party (while usable of course against himself) are not usable as admissions against a co party. Wigmore § 1076. In Morse v Royal 12 Ves Ir 355, 361, Lord Chancellor Erskine said, "So in trespass, where the defendants may be found severally guilty or not guilty, a witness may say he heard one acknowledge that he committed the act with others, that is decisive against that one, and as it is legitimate evidence against him, the Court must hear it, though it is no evidence against the others." In Dan v Brown, 4 Cow N Y 483, 492, Woodworth J said "An admission by a party to the record is evidence against him who makes it, but not against others who happen to be joined as parties to the suit." See also In re Whiteley, L R (1891) 1 Ch 558, Azizullah Khan v Ahmad Ali Khan 7 A 333, Lachman v Tansulh 6 A 395, Kali Dutta v Abdul Ali, 16 C 627 (635), Amrita v Rajanee Kant 15 B L R 10 (P C)=23 W R 214=21 A 113, Chandeswar v Chum Ahn, 9 C L R 359, Niamutoolah Khadim v Hummut Ali, 22 W R 519. "In general, the statement of defence made by one defendant can not be read in evidence either for or against his co defendant, neither can the answer to interrogatories of one defendant be read in evidence, excepting against himself (Meyer v Montiron 9 Brev 521, Stephens v Heathcole, 2 Drew and Sm 138, Parler v Morrell 2 Phill 463, Hoare v Johnstone, 2 Keen 553, Statmarsh v Hardy, 42 L J Ch 423), the reason being, that as there is no issue between the defendant, no opportunity can have been afforded for cross-examination (Jones v Turbeville, 2 Ves 11, Morse v Royal, 12 Ves 355, 361, 362, and moreover, if such a course were allowed, the plaintiff might make one of his friends a defendant, and thus gain a most unfair advantage. Wych v Meal, 3 P Wms 311." Taylor § 754.

But the situation has often been obscured by the circumstance that the co party's admissions are received against himself, and that they are sometimes received also against the other co party because of a privity of obligation or of title. But it is not by virtue of the person's relation to the litigation that this can be done; it must be because of some privity of title or of obligation, which would indeed have admitted the statements even had the declarant not been made a co-party. Wigmore § 1076. In R v Hardwicke 11 East 578, Ellenborough L C J said "Evidence of an admission made by one of several defendants in trespass will not, it is true, establish the others to be co trespassers. But if they be established to be co trespassers by other competent evidence the declaration of the one, as to the motives and circumstances of the trespass will be evidence against all who are proved to have combined together for the common object." The payment of interest by the principal debtor cannot create a new period of limitation for the surety's debt. Gopal Daji v Gopal Ban, 28 B 248.

In Ambor Ali v Lutfee Ali, 45 C 159=25 C L J 619=21 C W N 986 at page 999 Justice Uookerjee said "There can be no room for controversy that the admission is good evidence against the maker of conveyance, but the question arises whether it is admissible against the other defendants. These defendants, it will be observed, are jointly interested in the land now in dispute, along with fourth and fifth defendants, in fact they claim under a common lease from the landlord, and have on the basis thereof, taken a common defence to defeat the suit of the plaintiffs. But these defendants were not joint owners of the property covered by the conveyance of 1894, and were strangers to that transaction. They consequently prese the view that an admission made by the owners of that property cannot be received in evidence against them merely because since the date of the alleged admission, they have jointly acquired the property now in suit. In our opinion this contention is well founded and section 18 of the Evidence Act is of no assistance to the Plaintiffs. The principle which regulates the reception in evidence of an admission by one defendant, as against another defendant, was formulated in the cases of Kowsullah Sundari v Mukta

S. 18. Sundari, 11 C 585, Chulho Singh v Jharo Singh, 39 C 995 and Meayan v Ali muddi, 44 C 130=20 C W N 1217. The principle is that when several persons are jointly interested in the subject matter of the suit, an admission of any one of these persons is receivable not only against himself but also against the other defendants, whether they be all jointly suing or sued, provided that the admission relates to the subject matter in dispute and be made by the declarant in the character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered. The requirement of the identity in legal interest between the joint owners is of fundamental importance. Elentinschopp v Blentinschopp, 11 Beav 134. On this principle the position has been maintained that the joint ownership must have existed at the time the statement was made. Thus in Blalency v Ferguson 14 Ark 641, it was ruled that the admission of one person cannot be admitted in evidence against another on the ground of a joint interest in the subject unless the interest is a subsisting one at the time of the admission, and where the interest is derivative, it must have been acquired after the admission was made. To the same effect is the rule enunciated in Albion v Ritchie 9 Cal 145=56 Am Dec 326 (1841) that the declaration of one of two joint owners is admissible against the other if made at a time after the joint interest came into existence, if made before they became joint owners, the declaration is not admissible. The distinction is based upon obvious good sense. The admission of one co plaintiff or co defendant is not receivable against another, merely by virtue of his position as a co party in the litigation, if the rule were otherwise it would in practice permit a litigant to discredit an opponent's claim merely by joining any person as the opponent's co party, and then employing that person's statements as admissions. Consequently it is not by virtue of the person's relation to the litigation that the admission of one can be used against the other it must be because of some privity of title or obligation."

The admission made by K in the proceeding under section 145 of the Code, when examined as a witness therein is evidence against him as a piece of admission but as to the admissibility of the admission against the co defendant the words of section 18 were perfectly clear and in as much as he made the statement when he had parted with his interest in favour of his co defendant in the present suit the admission made by him could not be treated as evidence of admission against the co defendant. Brayballav v Alhoy Baydi 30 C W N 204=93 Ind Cas 115=A I R 1926 Cal 705. Plaintiffs who were two out of five brothers sued to establish their right to a two fifths share in properties which were sold in execution of a money decree against another brother U and purchased by the defendant on the allegation that the properties, when sold, were the joint family properties of the five brothers. The defendant whose case was that the brothers were not joint at the date of the sale and that the properties were exclusively owned by U put in a deposition given by another brother K in the suit in which the money decree against U was passed in the course of which K stated that the family was not joint and the properties belonged exclusively to U. Held that the deposition of K in the previous suit was not admissible against the plaintiffs. The reasons given by the Court for not admitting this deposition are as follows: "The plaintiffs asserted that at the time when the patta in respect of the putni taluk was obtained they and their brother including defendant No 6 constituted a joint family and that a certain property was joint family property. The defendant No 6 in the course of his deposition as a witness on behalf of the representatives of Upendra Nath Ghose in suit No 127 of 1911 stated that on the death of the plaintiffs' father, Upendra, separated from his brother and that there was no joint family. The defendant No 6 therefore was not claiming any interest in the interest in question and in the admission made by him in the previous suit he did not fulfil the character of a declarant jointly interested with the party in respect of the property concerned against whom the admissions are sought to be used. Further more, it is to be noticed that the defendant company do not themselves say that at the time when the admissions referred to above were made by defendant No 6 there was any community of interest between defendant No 6 and his brother. Nogenira v Lawrence Jule Mills 25 C W N 89 (194)=61 Ind Cas 544. An admission of one defendant in a written statement in a suit will not be evidence against the others unless it is made evidence at the trial by examining that defendant who made the statement Seshagiri v Sadachin, 22 Ind Cas 924, see also Ipparu Chettiar v Nanjappa, 20 Ind Cas 792=14 M L T 117=25 M L J 729 Puran v Tariff, 13 A L J 1089=30 Ind Cas 2, Hat Balsh v Lachmina, 22 Ind Cas 916 An admission or even a confession of judgment by one of the several defendants in a suit is no evidence against the other defendant Dnu Nath v Sayaa Habib A I R 1929 Lah 129, Amrto Lal v Rajance Kant, 2 I A 113=23 W R 314=15 B L R 10, Narindar Singh v C M King, A I R 1928 Lah 769, Saidu v Meher, 101 Ind Cas 389 Jones v Furberelle, 2 Ves Jur 11 Hay v Gordon, 10 B L R 301=18 W R 480 P C Gopal v Gopal, 28 B 248, Morse v Royall, 12 Ves 362, Daniel v Potter 1 M & M 303, Chandiaswara v Chum Ahn, 9 C L R 359

Identity of interest The general doctrine is that the declarations of a party to the record or of one identified in interest with him, are as against such party, admissible in evidence Spargo v Brown, 9 B & C 935, per Baley J It is sometimes a question of some difficulty to determine just what will be sufficient identity of interest to render such statements admissible The cases have mainly turned upon this point Certain rules have become established as to identity of interest, and may be easily applied Many other cases arise which cannot be brought under any certain rule, but must depend largely upon the facts as to identity of interest, as they are brought out at the trial In either case the authority should clearly appear before the statement of one should be considered binding as against another Bare statements by an agent unaccompanied by any acts and not in connection with the doing of his principal's business would perhaps, never bind the principal, unless it were shown that the principal directed the particular statement to be made In most cases the statements of an agent which are admissible are connected with acts in such a way as to be admissible upon another ground, to wit, as part of the res gestae McKelvey Et § 125, Greenl. Ev § 109

Admissions of persons having joint interest The admission of one party may be given in evidence against another, when the party against whom the admission is sought to be used has a joint interest with the party making the admission in the subject matter or the thing to which the admission relates The rule depends upon the legal principle that persons seized jointly are seized of the whole each being seized of the whole the admission of either is the admission of the other and may be produced in evidence against that other Nagendra v Lawrence Jute Co, 25 C W N 89, Ambar Ali v Lutfi Ali 45 C 159=21 C W N 996=25 C L J 619 An admission made by some of several defendants in their character of persons jointly interested with the other defendants in the matter in respect of which the admission is made, is binding on the other defendants Bhika Mal v Ganga Ram, 69 Ind Cas 35, Meagan Matbar v Alimudh Mea, 34 Ind Cas 571=44 C 130=20 C W N 1217 Where several persons are jointly interested in the subject matter of a suit, the general rule is that the admissions of any one of those persons are receivable against himself and his fellows whether they be all jointly suing or sued, provided the admissions relate to the subject matter in dispute and were made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered. Dibesh Lal v Nohar, 48 Ind Cas 193 Meagan v Alimud-din 34 Ind Cas 571=20 C W N 1217, Sundari v Mulia, 11 C 568 In order to render the admission of one person receivable in evidence against another, it must relate to some matter in which either both were jointly interested or one was derivatively interested through the other a mere community of interest will not be sufficient Taylor Et § 750 An apparent joint interest is obviously insufficient to make the admission of one party receivable against his companions, where the reality of that interest is the point in controversy A foundation must be laid by showing prima facie, that a joint interest exists The existence of a joint interest which is disputed, can not be established by the admission of one of the parties sought to be charged, but this fact must be established by independent proof Therefore in an action against three makers of a promissory note, the joint execution of which was the point in issue, the admis-

18. sion of his signature by one defendant was held insufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover against him and the others though theirs have been proved, the point to be established against all being a joint promise by all Gray v Palmers, 1 Esp 135 Taylor § 753 When one of two brothers admitted the claim of the plaintiff who sued them for a sum of money, the other brother is not bound by such admission Alana v Madho, 24 Ind Cus 105

Admissions may be made by those not parties, if identified in interest. In addition to the real and nominal parties to a litigation, there often exist those who have such a pecuniary interest in the result that their admissions throw a relevant light upon certain of the facts in issue. Consequently admissions may be made by such persons not parties to the record, provided they have a substantial interest in the result Bouen v Snell, 11 Ala 379 So the admissions of one entitled under a will are only competent against himself Trimbletown v D Alton, 1 Dow & C 85, Morris v Stokes 21 Gr 552 (Am) By substantial interest is meant some thing more than natural anxiety as in the case of parent and child. It must be taken to mean pecuniary interest in the way of profit or legal obligation Sanford v Sanford, 9 Conn 275 (America). It must be shown dehors the declarations of such party. In other words, before the declarations of one not a party to the record can be received on the ground that he is the real party in interest, such interest must be shown by competent evidence. For example, the admissions and acts of cestui qui trust are admissible, although he is not a party to the record on the ground that he is a real party in interest. But it is not every collateral, incidental or contingent interest in the result of a suit that furnishes legal ground for the introduction of hearsay testimony as being the admissions of party in interest. Thus the interest of cestui qui trust of a bond, in a suit by the trustee, is an original interest, and not a mere incidental interest in the result of the suit, so also, the interest of persons in a policy effected in another's name, for their benefit. It is also a requisite that the statements should have been made during the continuance of the interest. Declarations made after the declarant has ceased to have any interest in the matter are not admissions, but mere hearsay Burr Jones § 238 The admission of one executor does not conclude another Chunder Kant v Ramnaram 8 W R 63 The admissions of the executor of a donor may be treated as the admission of the donor Duarla Nath v Chundeechurn, 1 W R 339 The admission of a ryot of the rate of rent at which he holds a tenure can not be treated as evidence against another ryot to prove the rate at which he holds the tenure Nuroohunry v Narance W R (1 B) 23 = 1 Ind Jur O S 9

Privies in Obligation. So far as one person is privy in obligation with another, i. e., is liable to be affected in his obligation under the substantive law by the acts of the other there is equal reason for receiving against him such admissions of the other as furnish evidence of the act which charges them equally. Not only as a matter of principle does this seem to follow, since the greater may here be said to include the less, but also as a matter of fairness, since the person who is chargeable in his obligations by the acts of another can hardly object to the use of such evidence as the other may furnish. Moreover as a matter of probative value the admissions of a person having precisely the same interest it stake will in general be likely to be equally worthy of consideration. There being an identity of legal liability, the two persons are one so far as affects the propriety of discrediting one by the statements of the other. This principle finds constant application chiefly to the admissions of a co-promisor or of a principal (against his surety), and of one or two other classes of liability. Higmore § 1077

Joint Promissors—Co-promisors like principal and sureties are also privies in obligation and on principle the admission of one should be admissible in evidence against the other provided the other conditions are satisfied. The rule is that, in the absence of fraud, if the parties have a joint interest in the matter in suit, whether as plaintiffs or defendants, an admission made by one is, in general evidence against all. Such was the doctrine laid down by Lord Mansfield in Whitcomb v Whitting 2 Dou. 652 Its propriety and the extent of its application have been much discussed and sometimes questioned

ed but it seems now to be clearly established Vide Perham v Rynal, 2 Bing 306, Burleigh v Stott 8 B & C 36, Wyatt v Hodson, 8 Bing 309, Brandram v Whorton, 1 B & Ald 467, Holme v Green 1 Stark 481 They stand to each other in this respect, in relation similar to that of existing co-partners Thus also the act of making a partial payment within period of limitation by one of several joint makers of a promissory note, takes it out of the Statute of Limitation Burleigh v Stott, 8 B & C, 36, Munderson v Reece, 2 Stark Evid 484, Wyatt v Hudson, 8 Bing 309, Chappendale v Thurston, 4 C & P 98, Peace v Hirst, 10 B & C 122 But it must be distinctly shown to be a payment on account of a particular debt Holme v Green, 1 Stark 488 But in India such questions must be decided by the Limitation Act IX of 1908 Section 19 requires the acknowledgment to be by the party against whom the right is claimed Section 21 does not lay down in exception to section 19 but enumerates those cases in which the act of one member of a class is liable to be taken as the act of all So acknowledgment of a judgment debt by one of several judgment debtors keeps alive the decree against such judgment debtor alone and not against the other Chanda Kumar v Ramdin, 16 C W N 498=13 Ind Cas 702 Narayan v Venkata, 25 M 220, Subramania v Ramanathan, 32 M 421 In the case of Ashanullah v Dahlu, 27 A 575 the Allahabad High Court (Blair and Burlitt J J) said "On general principles, one debtor by acknowledging a debt or making a part payment otherwise than as agent of the other debtors cannot keep alive the right of the creditor against those debtors" In a later Calcutta case however a contrary opinion was expressed by Fletcher and N R Chatterjee J J in Ban Behary v Jnanendra, 22 Ind Cas 709 According to the Madras High Court section 21 of the Limitation Act is really an explanation to sections 19 and 20 of the Act The object of the explanation is to provide that one only of the contracting parties shall not ordinarily impose a liability on the other by anything done by him Limitation, whether treated as a right or as a disability, is prima facie personal, and unless the Legislature so provides, a co-operative right or liability should not be imposed Muthu Chettiar v Muhammad, 55 Ind Cas 763, see also 32 Ind Cas 608, 23 B 248, 27 M L J 453, 25 Ind Cas 927=(1914) M W N 792 So apart from the question whether payment by one of joint promisors saves the limitation against the other, which must be decided in India in accordance with express provisions of sections 19 and 21 of the Indian Limitation Act, an admission made by one of them should be received in evidence against the other as they are parties in obligation But the decisions of English Courts are by no means uniform in this respect Thus, in an action against joint makers of a note if one suffers judgment by default, his signature must still be proved against the other Gray v Palmer, 1 E p 130, Shirreff v Walks, 1 East 48

Principal and surety Principals and sureties are parties in obligation i. e. one is liable to be affected in his obligation under the substantive law by the acts of the other Wigmore § 1077—So where the effect of a contract is that a surety shall be responsible for the acts and admissions of the principal, such admissions are competent evidence against the surety Burr Jones & Co § 238—So the entries of the principal were evidence against the surety because they were made by the collector (principal) in pursuance of the stipulation contained in the conditions of the bond Whitkash v George, 8 B & C 556, 561 Goss v Watlington 4 B & B 132 (137), see also Jordon School District v Gaets 23 D L R 739 (Canada), Sanders v Keller, 18 Ida. 592 But ordinarily where a principal is not a party to the suit, his declarations are not admissible unless they are made while the employment in which the principal was engaged continued, and in such manner as to be part of the res gestae. Burr Jones § 238 The principle is thus laid down by Greenleaf—"The admissions which are thus receivable in evidence, must, as we have seen be those of a person having at the time some interest in the matter afterwards in controversy in the suit to which he is a party The law in regard to this source of evidence, looks chiefly to the real parties in interest, and gives to their admissions the same weight, as though they were parties to the record Thus the admissions of the cestus que trust of a bond, those of the persons interested in a policy effected in another's name, for their benefit, those of the shipowners in an action by the master for freight, those of the indemnifier, creditor in an action against the sheriff, those of the deputy sheriff in an action against the high sheriff for the misconduct of the deputy are all receivable against the party making them. And in general the admissions of any party represented by another are receivable in evidence against his representatives. Greent L § 179 180. But it is not every collateral, incidental or contingent matter in the result of an act that furnishes a legal ground for the introduction of hearsay testimony as being the admission of a party in interest. Burr Jones § 214.

18

So we are to consider the admissions of a principal as evidence in an action against the surety upon his collateral undertaking. In the cases on this subject the main enquiry has been whether the declarations of the principals were made during the transaction of the business for which the surety was bound so as to become part of the res gestæ. If so, they have become admissible otherwise not. The surety is considered bound by the actual conduct of the party and not for whatever he might say he had done, and therefore is entitled to proof of his conduct by original evidence where it can be had, excluding all declarations of the principal made subsequent to the act to which they relate and out of course of his official duty. Greent L § 181. So in an action against a surety the liability must be proved against the surety independently of any admissions by the principal debtor which are in law no evidence against the surety. Kambhajar Lal v Sher Prasad 5 A L J 112 but see Parameswar v Seedeer 25 M L J 51-20 Ind Cas 637. In Ex parte Young, (1881) 17 Ch D 668 Lush J said "The creditors must have proved it over again against the surety because he is not bound by the admissions or statements of the principal as to what amount is due. He is only bound to pay the amount, which shall be proved against him. But these declarations are hardly reconcilable with the principles already laid down under the topic 'principles in obligation,' vide p 318. But this principle is occasionally ignored. Higmore § 1077 notes. See also Parameswar v Tynthen 20 Ind Cas 637. Thus where one guaranteed the payments for such goods as the plaintiffs should send to another in the way of their trade, it was held that the admissions of the principal debtor, that he had received goods, made after the time of their supposed delivery, were not receivable in evidence against the surety. Pears v Leathur, 51 p 26, Brown v Chesney, 1 Starl 192, Longenecker v Hyde 6 Bm, 1 Greent L § 187. So if one becomes surety in a bond conditional for the faithful conduct of another as a clerk, or collector it was held that in an action on the bond against the surety, confessions of embezzlement made by the principal after his dismissal, are not admissible in evidence. (Smith v Whittingham, 6 C & P 78. Goss v Wallington, 3 Bro & Bong 142, Cutler v Neulen Manning, 5 Digest N P 137), though with regard to entries made in the course of his duty it is otherwise. Whitaker v George 8 B & C 556. Uddleton v Melton, 10 B & C 317, McGahay v Alston, 2 M & W 213 211. Greent L § 187. It was held in the case of Ex parte Young, (1881) 17 Ch D 668, that even a decree against the principal debtor is no evidence against the surety as to the amount of debt, but see Drummond v Prestman, 12 Wheat 515.

On the other hand upon the same general ground, it has been held, that where the surety confides to the principal the power of making a contract he confides to him the power of furnishing evidence of the contract, and that if the contract is made by prior subsequent declarations of the principal are admissible in evidence though not conclusive. Thus where a husband and wife agreed, by articles to live separate and C as trustee and surety for the wife, covenanted to pay to the husband a sum of money, upon his delivering to the wife a carriage and horses for her separate use it was held in an action by the husband for the money that the wife's admissions of the receipt by her of the carriage and horses were admissible. Fenner v Lewis, 10 Johns 38. Greent L § 187. So when A guaranteed the performance of any contract that B might make with C the admissions and declarations of B were held admissible against A, to prove the contract. Meade v McDouell 5 Bing 195. Greent L § 187.

But where the surety being sued for the default of the principal gives him notice of the pendency of the suit and requests him to defend it, if judgment goes against the surety, the record is conclusive evidence for him, in a subsequent action against the principal for indemnity, for the principal has thus virtually become party to it. It would seem therefore, that in such cases the declarations of the principal, as we have heretofore seen, becomes admissible, even though they operate against the surety. Green v. Ev § 188

Privies in Title The admissions of one who is privy in title stand upon the same footing as those of one who is privy in obligation (Vide Supra p 318). Having precisely the same motive to make correct statement and being identical with the party (either contemporaneously or antecedently) in respect to his ownership of the right in issue, his admissions may, both in fairness and on principle, be proffered to impeachment of the present claim. Wigmore § 1080. 'The confessions of the party himself,' says Kennedy J in Gibblehouse v. Stong 3 Rawle, 436 (445) have always been considered good and admissible evidence of any fact admitted by them to be true, and may be given in evidence to prove it, notwithstanding the confessions might be such as to show that twenty witnesses were present who could all testify to its existence or non-existence and who might all appear to be in the court house at the time when such confessions should happen to be offered in evidence against the party making them. And his rule of admitting the confessions or declarations of the party extends not only to the admissions of them against himself, but against all who claim or derive their title from him, in other words, between whom and himself there is a privity. There are four species of privity: privity in blood, as between heir and ancestor, privity in representation, as between testator and executor, or the intestate and his administrator, privity in law, as between the common wealth by escheat and the person dying last seized without blood or privity of estate, and privity in estate as between the donor and the donee, lessor and the lessee, vendor and the vendee, assignor and the assignee etc. Vide Bigelow's Estoppel, 397. The subject of the second clause of his section generally deals with the admissions by privies in title. 'The declarations or confessions of the persons making them are evidence against such person and all claiming under him by a subsequent title, and for the plainest reasons. Truth is the object of all trials, and a person interested to declare the contrary is not supposed to make a statement less favourable to himself than the truth will warrant. At least there is no danger of overleaping the bounds of truth as against the party making the declarations. It is therefore evidence against him, and his subsequent purchaser stands in his situation, for he cannot better his title by transferring it to another, or thereby affect the rights of those who have an interest in his confessions. It is asked, why not swear him? The answer is, the other party likes his declarations better. He may, from the same motive, vary his statement, and the party offering this evidence is alone to judge.'

Admission by former owner of land A former owner of land is so identified in interest with a subsequent owner, holding under the same title, that his admissions respecting the title, made while in possession and vested with title are receivable in evidence. This rule is based on the theory that the self interest involved in the ownership of title is a sufficient guarantee for the truthfulness of statement against interest made by an owner. Long v. Long 19 Ill 383, Taylor, § 787. It is imperative that the statements be made while the prior owner is vested with the title. If made after the title has been disposed of the guarantee of truthfulness is lacking and is universally held such statements are inadmissible. The admissibility of statements of this sort is not affected by the fact that the person making them is alive and in Court. McKelvey's Evidence p 130. In an action by A against X for the pass for breaking and entering his close, called Scorhill. X called, to prove that Scorhill was a part of common lands, the son of M. M formerly owned the estate now held by the plaintiff, was alive and in Court. The son testified to admissions of his father that he had no right in Scorhill. Lord Darham in admitting the evidence said: 'We think they are receivable on the ground of identity of interest. The fact of his being alive at the time of the trial, when perhaps, his memory of facts was impaired, and when his interest was not the same, does not in our opinion, affect the admissibility of those declarations which he formerly made

S 18. on the subject of his own rights" Woolway v. Roe, 1 Ad & E 114. So the declarations of former owners or occupiers, made while in possession, have been admitted as evidence of the nature and extent of their title against those claiming in privity of estate. Taylor § 758, Doe v. Justin, 9 Bing 11, Davies v. Pierce, 2 T R 53, Doe v. Jones 1 Camp 367, Jackson v. Bord, 4 Johns 230, 231, Newton v. Pettibone, 7 Conn 319, Weidman v. Kohr, 1 Serg & R 174, Clarke v. Brindaban, (1862) W R T B 20. As the admissions must be made while the title to the property in question is in the declarant, (Pandah v. Gyadhar, 10 W R 89) they therefore cannot affect a title subsequently acquired, nor are they admissible if made after the declarant has parted with his interest in the property (Khemunlarry v. Gaur, 5 W R 268), unless there is proof of some fraudulent scheme between the grantor and grantee, e.g. to defraud creditors. It follows that the declarant, if at the time owner or claimant, need not have been in possession, and conversely, that his being in possession after the title conveyed does not make his declaration competent as an admission. Emmons v. Barton, 109 Cal 662 (Am), Hart v. Randolph, 142 Ill 521, 525 (Am). Ancient maps, books of survey etc, though mere private documents, are frequently admissible on this ground, where there is privity in estate between the former proprietor under whose direction they were made and the present claimant, against whom they are offered. Bull N P 288, Bridgman v. Jennings, 1 Ld Raym 734. So, as to receipts for rent by a former grantor under whom both parties claimed. Doe v. Seaton, 2 Ad & E 171. Any admission by a landlord in a prior lease, which is relevant to the matter in issue and concerns the estate, has also been held admissible in evidence against a lessee who claims by a subsequent title. Greave v. Barrett, 1 C M & R 919, 932. Greenfield § 189. A letter written by a former vicar respecting the property of the vicarage, is evidence against his successor in an ejectment for the same property, in right of his vicarage. Doe v. Cole, 6 C & P 359. The receipts, also, of a vicar's lessee, it seems, are admissible against the vicar, in proof of modus by reason of privity between them. Jones v. Carrington, 1 C & P 329, 330 (n), Maddison v. Nattall, 5 Price, 485. An answer in Chancery is also admissible in evidence against any person actually claiming under the party who put it in, and it has been held prima facie evidence against persons generally reputed to claim under him at least so far as to call upon them to show another title from a stranger. Earl of Sussex v. Temple, 1 Ld Raym 310. Countess of Dartmouth v. Roberts, 16 East 334, 339. The admission of the receipt of consideration contained in a mortgage deed is admissible in evidence against the representatives in interest of the original mortgagors. Bihari Lal v. Mukhdum, 35 A 194=11 A L J 221. Brayeswar v. Budhanuddi, 6 C 368, Abdul v. Madhub, 10 A L J 390. Rahhsh v. Liladhar, 35 A 353, Bubal v. Behari, 76 Ind Cas 815.

The admission of a zamindar that the holding of certain tenants is Mokur source at a given rent is binding on any zamindar who succeeds him without being an auction purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue. Watson v. Nobin, 10 W R 72.

Sales for arrears of Revenue or Execution sales. An auction purchaser of an estate at revenue sale for arrears of Government revenue does not derive his title from the late proprietor and his laches are not binding upon the auction purchaser. Bajool v. Prandhan, 8 W R 222, Radha Gobind v. Rakhai, 12 C 82. Forbes v. Mir Mahomed, 5 B L R 529 (P C). Enayet Hossein v. Gudhance Lal, 2 Bom L R P C 78. Poreshnath v. Ananta Nath, 9 I A 14. Watson v. Nobin, 10 W R 72. The auction purchaser at a revenue sale acquires all the rights which the original seller at the date of perpetual settlement had. Forbes v. Meer Mahomed, 20 W R (P C) 44. He is not at all bound by the admission of the previous owner. Rungo v. Ray Coomaree, 6 W R 197. Radha v. Rakhai, 12 C 32. Tara Prosad v. Ram Nrising, 16 B R App 5=14 W R 283. Under a sale in execution of a decree the purchaser notwithstanding that he acquired merely the right title and interest of the judgment debtor acquires that title by operation of law adversely to the judgment-debtor. Dinendra v. Ram Coomari, 7 C 107 P C=8 I A 65=10 C L R 281. In Lala Prabhu Lal v. Vytne, 11 C 401 (413) it was held that an auction purchaser is not a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of section 115 of the Evidence Act.

See also Gour Sundar v Hem Chander, 16 C 355, Rungo Monce v Ray Coomaree, 6 W R 197 Musst Imrit v Lalla 18 W R 200 An auction purchaser is not barred by the acts or the omissions of the former proprietors Koodep v Govt of India, 11 B L R 71 (P C)=14 M I A 217 Where the property is sold in execution of a decree, it can not be correctly said that the owner gives any rights to the purchaser who acquires his rights by operation of law Lalu Mulji v Kashi Bai, 10 B 401 (105) A purchaser at a Court sale represents the judgment-debtor to the extent of such right, title and interest as he had in the property purchased at the date of sale, and represents the execution creditor in so far as he had a right to bring such right, title and interest to sale in satisfaction of the decree Krishna v Bhupati, 18 M 13 In Ishan Chandra v Beni Madhab 24 C 62 (F B) it was held that an auction purchaser of the judgment-debtor's interest is a representative of the judgment debtor In delivering the judgment of the Full Bench Banerjee J observed "It is true that an execution purchaser makes his purchase not from the judgment debtor and often against his wish and he is not bound by some of the acts of the judgment debtor such as alienations made by the latter to defeat the decree, but that does not show that his rights are not derived from the judgment-debtor or that he is not a representative in interest of the judgment-debtor in any sense or for any purpose As for the cases relied upon in the judgment of Gour Sunder Lahiri v Hem Chandra Choudhury, 15 C 335, the two Privy Council decisions do not in my opinion afford any basis for the broad proposition deduced from them" By this case the cases reported in 16 C 355 and 8 W R 304 were overruled In a later Mudras case it was held by Moore J that an auction purchaser is a representative of the judgment debtor Kashi Nath v Uthumansa, 25 M 529, see also Prosonno Kumar v Kalidas 19 C 683=19 I A 166 Devar Baksh v Fatic, 26 C 254 In Gulari Lal v Madho Ram, 26 A 447, it was decided that an auction purchaser held in execution of a simple money decree against a judgment debtor is a representative of the judgment-debtor See also Dorab Ally v Abdool, 5 I A 116 (125), Sundara v Venkatararada 17 M 228, Megji v Rany 8 B H C R 169 (174), Sobhag v Bharchand 6 B 193 (202), Ganga Das v Yakub Ali, 27 C 670, Azgar Ali v Asaboddin 9 C W, N 135 Gopi v Sayani 10 C W N 240, Haradhan v Grish, 8 C L J 327, Gur Prosad v Ramlal, 21 A 20 Intiazi v Dhuman, 29 A 275, Ajodhya Roy v Hardwar, 9 C L J 485, Veyindra v Maya Nandan, 43 M 107=38 M L J 32=54 Ind Cts 209=(1919), M W N 881 (F B), Mahomed Mozuffar v Kishori 22 C 900 (919) The real test to be applied in determining the question whether the auction purchaser is to be regarded as the representative of the judgment-debtor or of the decree-holder depends upon the nature of the question raised and who the contesting party is If the question is between the judgment debtor and the auction purchaser and the interests of the two are conflicting, the auction-purchaser can in no sense be considered to be a representative of the judgment debtor Narolan v Sukhray A I R. 1928 Oudh 412 The plaintiffs and defendants, either party holding a separate decree against the same estate, had by leave purchased in execution Both parties claimed proprietary right and possession the defendants holding the latter The first of the decrees in date was the plaintiffs' for money against the representatives of the deceased owner of the property, which before then had been mortgaged to the defendants by his widow The plaintiffs obtained only the equity of redemption, their purchase having been of the right, title and interest The mortgagees, having got a decree upon their mortgage against the widow purchased at the sale in execution and defended the possession which they obtained The Privy Council held that the defendants in whose favour the decree had been made upon a bona fide mortgage without notice that the mortgagor had been only holding benami for her husband had the better title It was also further held that the owner, having in his life time authorized his wife to hold herself out as proprietor in her own right, could not have succeeded in a suit to disentitle the mortgagees without proving that they either had taken the mortgage with such notice or that they had been put upon enquiry, that the same principle applied to these plaintiffs who had purchased his right, title and interest, and that they were bound equally with him Mahomed Mozuffar v Kishori Mohun,

S 18 22 C 909=22 I A. 129, see also Ram Coomay v Macqueen, L R I, A. Sup 40=11 B L R 46=18 W R 166 (P C) It is clear from this case that an execution purchaser can be estopped by the admission of the judgment-debtor in as much as there is privity of interest between him and the judgment debtor whose interest he purchases. See Ishan Chandra v Beni Madhab, 24 C 62. Therefore an auction purchaser at the execution of a simple money decree is considered as the representative of the judgment-debtor and is bound by the admission of the former if made previous to the attachment. Vide s 21 infra see also Um opoorna v Muffer Poddar, 21 W R 148, Krishna Lal v Gangaram, 13 A 28, Ishan v Beni, 24 C 62. It appears on principle laid down in section 64 of the Civil Procedure Code that an auction purchaser even at the execution of a money decree is not bound by any admission after the date of attachment, but a purchaser at a private sale cannot object to any admission made by his vendor before the date of his purchase. But where an auction purchaser purchases the property at the execution of a mortgage decree he is not bound by any admission made by the judgment-debtor after the mortgage in as much as he is entitled to all the right, title and interest of the decree-holder, and so much of the equity of redemption which was possessed at the commencement of the suit by the judgment debtor. In an auction of realty, where the defendant bases his title and right of possession of the property upon the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage the admissions, declarations and statements of the mortgagor at a time subsequent to the execution of the mortgage are not admissible. First National Bank of Eng v Loeman, 17 O R 613. But where the declarations are made before the date of the signature of the mortgage, the mortgagee as well as the execution purchaser at such a mortgage sale is bound by the admission of the mortgagor. Boots v Beecher 78 N Y 155, Sherman v McDonald 31 Kun 378, Lala Parbhu v Mylne 14 C 401. But a purchase by a mortgagee at a sale in execution of a decree upon his mortgage of the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor, who has been estopped from asserting a title to the property as against certain parties does not place such mortgagee in a better position as regards estoppel. Poresh Nath v Anath Nath 9 C 265=9 L A. 111 on appeal from 4 C 713 see also Kishor v Mahomed, 18 C 188, Tota Ram v Hargobind, 36 A. 111, Bakshi v Liladhar, 35 A. 303, Bishambar v Parbhada, 10 A L J 112.

Persons from whom interest is derived. Statements by persons in possession of property qualifying or affecting title thereto are receivable against a party claiming through them by title subsequent thereto. Phip Et p 203. A recital in a mortgage deed is admissible in evidence as against the mortgagor as well as against those who derive title from him. Sections 18 and 21 make the recital admissible against them even as an admission. The probative value of such recital, however is a different question. Nawal Kuntar v Bakhtaur 11 Ind C 5 64=10 A L J 390. An admission against her own interest by the predecessor in title of the defendant is relevant under s 18 and 21, and though not conclusive is sufficient in itself to shift the burden of proof. Sakharan v Seaman 7 N L R 23=10 Ind. Cas 700. Where one person succeeds to the same rights of property formerly enjoyed by another, there is often such privity that the rights of the owner in such property may be affected by the statements of the latter. This rule is applicable both in respect of movable and immovable property. In either case where the successor in title claims under a former owner heir or next of kin he may be charged, subject to the limitations hereinafter mentioned with the admissions of his predecessor qualifying or limiting his rights in respect of such property. The mode of proving such admissions is laid down as has already been described. After the necessary foundation of privity is laid for them the evidence is prima facie established when an admission is proved, and there is no onus on the party using it to avail himself of the testimony of the witness who made the admission. The admissions with which the successor may be charged are of course of great variety. For example it is always admissible against the grantor to prove the declarations of the grantor while in possession of the property. It has been anticipated Jackson v Lord 1 Johns (N Y) 204=3 A L J 107. Wallace v Ludlow 2 R & G 120 (Can). In Guy v Hall 7 A L J 101 (Can) the Court observed. But, it is said, that the person who declares me offered is entirely disinterested and within the process of the Court, and therefore should himself be sworn. There would be some weight in this objection, if they were offered as the declarations of a disinterested individual in those cases where such declarations are admissible, to wit, in cases of pedigree and boundary, for then the declarations would be inadmissible, if the higher evidence, the oath of the party, could be had. In all other cases, except those of pedigree and boundary, the declarations of disinterested individuals are inadmissible, for they are nothing but hearsay. In this case, they are offered as coming from a party in estate, and therefore in law, from the party himself, for the privy completely represents him, so that the question whether the person now disinterested to declare the truth and is amenable to the process of the Court does not affect the point under consideration. It is asked, why not answer him? The answer is, the party files his declaration better. He may, from some motive, vary his statement and the party offering his evidence is alone to judge. It is true, if he be now disinterested either party may if he choose, call him as a witness." It may be stated generally that when a person takes an estate as successor to another, claiming under him, he takes such estate cum onere. The rule has often been stated that in such cases the declarations of the grantor against his title, while in possession of his premises, are always admissible, not only against him, but against those who claim under him. Harp v Harp, 136 Cal 421. It is not necessary, when the declarant is trying to call him as a witness, that his statement may be shown by a third person. Jackson v Myers, 11 Wend (N Y) 533. But the declarations of the grantor are not to be treated as admissions, and are not competent if made before his interest in the property in question was acquired. Stockwell v Myers, 11 Wend (N Y) 533, Noyes v Morril 108 Mass 396. As regards other admissions by persons from whom interest is derived held relevant Vide 13 C P L R 1 (6), 31 C 871, 10 W R 72 (73), 14 W R 28 (P C) = 5 B L R 529 = 13 M I A 438, 10 W R 89 (90), W R (F B) 20 (1862), 5 W R 268, 15 M 19, 18 W R 105, 18 M 73, 23 W R 325, 18 W R 347, 7 M H C R 13.

Admission of ancestor against heir etc. The heir is always bound by a relevant declaration of the ancestor. Pittman v Pittman 124 Ala 306, Baler v Hasell, 47 N H 479. This is a case of privies in blood. Greenl Ev § 189, Co Lit 271 (a), Cav's v Jason, 4 Peters 1 (83). The grounds upon which admissions bind those in privity with the party making them are that they are identified in interest, and of course, the rule extends no further than this identity. Where the party, by his admissions, has qualified his own right, and another claims to succeed him as his executor, or the like, he succeeds only to the right, as thus qualified, at the time when his title commenced, and the admissions are receivable in evidence against the representative in the same manner as they would have been against the party represented. Alexander v Caldwell 55 Ala 517. Thus the declarations of the ancestor that he held the land as the tenant of a third person are admissible to show the seise of that person, in an action brought by him against the heir for the land. Doe v Pettett 5 B & Ald 223, 2 Poth on Obligations by Estates p 254. Such declarations have been admitted to prove the contents of a lost deed (Allen's Lessee v Hasell 47 N H 479 = 93 Am Dec 455) to establish a boundary (Jackson v McCall 10 Johns (N Y) 377), a gift (Pritchard v Pritchard 69 Wis 373) to show that the ancestor had made a parol contract to sell if such evidence would have been admissible against him while living. Chadwick v Fournier 69 N Y 404. Stating the rule more broadly it has been held that whenever the admissions of an ancestor would be admissible against him, if living they are admissible against an heir claiming under him by descent. The principle upon which such evidence is received is that the declarant was so situated that he probably knew the truth and his interests were such that he would not make the admission to the prejudice of his title or possession unless they were true. The regard which one so situated would have to his own interest is considered sufficient security against falsehood. Chadwick v Fournier 69 N Y 404. In the same manner the admissions of a deviser are competent against the devisee, those of an intestate against his administrator and those of a testator against his executor. Broaddus v James, 13 Cal App 164. Thus in an action by an administrator

S. 18 tritor against the widow of his intestate for the conversion of property, declarations of the intestate that his tenant was to pay no rent are admissible for the defendant Mooney v Mooney, 80 Conn 116, see also Bishop of Meath v of Winchester, 3 Bm. N C 183, Maddison v Nuttall, 13 M & R 40, Carr v Mostyn 5 Ex R 369, Doe v Cole, 6 C & P 559. So also the admissions of a testator that his tenant was to pay no rent, are admissible against his executor Cox v Band, 11 N L J 105=19 Am Dec 386. And the declarations of an intestate are admissible against his administrator, or any other claiming in his right Smith v Smith, 3 Bmg N C 29, Iat v Finch, 1 Taunt, 141. A statement by the testatrix suggesting any inference as to the execution of a will would be an admission relevant against her representatives and would therefore be admissible as evidence Nana v Shanier, 3 Bm L R 465.

Life estate holder and remainder man. In applying the rule that a man's admissions are only evidence against himself and his privies, care must be taken to distinguish between the position of a tenant for life and that of a tenant in tail. A tenant for life cannot unless empowered by some statute, prejudice, by an admission the interest of a remainder man or reversioner, but a tenant in tail is regarded as representing the inheritance, and therefore, what he says or does will often be binding on the person entitled in remainder Taylor § 708. So the remainder man is bound by release of equity of redemption by a tenant in tail in possession Reynoldson v Perlins Amb 563, Pendleton v Rooth, Giff 40. It was held by then Lordships of the Privy Council in Sonilal v Kanhaiyalal, 19 Ind Cas 291=17 C W N 605=35 A 227=40 I A 74, that Hindu reversioners derived their title through the last full owner and were not bound by the acknowledgments made by life estate holders. See also Lakshmi v Venkata Rao 82 Ind Cas 1052. 86 Ind Cas 853. But by Act I of 1927 s 3 these declarations as regards acknowledgment have been made obsolete. The declarations of the tenant for life do not bound the remainder man, as there is no privity between them for a privy in estate is a successor to the same estate, not to a different estate in the same property, and the statements of the tenant for years are not admissible against the owner in fee Hill v Rodencl, 4 Walls & S (Pa) 221.

Landlord and tenant, Mortgagor and Mortgagee, etc. A similar relation of privity exists between landlord and tenant. Thus, parol declarations of a party showing a deed of real estate held by him to be void for fraud are admissible in evidence in an action of ejectment against his tenant, where such declarations were made while in possession of the property Jackson v Meyers 11 Wend (N Y) 533. When the relation of landlord and tenant is once established it attaches to all who may succeed the tenant immediately or remotely and the succeeding tenant is as much affected by the acts and acknowledgments of his predecessor as though they were his own Jackson v Davis, 5 Cow (N Y) 123. But the declarations of the tenant are not admissible to affect the title of the landlord Burr Jones § 243.

The admissions of mortgagor as against mortgagee are on the same footing as those of grantor and grantee and evidence only in so far as they affect the estate mortgaged and are limited in point of time to those declarations made before the signing of the mortgage Foot v Beerher 78 N Y 155. An admission by the surviving daughter of a member of a joint Hindu family, that the children of her deceased sister were entitled to her father's share was held to be evidence of the existence of the title before the suit Gour Lal v Mohesh 14 W R 484.

Vendor or Assignor of personalty. The same principle holds in regard to admissions made by the assignor of a personal contract or chattel, previous to the assignment, while he remained the sole proprietor and where the assignee must recover through the title of the assignor, and succeeds only to that title as it stood at the time of its transfer. In such case he is bound by the previous admissions of the assignor in disparagement of his own apparent title. But this is true only where there is an identity of interest between the assignor, and assignee and such identity is deemed to exist not only where the latter is expressly the mere agent and representative of the former, but also where the assignee has a title with actual notice of the true state of that of the assignor, is not admissible by the admissions in question, or where he has purchased a demand in good faith, or otherwise infected with circumstances of suspicion. Harrison v Alliance 1 B. & C. 45, Green v Taylor § 190, Taylor § 790 citing from Green v Taylor § 190. Thus the declarations of a former holder of a promissory note, negotiated before it was overdue, showing that it was given without consideration, though made while he held the note are not admissible against the indorsee, for, as was subsequently observed by Parke J "the right of a person, holding by a good title is not to be cut down by the acknowledgment of a former holder that he had no title." Barrough v White, 4 B. & C. 320 explained in Woolway v Rowe, 1 Ad. & El. 114 116, Shaw v Broom, 4 D. & R. 730, Beauchamp v Parry, 1 B. & Ald. 89, Hackett v Martin 8 Greenl. 77. So so far as choses in action are concerned, this is one exception to the general rule already stated. Therefore declarations of a former owner of negotiable paper are not admissible against one who purchased for value before due. Roe v Jerome, 18 Conn. 133. But with this exception the same general principle stated in this section governs in respect to choses in action and the declarations of the assignor made while he is owner are admissible against the assignee and those claiming under him. This has often been illustrated in the case of negotiable paper transferred after it became due, where the declarations of former owners have been received to show payment or rights of set-off. Roe v Jerome 18 Conn. 133. But, in an action by the indorsee of a bill or note dishonoured before it was negotiated, the declarations of the indorser made while the interest was in him are admissible in evidence for the defendant. Bayley on Bill, 302, 503, Pocock v Billings, Ry. & M. 127.

Admissions of Insolvents. The admissions of an insolvent if made after the act of insolvency may be admissible against himself but they cannot furnish evidence against another insolvent or as against the official assignees. Iachme ram v Radha, 34 C. L. J. 107=49 C. 93=66 Ind. Cas. 10. So also evidence taken in the public examination of an insolvent cannot be used as against a third party to prove or disprove a title. Jnanendra v The Official Assignee, 30 C. W. N. 316, Re Brunner, 19 Q. B. D. 572, In re Cooper 19 Ch. D. 580. Madhuran v Official Assignee, 27 C. W. N. 611.

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

In order to be a relevant admission, it is necessary to show that the person who made the statement had an interest at the time when he made the statement. Jogeswar v Alhoy, 19 C. L. J. 1=22 Ind. Cas. 714.

Where there are several defendants jointly interested in a particular matter, an admission by some of them is relevant against all the defendants. Bhika v Puan A. I. R. 1923, Lah. 123.

Statements made by persons from whom the parties to a suit have derived their interest are admissible as admissions only when the admissions are of a date prior to the date of their deriving interest. Statements made by persons in possession of property and qualifying or affecting their title thereto are receivable against the party claiming through them by title subsequent to the admission. Galslaun v Mnaa Abid Hussam 73 Ind. Cas. 428=10 C. L. J. 263.

Inadmissible

An admission made by a creditor after transferring his debt to a third person to the effect that the debt had been paid to him in part or whole before he had sold the claim is not binding upon the vendee under section 18 of the Evidence Act. Chandra Singh v Wasaua Singh 25 Ind. Cas. 141=103 P. W. R. 1914=202 P. L. R. 1914.

The statement as to the ownership of a piece of land given as boundary in a sale deed in a suit between the purchaser and a third person in which the ownership of that land so given as a boundary was in question is not an admission but it is a relevant piece of evidence as a statement against interest under s. 32 (3) of the Evidence Act. Kanyah v Beni, 34 Ind. Cas. 534.

Section 18 of the Evidence Act does not make by itself relevant the admissions made by an agent of the

S. 18.

Admissible

A purchaser is not bound by an admission made by his vendor subsequent to the purchase by him. He is not representative in interest of his vendor, though he claims his title by virtue of the purchase through him. Maung Aung v Maung Shue, 73 Ind Cas 1039 = A. I. R. 1923 Rang 51.

Statements made by accused to a Police officer are admissible as admissions against the accused under ss 17 and 18 of the Evidence Act but not in his favour. Ismuddy v Emperor, 44 C. L. J. 253 = A. I. R. 1927 Cal 17.

A statement made on oath by the accused before the Coroner at the time of the inquest is admissible in evidence at the trial as a statement made by a party to a proceeding under ss 18 and 21 of the Evidence Act. Emperor v Kammath 23 Bom. L. R. 811 = 50 B. 111 = 93 Ind Cas 690.

A statement in a case drawn up by an attorney for the opinion of a pleader is admissible in evidence as it must be regarded as a statement of the persons on whose behalf he was acting and what is said or done by him in the course of his business and within the scope of his authority is said or done by the persons on whose behalf he was acting. Chandreshwar v Bisheswar, A. I. R. 1927 Pat 61 = 5 Pat 777.

A party is bound by admission made by his counsel on questions of fact, whether the admissions be made in the course of the trial in the first Court or in the course of the hearing of the appeal before the appellate Court. Ulchi v Nallamali, A. I. R. 1928 Mad 900, Ghulam v Abdul, A. I. R. 1928 Mad 779, Nand Kishore v Ganesh, A. I. R. 1929 All 446.

The admission of a party in a Divorce proceeding unsupported by other proof should be received with utmost circumspection and caution. M. L. v W. L., A. I. R. 1928 Sind 55 = 105 Ind Cas 416.

A statement made by an agent to the effect that his principal was a bastard was admissible in evidence as an admission under section 18 of the Evidence Act. Raj Fateh Singh v Baldeo Singh, 3 Luck. 416 = 109 Ind Cas 310 = A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 233.

An admission if gratuitous, can be withdrawn at any time and therefore plaintiff's father when the plaintiff's father had already lost all rights in the property, in a suit in connection whereof the admission is made. Gulab v Tadali, 68 Ind Cas 566.

Inadmissible

A party is not bound by the statement or admission made by his Mukteem, unless it is shown to have been made within the scope of the authority conferred by the Mukteem. Sitarani v Gaya Prosad, A. I. R. 1933 P 37.

An admission in a previous suit in favour of plaintiff pre-emptor by another pre-emptor not party to present suit is not admissible in a suit between plaintiff and the present vendee. Ahmad v Jauhar, 84 Ind Cas 211 = A. I. R. 1923 Lah 16.

A party cannot be bound by admission of his pleader as to law in as much as the parties must be presumed to know what is correct law. Chandoo v Muthudhar, A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 311 = 13 O. L. J. 138 = 92 Ind Cas 197, Fateh Ali v Ahmad Din, A. I. R. 1927 Lah 284 = 100 Ind Cas 833, Panjabi v Bhagwan 81 Bom. L. R. 88 = A. I. R. 1928 Bom 89, Muthia Chetti v Muthu, A. I. R. 1927 Mad 832 = 96 M. L. W. 465 = 39 M. L. J. 240, Ulchi v Nallamali, A. I. R. 1928 Mad 90.

Recitals regarding the boundaries in a document not inter partes are statements made by third parties and cannot be admitted. Sawat Chandra v Sarala, A. I. R. 1923 Cal 63 = 100 Ind Cas 6.

An admission or even a confession of judgment by one of several defendants in a suit is no evidence against the other defendants. Narindar v M. King, A. I. R. 1928 Lah 69, Dunath v Sayan Habib, A. I. R. 1929 Lah 129.

Neither the declaration of a donor nor the declaration of a donee made in their own favour can be admitted in evidence as against the person depositing the gift. Mohammad v Motilal, A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 414.

Where a creditor comes into Court with a claim which is capable of being regarded as a stale or time-barred claim it is to his interest to make allegations which would save the claim from the bar of limitation. Having this in view, the mere fact that the statement of receipt of interest is against such a confession, though against the interest of the party making it, is of little value. Badhu Ram v. Itam hand, A I R 1928 Lah 726

Admissible

A Bawara paper signed by the Partition Deputy Collector and containing entries required by the provisions of Ch 7, is a record made in the course of official duty within the purview of s 35 Evidence Act. It would also be evidence against the proprietors under ss 18 and 13, Evidence Act because they were made in their presence. Ram sarup v. Ram naram A I R 1929 Pat 32=7 Pat 85

The Bawara Khaski paper prepared by an Amin and not signed by any gazetted officer, cannot be held to be a public document under s 35 though on proper proof, it may be evidence either under s 18 or section 13. Ram Sarup v. Ram Naram, A I R 1929 Pat 32=7 Pat 85

A recital in a mortgage bond as to the receipt of the consideration by the mortgagor is admissible as against a subsequent purchaser and if such purchaser challenges the passing of consideration, the initial onus is upon him. Jununa v. Fa dar, A I R 1929 Pat 251=10 P L T 183

A pleader has authority to admit certain facts so as to dispense with the necessity of further proof in a criminal case at the appellate stage. Dansital v. Emperor, A I R 1928 Bom 241=30 Bom L R 646

Where a certain fact was sought to be proved by the plaintiff by referring to an admission contained in a document and the defendant remained ex parte, the admission should be given effect to unless there is anything in the plaintiff's own evidence contradicting it. Gulab Rai v. Ganga Sarup, 29 P L R 633

Statements made by accused to a Police Officer are admissible as admissions against the accused under section 18 of the Evidence Act, but not in his favour. Amrudy v. Emperor 41 C L J 253= A I R 1927 Cal 17

Inadmissible

the pecuniary interest of the person making the admission cannot be regarded as of great weight. Before the Court can hold that there were those payments of interest it must be satisfied that those payments were actually made. Amrath v. Narayana A I R 1928 Mad 509

S 19

19 Statements made by persons whose position or liability

Admissions by persons whose position must be proved as against party to suit it is necessary to prove as against any party to the suit, if such statements would be relevant as against such persons in relation to such position or liability in a suit aware had taken steps to cancel it or nullify its effect, the conduct of the executant from the moment that he became admittedly aware of the existence, purport and effect of the deed is not merely a relevant fact, but a very important fact in the case, and the evidence offered by the defendant as to statements made by the executant in the interval of the execution of the deed and his death expressing the view taken by him of the deed after he had known of its existence or the action which he had conceived himself to have taken regarding it, cannot be excluded as irrelevant but is admissible under the head of admissions under sections 18, 19 and 21 or section 11 of the Evidence Act. Mir Syed v Tayyaba, 26 Ind Cas 517=1 O L J 591

Admissible

To allege in a plaint that the plaintiff landlord though entitled to the entire timber, claims only half share because the predecessors of the plaintiff had been getting only half for a long time is an admission in the defendant tenant's favour and does not amount to setting up a custom. Janaki Kuar v Usman, 63 Ind Ca 417, see also Rameshwar v Basudeba, 60 Ind Cas 521=6 P L J 127

An admission made by a person having a reversionary interest in the property at the time is evidence against another person claiming the reversionary interest under a title derived from the former. Taramani v Charu Chandra, 61 Ind Cas 334

Inadmissible

by the mother in which she was described at the heading as the wife of her husband but in the body of which she stated she had been living with the alleged father for 10 or 12 years, even if admissible is of no weight for the reason that her statement does not amount to an admission that she was living in adultery. Magbula v Ahmad Hussain 26 A 108 P C=8 C W N 241=6 Bom L R 233=31 I A 38

S 2

20 Statements made by persons to whom a party to the Admissions by persons expressly referred to by party to suit suit has expressly referred for information in reference to a matter in dispute the admissions

Illustration

The question is whether a horse sold by A to B is sound. A says to B—“Go and ask C. C knows all about it.” C's statement is an admission.

Principle—If a party, instead of expressing his belief in his own words, names another person as one whose expected utterances he approves beforehand, this amounts to an anticipatory adoption of that person's statement, and it becomes when made, the party's own. Higmore § 1070 “If” said Ellenborough L C J in Williams v Innes, 1 Camp 364 “a man refers another upon any particular business to a third person he is bound by what this third person says or does concerning it, as much as if that had been said or done by himself.” It is somewhat like the case where a man refers to a document as containing the true account of a particular matter, thereby making it evidence in regard to the particulars for which he has so vouched its correctness.

20. Brichnell v Hulse, 7 A & F 468 Richards v Morgan, 33 L J Q B 114, Wills Li p 162

Admission by persons expressly referred to by party to suit. It not infrequently happens that an informal reference is made over a disputed matter to a third person, not in the nature of a submission to arbitration, but rather is an aid to the settlement of the difference existing between the parties and to enable the parties themselves to effect a settlement on the information. In such case the party is bound by the declarations of the persons referred to in the same manner and to the same extent as if they were made by him. See Burn Jones § 263 Soloman v Herne, 2 Esp 69, Williams v Bridge 2 Strk 42, Kempland v Macaulay, Peake's Cas 65. In such a case the admissions of a third person are receivable in evidence against the party who has expressly referred another to him for information in regard to an uncertain or disputed matter. This species of admissions is well recognized, though not frequently available. In Lloyd v Willan, 1 Esp 18 the defendant proposed to pay if the plaintiff's porter would make an affidavit of the delivery of the goods. The affidavit was made. The defendant was then precluded from going into any evidence whatever on the cause on the ground of mala fides and of unfurness in proving in opponent's evidence. In Burt v Palmer, 5 Esp 140 on a demand being made from the defendant he said "you must apply to A and he will pay you." A's admission was received by the Court observing "Where a person is referred to, to settle and adjust the account or business, what he says, if it is connected with the business which is referred to him is evidence." In Daniel v Pitt 1 Camp 364 note, defendant said "If C will say that he did deliver the goods, I will pay for them." In the circumstances C's admission was held admissible. Similarly in Brook v Kent, 1 Camp (note) defendant desired the plaintiff to enquire of Jones about it. Jones being a person who had paid money Jones' statement was held admissible. In Garratt v Ball 3 Strk 160 which was in action of trover for a horse, the plaintiff had said if the defendant would take his oath that the horse was his he should keep him. The fact of the defendant's affidavit being made was received. In Hood v Reeve, 1 C & P 532 the defendant wrote, "I refer you to him thereon." Here by "him" he meant one H. Held that any thing which H said about the account was admissible. In Sydney v White, 1 M & W 430, which was a case of injury to a horse the defendant said if a miners' jury would say that the shaft where the horse was killed was his he would pay. The miners' verdict was received to charge the defendant because the jury are in the nature of an accredited agent. In R v Mallory, 13 Cox Cr 45 which was a case of knowingly receiving stolen goods by the accused, the accused referred the police to his wife for a list of the prices and dates of purchase of the goods, stating that he did not know them and the next day the wife handed the police the list in his presence. The list was received, as an admission of the prices and dates. This admission by reference brings us indeed close to the principle of award by arbitrators for though the validity of the award rests on a contractual basis yet the process is one of reference to a third person's pronouncement. Wigney § 1070. Such statements which were in the nature of awards required no trump even when in writing Tay § 701.

What questions may be referred. In the application of this principle, it matters not whether the question referred be one of law or of fact whether the persons to whom reference is made have or have not any peculiar knowledge of the subject or whether the statements of the reference be adduced in evidence in an action on contract or in action for tort. Therefore where two parties had agreed to abide by the opinion of counsel upon the construction of a Statute the party against whom a interest the opinion operated was held bound to abide in a subsequent action. Price v Hollis, 1 M & S 105, Douglas v Cooper, 3 Q B 236. On the same principle a disputed fact can be referred to a third party. Sydney v White 1 M & W 435, Taylor § 761.

Reference must be express. This rule must not be understood as giving the force of an admission to statements made by a witness as against the party who calls him. Gardner v Moutt, 10 A & E 465, R v Latchford, 6 Q B 177.

577 Bucknell v. Halse, 7 A & L 456 There must be an express reference for information in order to make the statement an admission. Thus if A says "I will pay you, if B says I owe it to you" B's statement about the matter will be an admission as against A. Cum Gr p 134. If a vendor refers a purchaser to a third person for information in regard to the property to be sold the declaration of such third person on the subject is admissible [ Gott v. Dunsmore 111 Mass. 45 (1m)] but such reference does not make the person referred to an agent for the purpose of general admission. Burr Jones § 263. The declaration is not evidence unless strictly within the subject matter in relation to which the reference is made. Dural v. Cohen 14 Wend (N. Y.) 564, Murphy v. Kullinger 8 Wall (U. S.) 480 (1m). Thus where a defendant stated that a book keeper would furnish whatever information was contained in the books the declarations of the book keeper to the effect that in his opinion certain entries in the book were false to the knowledge of the defendant, were held admissible. Lumbert v. People 76 N. Y. 220 = 32 Am. Rep. 293. Where a person refers generally to persons in the community as to the question of his general character without naming them this does not make their declarations evidence against him. Rosenburg v. Angell, 6 Mich. 503, Burr Jones § 263. By express reference a party makes the referee his accredited agent for the purpose of giving such answer. Full v. Hudson, 97 Ark. 265. If a party on motion before a Judge, uses the affidavit of another person to prove a certain fact deposed to therein, such affidavit is on any subsequent trial evidence as against him of his fact and that too though the person who made the affidavit is present in Court. Buckell v. Halse, 7 A & L 454. Doyle v. Rutlin 2 Ex. R. 675 (679). Pritchard v. Bugshaw, 11 Com. B. 459, Johnson v. Ward 6 Esp. 17. White v. Douling 8 H. L. R. 128. Id. § 764.

Death of referee. The death of the person referred to does not affect the admissibility of the testimony in that if alive he is not a necessary witness. On the reference is established the result of it is competent irrespective of the referee. McFluce v. Troubridge, 68 Hun. 28 = 22 N. Y. Supp. 674 (4m), Burr Jones § 263.

Effect of admissions by the referee. In such cases, the party is bound by the declarations of the persons referred to in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if they were made by himself. Stoman v. Henne 2 Esp. 693. Williams v. Bridges 2 Stark. 42. Kempland v. Maraulay, Peake's case.

Whether the answer of the person referred to is conclusive against the party, does not seem to have been settled. Where the plaintiff had offered to rest his claim upon the defendant's affidavit which was accordingly taken Lord Kenyon held that he was conclusively bound even though the affidavit had been false, and he added that to make such a proposition and afterwards to recede from it was mala fides but that besides that, it might be turned to very improper purposes, such as to entrap the witness, to find out how far the party's case would go in support of his case. Greenleaf § 184, cited by Taylor in great part, vide Taylor § 765, Stevens v. Thacker, Peake's Case, 187. Lloyd v. Willan 1 Esp. 178, Delesline v. Greenland 1 Bay. 155. Bellon v. Pettiman T. Ry. 153. In Garnett v. Ball 3 Stark. 160 Lord Tenterden held that such admissions are not conclusive. "And certainly the opinion of Lord Tenterden indicated by what fell from him in this case more perfectly harmonizes with other parts of the law especially as it is offered to any further extension of the doctrine of estoppels, which sometimes precludes the investigation of truth. The purposes of justice and policy are sufficiently answered by throwing the burden of proof on the opposing party as in the case of an award and holding him bound unless he impeaches the test referred to by clear proof of fraud or mistake." Greenleaf Et. § 184, cited in Taylor § 765, Whitehead v. Tattersall, 1 A. & E. 191. The statements of referee under the Indian Evidence Act are not conclusive (vide section 31) but if the person making the reference can be shown to have caused another person to believe something to act upon that belief, he may as against that person be estopped under section 115 from denying it. Cum Gr p 134. Where parties to a proceeding agree to abide by the statement of a third person it is a statement within the meaning of section 26. It is true that ordinarily mere admissions are not conclusive as is provided in 20. section 31, but admissions of this kind must be taken to be admissions made in a suit by the nominee of a party thereto. Such admissions, therefore, are as conclusive and effectual as admissions made by the parties in their written or oral pleadings. The effect is to prevent each party from resiling from the statement made by such a nominee. Gordhan v Husam, A I R 1927 All 659=103 Ind Cas 34, Himanchal Singh v Jatwar Singh, A I R 1924 All 570=46 A 710=10 Ind Cas 16. Muhammad v Imtiaz, A W N (1898) 200, Keshoram v Puri, 71 Ind Cas 761, China v Venkata 12 M 625.

Admission by interpreters. To render the declarations of a person referred to equivalent to a party's own admission, it is not necessary that the reference should have been made by express words, but it will suffice if the party by his conduct has tacitly evidenced an intention to rely on the statements is correct. Therefore, where a party, on being questioned by means of an interpreter, gave his answers through the same medium, it has been held that the language of the interpreter should be considered as that of the party, and that consequently it might be proved by any person who heard it, without calling the interpreter himself. Taylor § 783, Fabrigas v Mostyn 20 How St Tr 122 123. An interpreter is the accredited agent of the one employing him, and the employment is admissible as original evidence and is in no sense hearsay, nor is it necessary to call the interpreter to prove such statements or that his interpretation was correct. Camerlin v Palmer 10 Allen (Mass) 539. A wife's statement while acting as interpreter for her husband may be proved. Schuttler v Williams 1 West L J (Ohio) 319. An interpreter who is selected by two persons speaking different languages as the medium of their communication with each other is regarded as their joint agent for that purpose, and the statements of what they say in the presence of each other are regarded as the statement of the persons themselves and like any other admission may be shown by the testimony of any person who heard them without calling the interpreter as a witness. Kelly v Ning Yung Ben Assn 2 Cal App 460 (Am). In Commonwealth v Fox, 157 Mass 393 (Am) Knoulton J said that when two persons who speak different languages and who cannot understand each other, converse through an interpreter, they adopt a mode of communication in which they assume that the interpreter is trustworthy and make his language presumptively their own. Each acts upon the theory that the interpretation is correct. Each implicitly agrees that his language may be received through the interpreter. Interpretation under such circumstances is prima facie to be deemed correct. One who acts as interpreter during a trial is not the agent of the parties, but the officer of the Court. Scheerer v Haiber, 36 Ind 536 (Am). His statements given on a former trial cannot be admitted as evidence unless his absence is satisfactorily explained. People v Ah Yute 56 Cal 119 (Am).

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

The plaintiff and the defendant in a suit signed a written statement which stated 'it has been settled between the parties that G shall hear over whole affair and that we shall accept any statement that he may make before the Court.' G made a statement on oath against the plaintiff. Held that the statement of G must be taken to be an admission made in the suit by a nominee of a party thereto which was effectual as an admission by the party himself. Himachal v Jatwar 80 Ind Cas 16=A I R 1924 All 570 see also Gordhan v Husam A I R 1927 All 659=103 Ind Cas 34. Sita ram v Puri 47 A 921. Muhammad v Imtiaz, A W N (1898) 200.

Inadmissible

A party to a litigation is not bound by the statement of the mukhtar of the opposite side who was cross-examined by the parties. Mt Srimati Ausanbati v Ram Jas 4 U P L R 9 (Rev)

21 Admissions are relevant and may be proved as against S 21.

Proof of admissions against persons making them and by or on their behalf

the person who makes them, or his representative in interest, but they cannot be proved by or on behalf of the person who makes them or by his representative in interest, except in the following cases —

(1) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead, it would be relevant as between third persons under section 32

(2) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, when it consists of a statement of the existence of any state of mind or body, relevant or in issue, made at or about the time when such state of mind or body existed, and is accompanied by conduct rendering its falsehood improbable

(3) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission

Illustrations

(a) The question between A and B is, whether a certain deed is or is not forged. A affirms that it is genuine, B that it is forged.

A may prove a statement by B that the deed is genuine, and B may prove a statement by A that the deed is forged, but A cannot prove a statement by himself that the deed is genuine nor can B prove a statement by himself that the deed is forged.

(b) A, the captain of a ship, is tried for casting her away.

Evidence is given to show that the ship was taken out of her proper course.

A produces a book kept by him in the ordinary course of his business showing observations alleged to have been taken by him from day to day and indicating that the ship was not taken out of her proper course. A may prove these statements because they would be admissible between third parties, if he were dead under section 32, clause (2).

(c) A is accused of a crime committed by him at Calcutta.

He produces a letter written by himself and dated at Lahore on that day and bearing the Lahore post mark of that day.

The statement in the date of the letter is admissible, because if A were dead, it would be admissible under section 32 clause (2).

(d) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen.

He offers to prove that he refused to sell them below their value.

A may prove these statements though they are admissions because they are explanatory of conduct influenced by facts in issue.

(e) A is accused of fraudulently having in his possession counterfeit coin which he knew to be counterfeit.

He offers to prove that he asked a skilful person to examine the coin as he doubted whether it was counterfeit or not, and that that person did examine it and told him it was genuine.

A may prove these facts for the reasons stated in the last preceding illustration.

Principle. The rule of law with respect to self regarding evidence is that when in the self serving form it is not in general receivable but that in the self harming form it is with few exceptions receivable and is usually considered proof of a very satisfactory kind. Best Ev. § 519. 'It would be manifestly unsafe to allow a person to make admissions or statements in his own favour which should affect his adversary where we have a sufficient safe guard for admitting statements against interest from the assurance that according to

S. 21 ordinary experience people do not speak untruths against themselves. Illustration (a) gives a double example showing how the same statements may be used against but not for the interest of the party making them." Admission Under this section admission is receivable in favour of the party making it in the three cases mentioned in this section. These are considered as exceptions to general rule that self regarding evidence is not receivable in general when in favour of the party making it. The principle under which the admissions under the three heads are receivable is discussed under each topic (vide infra).

Admission against the person making it. The primary rule in section 21 is that an admission is relevant and may be proved as against the person who makes it or his representative in interest. Gulab v. Fadli, 68 Ind. Cr. 20. Every admission which a party makes is evidence against him. Lochman v. Bhagathi, 90 Ind. Cas. 497. Young Myn v. Ma Tha, U B R (1897-1901) Vol II 377. An admission by the accused may be proved in a criminal case just as much as an admission by the defendant in a civil suit under section 21 of the Evidence Act. But an admission under that section is one made by the party against whom it is tendered before the proceedings in which it is sought to be given in evidence. It does not refer to pleadings in the case or to an admission contained in such pleadings. Jerima v. Jas, 12 Ind. Cas. 961=10 M L T 506=(1911) 2 M W N 576. A statement whereby a man charges himself with the receipt of sums of money is in most cases an admission against his interest. Appa Lu v. Nanyappa, 20 Ind. Cas. 792=11 M L T 117=25 M L J 329. Though an admission of guilt made by a defendant to a police officer is not receivable in evidence as a confession as against him if he is on his trial as an accused person yet it is acceptable in a civil suit as an admission under section 21, 14 and 21 of the Evidence Act. Ishendras v. Ram Labhaya, 32 Ind. Cas. 18-106 P R 191. A mere admission cannot create a title which was not created though it would have been binding upon the person making it if the title admitted had really existed. Hannohan v. Kailash Chandra, 17 Ind. Cas. 983. A member of a Hindu joint family, whose house was at Lucknow practised as a pleader at Haridwar and made considerable savings from his professional earnings. He eventually became managing member but was all along entrusted with the management of the joint family property in Haridwar District. Throughout he kept the accounts of the joint property and of his own earnings in one account book. He purchased sundry properties out of the fund so entered in the name of his son in law B and stated that he made such purchases to provide for B. Held that as regards the purchases in the name of B, A's statement that they were made to provide for B was a statement against his own interest and as such admissible in evidence. Sunay Narain v. Kantlal, 40 Ind. Cas. 988=21 C W N 1065=20 O C 211=19 Bom L R 737=15 A L J 684. A written agreement by a tenant to pay the Shantiam or Chanduram is admissible as an admission of the evidence of custom unless the tenant explains away the admission and its effect can not be discounted or neutralised on the ground that the admission is recent. Kumarappa v. Manojula, 41 Ind. Cas. 699=23 M L J 44=4 M L J 104=41 M 374=1918 M W N 350 (F B). An oral confession by an accused person not being open to exception under section 24, 25 or 26 of the Evidence Act is as an admission by an accused person a relevant fact, and may be proved at his trial under section 21 and therefore such a confession made to a Magistrate is relevant and may be proved by the evidence of the Magistrate. Fero v. Emperor, 45 Ind. Cas. 843=11 P R 1913 Cr.=19 Cr L J 631. Per Heyward J in Emperor v. Manti, 54 Ind. Cas. 465=21 Bom L P 106=21 Cr L J 65 contra Ier Shah J in Ind. The statement of an accused person as a witness in a previous case is admissible against him under the section to prove admission of relevant fact made by him in that statement. Emperor v. Banar, 77 Ind. Cas. 829=22 A L J 144=46 A 251=25 Cr L J 177. An entry in the body of the bond that no further account is out taken against the debtor does not bind the creditor in any way and is not an admission by the debtor in his own interest. Gurdilla v. Nahu Bish, A I R 1926 Lah 391=93 Ind. Cas. 996. An admission made in a Court of law no doubt carries with it great weight but it is not conclusive and binding on the party making it unless it operates as an estoppel. The burden of proof however rests upon the party and after him his heirs to show that the admissions were untrue Bar Deoman v Rabishankar, A I R 1929 Bom 147=31 Bom L R 109, see also Hiranand v Umad, 1923 Lab 608 Admissions and statements made by a soldier before a military Court of enquiry are admissible in evidence against him on a criminal charge in a Civil Court R v Colpus, (1917) 1 K B 574=86 L J K B 459

The rule laid down in section 21 of the Evidence Act, must be taken subject to the special provisions regarding confessions and statements of accused persons enacted in sections 24, 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act, and sections 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Were it otherwise, confessions and statements of accused persons not recorded in accordance with the requirements of sections 164 and 364 of the Code might be proved as admissions by the accused, and the wholesome provisions elaborately laid down in these two sections practically reduced to a nullity Queen Empress v Bhauab, 2 C W N 702. An oral confession by an accused person not being open to exception under section 24, 25 or 26 of the Evidence Act is as an admission by an accused person a relevant fact and may be proved at his trial under section 21. Such a confession made to a Magistrate is relevant and may be proved by the evidence of the Magistrate Feroz v Emperor, 45 Ind Cas 843=11 P R 1918 Cr=19 Cr L J 651, see also Shree Singh v Empress, 21 P R 1831 Cr Buta v Empress, 52 P R 1887 Cr, Rajlumar v Emperor 9 Pat L 1 449=A I R 1928 Pat 473, Madan Guru v Emperor, 4 Pat L T 381=73 Ind Cas 963=24 Cr L J 723, R v Croux, 81 J P 288 (Eng). Statements of an accused cannot be used against his co-accused Emperor v Albar, 34 B 599. An admission made by D to a Police officer may be accepted in a civil case against him Bishen v Ram, 106 P R 1915, Ganpati v Emperor, 8 Ind Cas 1181.

The general principle of law is that any statement made by a man on oath may be used as evidence against him as an admission. The only principle on which an exception can really be founded, is the principle that a man is not to incriminate himself. But this is a principle which is not open to an insolvent who, once he had been adjudicated, is bound because he has been adjudicated, to give information touching his conduct dealings and affairs, even though he incriminates himself thereby. In re Joseph Perry 54 Ind Cas 478=46 C 906=21 Cr L J 78. An admission by a party is of considerable weight in evidence against him and may, if unexplained, be even decisive Sunlaracharyya v Manali 51 Ind Cas 876, In Singh v Harnam, 1 Lah 137=56 Ind Cas 191, But see Rai Deo Mani v Rai Shanai, A I R 1929 Bom 147=31 Bom L R 109, where it is said that it is not conclusive unless it operates as an estoppel.

A return filed by a zaminder in the Collectors office under section 48 of Ben Reg VIII of 1793 and section 15(8) of Ben Reg VII of 1793 does not fall within the purview of section 35 of the Evidence Act. The legal effect of such a document or the weight to be attached to it would have to be determined by the application of such tests as have to be applied to all other statements. If it is sought to be used as an admission against the party making it, its probative value must be considerable. Where it is sought to be used in favour of the party who made it, it must fulfil the requirements of section 21(1) read with section 32 of the Evidence Act, or it must be relevant otherwise than as an admission. In either case its value would be slight Tinal Chandra v Prosanna 78 Ind Cas 719=28 C W N 679=39 C L J 389.

Representative in interest Whenever the admissions of an ancestor would be admissible against him if living they are admissible against an heir claiming under him by descent, and are receivable in evidence against him in the same manner as they would have been receivable against the ancestor Green Et § 189 Davis v Nelson 66 Iowa 715. Whenever the admissions of one having or claiming title to real estate would thus be competent against him, they are competent against persons subsequently deriving title through or from him Burr Jones § 242. An admission against her own interest by the predecessor in title of the defendant is relevant under ss 16 and 21 of the Evidence Act and though not conclusive is sufficient by itself to shift the burden of proof Sakharam v Shriram, 7 V L R 23=10 Ind Cas 700. The term "representative in interest" is wider than he

21. term "legal representative." The words "legal representative" in section 21 C P C cannot be taken to include any person who does not in law represent the estate of the deceased (Chathakelam v Gornul 17 M 186, see also Badri Narain v Jai Kishen 16 A 183 (187). It has already been stated that privies are of three kinds—namely (1) privies in blood, such as ancestors and heirs (Wells v Bush 69 L J 759) (2) privies in law, such as executor of a testator or administrator to an intestate, and (3) privies in estate or interest as vendor and purchaser grantor and grantee, donor and donee lessor and lessee etc (Melbourne v Brougham 9 App Cas 307) Philip 4th Ed p 219. The term "representative in interest" is rather vague (Jshan v Beni 24 C 62 72) but it seems to include most of the privies in blood, law or estate. Vide notes under section 15 Woodroffe Evidence p 25. So a party is bound by the admissions of his father and other ancestors (Woolway v Rauce 1 A & T 114 Doe v Pittell 5 B & A 223, Madison v Nuttall 6 Bing 226 Meath v Manchester 3 Bing N C 183, Smith v Smith 3 Bing N C 29. So also a statement by a party's predecessors in interest is admissible against him Doe v Lalin 7 C & P 191. But such admission is not binding on the successor if the statement is made after he has parted with his interest Doe v Webber 1 A & L 740, Pocock v Billing 2 Bing 269. An auction purchaser in a money decree is a representative of the judgment debtor Rum Coomai v McQueen 18 W R 166=1 A Sup Vol 40, Unnopoorna Dass v Muffu Poddai 21 W R 118, Jshan v Beni 24 C 67, Kishore Lal v Ganga Ram 13 A 28, Harbhagat v Narayan 1924 Nag 208 Mahomed v Kishori 22 C 909 Buhi v Jyotishore 16 A 483, Sundara v Venkataradu 17 M 228, but see contra Manchar v Sumitra 19 A 86. A purchaser at an execution sale is in privity with, and the representative in interest of the judgment debtor within the meaning of section 21 of the Evidence Act so as to be bound by his admissions. Where therefore in a mortgage suit the mortgagor admits a prior mortgage the purchaser of the property in execution of the mortgage decree is bound by the prior mortgage Harbhagat v Narayan 78 Ind Cas 338. When the execution of a mortgage deed is admitted and the deed contains a definite admission by the executants regarding the passing of consideration the admission is evidence against the mortgagors and their representatives in interest under section 21 of the Evidence Act Podam Kunai v Nahu Singh 39 Ind Cas 63=1 P L W 413 Rudha Nath v Jodoonath 7 W R 441, Gadian v Veerappa 26 Ind Cas 899=28 M L J 92 Bulal v Bihari 76 Ind Cas 810 Balshu v Laladhar 35 A 353. A recital as to the passing of consideration in a mortgage bond is admissible in evidence against the transferee of the mortgagor under section 21 of the Evidence Act Naram Singh v Bhukha Ram 21 Ind Cas 841 Nawal Kumari v Balhaurai 17 Ind Cas 644=10 A L J 390 Bihari v Mahidum 18 Ind Cas 744=11 A L J 221=35 A 104. An admission made by one reversioner is not admissible against another reversioner since the latter does not derive title through the former Golab v Fudali 68 Ind Cas 568.

Admission cannot be proved in favour of the party making it. Admissions are not admitted as to testimony of the declarant in respect of any facts in issue. State v Willis 71 Conn 293. A charge was driven against M's carriage whereby M's thigh was broken. On the trial of an action by M against P for recovery of damages for injury to a surgeon who was called as a witness for M recovered £600 as damages against P. S afterwards brought an action against M for his services as a surgeon in attending M after his thigh was broken. The counsel of S proposed to go into evidence to show what S stated as to the amount of his charge for attendance on M in giving his evidence on the trial of the action by M against P. S's statement at the former trial was held to be inadmissible for him though it would have been admissible against him. Sutherland v McLaughlin Car & M 429, Cum Ft 137. Such statements are rejected because if a man might bring evidence to prove statements made by himself favourable to his own case nothing would be easier than for a party who had a weak case to strengthen it by making such statements beforehand or by emboldening witnesses to speak to having heard him make such statements. A party in issue of

5. 21. examination are the most important. In these the municipal laws of most countries have added a fourth, which consists in rendering false testimony an offence cognizable by penal justice. Best § 35. So in case of a statement of a witness who is publicly examined these are the guarantees which satisfy the Court that they are speaking the truth. So said Ab Plumer (Inter V C) while arguing in Lord Melville's Trial, 29 How St Tr 747. "It is a universal principle of the law of evidence that what one man says, does, or writes behind the back of another cannot be received in any criminal Court to affect anybody except, him. Every individual who stands upon his trial in a British Court of Justice has a clear right to have the witness brought in front of the Court, to be submitted to his cross-examination, that he may have an opportunity of interrogating him respecting all the particulars of the fact." We have seen that this rule is not violated when an admission is received against a party making it. But the same principle is not available when the admission made by a party is received in his favour.

Under section 32 the declarations or statements of a person not called a witness are admissible under two distinct principles namely (1) the general principle of necessity or unavailability and (2) the principle of circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness (vide s 32, and notes thereunder). The necessity principle implies that instead of losing the benefit of the evidence entirely it is better to accept it untested. But unless there be some guarantee for its trustworthiness it is not at all desirable to place the evidence before the jury in as much as a relevant fact must have some probative force. So in eight cases where such statements are made admissible by section 32, the circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness has been shown. Clause (1) lays down that an admission by a person may be proved by or in behalf of the person making it, when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead it would be relevant as between third persons under section 32. So these statements are admissible as much as there is circumstantial guarantee of their trustworthiness. Therefore these admissions even when admitted in favour of a party making them are not devoid of probative force. Illustrations (b) and (c) refer to this clause. In both these cases there is circumstantial guarantee of their trustworthiness and as such there is no harm in placing such evidence before the jury. There is no apprehension of the Jurors being misled by such evidence nor by taking such evidence the time of the Court will be unnecessarily wasted. So on principle such admission is always admissible. Section 34 of the Indian Evidence Act enacts that entries in books of account regularly kept in the course of business shall be relevant evidence though not sufficient of themselves to charge any person with liability. Jaswant v Sheo Naram 16 A 157 (161) = 21 I A 6. The admission of such entries on behalf of a person making them is an exception to the general rule laid down in section 21 of the Act. But where the documents are not proved to be account books regularly kept in the course of business their admission is illegal, because proof of the entries therein would be in violation of section 21 of the Evidence Act. Mukundiam v Dayaram 23 Ind Cas 893 = 10 N L R 44. The entries which a man makes in the regular course of his business are presumably truthful, and though they happen to be in his favour, he ought not to be debarred from proving them as part of his case. In like manner statements against proprietary interest, expressions of opinion as to a public right, custom or matter of public interest, made as provided in section 32 (4) expressions of opinion as described in section 32 (5) are provable as admissions on behalf of the persons making them, as well against them. Cun E 137. Entries of payments made by a creditor in the sama dast of book belonging to the debtor fall within the language and intention of section 32 of the Indian Evidence Act and although they are admissions in his own favour they are not excluded by section 21 of the Act. Jellubai v Pullubai 14 Bom L R 1020. A landlord purchased the holding of his tenant at a sale in execution of a decree for money obtained by him against the tenants. In the sale certificate the area of the holding was 20 bighas in all. Held, that the statement by the landlord that the tenant held under him 20 bighas of land was not a statement in his own favour but one against his proprietary interest, within the meaning of section 32 of the Evidence Act and covered by sub-clause (1) of section 21 of the Act, and that the entry in the sale certificate might be used in evidence in favour of the land lord Manil v Jagadindra 24 Ind Cas 283 Statements as to the date of birth of a person contained in his deposition and in affidavits filed by him are admissible in evidence under section 21 (1) read with section 32 (5) of the Evidence Act, if made by a person having special means of knowledge whether personal or hearsay Rama nathan v Murugappa, 33 Ind Cas 969=3 L W 216=(1916) M W N 208 When the plaintiffs sought to establish their pedigree by proving inter alia that A and B were brothers, held that a statement to that effect made by one of the plaintiffs, in a deposition given long ago before the controversy in suit arose, was admissible in evidence Jadu Nath v Mahendra, 12 C W N 266 A statement about the rent payable for a holding, as given in a sale certificate, obtained by a purchaser of the holding at a sale in execution of a decree against the former tenant must be taken to be in the nature of an admission by him or his predecessor in title, and it cannot be used as evidence as it does not come under any of the exceptions to section 21 Ramani v Mahanath 31 C 380 So also a recital in a writ of attachment is not admissible in favour of maker of the statement and as against persons who claim under an independent title Moheerruddin v Sumera, 15 Ind Cas 540 On the question whether the Court below should or should not, have received in evidence the testimony of a witness who had been informed by the plaintiff before the adjudication that documents relating to land had then been deposited with him as security by the person who was afterwards insolvent and who was the first defendant in this suit, it was held that this being an admission by a party within section 21 of the Act, could not be used as evidence in the plaintiff's favour A B Miller v Baboo Madho Das 19 A 77 P C A landlord purchased the holding of his tenant at a sale in the execution of a decree for money obtained by him against the tenant In the sale certificate the area of the holding was 20 bighas in all The statement by the landlord that the tenant held under him 20 bighas of land was not a statement in his own favour but one against his proprietary interest, within the meaning of section 32 of the Evidence Act and covered by sub-clause (1) of section 21 of the Act, the entry as such in the sale certificate may be used in evidence in favour of the landlord Manik Biswas v Jagadindra 24 Ind Cas 283, see also Tara v Prosonna, 78 Ind Cas 719=28 C W N 679=39 C L J 389

Road cess return whether admissible in favour of a party making it Section 95 of the Bengal Cess Act of 1880 provides that every return filed by or on behalf of any person in pursuance of the provisions of the Statute shall be admissible in evidence against such person but shall not be admissible in his favour Lachmi Prosad v Jag Mohan 18 C L J 633 (636) But the provisions of section 95 of the Bengal Cess Act are not exhaustive They merely limit the application of section 21 of the Evidence Act and exclude road cess returns which are sought to be admitted in favour of the person by or on behalf of whom they have been filed Mohendra v Ajodhya 15 Ind Cas 284 Promode v Binayah, 27 C W N 548 Seudeo v Ajodhya 39 C 1005 Section 95 does not lay down expressly or by implication that such a return is not admissible in evidence against any person other than the maker thereof In fact a road-cess return may be admissible as against persons other than the one who has made the return Chaltho v Jhara 39 C 995 A cess-return filed under the Road Cess Act can be used in evidence by a stranger against another Imrit v Sirdhari 15 C L J 7, Sheikh Imtar v Dina Nath, 43 C L J 425 The road cess return is also inadmissible in favour of any person who claims through him or may be deemed to be his representative in interest Lachmi v Jag Mohan, 18 C L J 633 (636); but see Ramprosad v Lala Sham Narain, 6 C L J 22, where it is ruled that section 95 of the Road Cess Act has no application to the case where the parties who tendered road cess returns in evidence were not the persons who filed them in pursuance of the provisions of the Act Road cess returns are admissible in evidence against the person by or on behalf of whom they are filed Hem Chandra v Kali Prosonno, 30 C 1033 P C =8 C W N 1 Swarnamoy v Sourendra 89 Ind. Cas 747=42 C L J 14 The effect of section 95 of the Cess Act is to prohibit the admissibility of return when

21. tendered in favour of filing it, and it has, and was intended to have no other effect whatever. Provided that such a return does not oppose against section 95, the return may be adduced in evidence if otherwise it is admissible under the Indian Evidence Act. Per Page J in Sheikh Imtaz v Dina Nath, 43 C L J 125. A road cess return signed by one of the plaintiff's vendors and the defendant, was filed by the plaintiff's vendors. It consists of two parts, in one of which the joint properties of the plaintiff's vendor and the defendant were set out and in the other the properties belonging to the defendant alone were mentioned. In a suit by the plaintiff for some land as being the joint property of his vendors and the defendant, the defendant put in the road cess return in order to disprove plaintiff's allegation, by showing that the lands were included in the second part. Held that the road-cess return was evidence against the plaintiff claiming through his vendor, and it is none the less evidence merely because by admitting it as evidence against the plaintiff it becomes evidence in favour of the defendant. Bennadhab v Dina Bandhu, 3 C W N 343. Section 95 is no bar to the reception of the road cess return in evidence if it is admissible in evidence under the provisions of the Evidence Act. Hence a road cess return filed by a Hindu widow is admissible in favour of the reversionary heir under section 32 clause (3) of the Evidence Act. Lachmi v Jag Mohan, 18 C L J 633. But section 95 is absolute in its terms in declaring that a road cess return shall not be admissible in favour of the person or on whose behalf it was filed, and it is immaterial whether it was put in evidence directly to prove an admission or indirectly for some other purpose. See Narain v Hara Varan, A I R 1926 Cal 727-92 Ind Cas 104.

Clause (2) Clause (2) has received no illustration in the Act, probably because it has already been sufficiently treated in section 14, under the head of 'facts', showing the existence of any state of bodily feeling, and illustrations (l) and (m) thereto which together with the notes thereon should be here consulted. Section 14 merely declares that such facts are relevant. The present clause shows that such facts or statements may be proved on behalf of the person making them notwithstanding the general rule that person cannot make evidence for themselves by what they choose to say." See Et 152

Principle It is one of the natural concomitants of illness and of physical injuries for the sick or injured person to complain of pain and distress. I think such evidence is admissible from the necessity of the case. Denis J in Cabell v Murphy, 11 N Y 419 (Am). Similarly in State v Davidson, 30 Vt 383 (Am). Redfield C J said "The declarations of the party are received to show the extent of latent injuries upon the person, upon the general ground that such injuries are incapable of being shown in any other mode except by such declarations as to their effect." So declarations of present suffering are admitted from necessity. It would be impossible in most cases to know of the existence or extent or character of pain without them. The unstudied expressions of daily life, or the statement on which a medical adviser is expected to act, which if feigned which should have skill enough to subject to some test of truth, stand on a footing which removes them in general from suspicion. Grand Rapids v Huntley, 38 Mich 543. The principle of necessity of admitting such admission in favour of the party is abundantly clear from the cases cited above. To guarantee the trustworthiness of such admission this section adds the following words "and is accompanied by conduct rendering its falsehood improbable. The general requirement (as the preceding quotation indicates) is merely that the statement shall be spontaneous and natural expressions of the pain or suffering. In some cases it seems to be required that the person be otherwise in an apparent condition of bodily ailment of which his statements are the natural product. Per Valuel L J Co v Wiles 100 Ind 103 (Am), McLaurin v Rugby, 80 Ia 313 (Am). Wigmore §§ 1718 1719

Kinds of fact narrated—statements of past events and conditions included. It is obvious that both of the general principles involved—that of necessity and of circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness—require the exclusion of statements dealing with certain kinds of facts. Statements of the external circumstances causing the injury, namely, the events leading up to it, the immediate cause of it (e.g. that the person was knocked down by a horse), or the nature of the injury (e.g. that a leg was broken), do not satisfy the necessity principle, because they do not relate to an internal state, and thus other evidence is presumably available, moreover they have not the usual guarantee of trustworthiness, because they are not naturally called forth by the present pain or suffering (though this latter reason is rarely noticed) Higmore § 1722 In Gardner Peerage Case, Le Marchant's Rep 170 (174) the woman's statement to her physician attending her at the time of her child birth of the date of the conception was excluded Similarly in Amys v Barton, (1912) 1 K B 40, which was a case of injury to a workman, his statement that a wasp stung him etc, was held inadmissible So 'the statement must be confined to contemporaneous symptoms, and nothing in the nature of the narrative is admissible as to who caused them or how they were caused' R v Gloster, 16 Cox Cr 471 (473) The rule is thus laid down by Mitchell J in Cleland C C & J R Co v Newell, 104 Ind 269 (Am) 'Expressions of present existing pain and of its locality are admitted upon the ground of necessity as being the only means of determining whether pain or suffering is endured by another The rule is not to be extended beyond the necessity upon which it is founded' Strictly speaking past sufferings, pains or symptoms are not excluded by the necessity principle but on the principle of guarantee of trustworthiness, for they are not naturally caused by the existing pain or other symptoms but being deliberate accounts of past occurrences, are no better than statements of any other past events Expressions as to the duration of an illness are in effect statements of past feelings and symptoms, and should on principle as well as on the working of this section be excluded in the same way Higmore § 1722

Clause (3) "Clause (3) provides that a fact which is relevant under section 8, clause (1) and section 11, clause (1), as inconsistent with a relevant fact, e.g. the establishment of a prisoner's innocence by circumstances incompatible with the facts on which his guilt has been sought to be established, or under section 14, as evidence of intention, knowledge, or good faith, shall not be rejected simply because it assumes the form of admission by the party who made it." Illustrations (d) and (e) sufficiently exemplify this clause Nort Fr 152 So also a self serving admission when relevant under some other section, is relevant in favour of the party So spontaneous declarations (vide notes under section, 6) can be used in favour of the party making it, when it is relevant under some other section So also the recitals in a deed, admissible as a transaction by which a right was asserted, etc., would be admissible under section 13, though they will be excluded as admissions Huronoth v Nittanund, 10 B L R 263 So also care must likewise be taken not to confound self serving evidence with res gestae The language of a party accompanying net which is evidence in itself, may form part of the res gestae and be receivable as such Best Fr § 520 In Bibi Gyannessa v Musamat Mobarat Unnessa, 2 C W N 91=25 C 210 where the defendants Nos 2 and 4 sold a jote to defendant No 1 which they obtained under a partition, and subsequently colluded with the plaintiff and denied the said partition as well as the sale, the statement previously made by them which went to show that there had been a partition and they had changed their attitude could be proved against them and the statements were admissible evidence under sections 21 (3) and 11 (2) of the Evidence Act An admission may be proved on behalf of the person making it under section 21 clause (3) of the Evidence Act if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission In the case of a house said to have been built over half a century ago direct evidence as to who constructed it may not be easily available, and old documents mentioning by whom it was built may be admissible in evidence under section 11 clause (2) and section 13, clause (h) of the Evidence Act for what they are worth Bughunoth v Brindeshwari I R 5 A. 231=82 Ind Cas. 582=1 I R 1924 All 526 A statement made by a person as to the circumstances under which he executed a document considerable time after the execution cannot be admitted to prove the facts stated by him Vara samma v Billa Kenu 31 Ind Cas 513=25 M L J 637 The plaintiff brought a suit against his son for recovery of possession of land which stood in the name of the latter alleging that the same was ac-

S 21. quired benami by him. The defendant alleged that the land was purchased for him by his paternal grand father. The plaintiff answered that his father had died before the property was acquired, and produced a mortgage bond executed by him long before the date of purchase in which he described his father as dealer. It was held that the statement made by the plaintiff in the mortgage bond to which the defendant was not a party, might be admissible in evidence as against the latter either under section 21 clause (3) read with section 11 clause (2) of the Evidence Act, or under section 32 clause (5) or under section 137 of the Act. Sayeruddin v Samiruddin 72 Ind Cas 935 = A I R 1923 Cal 348. Self serving statements are inadmissible where they make relevant facts highly probable or improbable or they are res gestae. Hirshar Prasad v Kesho Prasad A I R 1925 Pat 63.

Party can show mistake or fraud. "There is no doubt that the express admissions of a party to the suit or admission, implied from his conduct are evidence—and strong evidence—against him, but we think that he is at liberty to prove that such admissions were mistaken or were untrue, and that he is not estopped or concluded by them unless another person has been induced by them to alter this condition in such a case the party is estopped from disputing their truth with respect to that person (and their claiming under him) and that transaction, but as to third persons he is not bound. It is a well established rule of law that estoppels bind parties and privies, not strangers." Per Bailey J in Heane v Rogers, 9 B & C 586. The person against whom an admission is proved is at liberty to show that it was mistaken or untrue. When an admission is duly proved and the person against whom it is proved does not satisfy the Court that it was mistaken or untrue there is nothing in the Evidence Act, and there is no general principle or rule of law, to prevent the Court from deciding the case in accordance with it. Maug Mhya v Ma Tha, U B R (1897) 1901 Vol II, 377. An erroneous admission does not bind the person making such admission. Mangru v Shivanand, A I R 1923 All 575. When in a petition there is an inadvertent misstatement as to the nature of certain property, it is open to both sides to give evidence as to whether the person who made this admission was or was not acquainted with the incidents of this property when he made the statement. Dinabandhu v Mannulal, 52 Ind Cas 443. Statements made by a party at a previous proceeding without any definite knowledge of his rights and liabilities do not operate as an estoppel. Where the previous proceedings were compromised at an early stage without any decision of Court the party can however in a subsequent suit that the statement previously made was untrue. Mahomed v Per Mahomed, 65 Ind Cas 368 = A I R 1922 Nag 67.

Statements Post Litem Motam. If the analogies of other exceptions be followed [vide clause (5) section 32] all statements made post litem motam are to be rejected as untrustworthy. But it is questionable whether an absolute exclusion based on this distinction is either just or necessary. Hignore § 1721.

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

Admissible

Where in a suit for mortgage, the defendant admits the execution of the document he also admits the receipt of the consideration. Seth Maganmal v Dabborlal 24 N L R 40 = 47 C L J 222 = 107 Ind Cas 113 = A I R 1923 P C 39.

The fact that a co defendant took part in certain batuara proceedings in which the land in dispute was measured and a map was prepared in which the

Inadmissible

Under section 21 a Court is bound to receive in evidence admissions of a party but no such rule applies to denials. Janji v Emperor 49 A 437 = 25 A L J 327 = A I R 1927 All 841.

A statement in an order for delivery of possession as to the rent payable in respect of the land is inadmissible in evidence in a suit between the landlord and the tenant in which the rent payable is in dispute. Chandri Mohan v Shri plaintiff's title was admitted is admissible in evidence though it is not had in as an admission on the other defendants who claim under an independent title Ibidi Hamid v. Brojen 90 Ind Cis 643 = A I R (1926) CIL 296

Admissible

Where a trying Magistrate examined the accused under s 342 Cr Pro Code prematurely at a time where no evidence sufficient to connect them with the crime, with the commission of which they are charged had been recorded against them, it was held that although the Magistrate was wrong in examining the accused under section 342 Criminal Procedure Code when it was impossible that they could have been questioned for the purpose of enabling them to explain any circumstances appearing in evidence against them still their statements actually made, cannot if apparently free and voluntarily given be rejected as inadmissible in evidence on account of this irregularity of procedure, and that prima facie admissions the statements were relevant under section 21 of the Evidence Act Queen Empress v. Narayan Rat Un Cr C 679 = Cr Rg 45 of 1893

The statements of an accused person, from which his guilt may be inferred are admissions and may be proved under section 21 Raj Mal v. Empress 3 P R 1890 Cr M Mehro v. Crown, 8 P W R 1907 Cr = 5 Cr L J 182, Habib v. King Emperor 8 O C 395 = 2 Cr L J 811, Sya P v. King Emperor 5 Cr L J 300

Inadmissible

Idem A I R 1926 Cal 415 = 87 Ind Cis 512

An admission by an agent in favour of his principal cannot be relied on by the latter to prove his title to property Umda Balsh v. Jafar Ali & Lal L J 437

A respondent's admission in a divorce suit is not evidence against a co-respondent Gordon v. Gordon, 38 P R 1870

A party's income tax paper may be used against him but not in his favour Shah v. Enamun, 9 W R 275

A party cannot sue in his own favour an admission by his predecessor or in his own interest Bijoy v. Katipada 20 Ind Cis 78 = 17 C W N 1013 = 18 C L J 247

- 22 Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under the rules hereinafter contained, or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question

When oral admissions as to contents of documents are relevant

Origin of the rule In evidencing the contents of a document it has sometimes been thought that the opponent's admissions—not least his oral admissions—should not be received until the original had been accounted for as lost or otherwise unavailable. This view from time to time advanced in early English rulings was definitely repudiated in Slatterie v. Pooley 6 M & W 669 in a forceful opinion by Brown P. In that case in admitting such admission Parke B said: "We cannot doubt that the defendant's own declarations were admissible in evidence to prove the identity of the document for which that mentioned in the schedule although such admission involved the content of a written instrument not produced until he was Lord Wm

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

22

who was not present at the argument entirely concurs. Indeed, if such evidence were inadmissible, the difficulties thrown in the way of almost every trial would be nearly insuperable. The reason why such oral statements are admissible, without notice to produce or accounting for the absence of the written instrument is that they are not open to the same objection that belongs to oral evidence from other sources, where the written evidence might have been produced for such evidence is excluded from the presumption of its untruth, arising from the very nature of the case where better evidence is withheld, whereas what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so. The propriety of the rule however, has been much questioned on the ground that, though what a party himself admits has reasonably been presumed to be true, there is no such presumption in favour of the truthfulness by which such admission may be proved. Per Channell B in Sanders v. Kinnell, 1 F. & F. 356 (357), Cum Ex 140. "I can not subscribe to what has been said by Parle B in that case (Slatterie v. Pooley) said Pennycuik C. J. in Laurens v. Quale, 8 Ir. L.R. 382, 385. The doctrine there laid down is a most dangerous proposition. By it a man might be deprived of an estate of £10,000 per annum derived from his ancestors by regular family deeds and conveyances, by producing a witness or by one or two conspirators who might be got to swear they heard the defendant say he had conveyed away his interest therein by deed had mortgaged or otherwise incumbered it, and thus by this facility so given, the most open door would be given to fraud and a man might be stripped of his estate through this invitation to fraud and dishonesty. It is said, it is evidence against the person himself who made this admission and that there is no danger of untruth in what a man admits against himself. Supposing the admission to be proved is there no danger of mistake or misconception of the terms of a written instrument? It may be long and difficult, one part or clause may explain or qualify another, an unprofessional or ignorant man may be led to believe it may be so and so, whereas the real and true meaning may be the very reverse or something very different. But produce the deed or writing, littera scripta manet. On which side is the security and why depart from the rule that if you want to give evidence of the contents of a writing, the writing itself must be produced? Is there no danger of untruth or misrepresentation when a party admits against the party making the admission? That is the ground put by Parle B and in which I can not agree, when I know by experience how easy it is to fabricate admissions, and how impossible to come prepared to detect falsehood. Why are writings prepared at all but to prevent mistakes and misrepresentations? And why, having taken that precaution, with such writing in hand and capable of being produced is the same to be laid aside and inferior and less satisfactory evidence resorted to? It has also been criticised by Maule J. in Boulton v. Peplon 9 C.B. 493, 501, where he said. It (Slatterie v. Pooley) is certainly not satisfactory in its reasons. What the party himself says is not before the jury but only the witness representations of what he says.

The proposition that production should be dispensed with says Prof. Wigmore where the opponent has already admitted the contents of a document to be as alleged is a plausible one and its denial seems at first sight a mere insistence on an unnecessary formality. Of the two arguments here offered in opposition the first amounts to little. The possibility of error in an opponent's own understanding of the terms of a document is not great and so if a document exists it can do little harm, because the opponent's extrajudicial admission is merely some evidence and not conclusive. He may still prove the contents if he knows them or may have the document produced. But the second argument—that it is easy to fabricate alleged oral admissions—the real and serious objection to the doctrine. It may be conceded that the opponent's admission of contents is satisfactory evidence, if he made such admission. But did he make it? Here we are left to choose between conflicting oral testimonies, and it does not seem undesirable to leave the matter to depend on the credibility of this or the other witness when an inspection of the document itself would speedily settle the controversy. The proper solution of the dilemma would be this. When an admission of the contents is refused to let production be dispensed with but if the fact of the admission is bona fide disputed by the opponent and so is testimony to that effect is put in by him then let production be required or the document's absence be accounted for' Wigmore § 1255 S 22.

English law In the English Courts parol admissions have been received to prove a debt although the debt was based on a written agreement (Neukhall v Holt 6 M & W 662=9 L J Ex 293), to prove the contents of a deed (Slatterie v Pooley 6 M & W 664=10 L J Ex 8, King v Cole, 2 Ex 632) or the terms of a written lease (Howard v Smith, 3 M & G 254=10 L J C P 245), the embezzlement cases, the prisoner's election to office and the terms of his official bond (Reg v Welch, 1 Den C C 199), and the acts and conduct of the overseers of the poor in one parish have been held competent as constituting an admission of the contents of a certain certificate which was required to settle a paper in such parish Reg v Basingstole, 14 Q B 611, Burr Jones Et § 207 Taylor however in his work on Evidence questions the correctness of the reasoning on which the English doctrine rests, and calls attention to the fact that the Courts of Ireland where the subject has undergone much discussion have disapproved the English rule Taylor on Et 10th Ed § 411 Best gives the same account of the conflict but winds up an excellent support of the English opinion by saying "The value of self harming evidence, like that of every sort of evidence is for the jury, its admissibility is a question of law—the test of which is, to see if the evidence tendered is in its nature original and proximate, and it will scarcely be contended that the self harming statements of all kinds do not fulfil both those conditions. It may, indeed, be objected that they usually come in a parol or verbal shape, and that parol evidence is inferior to written, but that is a maxim which has been much misunderstood. The contents of a document could most unquestionably be proved by a chain of circumstantial evidence composed of acts, every link in which might be established by parol or verbal testimony' Best on Et 11th Ed 512

Scope of the section This section departs from the English law as laid down in Slatterie v Pooley, 6 M & W 664. The views expressed in Laules v Queale 8 Ir L R 382 have been adopted in the present Act. Oral admissions as to contents of a document save and except as provided in this section are excluded under the present section. Written admissions as to such matters, are however admissible under section 65 clause (b) Cum Et 140. So when the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest, such written admission is admissible. Section 65 clause (b). But written admission mentioned here must be distinguished from written admission made under section 58. This section does not exclude admissions which the parties or their agents agree to admit at the hearing under section 58. So a party's admission as to the contents of a document not made in the pleadings but in a deposition is a secondary evidence, and cannot supply the place of document itself. Sheikh Ibrahim v Parbatu Hari 8 B H C R A C J 163 (165). Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are admissible when the party is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under sections 65 and 66 of the Act. Such admissions are also admissible when the genuineness of the document produced is in question. "Where the question is" says Norton "not what are the contents of a document, but whether the document itself is genuine—that is, in the handwriting of the party whose writing or signature is alleged to be, evidence may of course be given to prove or disprove the forgery. This may be affected in a variety of ways by the party, (sections 21, 70) by an attesting witness, (section 68), by the oath of witness acquainted with the handwriting, by experts (section 45), or by comparison of handwriting, (section 73) or unless the genuineness of the document produced is in question. The effect of the last clause of this section seems to be that if such a document is produced, the admission of the parties to it that it is or is not genuine, may be received. Nort Et 153

Oral admissions of contents In Sheo Pershad v Juggernath, 10 I A 79=13 C L R 271, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy

- 23 Council observed "They consider that it is a very dangerous thing to rest a judgment upon verbal admissions of a sum due without very clear evidence especially when there are other means of proving the case, if a true one." See also Raghubar Dayal v. Bhulaya Lal, 12 C. 69 (79). When money is lent on terms contained in a promissory note given at the time of the loan, the lender sues to recover the money so lent must prove the terms by the promissory note. If for any reason such as the absence of a proper stamp, the promissory note is not admissible in evidence, the plaintiff is not entitled to set up a case independent of the note. Parshotam Narain v. Fatey Singh, 26 A. 178 (182) = A. W. N. (1903) 217. See also Albar v. Sheikh Khan, 7 C. 26, Radha Kanta v. Albar, 8 C. 721. In the first named case Adman Jin 26 A. at p. 193. It appears to me that decisions which have held otherwise ignore the provisions of sections 91, 65 and 22 of the Evidence Act, and I do not think that it can be denied that these decisions condone and encourage evasion of the Stamp Act, see also Damodar Jagannath v. Itmaran 12 B. 443.

Rule in the United States. In the United States there is also a conflict on this point. In that country the conflict is irreconcilable. Some cases unqualifiedly approve the English rule others emphatically dissent. On the whole there is an overwhelming weight of authority in favour of the English rule. In the leading case sustaining the English doctrine the plaintiff was allowed to prove the admissions of the defendant to the effect that he had prosecuted to final judgment a former action against the defendant. The Court used the following language: "The admissions of a party are not open to the same objection which belongs to parol evidence from other source. A party's own statements and admissions are in all cases, admissible in evidence against him though such statements and admissions may involve what must necessarily be contained in some writing, deed or record. Thus the statements of a party that certain land had been conveyed might be admitted though the conveyance must be by recorded deed. The general principle as to the production of written evidence as the best evidence does not apply to the admission of parties as what a party admits against himself may be verifiably taken to be true. The weight and value to the statements and admissions will vary according to the circumstances and must be determined by the jury." Smith v. Palmer 6 C. 48 (M. & C.) 513. So the admissions of a party have been received to prove the contents of letters and of a deed (Loomis v. Wadhams & Gray (M. & C.) 511), the existence of a partnership based on a written contract (Edward v. Traub 62 Pa. 374), the terms of a letter in writing (Taylor v. Pelt 21 Gratt. (Va.) 11), and the contents of a telegram (Williams v. Bluehill 37 M. & S. 682). On the other hand there have been numerous decisions which have maintained the view that there is no principle in the Law of Evidence authorizing the substitution of the declarations of a party even as against himself for record or written evidence. They point out the danger of mistake or misapprehension as to the terms of written evidence and also the danger of falsehood or fabrication and the difficulty of detection and the danger of following record titles to be lost by testimony so uncertain in character. They lay down the rule that admissions are competent only where parol evidence would be admissible to establish the same fact. Halliberton v. Fletcher 22 Ark. 433, Buens v. McIlroy 11 Ark. 23, Flannery v. Newton, 8 Gr. 306, Burn Jones § 209.

- 23 In civil cases no admission is relevant, if it is made either upon an express condition that evidence of it is not to be given, or under circumstances from which the Court can infer that the parties agreed together that evidence of it should not be given.

Explanation.—Nothing in this section shall be taken to exempt any barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil from giving evidence of any matter of which he may be compelled to give S 23 evidence under section 126

Principle of exclusion Admissions covered by this section are excluded on principles which are expressed differently by different Courts. But on examination it would be found that the explanations are more or less unsatisfactory. It would be better to examine the cases and to try to find out whether the principles laid down in them are really satisfactory.

Principle analogous to that of privileged communication When an admission has been made to the opposite side on the understanding that it is not to be used against the party making it it is privileged. Halls Ex 2nd Ed 295. Such admissions are commonly made in the course of negotiations between the parties or their agents with a view to the compromise of the claim which afterwards becomes the subject of litigation and the usual way by which the person making the admission secures the privilege is by stipulating that the communications are to be 'without prejudice'. Ibid. In Dickinson v Dickinson 9 Met C 471 (474) (4th) Denby J said 'The rule of evidence exclude to some extent and under certain circumstances, the declarations and admissions of a party. Thus the more fully to protect the rights of parties litigating, all their communications with counsel are held to be privileged. Evidence of this character has always been excluded and the rule has been so broad as to exclude all admissions thus made. Another instance of exclusion of testimony is that of an offer of one party to another to pay a sum of money or other valuable consideration, with a view to a compromise of the matter in controversy. It must be permitted to men to endeavour to buy their peace without being prejudiced by a rejection of their offers. Hence evidence of such offers or proposals is irrelevant and they are not to be taken as admissions of the legal liability of the party making them. But here a distinction exists between the cases of an offer to pay money to settle a controversy and an admission of particular facts, connected with the case made by a party pending a negotiation for a compromise. The more convenient rule might have been that which is applicable to communications between client and attorney excluding as testimony everything communicated in this relation which rule if applied here would exclude every admission made during the interview which was had for such compromise. To some extent this rule was attempted to be introduced excluding all admissions of the parties even admissions of particular facts when it appeared that they were expressly stated at the time to be made without prejudice. But the exception was soon introduced that the evidence was competent where it was the admission of a collateral fact. This theory is consistent enough with general theory of privileged communication (vide s 126 129) namely, that expeditions and extrajudicial settlements are to be encouraged and that privacy of communication is necessary in order to encourage them, and there is indeed a privilege for a party's statements to an official conciliator. In policy however, it may be doubted whether the recognition of such a privilege is in fact necessary in order to foster private settlement or whether in fact the good that might be done by the diminution of litigation under such a privilege would be greater than the justice that is effected by the free use of the evidence made available though denying the privilege. At any rate, whatever the arguments of policy the further and vital objection remains that the supposed privilege does not fit the rule of law as it is everywhere accepted and applied. Wigmore § 1061 (a)

Theory on the analogy of the notion of contract Another theory resting apparently on some notion of contract is that in express reservation of secrecy (e.g. by the words 'without prejudice') assimilates the offer to a contractual offer so that if the terms are not accepted the offer is null and can have no evidential effect. In Re River Steamer Co L R 6 Ch App 822 (832) Wells J said:

If a man says in his letter 'without prejudice' that is tantamount to saying, 'I make you an offer which you may accept or not, as you like, but if you do not accept it the having made it is to have no effect at all. It appears to me not on the ground of bad faith, but on the construction of the document what when a man says in his letter it is to be without prejudice, he cannot be held to have entered into any contract by it if the offer contained in it is not accepted. Similarly Lindley L J in Waller v Wilsher, L R 23 Q B D 330, said "What is the meaning of the words 'without prejudice'? I think they mean without prejudice to the position of the writer of the letter if the terms he proposes are not accepted. If the terms proposed in the letter are accepted, a complete contract is established, and the letter, although written without prejudice, operates to alter the old state of things and to establish a new one." This theory is not tenable on two distinct grounds namely (1) that admissions contained in an unaccepted offer if treated as admissions may nonetheless be used for its evidential value and (2) that offers of compromise which do not contain the express words 'without prejudice', may still be inadmissible in evidence and conversely' Wigmore § 1061 (b)

23

Theory of Exclusion based on public policy Confidential overtures of pacification, and any other offers or propositions between litigating parties expressly or impliedly made without prejudice, are excluded on grounds of public policy Cory v Bretton, 4 C & P 162, Per Tindal C J, Herley v Thatcher 8 C & P 388, Taylor § 795. For without this protective rule, it would often be difficult to take steps towards an amicable compromise or adjustment and as Lord Mansfield has observed, all men must be permitted to lay their peace without prejudice to them should the offer not succeed, such offer being made to stop litigation without regard to the question whether anything is due or not. Taylor § 795. "The essence of an offer to compromise," Bayley J in Thomson v Austen, 2 Drol & Ry 358, 361, is that the party making the offer is willing to submit to a sacrifice and to make a concession. "Money paid upon a complaint made," 313 Cottenham L C J in Tenant v Hamilton, 5 Cl & F 133, "paid merely to purchase peace is not proof that the demand is well founded" that would be no evidence of the damage, if money paid to buy peace and to stop a complaint. It is very often a wise thing however unfounded a complaint may be for parties to pay a sum of money in order to quiet the party making the complaint. "Another class of matter of which proof is not allowed consists of statements and admissions made without prejudice. Such statements are invariably made in the course of negotiation for settlement of disputes. It is considered necessary to allow the parties to speak somewhat freely in attempting settlements and to disclose their case to each other to some extent. But it is clear that the necessary freedom of discussion could not well take place if all the statements or admissions made could be given in evidence after the negotiations for settlement had failed." Cockle C J in Ev 53. "It is of great consequence that parties should be unfettered by correspondence entered into upon express understanding that it is to be without prejudice. And it would be hard indeed to hold that a letter which is stated to be written without prejudice is admissible in evidence because the same terms are not adopted in reply. When used in the letter containing the offer the words 'without prejudice' must cover the whole correspondence." Per Tindal C J in Paddock v Forrester 3 Scott N R 176 = 3 M & G 903. "It is of utmost importance that parties should have opportunity of free communication without prejudice." Per Collman J in Ibid. "The rule referred to is founded upon public policy and with a view of encouraging and facilitating the settlement of legal controversies by compromise which object is supposed to be obstructed by the fear entertained by litigants that such a negotiation may be converted into a trap to inveigle the unwary into hazardous admissions. The law therefore excludes such admissions as appear to have been made tentatively and hypothetically, but admits those only which concede the existence of a fact." White v Old Dominion S S Co 102 N Y 661 (Am). "Such communication made with a view to an amicable arrangement ought to be held very sacred, if parties were to be afterwards prejudiced by their efforts to compromise it would be impossible to attempt any amicable arrangement of difference." Per Sir John Romilly in Hoghton v Hoghton 15 Benv 278. Similarly Harrington v Lincoln 1 Gray 563 567 Thomas J said "Peace is of so much worth that a reasonable man may well be presumed to seek after it even at the cost of his strict right and by an abatement from his just claim. The offer which a man makes to purchase it is to be taken, not as his judgment of it."

he should receive at the end of litigation, but what he is willing to receive and avoid it. If the plaintiff had made the offer of compromise in open town meeting, proof of it would have been excluded.

By this theory, the offer is excluded because, as a matter of interpretation and inference, it does not signify an admission at all. There is no concession of claim to be found in it, expressly or by implication. Higmore § 1061 (c).

True reason of the exclusion. "The reason why a mere offer of money or other thing by way of compromise is not to be evidence against him who makes it, is very plain and easily understood,—such an offer neither admits nor ascertains any debt, and is no more than saying that so much will be given to be rid of the controversy." Per Richardson C J in Sanborn v. Nelson, 4 H N 501 509. Similarly in Hartford Bridge Co v. Granger 4 Conn 142 148 Hosmer C J said: "The law on this subject has often been misconceived, and it is time that it should be firmly established. It is never the intendment of the law to shut out the truth, but to repel any inference which may arise from a proposition made, not with design to admit the existence of a fact, but merely to buy one's peace. If an admission, however, is made, because it is a fact the evidence to prove it is competent, whatever motive may have prompted to the declaration. In illustration of this remark it may be observed, that if A offer to B ten pounds, in satisfaction of his claim of an hundred pound—merely to prevent a suit, or purchase tranquillity this implies no admission that any sum is due and therefore, testimony to prove the fact must be rejected, because it evinces nothing concerning the merits of the controversy. But if A admits a particular item in an account, or any other fact, meaning to make the admission as being true, this is good evidence, although the object of the conversation was to compromise an existing controversy. The question to be considered is, what was the view and intention of the party in making the admission, whether it was to concede a fact hypothetically in order to effect a settlement or to declare a fact really to exist. There is no point of honour guarded by the Court, nor exclusion of evidence lest it should deter from a free conversation. But testimony of admissions or declarations taking facts for granted, not because they are true, but because good policy constrains the temporary yielding of them to effectuate a greater good is not admissible, truth being the object of evidence. 'The preliminary question always is' says Doe C J in Colburn v. Groton, 66 N H 151, 156 'not merely whether an admission of a fact was made during a settlement or negotiation but whether a statement or act was intended to be an admission. It is a question, not of time or circumstances, but of intention. So it is apparent that the occasion of the utterance is not decisive, that is, it may or may not have been accompanied by a reservation or an injunction of secrecy and it may or may not have occurred during negotiations for a settlement or a compromise. What is important is the form of the statement, whether it is hypothetical or absolute. If, making all implications from the context and the circumstances, the statement assumes the adversary's claim to be well grounded for the mere purpose of discussing a settlement which will avoid litigation, then nothing is actually admitted in any true sense and therefore the party making it is in none the worse condition for having omitted the phrase without prejudice nor for having offered the full amount of the claim without any pretence of compromise. If on the other hand, the statement is absolute, so far as appears, it is not saved by any exhibitive phrase, nor by its occurrence in the course of compromise negotiations, or in other words, a concession which is hypothetical only can never be treated as an assertion representing the party's actual belief and therefore cannot be an admission and conversely, a conditional assertion is receivable without any regard to the circumstances which accompany it. Higmore § 1061. See also Cory v. Betton 4 C & P 462 where Tindal C J said "It is clearly a conditional statement."

Scope of the section.—This section has application only in civil cases. It is not extended to criminal cases (vide section 29 infra). An admission made to a stranger, under whatever terms as to secrecy is not protected by the law from disclosure. McCorquodale v. Bell (1876) 1 C P D 471 (476), Wheeler v. Le Marchant (1881) 17 Ch D 675 (681, 682), Hills Fr 298. But an offer by a

23. party either verbal or in writing, expressly stated on the understanding that it is not to be used against the party making it is not admissible in evidence. Wallace v. Smith 1 M & W 119. So an offer to compromise, might be very well made without restriction as to confidence. Ibid. So an offer to pay money by way of compromise and with a view to lay peace is not evidence of admission by way of admission. Coy v. Becton 10 C P 162. Gregory v. Howard 3 F P 113. Waddridge v. Kennon 1 L J 113. Turner v. Fulton 2 L J 171. Harris v. Lambton 2 Vern 747. Parson v. Benson 1 P Wins 190. In re Dantrey (1893) 2 Q B 116 the question was whether a written notice sent by a debtor to one of his creditors that he had signed a paper and was about to sign and pay part of his debt though expressed to be written without prejudice was admissible in evidence to prove an act of bankruptcy upon the hearing of a bankruptcy petition. In admitting the written notice Loughran Williams J said 'In our opinion the rule which excludes a document marked "without prejudice" has no application unless some person in dispute or negotiation with another and terms are offered for the settlement of the dispute or negotiation and it is not to us that the Judge must necessarily be entitled to look at the document in order to determine whether the condition under which alone the rule applies exists. The rule is a rule adopted to enable disputant without prejudice to engage in discussion for the purpose of arriving at terms of peace and unless there is a dispute or negotiation and an offer the rule has no application. It seems to us that the Judge must be entitled to look at the document to determine whether the document does contain an offer of terms. Moreover we think that the rule has no application to a document which in its nature may prejudice the person to whom it is addressed. It may be that the words "without prejudice" are intended to mean without prejudice to the writer if the offer is rejected but in our opinion the writer is not entitled to make this reservation in respect of a document which from its character may prejudice the person to whom it is addressed if he should reject the offer and for this reason also we think the Judge is entitled to look at the document to determine its character.' See also Gray v. Baynton 21 Sol Jour 61. But now the question is whether the same rule applies in India also. Such a question arose in a Bombay case but it was left undecided by the Appellate Court. Madhubhai v. Gulabhai 23 B 177. In that case the defendant pleaded limitation. In reply the plaintiff relied on an acknowledgment of the debt by the defendant. The alleged acknowledgment was written on a post card sent by the defendant by the plaintiff. It was in Gujarati and was as follows:— 'I was bound to send Rs 30 according to my randa (fixed time) but on account of the receipt of the intelligence of the death of my father I have not been able to fulfil my promise. But now, on my obligations being over I will positively pay Rs 30.' Shet Veruany. Your Sir should not entertain my anxiety whatever in respect thereof. As far as there is life in me. This is indeed my earnest wish. After this God will be done. Therefore I will positively pay Rs 30.' The post card held that it was, therefore, inadmissible in evidence and consequently that the plaintiff's claim was barred and they dismissed the suit. On appeal the rule was discharged on the ground that even if the post card were admissible in evidence it did not amount to an acknowledgment of the debt claimed by the plaintiff which was therefore barred by limitation. Candy J however in delivering his judgment made the following observations at p 180 'I doubt whether the post card was inadmissible in evidence. To exclude it from evidence it would be necessary to hold that the word "without prejudice" amounted to an express condition that the card should not be used in evidence against the writer. In England apparently the card would have been admissible. The remark of Faughan J in re Dantrey Ex parte Hall supra which the Subordinate Judge in the Court of first instance quoted are not as the Subordinate Judge supposed obiter dicta. They state the fact that the rule which excludes a document marked without prejudice has no application unless some person in dispute or negotiation with another and terms are offered for the settlement of the dispute or negotiation. That rule is to be found in many cases.

"Probably a person making a demand for the first time cannot prevent his demand being proved at the trial by stating that it is made without prejudice for until the claim is not admitted there is no dispute, and the rule is intended only to enable negotiations to be entered into to settle an existing dispute." Powell 293. A letter which is marked 'without prejudice' but which contains threats to infringe a patent right if the terms be not accepted, can be admitted in evidence to prove threat. Kurtz v Spence, 58 L T 438=57 L J Ch 233. In this connection Ab Chitty relates an anecdote of a young attorney who has been carrying on a correspondence with a young lady, in which he had always, as he thought expressed himself with great caution. Finding, however that he did not perform what he had led the lady to believe that he would, she brought an action for breach of promise of marriage against him. When his letters were produced on the trial, it appeared that he had always concluded—this without prejudice, from yours faithfully C D. The Judge facetiously left it to the jury to determine whether these concluding words, being from an attorney, did not mean that he did not intend any prejudices to the lady and the jury found accordingly. Law and Lawyers Vol II, Wigmore, § 1061, see also Hicks v Thompson, reported in the Times of the 19th January, 1857 and cited in Woodroffe's Evidence Act p 253. In Walbridge v Kennison 1 Esp 143 during a negotiation for settlement, the defendant being asked as to his hand writing on a bill admitted that it was his. Lord Kenyon admitted this for that purpose saying "any admission obtained while a treaty was depending, on the faith of it" was inadmissible, yet the indenture of the hand writing stood on a different foundation it was in no way connected with the merits of the cause and which was capable of being easily proved by other means." For the purpose of negotiation if correspondence be opened between the parties a letter written without prejudice prevents it being read at the trial (Paddock v Forrester 3 Man & G 903), it prevents also the reply to it (Inre Harris, 44 L J Bkcy 33) and indeed, all the rest of the correspondence being read (Paddock v Forrester, supra, Walker v Wilsher 23 Q B D 355). And a letter so headed has even been held to cover letters which had already passed, where the writer clearly expressed his will that the whole of the correspondence should be privileged. Pearcock v Harper, 26 W R 109, Oliver v Nautilus Steamship Co (1903) 2 K B 639, Powell 293. The same rule is applicable in the case of conversations. Unless there be a clear break between the conversation which is clearly without prejudice and subsequent conversation, no admission of a party in the latter part of the conversation can be given in evidence. Thompson v Austen, 2 Dowl & Ry 361. Correspondence marked "without prejudice" can be seen by the Judge only with the consent of the parties. Walker v Wilsher 23 Q B D 337. Such letters are not admissible even for awarding costs. Ibid. They are only available to the Court for seeing whether there are marked "without prejudice." Inre Daintrey (1893) 2 Q B 116, Pearcock v Harper, 26 W R 109. The evidence as to negotiations of compromise and the statements made during such negotiations are generally without prejudice. It is ordinarily against public policy to admit such evidence and statements. A conviction based on such admissions should be set aside. Bhanyan v King Emperor 11 C W N 26 N. see also Abbas v Pedda 25 C 736. In a dispute between two parties letters and negotiations between their respective solicitors which are written or declared to be without prejudice are inadmissible in evidence not only against the parties themselves but also against the solicitors. La Roche v Armstrong (1922) 1 K B 485=91 L J K B 342=126 L T 699.

The rule under consideration does not apply, where admissions are made not under condition of their being without prejudice (Wallace v Small, 1 M & M 416) or where an agreement, though purporting to be a compromise, has been finally concluded (as, where it has been signed by the parties and executed). Froggell v Leveley 9 Pr 122 123. see also Meagan v Alimuddin, 20 C. W N 1217.

In Healey v Thatcher 9 C & P 383 Gurney B excluded a letter beginning with "without prejudice" and offering, to accept satisfaction. See also Paddock v Forrester 3 Man & Gr 903 (919). In Stone v Foxall 15 B & C 388 Romilly M R excluded "offers made without prejudice" as being merely an attempt to convert offers of compromise into admissions. See also Williams v Thomas,

23 2 D & S 29, 37 See also the observations of Lord St Leonards in Jordan v Money, 5 H L C 215, where he said "When an attorney goes to an adverse party with a view to a compromise or to an action you must look with very great care at his evidence of what then occurred" Fildes 7th Ed 363, also a statement made to the opponent's attorney with the object of obtaining a compromise is not admissible in evidence Jordan v Sheridan, 2 C & K 24

In cases where a party wronged has a choice of civil or criminal remedy and where accordingly it is held lawful to enter into a compromise of the criminal liability (Ken v Leeman 6 Q B 308 321, 9 Q B 395, Fisher v Apolinaris Water Co [1875] 10 Ch 297) there seems no reason why admissions should not be privileged on the same principle as in purely civil cases as above explained Will Es 300, see also Bhanya v King Emperor, 11 C W N 26 N, Abbas v Pedda, 25 C 736

An offer of compromise the essence of which is that the party making it is willing to submit to a sacrifice, or to make a concession is rejected though nothing at the time was expressly said respecting its confidential character only if it clearly appears to have been made on the faith of a pending treaty into which the party was led by the confidence of an arrangement being effected" Mahabir Singh v Dhupoo Singh, 20 W R 172 Mr Justice Mookherjee commenting on the above passage said "In the absence, however of any express or strictly implied restrictions as to confidence, an offer of compromise is clearly admissible and may be material as some evidence of liability, although as has been said it may not be proper to enquire into the exact terms offered, as such an offer might have been made for the sake of purchasing peace and without any intention to admit liability to the extent of the claim" Mosyan v Alimudin 44 C 130=20 C W N 1217=25 C L J 42

Facts admitted before the arbitrators Facts admitted before arbitrators can be proved by them Gregory v Howard, 3 Esp 113 The plaintiff said to the witness "he was so anxious to get out of the law that he would refer the question in dispute to the witness as arbitrator" and asked him to tell this to the defendant, to get him to compromise at the same time admitting the receipt of money on account, held, on the fact "not to have originated in any desire to compromise and therefore to be admissible" Thomson v Austin 2 Dowd & R 358 An admission before an arbitrator is admissible in evidence although it is free for the Court dealing with the facts to attach whatever weight it thinks proper to such admission The rule enunciated in section 23 of the Evidence Act does not apply to such admission Punjab Singh v Ramantow 52 Ind Cas 348=4 Pat L J 676=(1920) Pat 52

Under circumstances from which the Court can infer, etc This section as originally drafted contained the words infer that it was the intention of the parties that for the words infer that the parties agreed together that in England there has been some difference of judicial opinion as to whether admissions whether express or implied from the offer of concessions are privileged by the mere fact that they have been made in the course of negotiations for a settlement For the privilege vide Jordan v Sheridan (1846) 2 C & K 24 against the privilege vide Nicholson v Smith (1822) 3 St 128 Hallace v Small (1830) M & M 446 An intermediate position was taken by Kenyon C 1 in Turner v Railton, (1796) 1 Esp 474 see also Gregory v Howard (1800) 3 Esp 113 The true view says Williams Wills 'would seem to be that they are not privileged unless it can be implied from the language or conduct of the parties that they were not intended to be disclosed but that this inference will frequently be drawn almost as a matter of course from the nature and circumstance of the case' Wills 7th 299 This difficulty is further more obviated by the word used in the section

Explanation The explanation refers to the obligation on the part of Barristers and others to answer questions as to professional communications made to them in furtherance of a criminal purpose or as to any fact observed showing the commission of a crime or fraud since the commencement of their employment Cun Es 141

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES

S. 24.

Admissible

Admissions to a person to whom the parties went for compromise are not inadmissible in evidence unless there was an express agreement that the evidence of the statements was not to be given Firm Bulaki Ram v Bhagat Ram, A. I. R. 1926 Lah 548=95 Ind Cts 363

An admission before arbitrators is admissible in evidence although it is for the Court dealing with the facts to attach whatever weight it thinks proper to such an admission Punjab Singh v Ramantur, 52 Ind Cts 348

Admission made by the tenant defendant before the pleader of the plaintiff landlord, to whom one of the defendants went before the suit for compromise is admissible in evidence in the absence of any express or strongly implied condition that evidence of the same would not be given Meagan v Alimuddin Meagan, 20 C W N 1217=44 C 130=34 I A 571

Inadmissible

The Court is precluded from making use of the admissions in a deed of compromise which was entered into and subsequently set aside on the ground that the agent of one of the parties was not empowered to enter into it Ilahia v Vakhani, 83 P R 1877

Where after a notification for the compulsory acquisition of land negotiations are started with the owner of the property by the Government expressly 'without prejudice' evidence of these offers is not admissible in an appeal by the owner from an award as to the price made by the District Judge Rauzor v Secretary of State A I R 1926 Lah 509=92 Ind Cts 319

24 A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant

Confession caused by inducement, threat, or promise, when irrelevant in criminal proceeding in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat, or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority, and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court, to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him

Confession—meaning of It has already been stated that confessions are merely one species of admissions, namely, that species which consists in a direct acknowledgment of guilt in a criminal charge. The acknowledgment must be in express words by the accused in a criminal case, of the truth of the guilty fact charged or some essential part of it Wignmore § 821. So the question is what admissions do amount to confessions? The word confession "has not been defined in the Indian Evidence Act," says Mahmood J in Queen Empress v Babu Lal, 6 A 509 (F B) at p 539, "it, however, occurs under the category of admissions, and to make my meaning clear I adopt the definitions given by Mr Justice Stephen in Art 21 of his Digest of the Law of Evidence by saying 'confession is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime stating or suggesting the inference that he committed that crime' In Queen Empress v Jagrup 7 A 646 (647) Straight J although he refused to follow the definition given in the Digest on the ground that the Digest "was written in view of a proposal for preparing a Code of Evidence for England, and it can scarcely be regarded therefore as an authority to guide me in construing an Act passed by the Legislature of this country in 1872 yet adds "though I may add that I do not find anything in Mr Justice Stephen's definition at variance with 24. the view I take" According to him also the word confession must be construed as meaning the same in s 30 as in ss 24 25 and 26 In Imperatrix v Pandharinath 6 B 34 the definition of Mr Stephen was practically adopted and in Queen Empress v Nana 14 B 260 (F B) that definition was quoted with approval In the last case the accused was charged, under s 411 of the Indian Penal Code, with dishonestly receiving stolen property In the course of police investigation the accused was asked by the police where the property was He replied that he had kept it, and could show He said he had buried the property in the field He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed, and with his own hands disintered the earthen pot in which the property was kept He made a second statement when pointing out the spot to the effect that he buried the property there The question was whether those statements amounted to confessions and as such excluded under s 25 Held that the above statements were clearly in the nature of a confession as they suggested the inference that the prisoner committed the crime and even if not intended by the accused as a confession of guilt they were an admission of a criminal act of the circumstance and would form a very important part of the evidence against the accused as showing that he had not come by the property honestly, and, therefore, properly within the rule of exclusion in regard to confession made by a person in custody of the police But Straight J in Queen Empress v Jagrup 7 A 645 was of opinion that only statements which are direct acknowledgment of guilt should be called confessions This view of Straight J was followed in Emperor v Sautya Bandu, 11 Bom L R 633 where at page 636, Chandrasekhar J said.

The Indian Evidence Act makes a clear distinction between an admission and a confession It is only under s 30 of the Act that the confession of one of two or more accused persons jointly tried for the same offence, can be taken into consideration as against the rest It must be a confession to be so admissible that is, it must affect both the person confessing and the other accused Here the statements Yeshuada taken by themselves do not fall within that category As held by the Allahabad High Court in Emperor v Jagrup, 7 A 646, the word 'confession' must not be construed as including a mere inculpatory admission which falls short of being an admission of guilt Section 30 must be strictly construed The learned Sessions Judge has construed the statement into a confession by a process of inferential reasoning which is not what the terms of section 30 countenance"

In Queen v Mac Donald 10 B L R App 2, Phear J observed that there is a distinction in the Evidence Act between admissions and confessions but the judgment contains no definition of the term This case was followed by Prinsep J in Empress v Davee Parshad 6 C 530 which also throws no light on the subject So the question afterwards raised by West J in Queen Empress v Thibhoran Manick Chand, 9 B 131, 134 namely what are the particular kinds of statements which it is proposed to prove against an accused person to establish an offence or in other words what admissions do amount to confession remained unanswered in both the Calcutta cases Neither in Queen Empress v Ali Mullick, 15 C 589, a subsequent Calcutta case Wilson J explained the exact meaning of the word confession, although he admitted this that there is a difference between admission and confession In Queen Empress v Nilmadhu 15 C 595, Petharam C J also said If the contents of the document did not amount to a confession the document itself would be relevant as an admission under s 21 of the Evidence Act So there also the learned Chief Justice admitted the existence of difference between admission and confession but did not give any definition of the word confession The High Court of Madras is silent on this point So neither the early reported Calcutta cases nor the reported Madras cases throw any light whether in interpreting the term confession one should accept the strict definition given by Straight J in Queen Empress v Jagrup or follow the definition given by Stephen J in his Digest of the Law of Evidence namely that a 'confession is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime stating or suggesting the inference that he committed the crime In Emperor v Kangal Mah 41 C 601 = 15 Cr L J 713 = 26 L C 161 it was held that confessions are statements either directly admitting the guilt of the accused or statements suggesting the inference that he committed the crime with which he is charged. So the majority of Indian cases followed the definition of the term 'confession' given by Stephen J in his Digest of the Law of Evidence. "The confession is not defined in the Evidence Act, but it has been many times interpreted by judicial decision. It has been defined as an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime stating or suggesting the inference, that he committed that crime. Therefore, not only statements which amount to a direct acknowledgment of guilt are confessions but also inculpatory statements which although they fall short of being actual admissions of guilt, yet suggest an inference of guilt and from which an inference of guilt follows. The factor determining whether a statement amounts to a confession or not is not the motive of the party making it but the fact that it leads to an inference of guilt." Mi Eun Tha v Emperor, 5 L B R 131=4 Ind Cis 1028=11 Cr L J 153, Rah Bahsh v Emperor, 16 P R 1886 Cr, see also Emperor v Haji Sher Mahomed 75 Ind Cas 70=46 B 961=24 Cr L J 870, Queen Empress v Pandharinath, 6 B 34, Queen Empress v Jave Charan, 19 B 363, Empress v Dabee Pershad, 6 C 530. A confession is also an admission of fact as well as an admission of guilt. Abbas Ali v Emperor, 4 Cr L J 471=3 L B R 208 (F B). A confession is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime stating or suggesting the inference that he committed the crime. Haliman v King Emperor, 51 P L R 1905=20 P R 1905 Cr.

In Emperor v Mahomed, 5 Bom L R 312, the accused was tried for the theft of a box, and a policeman gave evidence to the effect that he had seen him carrying the box at night, and that when challenged he had stated that the box was his own. The statement was found to be false, but it was nevertheless held by Grove and Chandrarai Kar, JJ, to have been rightly admitted. "In order to determine" said the learned Judges "whether the statement is a confession of guilt or an admission of a criminalizing circumstance, we must look to the statement itself. Here the statement of the accused was merely that the box belonged to him, it was no admission whatever of criminalizing circumstances. It was, therefore, admissible. The statement held to be inadmissible in Imperatrix v Pandharinath, 6 B 34 was of a different character. There the accused's statement admitted possession of a cheque alleged to be forged. It was an admission of one of the criminalizing circumstances which went to make up the offence charged against the accused. In the present case the statement does not amount directly or indirectly, to an admission of any criminalizing circumstance and is therefore, outside the principle of the ruling cited." "In the result," says Carnduff J in Barindra Kumar Ghose v Emperor, 14 C W N 1114 at p 1197=37 C 467 "it seems to me that each case must be decided as it arises with reference to the question whether the particular statement concerned, whether it be positive or negative, verbal or expressed by conduct, is or is not a confession." See also Muthu Kumar Suami v King Emperor, 35 M 397, Emperor v Guna, 22 Bom L R 1217. "By confession I understood not necessarily a full confession of guilt, but any statement made which being relevant to the issue, may be put in evidence against the person making it." Per the C J in R v Wong Chin Kee, Roscoe Cr Ei 37. Confessions of other crimes not relating to the charge, e.g. showing or admitting a general tendency even to the crime charged are inadmissible. R v Cole 1810, Roscoe Cr Ei 37.

In Smith v Emperor, 43 Ind Cas 605, nt p 611, Phillips J said "There is no definition of confession in the Evidence Act, but I take it that it must be something more than a mere admission. In Emperor v Kangal Mali 26 Ind Cas 161=15 Cr L J 713=41 C 601, when dealing with the admissibility of statements, it was said that a useful test was to ascertain the purpose to which they were put by the prosecution. If the prosecution relies on the statements of the accused as being true then they may and probably in many cases would be found to amount to confessions. Accepting both these propositions I would add that in order to make a statement a confession it appears to me to be necessary that the inference as to the criminality of the person making the statement should be gathered from the statement itself, for I think it is quite possible that in many cases a statement which by itself does not contain any inference of criminality may in the light of subsequent events or of subsequent 24. evidence strongly support such an inference. If the statement in itself is not incriminating I am doubtful whether the fact that it does become incriminating owing to subsequent events would make it a confession." See also Pan Gong v Emperor, 19 Cr L J 42, Jasoda v Emperor, 53 Ind Cas 691.

An admission of all the ingredients required to constitute an offence is a confession. A statement of the following kind cannot be regarded as a confession of complicity in an offence: "I told the other accused that, if they wanted to kill my husband, they were at liberty to do so and I would bring no case against them. But when they arrived at my husband's house on the fatal night I endeavoured to restrain them and was only prevented from doing so by their threats to kill me and my son if I interfered. I did neither take any part in the murder, nor did in any way assist the murderers after my husband was put to death." Bhag Singh v Emperor, 4 Ind Cas 429=24 P W R 1909 Cr = 153 P L R 1909. A statement of an accused to the effect that under threats of death, he was forced to sit outside the door of the house where a murder was being committed to warn the murderers of the approach of any body, and not to divulge the secret and to remain an unpassive agent in the crime, and that he took no part in it on the other hand he vainly tried to dissuade the co-accused from committing the crime, does not amount to a confession of either murder or its abetment and consequently is also inadmissible in evidence under s. 1 of Act I of 1872 against the accused. Gul Hossain v Crown, 38 P W R Cr 1910=24 P R 1910=193 P L R 1910. A confession must be a confession of guilt or a confession of facts which constitute in law the offence charged. Mere admissions of incriminating facts will not amount to a confession, unless those facts and the necessary inferences from them amount to an offence. Thien v Crown, 1 L B R 133.

Where the accused expresses his willingness to tender an apology to the complainant it is unfair for the Magistrate to treat the circumstance as an indication of the accused's guilt. In re Abdul Rahman, 4 L W 556=17 Cr L J 462=36 Ind Cas 142.

To constitute a confession under the Evidence Act it is not necessary that the person confessing should make a full and explicit admission of his guilt so clear as to leave no other hypothesis tenable. Smith v Emperor 43 Ind. Cas 605=19 Cr L J 189.

The fact that the accused did not claim a piece of cloth as his own before the Police but admitted at that time that it belonged to the deceased might have been due to this that the defence is not always stated during the Police enquiry and any statement made to the Police to the effect that an article produced by suspected men really belonged to the deceased could amount not to a confession but to an admission. Shua Din v Emperor, 5 Lab L J 128.

Admission is usually applied to a civil transaction, and to those matters in criminal cases which do not involve a criminal intent. The term confession is usually used in criminal Courts as denoting an acknowledgment of guilt. Admission in a civil suit that a document is genuine cannot in a former case be regarded as confession at all. Ambar Ali v Emperor, A I R 1929 Cal 239.

Confession—Principle of admission. Confessions are merely one species of admissions, namely that species which is a direct acknowledgment of guilt in a criminal charge. For that particular sort the danger of untruthfulness exists and a special rule based on the general testimonial principle of trustworthiness of narration becomes applicable. That rule satisfied the confession occupies the status of ordinary admission, its relation to other rules of Evidence is therefore determined by its quality as an admission. For example as an extra-judicial statement it would ordinarily be obnoxious to the Hearsay rule but admissions are either not within the prohibition of that rule, or are an exception to it this being the ground for receiving admission in general, it suffices for confessions. Wignmore § 816. The principle on which a party's confession is admissible is thus stated by Chief Baron Gilbert: "As persons interested are utterly removed from giving evidence for want of integrity, so on the other side the voluntary confession of the party in interest is reckoned the best evidence."

if a man's swearing for his interest can give no credit, he must certainly be given most credit when he swears against it but then his confession must be voluntary and without compulsion, for our law in this differs from the civil law that it will not force any man to accuse himself pain and force may compel men to confess what is not truth of facts, and consequently such extorted confessions are not to be depended upon' Gilbert v. 6th Ed (1801) p 123, R v. Warrell (1783) 1 Lench, 263, Doe v. Hamer 8 A. & E. 691 (700), Slatterie v. Pooley (1840) 6 M. & W. 669, Wills v. 2nd Ed 150, Taylor § 865 The confessions of defendants are received on the same principle as that on which admissions in civil suits are received, viz., the presumption that a person will not make an untrue statement against his own interest. Taylor § 723, Roscoe Cr. Fr. 37 So it is clear that confessions could also have entered under the Hearsay exception for statements of fact against interest the accused not being a qualified witness, and could to day be so regarded where the accused, not being compellable, fails to take the stand. Ibid section 12 clause 4 and notes thereunder, Wigmore § 816 Foot note As in the case of admissions certain vicious admissions, i.e. those of agents and other persons are often receivable so also in the case of confessions the confessions of co-accused co-conspirators and others are also receivable. Wigmore § 816

Use of confessions in evidence—its History and development Roughly speaking there are four distinct stages in the history of the law's use of confession. From early times down to the times of the Tudors and Stuarts, all sorts of confessions are freely admitted. During that period no doctrine was available for excluding confessions in the modern sense. All narratives avowing guilt are accepted in evidence without discrimination and particularly without question as to their proceeding from hope of promise or from fear of threats even of torture. In the 2nd stage which comprises the second half of the 1700's the matter begins to be considered, and it is recognized that some confessions should be rejected as being untrustworthy. In White v. Trial, 17 How St. Fr. 1095 which took place in 1741, the accused's examination before a magistrate being offered the clerk was asked whether it was voluntarily given. The Recorder presiding said "That is an improper question unless the prisoner has insisted and made it part of his case that his confession was extorted by threats or drawn from him by promises in that case indeed it would have been proper for us to enquire by what means the confession was procured". In 1775 in Rudd v. Case, 1 Leach Cr. C. 135, Lord Mansfield said "The instance has frequently happened of persons having made confessions under threats or promises the consequences are frequently has been that such examinations and confessions have not been made use of again when on their trial. But his remarks were made as regards persons like approvers who were drawn by promises and assurances to answer to an examination and to swear on oath and not of confessions in general. Wigmore § 819 But in Notes I and Egbe B in Warrell's Case 1 Leach Cr. C. 295 had laid the modern rule that confessions which are obtained by threats or promises are inadmissible in evidence. From this time onward the history of the law is merely a matter of narrowness or broadness of the exclusion rule. Wigmore § 819 In the third stage comprising the 1800's, the principle of exclusion is developed under certain influences to an abnormal extent and amount. For some the rule admission the exception. Wigmore § 817 But the tendency of 1850, there was a general suspicion of all confessions a prejudice against them as such, and an inclination to repudiate them upon the ground of their being obtained by threats or promises. For half a century when an effort to formalize the law of evidence and to make it consistent precedents and the improvements in the law of evidence and procedure brought clearly before the profession the fact that the law of evidence results reached Wigmore § 820 "In the case of Wigmore § 820 the reaction sets in here and there but it is not a general movement, and little is accomplished in the way of improvement in the law of evidence. Wigmore § 817

What are not confessions Wigmore § 817 words by the accused in a crime or of some essential part of it

24

(539), R v Nana, 14 B 260 (263), Wigmore § 821, R v Kangal Mah, 41 C 1905, Rampal v Emperor, 20 A L J 128, R v Pandharinath, 6 B 34 (37) R v Tribhuban, 9 B 131 (134). Therefore the term "confession" does not include either (1) guilty conduct (2) exculpatory statements and (3) acknowledgments of subordinate facts colourless with reference to actual guilt Wigmore § 821

Guilty conduct It is clear that an accused's guilty conduct such as fleeing from arrest, concealing the traces of crime, fabricating false evidence, suppressing testimony and other behaviour indicative of guilty consciousness on the part of the accused do not amount to confession. In State v Reinhart, 26 Or 494, 38 Pac 825 (Am) Bean J said "The defendant contends that, in as much as the only evidence tending to show the embezzlement is the false entries in the books of the firm kept by himself in the course of his employment, such entries are extra judicial statements in the nature of a confession, and not sufficient to convict him unless corroborated by other evidence. But we cannot concur in this position. A 'confession' in a legal sense is restricted to an acknowledgment of guilt made by a person after an offence has been committed and does not apply to a mere statement or declaration of an independent fact from which such guilt may be inferred. The entries of the defendant in the books of account which he was required to keep are not confessions or admissions of guilt, but are perfectly innocent in themselves, and it is only because they are shown to be false and fraudulent that the inference is irresistible from the manner in which they were made, that they were intended to cover up his misappropriation."

Exculpatory statements All the declarations of an accused person are not confessions. Where the guilt is denied or attempt is made to explain circumstances which are calculated to excite suspicion, such declarations are not necessarily confessions. State v Gulman 51 Me 225 (Am). It is altogether a mistake to call this 'evidence of a confession by a prisoner'. It has nothing of that character. It was not an admission of his own guilt, but on the contrary an accusation of another person. That it was preferred on oath in no way detracts from the inference that may be drawn from it unfavourably to the prisoner, it being a false accusation against another and thus furnishing with other things an argument of his own will. Per Ruffin C J in State v Broughton, 7 Ind 101 (Am). So guilty consciousness cannot be proved by admitting exculpatory statements and then by showing them to be fabricated. Wigmore § 821, R v Pandharinath, 6 B 34 (37), Ah Foong v Emperor 22 C W N 831=98 C L J 105

Acknowledgment of subordinate facts An acknowledgment of subordinate fact, not directly involving guilt, or in other words not essential to the crime charged, is not a confession. In Crossfield's Trial, 26 How St Tr 71, Eyre L C J in charging the jury said "Gentlemen, those declarations relating to the invention of a deadly weapon and uttered before the deed charged have been as it seems to me improperly called 'confession', they are not properly 'confession' which import a particular charge first made and an acknowledgment of that charge. According to the rules of evidence, what a prisoner has said respecting a particular fact is admissible evidence, not in the nature of a confession, but as evidence of the particular fact." The distinction between a confession and an admission, as applied in criminal law is not a technical refinement but based upon the substantive differences of the character of the evidence deduced from each. A confession is a direct acknowledgment of guilt on the part of the accused, and, by the very force of the definition 'excludes an admission which, of itself as applied in criminal law, is a statement by the accused 'direct or implied' of facts pertinent to the issue and tending in connection with proof of other facts to prove his guilt, but of itself is insufficient to authorize a conviction." Per Hollonay J in State v Gure Mont 485=186 Pac. 329

What are confessions or what are not confessions were very lucidly explained by Holterson J in State v Porter, 32 Or 135=49 Pac 964 (Am) where he said "We take it that the admission of a fact, or of a bundle of facts from which guilt is directly deducible or which within and of themselves import guilt may be designated a confession but not so with the admission of a particular act or acts or circumstances which may or may not involve guilt, and which is dependent for such result upon other facts or circumstances to be established. It is not necessary that there be a declaration of an intent to admit guilt, it is sufficient that the facts admitted involve a crime, and these import guilt, or as put by Mr Hutton, 'I am guilty of this', and "this" imports the admission of all the acts constituting guilt. It is necessary, however, that the accused should speak with an animus confitendi or an intention to speak the truth touching the specific charge of guilt, and when he, with such intention, narrates facts constituting a crime, the guilt becomes a matter of inference, a resultant feature of the narration without an explicit declaration to that effect. So that we conclude that whenever the statements or declarations of the accused, voluntarily made, are of such facts as involve necessarily the commission of a crime, or in themselves constitute a crime, then the facts admitted import guilt, and such admissions may properly be denominated confession.

Confessions—Division of Confessions may be divided into two classes—Judicial and Extra judicial. Roscoe Et 37 Judicial—Confessions are those which are made before the magistrates, or in Court in the due course of legal proceedings, and it is essential that they be made out of the free will of the party, and with full knowledge of the nature and consequences of the confession. Of this kind are the preliminary examinations, taken in writing by the magistrate, pursuant to Statutes, and this plea of guilty made in open Court to an indictment. Greenl Ev § 216 Extra judicial confessions are those which are made by the party elsewhere than before a magistrate, or in Court, this term embracing not only explicit and express confessions of crime, but all those admissions of the accused from which guilt may be implied. All confessions of this kind are receivable in evidence, being proved like other facts, to be weighed by the jury. Greenl Ev § 216 A Judicial confession is sufficient in itself to support a conviction. It is, in other words, a plea of guilty. Roscoe Et 37

Extra judicial confessions—Proof of corpus Delicti as corroboration. Whether extra judicial confessions uncorroborated by any other proof of the corpus delicti are of themselves sufficient to found a conviction of the prisoner, has been gravely doubted in England. In the Roman Law, such naked confessions amounted only to a semi plena probatio upon which alone no judgment could be founded and at most the party could only in proper cases be put to torture. But if voluntarily made in the presence of this injured party, or if reiterated at different times in his absence and persisted in they were received as plenary proof. Greenl Et § 217 Taylor § 863 In each of the English cases usually cited in favour of the sufficiency of this evidence, some corroborative circumstance will be found. Ibid In the United States, the prisoner's confession, when the corpus delicti is not otherwise proved, has been held insufficient for his conviction, and this opinion certainly best accords with the humanity of the criminal code, and with the great degree of caution applied in receiving and weighing the evidence of confessions in other cases and it seems countenanced by approved writers on this branch of the law. Greenl Ev § 217, Taylor Ev § 863 Guilds Case, 5 Hurlst 163 18, Longs Case, 1 Hayw 524, 2 Russ C & M 825, 826

Weight of confession 'The evidence of verbal confessions of guilt is to be received with great caution. For, besides the danger of mistake from the misapprehension of witnesses, the misuse of words, the failure of the party to express his own meaning, and the infirmity of memory, it should be recollected that the mind of the prisoner himself is oppressed by the calamity of his situation, and that he is often influenced by motives of hope or fear to make an untrue confession. The zeal, too, which so generally prevails to detect offenders, especially in cases of aggravated guilt, and the strong disposition in the persons engaged in pursuit of evidence to rely on slight grounds of suspicion, which are exaggerated into sufficient proof, together with the character of the persons necessarily called as witnesses, in cases of secret and atrocious crimes, all tend to impair the value of this kind of evidence, and sometimes lead to its rejection where in civil actions it would have been received. Greenl Et § 214

24.

"It is true" says Prof Wigmore "that there exists a decided conflict of opinion at first sight inexplicable, as to the evidential value of confessions. On the one hand, we find writers and Judges of wide experience affirming the slender value of confessions which is merely the reproduction of a clerical pre-lector's language. On the other hand we find persons of equal authority offering in equally positive and unqualified language that confessions are the highest kind of evidence. There must be some key to this conflict. How plausible each side of the controversy is, and how forcible the impression its influence may produce for the moment appears when we see the same Judge,—Sir William Scott (Lord Stouell)—in almost the same year expressing opinions diametrically opposed." Wigmore § 866. In Williams v Williams, 1 Hagg Cons 304 Sir William Scott said "The Court must remember that confession is a species of evidence which though not inadmissible, is regarded with great distrust. There is a canon particularly pointed against them, which says, Acc partium confessioni fides habetur." But in the subsequent year the same learned Judge observed "I need not oblige that confession generally ranks high, or I should say highest in the scale of evidence. 'Habemus confitentem reum' is demonstration, unless indirect motives can be assigned." 2 Hagg Cons 315, see also 1 Starkie 52, Swift Ex 133. Of course a partial explanation of this is thus given by Joy "It appears inaccurate to give all kinds of confessions the same confidence or to treat them alike with distrust. Like all other kinds of admissions they admit of all shades of certainty and probability from a solemn estoppel by matter of record to the slightest presumption arising from the most casual, as precious, or doubtful expressions." Joy Confessions 109. But "the real explanation lies in the mixture of good and bad qualities likely to be present in all attempts to use confessions. We must separate (1) the confessions as a proved fact, from (2) the process of proving an alleged confession." Wigmore § 866.

When the making of a confession is completely proved, its authenticity is beyond dispute. Such a confession is "one of the surest proofs of guilt." Starkie Ex Vol I, 52. In such a case a voluntary and genuine confession is legal and sufficient proof of guilt. Queen v Jhuree, 7 W R Cr 41, Queen v Rangeet, 6 W R Cr 73, Queen v Hyder, 6 W R Cr 83, Sheo Prasad v Emperor, 52 Ind Cas 520. R v Dada, 15 B 480. The confession of a crime is usually as much against a man's permanent interests as anything well can be and in Mr Starkie's phrase, no innocent man can be supposed ordinarily to be willing to risk life, liberty, or property by a false confession. Wigmore § 866.

The only real difficulty is in the proof of the fact that an alleged extrajudicial confession has been made. Such a fact is proved by somebody's testimony. Such testimony is often furnished by paid informers, treacherous associates, angry victims and over zealous officers of law. As regards the testimony of the persons the suspicion of the Court is aroused and its caution is stimulated. So where the Judges advised the jury to take confession with caution they were thinking, not of the confession as evidence of the act, but to the testimony to the alleged confession. This is the real meaning of Mr Justice Foster's oft quoted phrase that "confessions are the weakest and most suspicious of all evidence." Foster v High Treason c III, section 8. See also Green Ex § 214, Earle v Pfen 5 C & P 543. R v Simmons, 6 C & P 540. That remark is applicable only to oral confessions and for the following reason: "Proof may be too easily procured. Words are often misreported—whether through ignorance, inattention, or malice, it mattereth not to the defendant, he is equally affected in either case" and they are extremely liable to misconstruction and without this evidence is not in the ordinary course of things to be disproved by that sort of negative evidence by which the proof of plain facts may be and often is confronted. In other words the suspicion that he has found it necessary to entertain is directed entirely to the work of proving an alleged confession. "This is the reason above suggested as the real cause of the distrust, we are ready enough to trust the confession if there really was one, but we are going to doubt and suspect for a long time before we accept it as a fact." Per Teller J in Dumas v People (1917) 62 Colo 418. Mr J Earle touched the kernel of the subject when he said "I am of opinion that when a confession is well proved it is the best evidence that can be produced." R v Baldry 2 Den Cr C 49.

This seems to be the simple explanation of the apparently contradictory views, if we distinguish the confession as evidence, from the evidence of the confession, we find that few have ever really doubted that the first is in itself of the highest value, while the second is always to be suspected Higmore § 866

So the remarks that "confession should be received with great caution especially oral confession" (U S v Mc Kenzie, 35 Fed Rep 826) and that "the books are full of admonitions from the wisest and best Judges in this respect" (Per Grover J in Teachout v People, 41 N Y 7, 19) are applicable to the evidence of confession and not to the confession as evidence Emperor v Pramatha nath 30 C L J 503 The reason for this caution is that under the charge of a highly criminal offence, the mind must always be agitated and may be influenced by hopes or apprehension which it is difficult if not impossible, sometimes to comprehend U S v Nott, 1 Mc Lern (U S) 499 Besides being satisfied that the witness who testified to the confession speaks truly the jury must be satisfied that the witness could not be, or was not mistaken in the substance of the confession U S v Hughes, 34 Fed Rep 732 In the last named case Mc Cormick J in charging the jury nt p 736 said "For want of an exact representation of the tone of voice emphasis countenance, eye, manner, and action of the one who made the confession, how almost impossible it is to make third persons understand the exact state of mind and meaning of the one who made the confession"

But it is generally agreed that voluntary and deliberate confessions of guilt are among the most effectual proofs in law, on the presumption that a rational being will not make admissions prejudicial to his interest and safety, unless urged by the promptings of truth and conscience Moore on Facts § 1181, Greenl Et § 21.

False confessions—The reason of making False confessions are either intentional or the result of mistake Those made through mistakes are the result either of mistake of fact or of law Suppose a man mistakes a corpse for a robber, and belabours it under the impression On finding the body lifeless he imagines himself the cause of death and makes a confession Such a confession is made under a mistake of fact So also where a man makes a false confession under the hallucination, there is not any mistaken apprehension of facts correctly speaking, but the belief in a fact which has no existence A confession under mistake of law occurs when a man is conscious of moral guilt but does not know that legally he is not guilty In most cases false confessions are intentionally made to escape vexation, and this includes all those false confessions which are extorted from a prisoner by bodily or mental torture A second motive is a desire to stifle enquiry, which may be illustrated by the case of a man falsely accused of a comparatively trifling crime, hoping by a confession to throw off suspicion as to some crime of greater magnitude which he has already committed A third motive is arduum vitæ or weariness of life A fourth motive, originating in the relation of sexes, is thus described by Bentham, to whom we are originally indebted for the whole of this lucid disquisition — "In the relation between the sexes," says Bentham, when treating of the subject of false confessions, "may be found the source of the most natural exemplifications of this of many other eccentric lights The female unmarried—punishment as for seduction hazarded, the imputation invited and submitted to for the purpose of keeping off rivals, and reconciling parents to the alliance The female married—the like imputation, even though unmerited 'invited' with a view to marriage through divorce A fifth motive is vanity Best takes the following extract from Bentham — "vanity, without the aid of any other motive has been known (the force of moral sanction being in these cases divided against itself) to afford an interest strong enough to engage a man to sink himself in the good opinion of one part of mankind, under the notion of rising himself in that of another" A sixth motive is the desire to benefit others A seventh motive is the desire to injure others this is sought to be effected by accusing them as participators in the crime and cases are not infrequent in which parties, in their hatred and revenge have forged evidence against the objects of their passions, even at the expense of their own persons, by self inflicted wound, or even suicide Scott Et pp 157 158

24. Confession must be taken as a whole. When a confession is used against an accused person, the whole confession must be introduced. So where an accused person makes a confession, the confession is evidence in his favour as well as against him, and must be taken as a whole. Queen Empress v Dadi Nana, 15 B 452, Katim In re, 89 Ind Cas 455=26 Cr L J 1142. This rule is founded upon justice to the accused person. It is merely common fairness in the case of the introduction of a confession to require that every thing that has been said by the accused in connection therewith, which may qualify or explain the confession, be introduced. Berry v Com 10 Bush (Ky) 10, People v Gelabert 39 Cal (Am) 663, McAdony v State 62 Ala 154, 160. So if evidence of a confession by an accused person is given on behalf of the prosecution the whole of the confession must be used, the prosecution must take the whole of it together, and cannot select one part and leave another. R v Jones, (1871) 1 C & P 629. But if part of a statement tend to show the guilt of the accused and part of it to show his innocence, the jury may, if they choose, believe the part which is against him and disbelieve that which is in his favour. R v Higgins (1829) 3 C & P 603, R v Cleaves (1830) 1 C & P 221. R v Steptoe (1830) 4 C & P 397. Halsbury Vol IX p 398, Taylor § 870, Kamod v Emperor 46 Ind Cas 705. There were earlier rulings to the contrary. P v Jones, 2 C & P 629. Bosanquet, Sergeant, R v Lloyd, 1 Phill Ev (3rd Ed) 339. In determining whether the statement is true or not, the jury should consider whether it be probable or improbable in itself and whether it is consistent or inconsistent with the other circumstances of the case. R v Steptoe, supra, R v Jones, supra. Unless the prosecution can show that any part of the confession of an accused person, so far as it exculpates him, is untrue or violently improbable, it is not fair to act on it so much as to incriminate him, omitting all that which goes to explain his own conduct and diminish the gravity of his offence. The only fair measure is to take confession as a whole. Maung Po Thu v Queen Empress, L B R (1872 1892), 324, Queen Empress v Engli, L B R (1872 1892), 371, Crown v Sumundur 4 P R 1872 Cr. Queen v Bishoo, 9 W R Cr 16, Queen v Shaikh Boodhoo, 8 W R Cr 38, Queen v Chaka Khan, 5 W R 70, Queen v Sonoolah, 25 W R Cr 23, Goloke v Magistrate of Chittagang, 20 W R Cr 15. So a prosecutor is not to be allowed to give in evidence part of a confession made by a prisoner, but it must be put in proof as a whole, so that the jury in one case and the Judge and the assessors in the other may have the full means of testing its accuracy and forming their opinion as to whether the whole or part, and what portion of it, can be believed. For example, if a passage in a statement made by a prisoner standing by itself amounts to an admission of guilt, it is not alone to be regarded if there are passages qualifying or contradicting it. A confession ought not to be rejected merely because there has been in the confession a false statement on a material point. Empress v Mohoram, A W N 1883, 148. Waryam v Emperor A I R 1926 Lah 554. The ordinary rule of taking confession as a whole and giving the accused (in the absence of other evidence against him) the benefit of any circumstance that may appear in his favour therefrom cannot apply to confessions which are diametrically opposed to each other but only where the more favourable view is absolutely inconsistent with the general tenor of the confession. Queen v Nityo Gopal, 24 W R Cr 80. The mere fact that the accused has been interrupted, and therefore has not stated all that he might have stated does not however render what he has stated inadmissible as a confession. Levinson v State 54 Ala 520. Nor does the fact that the witness overheard only a portion of a conversation, render what he heard inadmissible provided it was a complete confession of guilt. Com v Pilsinger 110 Mass 101. McAdroy v State 62 Ala 154 160. The evidence must be confined to his confession in regard to the particular offence of which he is indicted if it relates to another and distinct crime, it is inadmissible. A v Buller 2 Car & Kir 221.

As in other cases the meaning and intention of the parties are collected from the whole writing taken together and all the instruments, executed at one time by the parties, and relating to the same matter, are equally resorted to for that purpose so here. This principle, in its application, has several detailed consequences (1) The prosecution must put in the whole of the accused's statement, including the portions favourable to himself as well as those unfavourable. But this does not prevent the use of statements which are separate in themselves though not forming all the accused's utterances, nor of such fragments of a connected statement as were alone heard or remembered by the witness. Moreover, the witness need not be able to give the exact words, provided he can give the substance (but see Jagdeo v Emperor, 33 Ind. Cas 740=15 A L J 15; Aga Ba v Emperor, 33 Ind. Cas 767; Hasun v Emperor, 53 Ind. Cas 145) (2) If one part of a conversation is relied on, as proof of a confession of a crime, the prisoner has a right to lay before the Court the whole of what was said in that conversation, not being confined to so much only as is explanatory of the part already proved against him, but being permitted to give evidence of all that was said upon that occasion relative to the subject matter of the issue (Per Lord C J Abbott in the Queen's Case, 2 B & B 297 298; R v Paine 5 Mod 165, Howk. P C b 2, C 46 § 5, R v Jones 2 C & P 629, R v Higgins, 3 C & P 603; R v Heane, 4 C & P 215, Brown's Case, 9 Leigh 633, for as has been already observed respecting admission, unless the whole is received and considered, the true meaning and import of the part which is good evidence against him cannot be ascertained. (3) But if, after the whole statement of the prisoner is given in evidence, the prosecutor can contradict any part of it, he is at liberty to do so, and then the whole testimony is left to the jury for their consideration, precisely as in other cases where one part of the evidence is contradictory to another, for it is not to be supposed that all the parts of a confession are entitled to equal credit. The jury may believe that part which charges the prisoner and reject that which is in his favour, if they see sufficient grounds for so doing. If what he said in his own favour is not contradicted by evidence offered by the prosecutor nor improbable in itself, it will generally be believed by the jury, but they are not bound to give weight to it on that account, but are at liberty to judge of it like other evidence, by all the circumstances of the case. (4) And if the confession implicates other persons by name, yet it must be proved as it was made, not omitting the names, but the Judge will instruct the jury, that it is not evidence against any but the prisoner who made it. Greenl Ev § 218.

A Judge ought to decide the question of the admissibility of a confession first and if it is inadmissible it should be excluded from the record and its terms should be kept from the assessors. An inadmissible confession is inadmissible in its entirety. Nga Ba v Emperor 18 Cr L J 383=38 Ind Cas 767. The ordinary rule is that a confession is evidence for the prisoner as well as against him and must be taken together. But it is only where no other evidence is forthcoming that this can be pressed to the extent of requiring that no part be accepted as true without accepting the whole. Hasun v Emperor, 53 Ind Cas 145=20 Cr L J 737, see also Kamoda v Emperor, 46 Ind Cas 705=19 Cr L J 785.

After the entire statement of a prisoner has been given in evidence any part of it may be contradicted by the prosecution if they choose to do so and then the whole testimony is left open for consideration precisely as in other cases where one part of the evidence contradicts another. Even without such contradiction it is not supposed that all the parts of a confession are entitled to equal credit if sufficient grounds exist that part which charges the prisoner may be believed while that which is in his favour may be rejected. Nirbhoy Nath v Emperor, 3 Q W N 800=98 Ind Cas 178=A I R 1926 Oudh 618.

Uncorroborated confession, evidentiary value of.—If there is no reasonable doubt that a confession is voluntary and genuine it is legal and sufficient proof of guilt. Queen v Jhurrer, 7 W R Cr 41. Under ordinary circumstances, a confession cannot be accepted as sufficient for a conviction, unless it is supported by material facts established independently of the confession itself. Experience shows that unfounded confessions are not infrequently made from one motive or another natural to humanity and that consequently the Courts have to be on their guard against being led astray by such deceptions. It is, therefore, the practice in general to require some support for a confession and reasonable consistency with the surrounding circumstances about which there is no doubt. Nga Shue Tat v Queen Empress, U B R (1897—1901), Vol I 152.

S 24

J. L. 445), or that a slight change in the phraseology of the alleged admission would destroy their significance of guilt Ibid, Moore on Facts § 1183

Judicial Confessions Judicial confessions indicate confessions which are made on a magisterial investigation, Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code contains the provisions for recording confessions by Magistrates. The evidence of witnesses who are sent up by the police for the purpose of having their statements recorded under s. 164, Criminal Procedure Code, and who have been presumably in police custody until their production before the Magistrate, should not be recorded by such Magistrate, unless he has some assurance that their attendance and statements were voluntary. King Emperor v. Bhutnath, 7 C. W. N. 345. The proper course for a Magistrate to presume when an accused person is brought under the above section of the Code before him is to ask him if he wishes to make any statement or confession. If he says he does not, the Magistrate should not proceed to interrogate him. If he does, the Magistrate should write down the statement or confession (as the case may be) and ask the accused such questions as may be necessary to show clearly or ascertain clearly what his meaning is. The examination of the accused must not be made with a view to eliciting, by constant questions, the truth out of his mouth as though he were a witness. Empress v. Baij, 5 C. P. L. R. Cr. 13, see also Gaya Dist. v. Mohamed, 5 C. W. N. 864. A Magistrate must not put any question to the accused which tends to incriminate him. In re Rayappa, 2 Weir 136.

It is neither expressed nor implied in section 164 that the statement of an accused person cannot be recorded unless it is a confession. The distinction made in the section is between statements that are confessions and statements that are not and not between the persons by whom statements of either character are made, the object being to prescribe different modes of recording. It is discretionary with a Magistrate to act under section 164 and prepare a record. Lala v. Empress, 2 P. R. 1893 Cr. Great care and circumspection are necessary in recording a confession under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It is necessary to record the questions put to the accused to ascertain whether the confession was voluntary, to tell him that after his confession he will not have to go back to Police custody, to warn him of the consequences which will ensue if he falsely implicate himself in the hope of release and to ask him whether the Police or any other person has subjected him to any ill treatment. No hard and fast rule can or should be laid down as to the procedure which should be adopted when an accused person is placed before a Magistrate for the recording of a confession under s. 164 Cr. Pro Code, but it is not sufficient to put one comprehensive question as to the nature of the confession or to make a note at the commencement of the record of the confession that the accused has been warned not to confess through any fear or inducement and that the Police of the place have been removed from the Court. A Magistrate ought, by putting questions which occur to him to make himself conscientiously satisfied that the man is a free agent and the confession is voluntary and has not been procured by threats or inducements. Kandhari v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L. J. 633 = 25 Ind. Cas. 833 see also Kesho Singh v. King Emperor, 20 O. C. 136 = 18 Cr. L. J. 42. Empress v. Kura, 1882 A. W. N. 166. Imperator v. Masuri, 12 Ind. Cas. 11. Shree v. H. E. 4 Cr. L. J. 387. Bahadur v. Crown, 26 Cr. L. J. 1233 = 88 Ind. Cas. 183. Where a Magistrate asked a person who was charged with an offence "what offence are you going to confess", instead of ascertaining whether the accused wished to say anything at all, held that the Magistrate had not acted properly. In re Chohal et Keya, 2 Weir 137. In re Rayappa, 2 Weir 136. Pisari Tuarka, 2 Weir 137. A Magistrate should ascertain whether a confession or statement was made voluntarily, at the beginning of the statement, and not at the end. In re Rayappa, 2 Weir 136 see also Chedan v. King Emperor, 7 O. C. 191. Where after the prisoner had made a long confessional statement he was asked by the Magistrate that if he stated all that he knew he would then be examined as an approver and as a witness held that the conduct of the Magistrate was highly improper. In re Kora Gorindan, 2 Weir 137. There is no provision for the admission in evidence of a confession made to a Magistrate unless it is recorded in the manner prescribed by law and even if such confession is made under special circumstances he proved otherwise where the confession is of the accused is shown to have been made under the inducement, such fact deprives the evidence of its value Nga Myat Kyau v Queen Empress, U B R (1897—1903) Vol 1, 41 Where a Magistrate inadvertently omits to certify the voluntariness of a confession recorded by him under section 164 Cr Pro Code, the defect may be cured by the evidence of the Magistrate Ram Sanehi v Emperor, 9 Ind Cas 148=12 Cr L J 15 Queen Empress v Anga Valayan, 23 M 15 Empress v Jugri, 3 C P L R Cr 6 Baca Singh v Emperor, 89 Ind Cas 1026

Section 164 does not enable a Police officer, who has obtained a statement incriminating the accused made by some person to send such person to a Magistrate practically under custody, to have him examined and his statement recorded before a judicial enquiry or trial for fixing him down to that statement in the subsequent judicial proceeding Q E v Jadhav 27 C 295=4 C W N 129

Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, absolutely prohibits the employment of a Police officer to take down the confession of an accused person. A Police officer cannot be employed even as a scribe to take down such a confession Khudiram v Emperor, 9 C L J 55

Under section 164 in the course of a Police investigation, the Magistrate is entitled to record any voluntary statement made by the accused person, but he is not entitled to examine the accused person in respect of the facts of the case Gya Singh v Mohamed, 5 C W N 864. Under s 164 Cr Pro Code and s 24 Evidence Act a confession made under an inducement to confess is not a voluntary confession and as such, is inadmissible in evidence Queen Empress v Aga Shue, L B R (1893—1900) 52 Where the accused pleads not guilty, a conviction cannot be based on a confession which is not recorded in the manner prescribed in ss. 164 and 364 of the Cr Pro Code Nga San Ya v Emperor, 11 Cr L J 41=4 Ind Cas 759=U B R 1909 Vol I Evidence 3. Confession made in simple narrative form without showing questions and answers may be allowed in evidence, where it appears that the accused had not been prejudiced by the failure to comply strictly with the law Nga Po Sin v Queen Empress, U B R (1897—1901) Vol 1, 47, Queen Empress v Karim, S C 102 Oudh

Where there is no positive evidence that the precautions required by s 164 of the Criminal Pro Code were not taken and the certificate required by sub-section (3) is duly appended to the record of the confession, the presumption is that the precautions described in the section were duly taken Majhi v Emperor, 28 Cr L J 807=104 Ind Cas 247=A I R 1927 Lah 682, Khemani v Emperor, 6 Lah 53=88 Ind Cas 18, Pratap Singh v Emperor, A I R 1925 Lah 607. The Code contains no provision as to a confession being made in open Court, and where it is of great length, a Magistrate may avoid its being recorded piecemeal, though in such a case the proper procedure is not to return the accused to the custody of the police until it is fully recorded Nilmadhub v Emperor 5 Pat 171=96 Ind Cas 509=27 Cr L J 957=A I R 1926 Pat 279 but see King Emperor v Pramadha 30 C L J 503=21 C L J 266, Abdul Sahib v Emperor, 49 C 573 (598)

It would be going too far to say that a Magistrate recording a statement or a confession under s 164 cannot and should not ask a single question of the deponent Hasan Ali v Emperor, L R 6 A 137=88 Ind Cas 729=23 A L J 719=26 Cr L J 1209

Where the appellant made a statement to a Magistrate which was substantially the same as the evidence given by the prosecution witnesses and the statement was objected to on the ground that it did not comply with the requirements of s 164 and that the deficiency in the formality prescribed by the section had not been cured on the recall of the Magistrate under the provisions of s 533 Cr Pro Code it was held inadmissible in evidence Mussammatt Rao v Emperor 26 P L R 172=7 Lah L J 170

A statement made by an accused and not amounting to a confession is a "statement" within section 164 of the Cr Pro Code, which expression is not limited to a statement made by witness Abdul v Emperor 41 C L J 474=26 Cr L J 1279=88 Ind Cas 1075 A statement made by an accused person before

S 24 A Magistrate under section 164, which does not amount to a confession but is of an exculpatory nature is admissible as against him to prove a relevant fact. Gulam v Emperor, 4 Pat 327=6 Pat L T 598=86 Ind Cas 814. A statement recorded by a Magistrate is admissible in evidence under section 164 Cr Pro Code, whether taken on solemn affirmation or not. Bahadur v Emperor, 98 Cr L J 1063=88 Ind Cas 7=A I R 1925 Sind 289.

A confession recorded in answer to the only question put (after due warning) "do you want to say anything?" cannot be accepted as being in accordance with law in the absence of any indication as to what due warning was. Mallu v Emperor 2 Pat L T 129=59 Ind Cas 751=22 Cr L J 119. A confession not properly recorded in accordance with the provisions of section 164 Cr Pro Code is not admissible. Gajadhar v Emperor, 9 O L J 500. Where a Magistrate recorded a confession made to him in the course of a police investigation without questioning the person making it as to whether it was made voluntarily the defect is one of substance and is not cured by section 533 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Fauz v Emperor 2 Lah 325=65 Ind Cas 613=23 Cr L J 114, Jehana v Emperor, 73 Ind Cas 506=24 Cr L J 618=A I R 1923 Lah 341, Gajadhar v D, A I R 1923 Oudh 39. There is nothing in s 164 or of any provision of the Criminal Procedure Code which forbids a Magistrate from recording a statement if the accused chooses to make one before he is placed on his trial. Such a statement if proved to be voluntary is not only admissible but is of the greatest value as a fact relevant to the probability or improbability of his guilt. Madan v Guru 4 Pat L J 381=73 Ind Cas 963=24 Cr L J 173.

All that section 164 (3) requires is that the Magistrate on questioning the person making the confession shall have reason to believe that it was voluntarily made. No express form of question is prescribed and the extent to which a Magistrate should question the person making the confession must largely depend on the particular facts of each case. Thibu v Emperor 4 Pat L T 279=73 Ind Cas 569=24 Cr L J 649=A I R 1923 Pat 356. It is highly desirable that a Magistrate in recording the confession should put various questions to an accused to enable him to decide whether the confession is a voluntary one or not. Emperor v Dewan Kahan 72 Ind Cas 961=24 Cr L J 497=4 Pat L T 146, Neki v Emperor, 25 Cr L J 116=76 Ind Cas 180. The evidence of the recording Magistrate showing that he observed all the provisions of s 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is sufficient and the confession is admissible. Raman v Emperor 3 Pat 872. Magistrates recording confessions and thereon ordering remand of the persons making them should, on all occasions, be most careful to ascertain how long such persons have been under the influence of the police and, in recording their reasons for the remand, should set forth all the information they are able to obtain on the subject. Empress v Malar, 1 W N 1885 59 (F B). Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not apply to any statement of the accused taken by the Magistrate holding the enquiry. Empress v Chatter, A W N 1884 84.

The essential requirements of s 164 Crim Pro Code, are that the Magistrate should before recording the confession question the accused and upon questioning him form the belief that the confession to be recorded is made voluntarily and that the record made by the Magistrate should contain a full and true account of the statement made by the accused. Aga H. v King-Emperor, 2 L B R 317. When the Magistrate who recorded the confession took all possible precautions to satisfy himself that the confession was made voluntarily and that the accused was under no inducement or threat at the time he made the confession and he was informed that if he confessed he would get a pardon. Held that the confession was inadmissible in evidence. Mahipat v Emperor, 103 Ind Cas 800=28 Cr L J 752=1 Luck 223.

Section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—The rules laid down in section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code are applicable to the examination of the accused under section 342. Emp v Nagar 4 Bom L R 461. All that a Court has a right to do under s 364 Criminal Procedure Code is to ask the accused person to explain the circumstances which appear in evidence against him. Tufani v King-Emperor, 15 C L J 323=14 Ind Cas 667=13 Cr L J 283. In examining an accused person under section 364 of the Code it is

